Entered according to act of Congress in the years 1854, 1855, and 1856, by

WILLIAM W. MUNSELL.

In the Office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington

REYNOLDS, John, Justice of Supreme Court and fourth Governor of Illinois, was born of Irish ancestry, in Montgomery County, Pa., Feb. 26, 1789, and brought by his parents to Kaskaskia, Ill., in 1800, spending the first nine years of his life in Illinois on a farm. After receiving a common school education, and a two years' course of study in a college at Knoxville, Tenn., he studied law and began practice. In 1812-13 he served as a scout in the campaigns against the Indians, winning for himself the title, in after life, of "The Old Ranger." Afterwards he removed to Cahokia, where he began the practice of law, and, in 1818, became Associate Justice of the first Supreme Court of the new State. Retiring from the bench in 1825, he served two terms in the Legislature, and was elected Governor in 1830, in 1832 personally commanding the State volunteers called for service in the Black Hawk War. Two weeks before the expiration of his term (1834), he resigned to accept a seat in Congress, to which he had been elected as the successor of Charles Slade, who had died in office, and was again elected in 1838, always as a Democrat. He also served as Representative in the Fifteenth General Assembly, and again in the Eighteenth (1852-54), being chosen Speaker of the latter. In 1858 he was the administration (or Buchanan) Democratic candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, as opposed to the Republican and regular (or Douglas) Democratic candidates. For some years he edited a daily paper called "The Eagle," which was published at Belleville. While Governor Reynolds acquired some reputation as a "classical scholar," from the time spent in a Tennessee College at that early day, this was not sustained by either his colloquial or written style. He was an ardent champion of slavery, and, in the early days of the Rebellion, gained unfavorable notoriety in consequence of a letter written to Jefferson Davis expressing sympathy with the cause of "secession." Nevertheless, in spite of intense prejudice and bitter partisanship on some questions, he possessed many amiable qualities, as shown by his devotion to temperance, and his popularity among persons of opposite political opinions. Although at times crude in style, and not always reliable in his statement of historical facts and events, Governor Reynolds has rendered a valuable service to posterity by his writings relating to the early history of the State, especially those connected with his own times. His best known works are: "Pioneer History of Illinois" (Belleville, 1848); "A Glance at the Crystal Palace, and Sketches of Travel" (1854); and "My Life and Times" (1855). His death occurred at Belleville, May 8, 1865.

REYNOLDS, John Parker, Secretary and President of State Board of Agriculture, was born at Lebanon, Ohio, March 1, 1820, and graduated from the Miami University at the age of 18. In 1840 he graduated from the Cincinnati Law School, and soon afterward began practice. He removed to Illinois in 1854, settling first in Winnebago County, later, successively in Marion County, in Springfield and in Chicago. From 1860 to 1870 he was Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, and, upon the creation of the State Board of Agriculture in 1871, was elected its President, filling that position until 1888, when he resigned. He has also occupied numerous other posts of honor and of trust of a public or semi-public character, having been President of the Illinois State Sanitary Commission during the War of the Rebellion, a Commissioner to the Paris Exposition of 1867, Chief Grain Inspector from 1878 to 1882, and Secretary of the Inter-State Industrial Exposition Company of Chicago, from the date of its organization (1873) until its final dissolution. His most important public service, in recent years, was rendered as Director-in-Chief of the Illinois exhibit in the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893.

REYNOLDS, Joseph Smith, soldier and legislator, was born at New Lenox, Ill., Dec. 3, 1839; at 17 years of age went to Chicago, was educated in the high school there, within a month after graduation enlisting as a private in the Sixty-fourth Illinois Volunteers. From the ranks he rose to a colonelcy through the gradations of Second-Lieutenant and Captain, and, in July, 1865, was brevetted Brigadier-General. He was a gallant soldier, and was thrice wounded. On his return home after nearly four years' service, he entered the law department of the Chicago University, graduating therefrom and beginning practice in 1866. General Reynolds has been prominent in public life, having served as a member of both branches of the General Assembly, and having been a State Commissioner to the Vienna Exposition of 1873. He is a member of the G. A. R., and, in 1875, was elected Senior Vice-Commander of the order for the United States.

REYNOLDS, William Morton, clergyman, was born in Fayette County, Pa., March 4, 1812; after graduating at Jefferson College, Pa., in 1832, was connected with various institutions in that State, as well as President of Capital University at Columbus, Ohio; then, coming to Illinois, was President of the Illinois State University at Springfield, 1857-60, after which he became Principal of a female seminary in Chicago. Previously a Lutheran, he took orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1864 and served several parishes until his death. In his early life he founded, and, for a time, conducted several religious publications at Gettysburg, Pa., besides issuing a number of printed addresses and other published works. Died at Oak Park, near Chicago, Sept. 5, 1876.

RHOADS, Col. Franklin Lawrence, soldier and steamboat captain, was born in Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 11, 1824; brought to Pekin, Tazewell County, Ill., in 1836, where he learned the printer's trade, and, on the breaking out of the Mexican War, enlisted, serving to the close. Returning home he engaged in the river trade, and, for fifteen years, commanded steamboats on the Illinois, Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. In April, 1861, he was commissioned Captain of a company of three months' men attached to the Eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and, on the reorganization of the regiment for the three-years' service, was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel, soon after being promoted to the colonelcy, as successor to Col. Richard J. Oglesby, who had been promoted Brigadier-General. After serving through the spring campaign of 1862 in Western Kentucky and Tennessee, he was compelled by rapidly declining health to resign, when he located in Shawneetown, retiring in 1874 to his farm near that city. During the latter years of his life he was a confirmed invalid, dying at Shawneetown, Jan. 6, 1879.

RHOADS, Joshua, M.D., A.M., physician and educator, was born in Philadelphia, Sept. 14, 1806; studied medicine and graduated at the University of Pennsylvania with the degree of M.D., also receiving the degree of A.M., from Princeton; after several years spent in practice as a physician, and as Principal in some of the public schools of Philadelphia, in 1839 he was elected Principal of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind, and, in 1850, took charge of the State Institution for the Blind at Jacksonville, Ill., then in its infancy. Here he remained until 1874, when he retired. Died, February 1, 1876.

RICE, Edward V., lawyer and jurist, born in Logan County, Ky., Feb. 8, 1820, was educated in the common schools and at Shurtleff College, after which he read law with John M. Palmer at Carlinville and was admitted to practice, in 1845, at Hillsboro; in 1847 was elected County Recorder of Montgomery County, and, in 1848, to the Sixteenth General Assembly, serving one term. Later he was elected County Judge of Montgomery County, was Master in Chancery from 1853 to 1857, and the latter year was elected Judge of the Eighteenth Circuit, being re-elected in 1861 and again in 1867. He was also a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1869-70, and, at the election of the latter year, was chosen Representative in the Forty-second Congress as a Democrat. Died, April 16, 1883.

RICE, John B., theatrical manager, Mayor of Chicago, and Congressman, was born at Easton, Md., in 1809. By profession he was an actor, and, coming to Chicago in 1847, built and opened there the first theater. In 1857 he retired from the stage, and, in 1865, was elected Mayor of Chicago, the city of his adoption, and re-elected in 1867. He was also prominent in the early stages of the Civil War in the measures taken to raise troops in Chicago. In 1872 he was elected to the Forty-third Congress as a Republican, but, before the expiration of his term, died, at Norfolk, Va., on Dec. 6, 1874. At a special election to fill the vacancy, Bernard G. Caulfield was chosen to succeed him.

RICHARDSON, William A., lawyer and politician, born in Fayette County, Ky., Oct. 11, 1811, was educated at Transylvania University, came to the bar at 19, and settled in Schuyler County, Ill., becoming State's Attorney in 1835; was elected to the lower branch of the Legislature in 1836, to the Senate in 1838, and to the House again in 1844, from Adams County—the latter year being also chosen Presidential Elector on the Polk and Dallas ticket, and, at the succeeding session of the General Assembly, serving as Speaker of the House. He entered the Mexican War as Captain, and won a Majority through gallantry at Buena Vista. From 1847 to 1856 (when he resigned to become a candidate for Governor), he was a Democratic Representative in Congress from the Quincy District; re-entered Congress in 1861, and, in 1863, was chosen United States Senator to fill the unexpired term of Stephen A. Douglas. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention of 1868, but after that retired to private life, acting, for a short time, as editor of "The Quincy Herald." Died, at Quincy, Dec. 27, 1875.

RICHLAND COUNTY, situated in the southeast quarter of the State, and has an area of 361 square miles. It was organized from Edwards County in 1841. Among the early pioneers may be mentioned the Evans brothers, Thaddeus

Morehouse, Hugh Calhoun and son, Thomas Gardner, James Parker, Cornelius De Long, James Gilmore and Elijah Nelson. In 1830 there were but thirty families in the district. The first frame houses—the Nelson and Morehouse homesteads—were built in 1821, and, some years later, James Laws erected the first brick house. The pioneers traded at Vincennes, but, in 1825, a store was opened at Stringtown by Jacob May; and the same year the first school was opened at Watertown, taught by Isaac Chauncey. The first church was erected by the Baptists in 1822, and services were conducted by William Martin, a Kentuckian. For a long time the mails were carried on horseback by Louis and James Beard, but, in 1824, Mills and Whetsell established a line of four-horse stages. The principal road, known as the "trace road," leading from Louisville to Cahokia, followed a buffalo and Indian trail about where the main street of Olney now is. Olney was selected as the county-seat upon the organization of the county, and a Mr. Lilly built the first house there. The chief branches of industry followed by the inhabitants are agriculture and fruit-growing. Population (1880), 15,545; (1890), 15,019; (1900), 16,391.

RIDGE FARM, a village of Vermillion County, at junction of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis and the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railroads, 174 miles northeast of St. Louis; has electric light plant, planing mill, elevators, bank and two papers. Pop. (1900), 933; (1904), 1,300.

RIDGELY, a manufacturing and mining suburb of the city of Springfield. An extensive rolling mill is located there, and there are several coal-shafts in the vicinity. Population (1900), 1,169.

RIDGELY, Charles, manufacturer and capitalist, born in Springfield, Ill., Jan. 17, 1836; was educated in private schools and at Illinois College; after leaving college spent some time as a clerk in his father's bank at Springfield, finally becoming a member of the firm and successively Cashier and Vice-President. In 1870 he was Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, but later has affiliated with the Republican party. About 1872 he became identified with the Springfield Iron Company, of which he has been President for many years; has also been President of the Consolidated Coal Company of St. Louis and, for some time, was a Director of the Wabash Railroad. Mr. Ridgely is also one of the Trustees of Illinois College.

RIDGELY, Nicholas II., early banker, was born in Baltimore, Md., April 27, 1800; after leaving school was engaged, for a time, in the dry-goods trade, but, in 1829, came to St. Louis to assume a clerkship in the branch of the United States Bank just organized there. In 1835 a branch of the State Bank of Illinois was established at Springfield, and Mr. Ridgely became its cashier, and, when it went into liquidation, was appointed one of the trustees to wind up its affairs. He subsequently became President of the Clark's Exchange Bank in that city, but this having gone into liquidation a few years later, he went into the private banking business as head of the "Ridgely Bank," which, in 1866, became the "Ridgely National Bank," one of the strongest financial institutions in the State outside of Chicago. After the collapse of the internal improvement scheme, Mr. Ridgely became one of the purchasers of the "Northern Cross Railroad" (now that part of the Wabash system extending from the Illinois river to Springfield), when it was sold by the State in 1847, paying therefor $21,100. He was also one of the Springfield bankers to tender a loan to the State at the beginning of the war in 1861. He was one of the builders and principal owner of the Springfield gas-light system. His business career was an eminently successful one, leaving an estate at his death, Jan. 31, 1888, valued at over $2,000,000.

RIDGWAY, a village of Gallatin County, on the Shawneetown Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway, 12 miles northwest of Shawneetown; has a bank and one newspaper. Pop. (1890), 523; (1900), 839; (1903, est.), 1,000.

RIDGWAY, Thomas S., merchant, banker and politician, was born at Carmi, Ill., August 30, 1826. His father having died when he was but 4 years old and his mother when he was 14, his education was largely acquired through contact with the world, apart from such as he received from his mother and during a year's attendance at a private school. When he was 6 years of age the family removed to Shawneetown, where he ever afterwards made his home. In 1845 he embarked in business as a merchant, and the firm of Peeples & Ridgway soon became one of the most prominent in Southern Illinois. In 1865 the partners closed out their business and organized the first National Bank of Shawneetown, of which, after the death of Mr. Peeples in 1875, Mr. Ridgway was President. He was one of the projectors of the Springfield & Illinois Southwestern Railway, now a part of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern system, and, from 1867 to 1874, served as its President. He was an ardent and active Republican, and served as a delegate to every State and National Convention of his party from 1868 to 1896. In 1871 he was elected State Treasurer, the candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction on the same ticket being defeated. In 1876 and 1880 he was an unsuccessful candidate for his party's nomination for Governor. Three times he consented to lead the forlorn hope of the Republicans as a candidate for Congress from an impregnable Democratic stronghold. For several years he was a Director of the Mc-Cormick Theological Seminary, at Chicago, and, for nineteen years, was a Trustee of the Southern Illinois Normal University at Carbondale, resigning in 1893. Died, at Shawneetown, Nov. 17, 1897.

RIGGS, James M., ex-Congressman, was born in Scott County, Ill., April 17, 1839, where he received a common school education, supplemented by a partial collegiate course. He is a practicing lawyer of Winchester. In 1864 he was elected Sheriff, serving two years. In 1871-72 he represented Scott County in the lower house of the Twenty-seventh General Assembly, and was State's Attorney from 1872 to 1876. In 1882, and again in 1884, he was the successful Democratic candidate for Congress in the Twelfth Illinois District.

RIGGS, Scott, pioneer, was born in North Carolina about 1790; removed to Crawford County, Ill., early in 1815, and represented that county in the First General Assembly (1818-20). In 1825 he removed to Scott County, where he continued to reside until his death, Feb. 24, 1872.

RINAKER, John L., lawyer and Congressman, born in Baltimore, Md., Nov. 18, 1830. Left an orphan at an early age, he came to Illinois in 1836, and, for several years, lived on farms in Sangamon and Morgan Counties; was educated at Illinois and McKendree Colleges, graduating from the latter in 1851; in 1852 began reading law with John M. Palmer at Carlinville, and was admitted to the bar in 1854. In August, 1862, he recruited the One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois Volunteers, of which he was commissioned Colonel. Four months later he was wounded in battle, but served with his regiment through the war, and was brevetted Brigadier-General at its close. Returning from the war he resumed the practice of his profession at Carlinville. Since 1858 he has been an active Republican; has twice (1872 and '76) served his party as a Presidential Elector—the latter year for the State-at-large—and in 1871 accepted a nomination for Congress against William R. Morrison, largely reducing the normal Democratic majority. At the State Republican Convention of 1880 he was a prominent, but unsuccessful, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. In 1894 he made the race as the Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixteenth District and, although his opponent was awarded the certificate of election, on a bare majority of 60 votes on the face of the returns, a re-count, ordered by the Fifty-fourth Congress, showed a majority for General Kinaker, and he was seated near the close of the first session. He was a candidate for re-election in 1896, but defeated in a strongly Democratic District.

RIPLEY, Edward Payson, Railway President, was born in Dorchester (now a part of Boston), Mass., Oct. 30, 1845, being related, on his mother's side, to the distinguished author, Dr. Edward Payson. After receiving his education in the high school of his native place, at the age of 17 he entered upon a commercial life, as clerk in a wholesale dry-goods establishment in Boston. About the time he became of age, he entered into the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a clerk in the freight department in the Boston office, but a few years later, assumed a responsible position in connection with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy line, finally becoming General Agent for the business of that road east of Buffalo, though retaining his headquarters at Boston. In 1878 he removed to Chicago to accept the position of General Freight Agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy System, with which he remained twelve years, serving successively as General Traffic Manager and General Manager, until June 1, 1890, when he resigned to become Third Vice-President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul line. This relation was continued until Jan. 1, 1896, when Mr. Ripley accepted the Presidency of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, which (1899) he now holds. Mr. Ripley was a prominent factor in securing the location of the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and, in April, 1891, was chosen one of the Directors of the Exposition, serving on the Executive Committee and the Committee of Ways and Means and Transportation, being Chairman of the latter.

RIVERSIDE, a suburban town on the Des Plaines River and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway, 11 miles west of Chicago; has handsome parks, several churches, a bank, two local papers and numerous fine residences. Population (1890), 1,000; (1900), 1,551.

RIVERTON, a village in Clear Creek Township, Sangamon County, at the crossing of the Wabash Railroad over the Sangamon River, 6½ miles east-northeast of Springfield. It has four churches, a nursery, and two coal mines Population (1880), 705; (1890), 1,127. (1900), 1,511; (1903, est.), about 5,000.

RIVES, John Cook, early banker and journalist, was born in Franklin County, Va., May 24, 1795; in 1806 removed to Kentucky, where he grew up under care of an uncle, Samuel Casey. He received a good education and was a man of high character and attractive manners. In his early manhood he came to Illinois, and was connected, for a time, with the Branch State Bank at Edwardsville, but, about 1824, removed to Shawneetown and held a position in the bank there; also studied law and was admitted to practice. Finally, having accepted a clerkship in the Fourth Auditor's Office in Washington, he removed to that city, and, in 1830, became associated with Francis P. Blair, Sr., in the establishment of "The Congressional Globe" (the predecessor of "The Congressional Record"), of which he finally became sole proprietor, so remaining until 1864. Like his partner, Blair, although a native of Virginia and a life-long Democrat, he was intensely loyal, and contributed liberally of his means for the equipment of soldiers from the District of Columbia, and for the support of their families, during the Civil War. His expenditures for these objects have been estimated at some $90,000. Died, in Prince George's County, Md., April 10, 1864.

ROANOKE, a village of Woodford County, on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, 26 miles northeast of Peoria; is in a coal district; has two banks, a coal mine, and one newspaper Population (1880), 355; (1890), 831; (1900), 966.

ROBB, Thomas Patten, Sanitary Agent, was born in Bath, Maine, in 1819; came to Cook County, Ill., in 1838, and, after arriving at manhood, established the first exclusive wholesale grocery house in Chicago, remaining in the business until 1850. He then went to California, establishing himself in mercantile business at Sacramento, where he remained seven years, meanwhile being elected Mayor of that city. Returning to Chicago on the breaking out of the war, he was appointed on the staff of Governor Yates with the rank of Major, and, while serving in this capacity, was instrumental in giving General Grant the first duty he performed in the office of the Adjutant-General after his arrival from Galena. Later, he was assigned to duty as Inspector-General of Illinois troops with the rank of Colonel, having general charge of sanitary affairs until the close of the war, when he was appointed Cotton Agent for the State of Georgia, and, still later, President of the Board of Tax Commissioners for that State. Other positions held by him were those of Postmaster and Collector of Customs at Savannah, Ga.; he was also one of the publishers of "The New Era," a Republican paper at Atlanta, and a prominent actor in reconstruction affairs. Resigning the Collectorship, he was appointed by the President United States Commissioner to investigate Mexican outrages on the Rio Grande border; was subsequently identified with Texas railroad interests as the President of the Corpus Christi & Rio Grande Railroad, and one of the projectors of the Chicago, Texas & Mexican Central Railway, being thus engaged until 1872. Later he returned to California, dying near Glenwood, in that State, April 10, 1895, aged 75 years and 10 months.

ROBERTS, William Charles, clergyman and educator, was born in a small village of Wales, England., Sept. 23, 1832; received his primary education in that country, but, removing to America during his minority, graduated from Princeton College in 1855, and from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1858. After filling various pastorates in Delaware, New Jersey and Ohio, in 1881 he was elected Corresponding Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, the next year being offered the Presidency of Rutgers College, which he declined. In 1887 he accepted the presidency of Lake Forest University, which he still retains. From 1859 to 1863 he was a Trustee of Lafayette College, and, in 1866, was elected to a trusteeship of his Alma Mater. He has traveled extensively in the Orient, and was a member of the first and third councils of the Reformed Churches, held at Edinburgh and Belfast. Besides occasional sermons and frequent contributions to English, American, German and Welsh periodicals, Dr. Roberts has published a Welsh translation of the Westminster shorter catechism and a collection of letters on the great preachers of Wales, which appeared in Utica, 1868. He received the degree of D.D., from Union College in 1872, and that of LL.D., from Princeton, in 1887.

ROBINSON, an incorporated city and the county-seat of Crawford County, 25 miles northwest of Vincennes, Ind., and 44 miles south of Paris, Ill.; is on two lines of railroad and in the heart of a fruit and agricultural region. The city has water-works, electric lights, two banks and three weekly newspapers Population (1890) 1,387; (1900), 1,683; (1904), about 2,000.

ROBINSON, James C., lawyer and former Congressman, was born in Edgar County, Ill., in 1822, read law and was admitted to the bar in 1850. He served as a private during the Mexican War, and, in 1858, was elected to Congress as a Democrat, as he was again in 1860, '62, '70 and '72. In 1864 he was the Democratic nominee for Governor. He was a fluent speaker, and attained considerable distinction as an advocate in criminal practice. Died, at Springfield, Nov. 3, 1886.

ROBINSON, John M., United States Senator, born in Kentucky in 1793, was liberally educated and became a lawyer by profession. In early life he settled at Carui, Ill., where he married. He was of fine physique, of engaging manners, and personally popular. Through his association with the State militia he earned the title of "General." In 1830 he was elected to the United States Senate, to fill the unexpired term of John McLean. His immediate predecessor was David Jewett Baker, appointed by Governor Edwards, who served one month but failed of election by the Legislature. In 1834 Mr. Robinson was re-elected for a full term, which expired in 1841. In 1843 he was elected to a seat upon the Illinois Supreme bench, but died at Ottawa, April 27, of the same year, within three months after his elevation.

ROCHELLE, a city of Ogle County and an interesting point of the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railways. It is 75 miles west of Chicago, 27 miles south of Rockford, and 23 miles east by north of Dixon. It is in a rich agricultural and stock-raising region, rendering Rochelle an important ship ping point. Among its industrial establishments are water works, electric lights, a flouring mill and silk-underwear factory. The city has three banks, five churches and three newspapers. Pop. (1890), 1,789; (1900), 2,073; (1903), 2,500.

ROCHESTER, a village and early settlement in Sangamon County, laid out in 1819, in rich agricultural district, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad, 7½ miles southeast of Springfield; has a bank, two churches, one school, and a newspaper. Population (1900) 365.

ROCK FALLS, a city in Whiteside County, on Rock River and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad; has excellent water-power, a good public school system with a high school, banks and a weekly newspaper. Agricultural implements, barbed wire, furniture, flour and paper are its chief manufactures. Water for the navigable feeder of the Hennepin Canal is taken from Rock River at this point. Pop. (1900), 2,176.

ROCKFORD, a flourishing manufacturing city, the county-seat of Winnebago County; lies on both sides of the Rock River, 92 miles west of Chicago. Four trunk lines of railroad—the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Chicago & Northwestern, the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul—intersect here. Excellent water-power is secured by a dam across the river, and communication between the two divisions of the city is facilitated by three railway and three highway bridges. Water is provided from five artesian wells, a reserve main leading to the river. The city is wealthy, prosperous and progressive. The assessed valuation of property, in 1893, was $6,531,235. Churches are numerous and schools, both public and private, are abundant and well conducted. The census of 1890 showed $7,715,069 capital invested in 246 manufacturing establishments, which employed 5,223 persons and turned out an annual product valued at $8,888,904. The principal industries are the manufacture of agricultural implements and furniture, though watches, silver-plated ware, paper, flour and grape sugar are among the other products. Pop. (1880), 13,129; (1890), 23,584; (1900), 31,051.

ROCKFORD COLLEGE, located at Rockford, Ill., incorporated in 1847; in 1898 had a faculty of 21 instructors with 161 pupils. The branches taught include the classics, music and fine arts. It has a library of 6,150 volumes, funds and endowment aggregating $50,880 and property valued at $240,880, of which $150,000 is real estate.

ROCK ISLAND, the principal city and county-seat of Rock Island County, on the Mississippi River, 182 miles west by south from Chicago; is the converging point of five lines of railroad, and the western terminus of the Hennepin Canal. The name is derived from an island in the Mississippi River, opposite the city, 3 miles long, which belongs to the United States Government and contains an arsenal and armory. The river channel north of the island is navigable, the southern channel having been dammed by the Government, thereby giving great water power to Rock Island and Moline. A combined railway and highway bridge spans the river from Rock Island to Davenport, Iowa, crossing the island, while a railway bridge connects the cities a mile below. The island was the site of Fort Armstrong during the Black Hawk War, and was also a place for the confinement of Confederate prisoners during the Civil War. Rock Island is in a region of much picturesque scenery and has extensive manufactures of lumber, agricultural implements, iron, carriages and wagons and oilcloth; also five banks and three newspapers, two issuing daily editions. Pop. (1890), 13,634; (1900), 19,493.

ROCK ISLAND COUNTY, in the northwestern section of the State bordering upon the Mississippi River (which constitutes its northwestern boundary for more than 60 miles), and having an area of 440 square miles. In 1816 the Government erected a fort on Rock Island (an island in the Mississippi, 3 miles long and one-half to three-quarters of a mile wide), naming it Fort Armstrong. It has always remained a military post, and is now the seat of an extensive arsenal and work-shops. In the spring of 1828, settlements were made near Port Byron by John and Thomas Kinney, Archibald Allen and George Harlan. Other early settlers, near Rock Island and Rapids City, were J. W. Spencer, J. W. Barriels, Benjamin F. Pike and Conrad Leak; and among the pioneers were Wells and Michael Bartlett, Joel Thompson, the Simms brothers and George Davenport. The country was full of Indians, this being the headquarters of Black Hawk and the initial point of the Black Hawk War. (See Black Hawk, and Black Hawk War.) By 1829 settlers were increased in number and county organization was effected in 1835, Rock Island (then called Stephenson) being made the county-seat. Joseph Conway was the first County Clerk, and Joel Wells, Sr., the first Treasurer. The first court was held at the residence of John W. Barriels, in Farnhamsburg. The county is irregular in shape, and the soil and scenery greatly varied. Coal is abundant, the water-power inexhaustible, and the county's mining and manufacturing interests are very extensive. Several lines of railway cross the county, affording admirable transportation facilities to both eastern and western markets. Rock Island and Moline (which see) are the two principal cities in the county, though there are several other important points. Coal Valley is the center of large mining interests, and Milan is also a manufacturing center. Port Byron is one of the oldest towns in the county, and has considerable lime and lumber interests, while Watertown is the seat of the Western Hospital for the Insane. Population of the county (1880), 38,302; (1890), 41,917; (1900), 55,249.

ROCK ISLAND & PEORIA RAILWAY, a standard-gauge road, laid with steel rails, extending from Rock Island to Peoria, 91 miles. It is lessee of the Rock Island & Mercer County Railroad, running from Milan to Cable, Ill., giving it a total length of 118 miles—with Peoria Terminal, 121.10 miles.—(HISTORY.) The company is a reorganization (Oct. 9, 1877) of the Peoria & Rock Island Railroad Company, whose road was sold under foreclosure, April 4, 1877. The latter Road was the result of the consolidation, in 1869, of two corporations—the Rock Island & Peoria and the Peoria & Rock Island Railroad Companies—the new organization taking the latter name. The road was opened through its entire length, Jan. 1, 1872, its sale under foreclosure and reorganization under its present name taking place, as already stated, in 1877. The Cable Branch was organized in 1876, as the Rock Island & Mercer County Railroad, and opened in December of the same year, sold under foreclosure in 1877, and leased to the Rock Island & Peoria Railroad, July 1, 1885, for 999 years, the rental for the entire period being commuted at $450,000.—(FINANCIAL.) The cost of the entire road and equipment was $2,654,487. The capital stock (1898) is $1,500,000; funded debt, $600,000; other forms of indebtedness increasing the total capital invested to $2,181,066.

ROCK RIVER, a stream which rises in Washington County, Wis., and flows generally in a southerly direction, a part of its course being very sinuous. After crossing the northern boundary of Illinois, it runs southwestward, intersecting the counties of Winnebago, Ogle, Lee, Whiteside and Rock Island, and entering the Mississippi three miles below the city of Rock Island. It is about 375 miles long, but its navigation is partly obstructed by rapids, which, however, furnish abundant water-power. The principal towns on its banks are Rockford, Dixon and Sterling. Its valley is wide, and noted for its beauty and fertility.

ROCKTON, a village in Winnebago County, at the junction of two branches of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, on Rock River, 13 miles north of Rockford; has manufactures of paper and agricultural implements, a feed mill, and local paper. Pop. (1890), 892; (1900), 936.

ROE, Edward Reynolds, A.B., M.D., physician, soldier and author, was born at Lebanon, Ohio, June 22, 1813; removed with his father, in 1819, to Cincinnati, and graduated at Louisville Medical Institute in 1842; began practice at Anderson, Ind., but soon removed to Shawneetown, Ill., where he gave much attention to geological research and made some extensive natural history collections. From 1848 to '52 he resided at Jacksonville, lectured extensively on his favorite science, wrote for the press and, for two years (1850-52), edited "The Jacksonville Journal," still later editing the newly established "Constitutionalist" for a few months. During a part of this period he was lecturer on natural science at Shurtleff College; also delivered a lecture before the State Legislature on the geology of Illinois, which was immediately followed by the passage of the act establishing the State Geological Department. A majority of both houses joined in a request for his appointment as State Geologist, but it was rejected on partisan grounds—he, then, being a Whig. Removing to Bloomington in 1852, Dr. Roe became prominent in educational matters, being the first Professor of Natural Science in the State Normal University, and also a Trustee of the Illinois Wesleyan University. Having identified himself with the Democratic party at this time, he became its nominee for State Superintendent of Public Instruction in 1860, but, on the inception of the war in 1861, he promptly espoused the cause of the Union, raised three companies (mostly Normal students) which were attached to the Thirty-third Illinois (Normal) Regiment, was elected Captain and successively promoted to Major and Lieutenant-Colonel. Having been dangerously wounded in the assault at Vicksburg, on May 22, 1863, and compelled to return home, he was elected Circuit Clerk by the combined vote of both parties, was re-elected four years later, became editor of "The Bloomington Pantagraph" and, in 1870, was elected to the Twenty-seventh General Assembly, where he won distinction by a somewhat notable humorous speech in opposition to removing the State Capital to Peoria. In 1871 he was appointed Marshal for the Southern District of Illinois, serving nine years. Dr. Roe was a somewhat prolific author, having produced more than a dozen works which have appeared in book form. One of these, "Virginia Rose, a Tale of Illinois in Early Days," first appeared as a prize serial in "The Alton Courier" in 1852. Others of his more noteworthy productions are: "The Gray and the Blue"; "Brought to Bay"; "From the Beaten Path"; "G. A. R.; or How She Married His Double"; "Dr. Caldwell, or the Trail of the Serpent"; and "Prairie-Land and Other Poems." He died in Chicago, Nov. 6, 1893.

ROGERS, George Clarke, soldier, was born in Grafton County, N. H., Nov. 22, 1838, but was educated in Vermont and Illinois, having removed to the latter State early in life. While teaching he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1860, was the first, in 1861, to raise a company in Lake County for the war, which was mustered into the Fifteenth Illinois Volunteers; was chosen Second-Lieutenant and later Captain; was wounded four times at Shiloh, but refused to leave the field, and led his regiment in the final charge; was promoted Lieutenant-Colonel and soon after commissioned Colonel for gallantry at Hatchie. At Champion Hills he received three wounds, from one of which he never fully recovered; took a prominent part in the operations at Allatoona and commanded a brigade nearly two years, including the Atlanta campaign, retiring with the rank of brevet Brigadier-General. Since the war has practiced law in Illinois and in Kansas.

ROGERS, Henry Wade, educator, lawyer and author, was born in Central New York in 1853; entered Hamilton College, but the following year became a student in Michigan University, graduating there in 1874, also receiving the degree of A.M., from the same institution, in 1877. In 1883 he was elected to a professorship in the Ann Arbor Law School, and, in 1885, was made Dean of the Faculty, succeeding Judge Cooley, at the age of 32. Five years later he was tendered, and accepted, the Presidency of the Northwestern University, at Evanston, being the first layman chosen to the position, and succeeding a long line of Bishops and divines. The same year (1890), Wesleyan University conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL.D. He is a member of the American Bar Association, has served for a number of years on its Committee on Legal Education and Admission to the Bar, and was the first Chairman of the Section on Legal Education. President Rogers was the General Chairman of the Conference on the Future Foreign Policy of the United States, held at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in August, 1898. At the Congress held in 1893, as auxiliary to the Columbian Exposition, he was chosen Chairman of the Committee on Law Reform and Jurisprudence, and was for a time associate editor of "The American Law Register," of Philadelphia. He is also the author of a treatise on "Expert Testimony," which has passed through two editions, and has edited a work entitled "Illinois Citations," besides doing much other valuable literary work of a similar character.

ROGERS, John Gorin, jurist, was born at Glasgow, Ky., Dec. 28, 1818, of English and early Virginian ancestry; was educated at Center College, Danville, Ky., and at Transylvania University, graduating from the latter institution in 1841, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. For sixteen years he practiced in his native town, and, in 1857, removed to Chicago, where he soon attained professional prominence. In 1870 he was elected a Judge of the Cook County Circuit Court, continuing on the bench, through repeated re-elections, until his death, which occurred suddenly, Jan. 10, 1887, four years before the expiration of the term for which he had been elected.

ROGERS PARK, a village and suburb 9 miles north of Chicago, on Lake Michigan and the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railways; has a bank and two weekly newspapers; is reached by electric street-car line from Chicago, and is a popular residence suburb. Annexed to City of Chicago, 1893.

ROLL, John E., pioneer, was born in Green Village, N. J., June 4, 1814; came to Illinois in 1830, and settled in Sangamon County. He assisted Abraham Lincoln in the construction of the flat-boat with which the latter descended the Mississippi River to New Orleans, in 1831. Mr. Roll, who was a mechanic and contractor, built a number of houses in Springfield, where he has since continued to reside.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The earliest Christians to establish places of worship in Illinois were priests of the Catholic faith. Early Catholic missionaries were explorers and historians as well as preachers. (See Allouez; Bergier; Early Missionaries; Gravier; Marquette.) The church went hand in hand with the representatives of the French Government, carrying in one hand the cross and in the other the flag of France, simultaneously disseminating the doctrines of Christianity and inculcating loyalty to the House of Bourbon. For nearly a hundred years, the self-sacrificing and devoted Catholic clergy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries ministered to the spiritual wants of the early French settlers and the natives. They were not without factional jealousies, however, and a severe blow was dealt to a branch of them in the order for the banishment of the Jesuits and the confiscation of their property. (See Early Missionaries.) The subsequent occupation of the country by the English, with the contemporaneous emigration of a considerable portion of the French west of the Mississippi, dissipated many congregations. Up to 1830 Illinois was included in the diocese of Missouri; but at that time it was constituted a separate diocese, under the episcopal control of Rt. Rev. Joseph Rosatti. At that date there were few, if any, priests in Illinois. But Bishop Rosatti was a man of earnest purpose and rare administrative ability. New parishes were organized as rapidly as circumstances would permit, and the growth of the church has been steady. By 1840 there were thirty-one parishes and twenty priests. In 1896 there are reported 698 parishes, 764 clergymen and a Catholic population exceeding 850,000. (See also Religious Denominations.)

ROODHOUSE, a city in Greene County, 21 miles south of Jacksonville, and at junction of three divisions of the Chicago & Alton Railroad; is in fertile agricultural and coal-mining region; city contains a flouring mill, grain-elevator, stock-yards, railway shops, water-works, electric light plant, two private banks, fine opera house, good school buildings, one daily and two weekly papers. Pop. (1890), 2,360; (1900), 2,351.

ROODHOUSE, John, farmer and founder of the town of Roodhouse, in Greene County, Ill., was born in Yorkshire, England, brought to America in childhood, his father settling in Greene County, Ill., in 1831. In his early manhood he opened a farm in Tazewell County, but finally returned to the paternal home in Greene County, where, on the location of the Jacksonville Division of the Chicago & Alton Railroad, he laid out the town of Roodhouse, at the junction of the Louisiana and Kansas City branch with the main line.

ROOT, George Frederick, musical composer and author, was born at Sheffield, Mass., August 30, 1820. He was a natural musician, and, while employed on his father's farm, learned to play on various instruments. In 1838 he removed to Boston, where he began his life-work. Besides teaching music in the public schools, he was employed to direct the musical service in two churches. From Boston he removed to New York, and, in 1850, went to Paris for purposes of musical study. In 1853 he made his first public essay as a composer in the song, "Hazel Dell," which became popular at once. From this time forward his success as a song-writer was assured. His music, while not of a high artistic character, captivated the popular ear and appealed strongly to the heart. In 1860 he took up his residence in Chicago, where he conducted a musical journal and wrote those "war songs" which created and perpetuated his fame. Among the best known are "Rally Round the Flag"; "Just Before the Battle, Mother"; and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." Other popular songs by him are "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower"; "A Hundred Years Ago"; and "The Old Folks are Gone." Besides songs he composed several cantatas and much sacred music, also publishing many books of instruction and numerous collections of vocal and instrumental music. In 1872 the University of Chicago conferred on him the degree of Mus. Doc. Died, near Portland, Maine, August 6, 1895.

ROOTS, Benajah Guernsey, civil engineer, and educator, was born in Onondaga County N. Y. April 20, 1811, and educated in the schools and academies of Central New York; began teaching in 1827, and, after spending a year at sea for the benefit of his health, took a course in law and civil engineering. He was employed as a civil engineer on the Western Railroad of Massachusetts until 1838, when he came to Illinois and obtained employment on the railroad projected from Alton to Shawneetown, under the "internal improvement system" of 1837. When that was suspended in 1839, he settled on a farm near the present site of Tamaroa, Perry County, and soon after opened a boarding school, continuing its management until 1846, when he became Principal of a seminary at Sparta. In 1851 he went into the service of the Illinois Central Railroad, first as resident engineer in charge of surveys and construction, later as land agent and attorney. He was prominent in the introduction of the graded school system in Illinois and in the establishment of the State Normal School at Bloomington and the University of Illinois at Champaign; was a member of the State Board of Education from its organization, and served as delegate to the National Republican Convention of 1868. Died, at his home in Perry County, Ill., May 9, 1888.—Philander Keep (Roots), son of the preceding, born in Tolland County, Conn., June 4, 1838, brought to Illinois the same year and educated in his father's school, and in an academy at Carrollton and the Wesleyan University at Bloomington; at the age of 17 belonged to a corps of engineers employed on a Southern railroad, and, during the war, served as a civil engineer in the construction and repair of military roads. Later, he was Deputy Surveyor-General of Nebraska; in 1871 became Chief Engineer on the Cairo & Fulton (now a part of the Iron Mountains) Railway; then engaged in the banking business in Arkansas, first as cashier of a bank at Fort Smith and afterwards of the Merchants' National Bank at Little Rock, of which his brother, Logan H., was President.—Logan H. (Roots), another son, born near Tamaroa, Perry County, Ill., March 22, 1841, was educated at home and at the State Normal at Bloomington, meanwhile serving as principal of a high school at Duquoin, in 1862 enlisted in the Eighty-first Illinois Volunteers, serving through the war and acting as Chief Commissary for General Sherman on the "March to the Sea," and participating in the great review in Washington, in May, 1865. After the conclusion of the war he was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the First Arkansas District, was elected from that State to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses (1868 and 1870)—being, at the time, the youngest member in that body—and was appointed United States Marshal by President Grant. He finally became President of the Merchants' National Bank at Little Rock, with which he remained nearly twenty years. Died, suddenly, of congestion of the brain, May 30, 1893, leaving an estate valued at nearly one and a half millions, of which he gave a large share to charitable purposes and to the city of Little Rock, for the benefit of its hospitals and the improvement of its parks.

ROSE, James A., Secretary of State, was born at Golconda, Pope County, Ill., Oct. 13, 1850. The foundation of his education was secured in the public schools of his native place, and, after a term in the Normal University at Normal, Ill., at the age of 18 he took charge of a country school. Soon he was chosen Principal of the Golconda graded schools, was later made County Superintendent of Schools, and re-elected for a second term. During his second term he was admitted to the bar, and, resigning the office of Superintendent, was elected State's Attorney without opposition, being re-elected for another term. In 1889, by appointment of Governor Fifer, he became one of the Trustees of the Pontiac Reformatory, serving until the next year, when he was transferred to the Board of Commissioners of the Southern Illinois Penitentiary at Chester, which position he continued to occupy until 1893. In 1896 he was elected Secretary of State on the Republican ticket, his term extending to January, 1901.

ROSEVILLE, a village in Warren County, on the Rock Island Division of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 17 miles northwest of Bushnell; has water and electric-light plants, two banks, public library and one newspaper. Region agricultural and coal-mining. Pop. (1900), 1,014.

ROSS, Leonard Fulton, soldier, born in Fulton County, Ill., July 18, 1823; was educated in the common schools and at Illinois College, Jacksonville, studied law and admitted to the bar in 1845; the following year enlisted in the Fourth Illinois Volunteers for the Mexican War, became First Lieutenant and was commended for services at Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo; also performed important service as bearer of dispatches for General Taylor. After the war he served six years as Probate Judge. In May, 1861, he enlisted in the war for the Union, and was chosen Colonel of the Seventeenth Illinois Volunteers, serving with it in Missouri and Kentucky; was commissioned Brigadier-General a few weeks after the capture of Fort Donelson, and, after the evacuation of Corinth, was assigned to the command of a division with headquarters at Bolivar, Tenn. He resigned in July, 1863, and, in 1867, was appointed by President Johnson Collector of Internal Revenue for the Ninth District; has been three times a delegate to National Republican Conventions and twice defeated as a candidate for Congress in a Democratic District. Since the war he has devoted his attention largely to stock-raising, having a large stock-farm in Iowa. In his later years was President of a bank at Lewistown, Ill. Died Jan. 17, 1901.

ROSS, (Col.) William, pioneer, was born at Monson, Hampden County, Mass., April 24, 1792; removed with his father's family, in 1805, to Pittsfield, Mass., where he remained until his twentieth year, when he was commissioned an Ensign in the Twenty-first Regiment United States Infantry, serving through the War of 1812-14, and participating in the battle of Sackett's Harbor. During the latter part of his service he acted as drill-master at various points. Then, returning to Pittsfield, he carried on the business of blacksmithing as an employer, meanwhile filling some local offices. In 1820, a company consisting of himself and four brothers, with their families and a few others, started for the West, intending to settle in Illinois. Reaching the head-waters of the Allegheny overland, they transferred their wagons, teams and other property to flat-boats, descending that stream and the Ohio to Shawneetown, Ill. Here they disembarked and, crossing the State, reached Upper Alton, where they found only one house, that of Maj. Charles W. Huuter. Leaving their families at Upper Alton, the brothers proceeded north, crossing the Illinois River near its mouth, until they reached a point in the western part of the present county of Pike, where the town of Atlas was afterwards located. Here they erected four rough log-cabins, on a beautiful prairie not far from the Mississippi, removing their families thither a few weeks later. They suffered the usual privations incident to life in a new country, not excepting sickness and death of some of their number. At the next session of the Legislature (1820-21) Pike County was established, embracing all that part of the State west and north of the Illinois, and including the present cities of Galena and Chicago. The Ross settlement became the nucleus of the town of Atlas, laid out by Colonel Ross and his associates in 1823, at an early day the rival of Quincy, and becoming the second county-seat of Pike County, so remaining from 1824 to 1833, when the seat of justice was removed to Pittsfield. During this period Colonel Ross was one of the most prominent citizens of the county, holding, simultaneously or successively, the offices of Probate Judge, Circuit and County Clerk, Justice of the Peace, and others of a subordinate character. As Colonel of Militia, in 1832, he was ordered by Governor Reynolds to raise a company for the Black Hawk War, and, in four days, reported at Beardstown with twice the number of men called for. In 1834 he was elected to the lower branch of the General Assembly, also serving in the Senate during the three following sessions, a part of the time as President pro tem. of the last-named body. While in the General Assembly he was instrumental in securing legislation of great importance relating to Military Tract lands. The year following the establishment of the county-seat at Pittsfield (1834) he became a citizen of that place, which he had the privilege of naming for his early home. He was a member of the Republican State Convention of 1856, and a delegate to the National Republican Convention of 1860, which nominated Mr. Lincoln for President the first time. Beginning life poor he acquired considerable property; was liberal, public-spirited and patriotic, making a handsome donation to the first company organized in Pike County, for the suppression of the Rebellion. Died, at Pittsfield, May 31, 1873.

ROSSVILLE, a village of Vermillion County, on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, 19 miles north of Danville; has electric-light plant, water-works, tile and brick-works, two banks and two newspapers. Pop. (1890), 879; (1900), 1,435.

ROUNDS, Sterling Parker, public printer, was born in Berkshire, Vt., June 27, 1828; about 1840 began learning the printer's trade at Kenosha, Wis., and, in 1845, was foreman of the State printing office at Madison, afterward working in offices in Milwaukee, Racine and Buffalo, going to Chicago in 1851. Here he finally established a printer's warehouse, to which he later added an electrotype foundry and the manufacture of presses, also commencing the issue of "Round's Printers' Cabinet," a trade-paper, which was continued during his life. In 1881 he was appointed by President Garfield Public Printer at Washington, serving until 1885, when he removed to Omaha, Neb., and was identified with "The Republican," of that city, until his death, Dec. 17, 1887.

ROUNTREE, Hiram, County Judge, born in Rutherford County, N. C., Dec. 22, 1794; was brought to Kentucky in infancy, where he grew to manhood and served as an Ensign in the War of 1812 under General Shelby. In 1817 he removed to Illinois Territory, first locating in Madison County, where he taught school for two years near Edwardsville, but removed to Fayette County about the time of the removal of the State capital to Vandalia. On the organization of Montgomery County, in 1821, he was appointed to office there and ever afterwards resided at Hillsboro. For a number of years in the early history of the county, he held (at the same time) the offices of Clerk of the County Commissioners Court, Clerk of the Circuit Court, County Recorder, Justice of the Peace, Notary Public, Master in Chancery and Judge of Probate, besides that of Postmaster for the town of Hillsboro. In 1826 he was elected Enrolling and Engrossing Clerk of the Senate and re-elected in 1830; served as Delegate in the Constitutional Convention of 1847, and the next year was elected to the State Senate, serving in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth General Assemblies. On retiring from the Senate (1852), he was elected County Judge without opposition, was re-elected to the same office in 1861, and again, in 1865, as the nominee of the Republicans. Judge Rountree was noted for his sound judgment and sterling integrity. Died, at Hillsboro, March 4, 1873.

ROUTT, John L., soldier and Governor, was born at Eddyville, Ky., April 25, 1826, brought to Illinois in infancy and educated in the common schools. Soon after coming of age he was elected and served one term as Sheriff of McLean County; in 1862 enlisted and became Captain of Company E, Ninety-fourth Illinois Volunteers. After the war he engaged in business in Bloomington, and was appointed by President Grant, successively, United States Marshal for the Southern District of Illinois, Second Assistant Postmaster-General and Territorial Governor of Colorado. On the admission of Colorado as a State, he was elected the first Governor under the State Government, and re-elected in 1890—serving, in all, three years. His home is in Denver. He has been extensively and successfully identified with mining enterprises in Colorado.

ROWELL, Jonathan H., ex-Congressman, was born at Haverhill, N. H., Feb. 10, 1823. He is a graduate of Eureka College and of the Law Department of the Chicago University. During the War of the Rebellion he served three years as company officer in the Seventeenth Illinois Infantry. In 1868 he was elected State's Attorney for the Eighth Judicial Circuit, and, in 1880, was a Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket. In 1882 he was elected to Congress from the Fourteenth Illinois District and three times re-elected, serving until March, 1891. His home is at Bloomington.

ROWETT, Richard, soldier, was born in Cornwall, England, in 1830, came to the United States in 1851, finally settling on a farm near Carlinville, Ill., and becoming a breeder of thorough-bred horses. In 1861 he entered the service as a Captain in the Seventh Illinois Volunteers and was successively promoted Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel; was wounded in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth and Allatoona, especially distinguishing himself at the latter and being brevetted Brigadier-General for gallantry. After the war he returned to his stock farm, but later held the positions of Canal Commissioner, Penitentiary Commissioner, Representative in the Thirtieth General Assembly and Collector of Internal Revenue for the Fourth (Quincy) District, until its consolidation with the Eighth District by President Cleveland. Died, in Chicago, July 13, 1887.

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, located in Chicago; incorporated by act of March 2, 1837, the charter having been prepared the previous year by Drs. Daniel Brainard and Josiah C. Goodhue. The extreme financial depression of the following year prevented the organization of a faculty until 1843. The institution was named in honor of Dr. Benjamin Rush, the eminent practitioner, medical author and teacher of Philadelphia in the latter half of the eighteenth century. The first faculty consisted of four professors, and the first term opened on Dec. 4, 1843, with a class of twenty-two students. Three years' study was required for graduation, but only two annual terms of sixteen weeks each need be attended at the college itself. Instruction was given in a few rooms temporarily opened for that purpose. The next year a small building, costing between $3,000 and $4,000, was erected. This was re-arranged and enlarged in 1855 at a cost of $15,000. The constant and rapid growth of the college necessitated the erection of a new building in 1867, the cost of which was $70,000. This was destroyed in the fire of 1871, and another, costing $54,000, was erected in 1876 and a free dispensary added. In 1844 the Presbyterian Hospital was located on a portion of the college lot, and the two institutions connected, thus insuring abundant and stable facilities for clinical instruction. Shortly afterwards, Rush College became the medical department of Lake Forest University. The present faculty (1898) consists of 95 professors, adjunct professors, lecturers and instructors of all grades, and over 600 students in attendance. The length of the annual terms is six months, and four years of study are required for graduation, attendance upon at least three college terms being compulsory.

RUSHVILLE, the county-seat of Schuyler County, 50 miles northeast of Quincy and 11 miles northwest of Beardstown; is the southern terminus of the Buda and Rushville branch of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. The town was selected as the county-seat in 1826, the seat of justice being removed from a place called Beardstown, about five miles eastward (not the present Beardstown in Cass County), where it had been located at the time of the organization of Schuyler County, a year previous. At first the new seat of justice was called Rush-ton, in honor of Dr. Benjamin Rush, but afterwards took its present name. It is a coal-mining, grain and fruit-growing region, and contains several manufactories, including flour-mills, brick and tile works; also has two banks (State and private) and a public library. Four periodicals (one daily) are published here. Population (1880), 1,662; (1890), 2,031; (1900), 2,292.

RUSSELL, John, pioneer teacher and author, was born at Cavendish, Vt., July 31, 1793, and educated in the common schools of his native State and at Middlebury College, where he graduated in 1818—having obtained means to support himself, during his college course, by teaching and by the publication, before he had reached his 20th year, of a volume entitled "The Authentic History of Vermont State Prison." After graduation he taught for a short time in Georgia; but, early in the following year, joined his father on the way to Missouri. The next five years he spent in teaching in the "Bonhomme Bottom" on the Missouri River. During this period he published, anonymously, in "The St. Charles Mis-sourian," a temperance allegory entitled "The Venomous Worm" (or "The Worm of the Still"), which gained a wide popularity and was early recognized by the compilers of school-readers as a sort of classic. Leaving this locality he taught a year in St. Louis, when he removed to Vandalia (then the capital of Illinois), after which he spent two years teaching in the Seminary at Upper Alton, which afterwards became Shurtleff College. In 1828 he removed to Greene County, locating at a point near the Illinois River to which he gave the name of Bluffdale. Here he was licensed as a Baptist preacher, officiating in this capacity only occasionally, while pursuing his calling as a teacher or writer for the press, to which he was an almost constant contributor during the last twenty-five years of his life. About 1837 or 1838 he was editor of a paper called "The Backwoodsman" at Grafton—then a part of Greene County, but now in Jersey County—to which he afterwards continued to be a contributor some time longer, and, in 1841-42, was editor of "The Advertiser," at Louisville, Ky. He was also, for several years, Principal of the Spring Hill Academy in East Feliciana Parish, La., meanwhile serving for a portion of the time as Superintendent of Public Schools. He was the author of a number of stories and sketches, some of which went through several editions, and, at the time of his death, had in preparation a history of "The Black Hawk War," "Evidences of Christianity" and a "History of Illinois." He was an accomplished linguist, being able to read with fluency Greek, Latin, French, Spanish and Italian, besides having considerable familiarity with several other modern languages. In 1863 he received from the University of Chicago the degree of LL.D. Died, Jan. 2, 1863, and was buried on the old homestead at Bluffdale.

RUSSELL, Martin J., politician and journalist, born in Chicago, Dec. 20, 1845. He was a nephew of Col. James A. Mulligan (see Mulligan, James A.) and served with credit as Adjutant-General on the staff of the latter in the Civil War. In 1870 he became a reporter on "The Chicago Evening Post," and was advanced to the position of city editor. Subsequently he was connected with "The Times," and "The Telegram"; was also a member of the Board of Education of Hyde Park before the annexation of that village to Chicago, and has been one of the South Park Commissioners of the city last named. After the purchase of "The Chicago Times" by Carter H. Harrison he remained for a time on the editorial staff. In 1894 President Cleveland appointed him Collector of the Port of Chicago. At the expiration of his term of office he resumed editorial work as editor-in-chief of "The Chronicle," the organ of the Democratic party in Chicago. Died June 25, 1900.

RUTHERFORD, Friend S., lawyer and soldier, was born in Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 25, 1820; studied law in Troy and removed to Illinois, settling at Edwardsville, and finally at Alton; was a Republican candidate for Presidential Elector in 1856, and, in 1860, a member of the National Republican Convention at Chicago, which nominated Mr. Lincoln for the Presidency. In September, 1862, he was commissioned Colonel of the Ninety-seventh Illinois Volunteers, and participated in the capture of Fort Gibson and in the operations about Vicksburg—also leading in the attack on Arkansas Post, and subsequently serving in Louisiana, but died as the result of fatigue and exposure in the service, June 20, 1861, one week before his promotion to the rank of Brigadier-General.—Reuben C. (Rutherford), brother of the preceding, was born at Troy, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1823, but grew up in Vermont and New Hampshire, received a degree in law when quite young, but afterwards fitted himself as a lecturer on physiology and hygiene, upon which he lectured extensively in Michigan, Illinois and other States after coming west in 1849. During 1854-55, in co-operation with Prof. J. B. Turner and others, he canvassed and lectured extensively throughout Illinois in support of the movement which resulted in the donation of public lands, by Congress, for the establishment of "Industrial Colleges" in the several States. The establishment of the University of Illinois, at Champaign, was the outgrowth of this movement. In 1856 he located at Quincy, where he resided some thirty years; in 1861, served for several months as the first Commissary of Subsistence at Cairo; was later associated with the State Quartermaster's Department, finally entering the secret service of the War Department, in which he remained until 1867, retiring with the rank of brevet Brigadier-General. In 1886, General Rutherford removed to New York City, where he died, June 24, 1895.—George V. (Rutherford), another brother, was born at Rutland Vt., 1839; was first admitted to the bar, but afterwards took charge of the construction of telegraph lines in some of the Southern States; at the beginning of the Civil War became Assistant Quartermaster-General of the State of Illinois, at Springfield, under ex-Gov. John Wood, but subsequently entered the Quartermaster's service of the General Government in Washington, retiring after the war with the rank of Brigadier-General. He then returned to Quincy, Ill., where he resided until 1872, when he engaged in manufacturing business at Northampton, Mass., but finally removed to California for the benefit of his failing health. Died, at St. Helena, Cal., August 28, 1872.

RUTLAND, a village of La Salle County, on the Illinois Central Railroad 25 miles south of La Salle, has a bank, five churches, school, and a newspaper, with coal mines in the vicinity. Pop. (1890), 509; (1900), 893; (1903), 1,093.

RUTLEDGE, (Rev.) William J., clergyman, Army Chaplain, born in Augusta County, Va., June 24, 1820; was converted at the age of 12 years and, at 21, became a member of the Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, serving various churches in the central and western parts of the State—also acting, for a time, as Agent of the Illinois Conference Female College at Jacksonville. From 1861 to 1863 he was Chaplain of the Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteers. Returning from the war, he served as pastor of churches at Jacksonville, Bloomington, Quincy, Rushville, Springfield, Griggsville and other points; from 1881 to '84 was Chaplain of the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet. Mr. Rutledge was one of the founders of the Grand Army of the Republic, and served for many years as Chaplain of the order for the Department of Illinois. In connection with the ministry, he has occupied a supernumerary relation since 1885. Died in Jacksonville, April 14, 1900.

RUTZ, Edward, State Treasurer, was born in a village in the Duchy of Baden, Germany, May 5, 1829; came to America in 1848, locating on a farm in St. Clair County, Ill.; went to California in 1857, and, early in 1861, enlisted in the Third United States Artillery at San Francisco, serving with the Army of the Potomac until his discharge in 1864, and taking part in every battle in which his command was engaged. After his return in 1865, he located in St. Clair County, and was elected County Surveyor, served three consecutive terms as County Treasurer, and was elected State Treasurer three times—1872, '76 and '80. About 1892 he removed to California, where he now resides.

RYAN, Edward G., early editor and jurist, born at Newcastle House, County Meath, Ireland, Nov. 13, 1810; was educated for the priesthood, but turned his attention to law, and, in 1830, came to New York and engaged in teaching while prosecuting his legal studies; in 1836 removed to Chicago, where he was admitted to the bar and was, for a time, associated in practice with Hugh T. Dickey. In April, 1840, Mr. Ryan assumed the editorship of a weekly paper in Chicago called "The Illinois Tribune," which he conducted for over a year, and which is remembered chiefly on account of its bitter assaults on Judge John Pearson of Danville, who had aroused the hostility of some members of the Chicago bar by his rulings upon the bench. About 1842 Ryan removed to Milwaukee, Wis., where he was, for a time, a partner of Matthew H. Carpenter (afterwards United States Senator), and was connected with a number of celebrated trials before the courts of that State, including the Barstow-Bashford case, which ended with Bashford becoming the first Republican Governor of Wisconsin. In 1874 he was appointed Chief Justice of Wisconsin, serving until his death, which occurred at Madison, Oct. 19, 1880. He was a strong partisan, and, during the Civil War, was an intense opponent of the war policy of the Government. In spite of infirmities of temper, he appears to have been a man of much learning and recognized legal ability.

RYAN, James, Roman Catholic Bishop, born in Ireland in 1848 and emigrated to America in childhood; was educated for the priesthood in Kentucky, and, after ordination, was made a professor in St. Joseph's Seminary, at Bardstown, Ky. In 1878 he removed to Illinois, attaching himself to the diocese of Peoria, and having charge of parishes at Wataga and Danville. In 1881 he became rector of the Ottawa parish, within the episcopal jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Chicago. In 1888 he was made Bishop of the see of Alton, the prior incumbent (Bishop Baltes) having died in 1886.

SACS AND FOXES, two confederated Indian tribes, who were among the most warlike and powerful of the aborigines of the Illinois Country. The Foxes called themselves the Musk-wah-lakee, a name compounded of two words, signifying "those of red earth." The French called them On-ta-ga-mies, that being their spelling of the name given them by other tribes, the meaning of which was "Foxes," and which was bestowed upon them because their totem (or armorial device, as it may be called) was a fox. They seem to have been driven westward from the northern shore of Lake Ontario, by way of Niagara and Mackinac, to the region around Green Bay, Wis.—Concerning their allied brethren, the Sacs, less is known. The name is variously spelled in the Indian dialects—On-sa-kies, Sauks, etc.—and the term Sacs is unquestionably an abbreviated corruption. Black Hawk belonged to this tribe. The Foxes and Sacs formed a confederation according to aboriginal tradition, on what is now known as the Sac River, near Green Bay, but the date of the alliance cannot be determined. The origin of the Sacs is equally uncertain. Black Hawk claimed that his tribe originally dwelt around Quebec, but, as to the authenticity of this claim, historical authorities differ widely. Subsequent to 1670 the history of the allied tribes is tolerably well defined. Their characteristics, location and habits are described at some length by Father Allouez, who visited them in 1666-67. He says that they were numerous and warlike, but depicts them as "penurious, avaricious, thievish and quarrelsome." That they were cordially detested by their neighbors is certain, and Judge James Hall calls them "the Ishmaelites of the lakes." They were unfriendly to the French, who attached to themselves other tribes, and, through the aid of the latter, had well-nigh exterminated them, when the Sacs and Foxes sued for peace, which was granted on terms most humiliating to the vanquished. By 1718, however, they were virtually in possession of the region around Rock River in Illinois, and, four years later, through the aid of the Mascoutins and Kickapoos, they had expelled the Illinois, driving the last of that ill-fated tribe across the Illinois River. They abstained from taking part in the border wars that marked the close of the Revolutionary War, and therefore did not participate in the treaty of Greenville in 1795. At that date, according to Judge Hall, they claimed the country as far west as Council Bluffs, Iowa, and as far north as Prairie du Chien. They offered to co-operate with the United States Government in the War of 1812, but this offer was declined, and a portion of the tribe, under the leadership of Black Hawk, enlisted on the side of the British. The Black Hawk War proved their political ruin. By the treaty of Rock Island they ceded vast tracts of land, including a large part of the eastern half of Iowa and a large body of land east of the Mississippi. (See Black Hawk War; Indian Treaties.) In 1842 the Government divided the nation into two bands, removing both to reservations in the farther West. One was located on the Osage River and the other on the south side of the Nee-ma-ha River, near the northwest corner of Kansas. From these reservations, there is little doubt, many of them have silently emigrated toward the Rocky Mountains, where the hoe might be laid aside for the rifle, the net and the spear of the hunter. A few years ago a part of these confederated tribes were located in the eastern part of Oklahoma.

SAILOR SPRINGS, a village and health resort in Clay County, 5 miles north of Clay City, has an academy and a local paper. Population (1900, 419; (1903, est.), 550.

SALEM, an incorporated city, the county seat of Marion County, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Illinois Southern Railroads, 71 miles east of St. Louis, and 16 miles northeast of Centralia; in agricultural and coal district. A leading industry is the culture, evaporation and shipment of fruit. The city has flour-mills, two banks and three weekly newspapers. Pop. (1890), 1,493; (1900), 1,642.

SALINE COUNTY, a southeastern county, organized in 1847, having an area of 380 square miles. It derives its name from the salt springs which are found in every part of the county. The northern portion is rolling and yields an abundance of coal of a quality suitable for smelting. The bottoms are swampy, but heavily timbered, and saw-mills abound. Oak, hickory, sweet gum, mulberry, locust and sassafras are the prevailing varieties. Fruit and tobacco are extensively cultivated. The climate is mild and humid, and the vegetation varied. The soil of the low lands is rich, and, when drained, makes excellent farming lands. In some localities a good gray sandstone, soft enough to be worked, is quarried, and millstone grit is frequently found. In the southern half of the county are the Eagle Mountains, a line of hills having an altitude of some 450 to 500 feet above the level of the Mississippi at Cairo, and believed by geologists to have been a part of the upheaval that gave birth to the Ozark Mountains in Missouri and Arkansas. The highest land in the county is 864 feet above sea-level. Tradition says that these hills are rich in silver ore, but it has not been found in paying quantities. Springs strongly impregnated with sulphur are found on the slopes. The county-seat was originally located at Raleigh, which was platted in 1848, but it was subsequently removed to Harrisburg, which was laid out in 1859. Population of the county (1880), 15,940; (1890), 19,342; (1900), 21,685.

SALINE RIVER, a stream formed by the confluence of two branches, both of which flow through portions of Saline County, uniting in Gallatin County. The North Fork rises in Hamilton County and runs nearly south, while the South Fork drains part of Williamson County, and runs east through Saline. The river (which is little more than a creek), thus formed, runs southeast, entering the Ohio ten miles below Shawneetown.

SALT MANUFACTURE. There is evidence going to show that the saline springs, in Gallatin County, were utilized by the aboriginal inhabitants in the making of salt long before the advent of white settlers. There have been discovered, at various points, what appear to be the remains of evaporating kettles, composed of hardened clay and pounded shells, varying in diameter from three to four feet. In 1812, with a view to encouraging the manufacture of salt from these springs, Congress granted to Illinois the use of 36 square miles, the fee still remaining in the United States. These lands were leased by the State to private parties, but the income derived from them was comparatively small and frequently difficult of collection. The workmen were mostly slaves from Kentucky and Tennessee, who are especially referred to in Article VI., Section 2, of the Constitution of 1818. The salt made brought $5 per 100 pounds, and was shipped in keel-boats to various points on the Ohio, Mississippi, Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers, while many purchasers came hundreds of miles on horse-back and carried it away on pack animals. In 1827, the State treasury being empty and the General Assembly having decided to erect a penitentiary at Alton, Congress was petitioned to donate these lands to the State in fee, and permission was granted "to sell 30,000 acres of the Ohio Salines in Gallatin County, and apply the proceeds to such purposes as the Legislature might by law direct." The sale was made, one-half of the proceeds set apart for the building of the penitentiary, and one-half to the improvement of roads and rivers in the eastern part of the State. The manufacture of salt was carried on, however—for a time by lessees and subsequently by owners—until 1873, about which time it was abandoned, chiefly because it had ceased to be profitable on account of competition with other districts possessing superior facilities. Some salt was manufactured in Vermilion County about 1824. The manufacture has been successfully carried on in recent years, from the product of artesian wells, at St. John, in Perry County.

SANDOVAL, a village of Marion County, at the crossing of the western branch of the Illinois Central Railroad, and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, 6 miles north of Centralia. The town has coal mines and some manufactures, with banks and one newspaper. Population (1880), 564; (1890), 834; (1900), 1,258.

SANDSTONE. The quantity of sandstone quarried in Illinois is comparatively insignificant, its value being less than one-fifth of one per cent of the value of the output of the entire country. In 1890 the State ranked twenty-fifth in the list of States producing this mineral, the total value of the stone quarried being but $17,896, representing 141,605 cubic feet, taken from ten quarries, which employed forty-six hands, and had an aggregate capital invested of $49,400.

SANDWICH, a city in De Kalb County, incorporated in 1873, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 58 miles southwest of Chicago. The principal industries are the manufacture of agricultural implements, hay-presses, corn-shellers, pumps and wind-mills. Sandwich has two private banks, two weekly and one semi-weekly papers. Pop. (1890), 2,516; (1900), 2,530; (1903), 2,865.

SANGAMON COUNTY, a central county, organized under act of June 30, 1821, from parts of Bond and Madison Counties, and embracing the present counties of Sangamon, Cass, Menard, Mason, Tazewell, Logan, and parts of Morgan, McLean, Woodford, Marshall and Putnam. It was named for the river flowing through it. Though reduced in area somewhat, four years later, it extended to the Illinois River, but was reduced to its present limits by the setting apart of Menard, Logan and Dane (now Christian) Counties, in 1839. Henry Funderburk is believed to have been the first white settler, arriving there in 1817 and locating in what is now Cotton Hill Township, being followed, the next year, by William Drennan, Joseph Dodds, James McCoy, Robert Pulliam and others. John Kelly located on the present site of the city of Springfield in 1818, and was there at the time of the selection of that place as the temporary seat of justice in 1821. Other settlements were made at Auburn, Island Grove, and elsewhere, and population began to flow in rapidly. Remnants of the Pottawatomie and Kickapoo Indians were still there, but soon moved north or west. County organization was effected in 1821, the first Board of County Commissioners being composed of William Drennan, Zachariah Peter and Samuel Lee. John Reynolds (afterwards Governor) held the first term of Circuit Court, with John Taylor, Sheriff; Henry Starr, Prosecuting Attorney, and Charles R. Matheny, Circuit Clerk. A United States Land Office was established at Springfield in 1823, with Pascal P. Enos as Receiver, the first sale of lands taking place the same year. The soil of Sangamon County is exuberantly fertile, with rich underlying deposits of bituminous coal, which is mined in large quantities. The chief towns are Springfield, Auburn, Riverton, Illiopolis and Pleasant Plains. The area of the county is 860 square miles. Population (1880), 52,894; (1890), 61,195; (1900), 71,593.

SANGAMON RIVER, formed by the union of the North and South Forks, of which the former is the longer, or main branch. The North Fork rises in the northern part of Champaign County, whence it runs southwest to the city of Decatur, thence westward through Sangamon County, forming the north boundary of Christian County, and emptying into the Illinois River about 9 miles above Beardstown. The Sangamon is nearly 240 miles long, including the North Fork. The South Fork flows through Christian County, and joins the North Fork about 6 miles east of Springfield. In the early history of the State the Sangamon was regarded as a navigable stream, and its improvement was one of the measures advocated by Abraham Lincoln in 1832, when he was for the first time a candidate (though unsuccessfully) for the Legislature. In the spring of 1832 a small steamer from Cincinnati, called the "Talisman," ascended the river to a point near Springfield. The event was celebrated with great rejoicing by the people, but the vessel encountered so much difficulty in getting out of the river that the experiment was never repeated.

SANGAMON & MORGAN RAILROAD. (See Wabash Railroad.)

SANGER, Lorenzo P., railway and canal contractor, was born at Littleton, N. H., March 2, 1809; brought in childhood to Livingston County, N. Y., where his father became a contractor on the Erie Canal, the son also being employed upon the same work. The latter subsequently became a contractor on the Pennsylvania Canal on his own account, being known as "the boy contractor." Then, after a brief experience in mercantile business, and a year spent in the construction of a canal in Indiana, in 1836 he came to Illinois, and soon after became an extensive contractor on the Illinois & Michigan Canal, having charge of rock excavation at Lockport. He was also connected with the Rock River improvement scheme, and interested in a line of stages between Chicago and Galena, which, having been consolidated with the line managed by the firm of Fink & Walker, finally became the Northwestern Stage Company, extending its operations throughout Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri—Mr. Sanger having charge of the Western Division, for a time, with headquarters at St. Louis. In 1851 he became the head of the firm of Sanger, Camp & Co., contractors for the construction of the Western (or Illinois) Division of the Ohio & Mississippi (now the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern) Railway, upon which he was employed for several years. Other works with which he was connected were the North Missouri Railroad and the construction of the State Penitentiary at Joliet, as member of the firm of Sanger & Casey, for a time, also lessees of convict labor. In 1862 Mr. Sanger received from Governor Yates, by request of President Lincoln, a commission as Colonel, and was assigned to staff duty in Kentucky and Tennessee. After the war he became largely interested in stone quarries adjacent to Joliet; also had an extensive contract, from the City of Chicago, for deepening the Illinois & Michigan Canal. Died, at Oakland, Cal., March 23, 1875, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health.—JAMES YOUNG (Sanger), brother of the preceding, was born at Sutton, Vt., March 14, 1814; in boyhood spent some time in a large mercantile establishment at Pittsburg, Pa., later being associated with his father and elder brother in contracts on the Erie Canal and similar works in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. At the age of 22 he came with his father's family to St. Joseph, Mich., where they established a large supply store, and engaged in bridge-building and similar enterprises. At a later period, in connection with his father and his brother, L. P. Sanger, he was prominently connected with the construction of the Illinois & Michigan Canal—the aqueduct at Ottawa and the locks at Peru being constructed by them. About 1850 the Construction Company, of which he and his brother, L. P. Sanger, were leading members, undertook the construction of the Ohio & Mississippi (now Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern) Railroad, from St. Louis to Vincennes, Ind., and were prominently identified with other railroad enterprises in Southern Illinois, Missouri and California. Died, July 3, 1867, when consummating arrangements for the performance of a large contract on the Union Pacific Railroad.

SANITARY COMMISSION. (See Illinois Sanitary Commission.)

SANITARY DISTRICT OF CHICAGO. (See Chicago Drainage Canal.)

SAUGANASH, the Indian name of a half-breed known as Capt. Billy Caldwell, the son of a British officer and a Pottawatomie woman, born in Canada about 1780; received an education from the Jesuits at Detroit, and was able to speak and write English and French, besides several Indian dialects; was a friend of Tecumseh's and, during the latter part of his life, a devoted friend of the whites. He took up his residence in Chicago about 1820, and, in 1826, was a Justice of the Peace, while nominally a subject of Great Britain and a Chief of the Ottawa and Pottawatomies. In 1828 the Government, in consideration of his services, built for him the first frame house ever erected in Chicago, which he occupied until his departure with his tribe for Council Bluffs in 1836. By a treaty, made Jan. 2, 1830, reservations were granted by the Government to Sauganash, Shabona and other friendly Indians (see Shabona), and 1,240 acres on the North Branch of Chicago River set apart for Caldwell, which he sold before leaving the country. Died, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, Sept. 28, 1841.

SAVAGE, George S. F., D.D., clergyman, was born at Cromwell, Conn., Jan. 29, 1817; graduated at Yale College in 1844; studied theology at Andover and New Haven, graduating in 1847; was ordained a home missionary the same year and spent twelve years as pastor at St. Charles, Ill., for four years being corresponding editor of "The Prairie Herald" and "The Congregational Herald." For ten years he was in the service of the American Tract Society, and, during the Civil War, was engaged in sanitary and religious work in the army. In 1870 he was appointed Western Secretary of the Congregational Publishing Society, remaining two years, after which he became Financial Secretary of the Chicago Theological Seminary. He has also been a Director of the institution since 1854, a Trustee of Beloit College since 1850, and, for several years, editor and publisher of "The Congregational Review."

SAVANNA, a city in Carroll County, situated on the Mississippi River and the Chicago, Burlington & Northern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railways; is 10 miles west of Mount Carroll and about 20 miles north of Clinton, Iowa. It is an important shipping-point and contains several manufactories of machinery, lumber, flour, etc. It has two State banks, a public library, churches, two graded schools, township high school, and two daily and weekly newspapers. Pop. (1890), 3,097; (1900), 3,325.

SAVBROOK, a village of McLean County, on the Lake Erie & Western Railroad, 26 miles east of Bloomington; district agricultural; county fairs held here; the town has two banks and two newspapers. Pop. (1890), 851; (1900), 879.

SCATES, Walter Bennett, jurist and soldier, was born at South Boston, Halifax County, Va., Jan. 18, 1808, was taken in infancy to Hopkinsville, Ky., where he resided until 1831, having meanwhile learned the printer's trade at Nashville and studied law at Louisville. In 1831 he removed to Frankfort, Franklin County, Ill., where, for a time, he was County Surveyor. In 1836, having been appointed Attorney-General, he removed to Vandalia, then the seat of government, but resigned at the close of the same year to accept the judgeship of the Third Judicial Circuit, and took up his residence at Shawneetown. In 1841 he was one of five new Judges added to the Supreme Court bench, the others being Sidney Breese, Stephen A. Douglas, Thomas Ford and Samuel H. Treat. In that year he removed to Mount Vernon, Jefferson County, and, in January, 1847, resigned his seat upon the bench to resume practice. The same year he was a member of the Constitutional Convention and Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary. In June, 1854, he again took a seat upon the Supreme Court bench, being chosen to succeed Lyman Trumbull, but resigned in May, 1857, and resumed practice in Chicago. In 1862 he volunteered in defense of the Union, received a Major's commission and was assigned to duty on the staff of General McClelland; was made, Assistant Adjutant-General and mustered out in January, 1866. In July, 1866, President Johnson appointed him Collector of Customs at Chicago, which position he filled until July 1, 1869, when he was removed by President Grant, during the same period, being ex-officio custodian of United States funds, the office of Assistant Treasurer not having been then created. Died, at Evanston, Oct. 26, 1886.

SCAMMON, Jonathan Young, lawyer and banker, was born at Whitefield, Maine, July 27, 1812; after graduating at Waterville (now Colby) University in 1831, he studied law and was admitted to the bar at Hallowell, in 1835 removing to Chicago, where he spent the remainder of his life. After a year spent as deputy in the office of the Circuit Clerk of Cook County, during which he prepared a revision of the Illinois statutes, he was appointed attorney for the State Bank of Illinois in 1837, and, in 1839, became reporter of the Supreme Court, which office he held until 1845. In the meantime, he was associated with several prominent lawyers, his first legal firm being that of Scammon, McCagg & Fuller, which was continued up to the fire of 1871. A large operator in real estate and identified with many enterprises of a public or benevolent character, his most important financial venture was in connection with the Chicago Marine & Fire Insurance Company, which conducted an extensive banking business for many years, and of which he was the President and leading spirit. As a citizen he was progressive, public-spirited and liberal. He was one of the main promoters and organizers of the old Galena & Chicago Union Railway, the first railroad to run west from Lake Michigan; was also prominently identified with the founding of the Chicago public school system, a Trustee of the (old) Chicago University, and one of the founders of the Chicago Historical Society, of the Chicago Academy of Sciences and the Chicago Astronomical Society — being the first President of the latter body. He erected, at a cost of $30,000, the Fort Dearborn Observatory, in which he caused to be placed the most powerful telescope which had at that time been brought to the West. He also maintained the observatory at his own expense. He was the pioneer of Swedenborgianism in Chicago, and, in politics, a staunch Whig, and, later, an ardent Republican. In 1844 he was one of the founders of "The Chicago American," a paper designed to advance the candidacy of Henry Clay for the Presidency; and, in 1872, when "The Chicago Tribune" espoused the Liberal Republican cause, he started "The Inter Ocean" as a Republican organ, being, for some time, its sole proprietor and editor-in-chief. He was one of the first to encourage the adoption of the homeopathic system of medicine in Chicago, and was prominently connected with the founding of the Hahnemann Medical College and the Hahnemann Hospital, being a Trustee in both for many years. As a member of the General Assembly he secured the passage of many important measures, among them being legislation looking toward the bettering of the currency and the banking system. He accumulated a large fortune, but lost most of it by the fire of 1871 and the panic of 1873. Died, in Chicago, March 17, 1890.

SCARRITT, Nathan, pioneer, was born in Connecticut, came to Edwardsville, Ill., in 1820, and, in 1821, located in Scarritt's Prairie, Madison County. His sons afterward became influential in business and Methodist church circles. Died, Dec. 12, 1847.

SCENERY, NATURAL. Notwithstanding the uniformity of surface which characterizes a country containing no mountain ranges, but which is made up largely of natural prairies, there are a number of localities in Illinois where scenery of a picturesque, and even bold and rugged character, may be found. One of the most striking of these features is produced by a spur or low range of hills from the Ozark Mountains of Missouri, projected across the southern part of the State from the vicinity of Grand

Tower in Jackson County, through the northern part of Union, and through portions of Williamson, Johnson, Saline, Pope and Hardin Counties. Grand Tower, the initial point in the western part of the State, is an isolated cliff of limestone, standing out in the channel of the Mississippi, and forming an island nearly 100 feet above low-water level. It has been a conspicuous landmark for navigators ever since the discovery of the Mississippi. "Fountain Bluff"—a few miles above Grand Tower, is another conspicuous point immediately on the river bank, formed by some isolated hills about three miles long by a mile and a half wide, which have withstood the forces that excavated the valley now occupied by the Mississippi. About half a mile from the lower end of this hill, with a low valley between them, is a smaller eminence known as the "Devil's Bake Oven." The main chain of bluffs, known as the "Back Bone," is about five miles from the river, and rises to a height of nearly 700 feet above low-tide in the Gulf of Mexico, or more than 400 feet above the level of the river at Cairo. "Bald Knob" is a very prominent inland bluff promontory near Alta Pass on the line of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, in the northern part of Union County, with an elevation above tide-water of 985 feet. The highest point in this range of hills is reached in the north-eastern part of Pope County—the elevation at that point (as ascertained by Prof. Rolfe of the State University at Champaign) being 1,046 feet.—There is some striking scenery in the neighborhood of Grafton between Alton and the mouth of the Illinois, as well as some distance up the latter stream—though the landscape along the middle section of the Illinois is generally monotonous or only gently undulating, except at Peoria and a few other points, where bluffs rise to a considerable height. On the Upper Illinois, beginning at Peru, the scenery again becomes picturesque, including the celebrated "Starved Rock," the site of La Salle's Fort St. Louis (which see). This rock rises to a perpendicular height of about 125 feet from the surface of the river at the ordinary stage. On the opposite side of the river, about four miles below Ottawa, is "Buffalo Rock," an isolated ridge of rock about two miles long by forty to sixty rods wide, evidently once an island at a period when the Illinois River occupied the whole valley. Additional interest is given to both these localities by their association with early history. Deer Park, on the Vermilion River—some two miles from where it empties into the Illinois just below "Starved

Rock"—is a peculiar grotto-like formation caused by a ravine which enters the Vermilion at this point. Ascending this ravine from its mouth, for a quarter of a mile, between almost perpendicular walls, the road terminates abruptly at a dome-like overhanging rock which widens at this point to about 150 feet in diameter at the base, with a height of about 75 feet. A clear spring of water gushes from the base of the cliff, and, at certain seasons of the year, a beautiful water-fall pours from the cliffs into a little lake at the bottom of the chasm. There is much other striking scenery higher up, on both the Illinois and Fox Rivers.—A point which arrested the attention of the earliest explorers in this region was Mount Joliet, near the city of that name. It is first mentioned by St. Cosme in 1698, and has been variously known as Monjolly, Mont Jolie, Mount Juliet, and Mount Joliet. It had an elevation, in early times, of about 30 feet with a level top 1,300 by 225 feet. Prof. O. H. Marshall, in "The American Antiquarian," expresses the opinion that, originally, it was an island in the river, which, at a remote period, swept down the valley of the Des Plaines. Mount Joliet was a favorite rallying point of Illinois Indians, who were accustomed to hold their councils at its base.—The scenery along Rock River is not striking from its boldness, but it attracted the attention of early explorers by the picturesque beauty of its groves, undulating plains and sheets of water. The highest and most abrupt elevations are met with in Jo Daviess County, near the Wisconsin State line. Pilot Knob, a natural mound about three miles south of Galena and two miles from the Mississippi, has been a landmark well known to tourists and river men ever since the Upper Mississippi began to be navigated. Towering above the surrounding bluffs, it reaches an altitude of some 430 feet above the ordinary level of Fever River. A chain of some half dozen of these mounds extends some four or five miles in a north-easterly direction from Pilot Knob, Waddell's and Jackson's Mounds being conspicuous among them. There are also some castellated rocks around the city of Galena which are very striking. Charles Mound, belonging to the system already referred to, is believed to be the highest elevation in the State. It stands near the Wisconsin State line, and, according to Prof. Rolfe, has an altitude of 314 feet above the Illinois Central Railroad at Seides' Mound Station, and, 1,257 feet above the Gulf of Mexico.

SCHNEIDER, George, journalist and banker, was born at Pirmasens, Bavaria, Dec. 13, 1823. Being sentenced to death for his participation in the attempted rebellion of 1848, he escaped to America in 1849, going from New York to Cleveland, and afterwards to St. Louis. There, in connection with his brother, he established a German daily—"The New Era"—which was intensely anti-slavery and exerted a decided political influence, especially among persons of German birth. In 1851 he removed to Chicago, where he became editor of "The Staats Zeitung," in which he vigorously opposed the Kansas-Nebraska bill on its introduction by Senator Douglas. His attitude and articles gave such offense to the partisan friends of this measure, that "The Zeitung" was threatened with destruction by a mob in 1855. He early took advanced ground in opposition to slavery, and was a member of the convention of Anti-Nebraska editors, held at Decatur in 1856, and of the first Republican State Convention, held at Bloomington the same year, as well as of the National Republican Conventions of 1856 and 1860, participating in the nomination of both John C. Fremont and Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency. In 1861 he was a member of the Chicago Union Defense Committee, and was appointed, by Mr. Lincoln, Consul-General at Elsinore, Denmark. Returning to America in 1862, he disposed of his interest in "The Staats Zeitung" and was appointed the first Collector of Internal Revenue for the Chicago District. On retiring from this office he engaged in banking, subsequently becoming President of the National Bank of Illinois, with which he was associated for a quarter of a century. In 1877 President Hayes tendered him the ministry to Switzerland, which he declined. In 1880 he was chosen Presidential Elector for the State-at-large, also serving for a number of years as a member of the Republican State Central Committee.

SCHOFIELD, John McAllister, Major-General, was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1831; brought to Bristol, Kendall County, Ill., in 1843, and, two years later, removed to Freeport; graduated from the United States Military Academy, in 1853, as classmate of Generals McPherson and Sheridan; was assigned to the artillery service and served two years in Florida, after which he spent five years (1855-60) as an instructor at West Point. At the beginning of the Civil War he was on leave of absence, acting as Professor of Physics in Washington University at St. Louis, but, waiving his leave, he at once returned to duty and was appointed mustering officer; then, by permission of the War Department, entered the First Missouri Volunteers as Major, serving as Chief of Staff to General Lyon in the early battles in Missouri, including Wilson's Creek. His subsequent career included the organization of the Missouri State Militia (1862), command of the Army of the Frontier in Southwest Missouri, command of the Department of the Missouri and Ohio, participation in the Atlanta campaign and co-operation with Sherman in the capture of the rebel Gen. Joseph E. Johnston in North Carolina—his army having been transferred for this purpose, from Tennessee by way of Washington. After the close of the war he went on a special mission to Mexico to investigate the French occupation of that country; was commander of the Department of the Potomac, and served as Secretary of War, by appointment of President Johnson, from June, 1868, to March, 1869. On retiring from the Cabinet he was commissioned a full Major-General and held various Division and Department commands until 1886, when, on the death of General Sherman, he succeeded to the command of the Army, with headquarters at Washington. He was retired under the age limit, Sept. 29, 1895. His present home is in Washington.

SCHOLFIELD, John, jurist, was born in Clark County, Ill., in 1834; acquired the rudiments of an education in the common schools during boyhood, meanwhile gaining some knowledge of the higher branches through toilsome application to text-books without a preceptor. At the age of 20 he entered the law school at Louisville, Ky., graduating two years later, and beginning practice at Marshall, Ill. He defrayed his expenses at the law school from the proceeds of the sale of a small piece of land to which he had fallen heir. In 1856 he was elected State's Attorney, and, in 1860, was chosen to represent his county in the Legislature. After serving one term he returned to his professional career and succeeded in building up a profitable practice. In 1869-70 he represented Clark and Cumberland Counties in the Constitutional Convention, and, in 1870, became Solicitor for the Vandalia Railroad. In 1873 he was elected to fill the vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court of the State for the Middle Grand Division, caused by the resignation of Judge Anthony Thornton, and re-elected without opposition in 1879 and 1888. Died, in office, Feb. 13, 1893. It has been claimed that President Cleveland would have tendered him the Chief Justiceship of the United States Supreme Court, had he not insistently declined to accept the honor.

SCHOOL-HOUSES, EARLY. The primitive school-houses of Illinois were built of logs, and were extremely rude, as regards both structure and furnishing. Indeed, the earliest pioneers rarely erected a special building to be used as a school house. An old smoke-house, an abandoned dwelling, an old block-house, or the left or one end of a settler's cabin not unfrequently answered the purpose, and the church and the court-house were often made to accommodate the school. When a school-house, as such, was to be built, the men of the district gathered at the site selected, bringing their axes and a few other tools, with their ox-teams, and devoted four or five days to constructing a house into which, perhaps, not a nail was driven. Trees were cut from the public lands, and, without hewing, fashioned into a cabin sixteen feet square was usually considered the proper dimensions. In the walls were cut two holes, one for a door to admit light and air, and the other for the open fireplace, from which rose a chimney, usually built of sticks and mud, on the outside. Danger of fire was averted by thickly lining the inside of the chimney with clay mortar. Sometimes, but only with great labor, stone was substituted for mortar made from the clay soil. The chimneys were always wide, seldom less than six feet, and sometimes extending across one entire end of the building. The fuel used was wood cut directly from the forest, frequently in its green state, dragged to the spot in the form of logs or entire trees to be cut by the older pupils in lengths suited to the width of the chimney. Occasionally there was no chimney, the fire, in some of the most primitive structures, being built on the earth and the smoke escaping through a hole in the roof. In such houses a long board was set up on the windward side, and shifted from side to side as the wind varied. Stones or logs answered for anvils, clapboards served as shovels, and no one complained of the lack of tongs. Roofs were made of roughly split clapboards, held in place by "weight poles" laid on the boards, and by supports starting from "eaves poles." The space between the logs, which constituted the walls of the building, was filled in with blocks of wood or "chinking," and the crevices, both exterior and interior, daubed over with clay mortar, in which straw was sometimes mixed to increase its adhesiveness. On one side of the structure one or two logs were sometimes cut out to allow the admission of light; and, as glass could not always be procured, rain and snow were excluded and light admitted by the use of greased paper. Over this space a board, attached to the outer wall by leather hinges, was sometimes suspended to keep out the storms. The placing of a glass window in a country school-house at Edwardsville, in 1824, was considered an important event. Ordinarily the floor was of the natural earth, although this was sometimes covered with a layer of clay, firmly packed down. Only the more pretentious school-houses had "puncheon floors"; i. e., floors made of split logs roughly hewn. Few had "ceilings" (so-called), the latter being usually made of clapboards, sometimes of bark, on which was spread earth, to keep out the cold. The seats were also of puncheons (without backs) supported on four legs made of pieces of poles inserted through augur holes. No one had a desk, except the advanced pupils who were learning to write. For their convenience a broader and smoother puncheon was fastened into the wall by wooden pins, in such a way that it would slope downward toward the pupil, the front being supported by a brace extending from the wall. When a pupil was writing he faced the wall. When he had finished this task, he "reversed himself" and faced the teacher and his schoolmates. These adjuncts completed the furnishings, with the exception of a split-bottomed chair for the teacher (who seldom had a desk) and a pail, or "piggin," of water, with a gourd for a drinking cup. Rough and uncouth as these structures were, they were evidences of public spirit and of appreciation of the advantages of education. They were built and maintained by mutual aid and sacrifice, and, in them, some of the great men of the State and Nation obtained that primary training which formed the foundation of their subsequent careers. (See Education.)

SCHUYLER COUNTY, located in the western portion of the State, has an area of 430 square miles, and was named for Gen. Philip Schuyler. The first American settlers arrived in 1823, and, among the earliest pioneers, were Calvin Hobart, William H. Taylor and Orris McCartney. The county was organized from a portion of Pike County, in 1825, the first Commissioners being Thomas Blair, Thomas McKee and Samuel Horney. The Commissioners appointed to locate the county-seat, selected a site in the eastern part of the county about one mile west of the present village of Pleasant View, to which the name of Beardstown was given, and where the earliest court was held, Judge John York Sawyer presiding, with Hart Fellows as Clerk, and Orris McCartney, Sheriff. This location, however, proving unsatisfactory, new Commissioners were appointed, who, in the early part of 1826, selected the present site of the city of Rushville, some five miles west of the point originally chosen. The new seat of justice was first called Rushton, in honor of Dr. Benjamin Rush, but the name was afterwards changed to Rushville. Ephraim Eggleston was the pioneer of Rushville. The surface of the county is rolling, and the region contains excellent farming land, which is well watered by the Illinois River and numerous creeks. Population (1890), 16,013; (1900), 16,129.

SCHWATKA, Frederick, Arctic explorer, was born at Galena, Ill., Sept. 29, 1849; graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1871, and was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Third Cavalry, serving on the frontier until 1877, meantime studying law and medicine, being admitted to the bar in 1875, and graduating in medicine in 1876. Having his interest excited by reports of traces of Sir John Franklin's expedition, found by the Esquimaux, he obtained leave of absence in 1878, and, with Wm. H. Gilder as second in command, sailed from New York in the "Eothen," June 19, for King William's Land. The party returned, Sept. 22, 1880, having found and buried the skeletons of many of Franklin's party, besides discovering relics which tended to clear up the mystery of their fate. During this period he made a sledge journey of 3,251 miles. Again, in 1883, he headed an exploring expedition up the Yukon River. After a brief return to army duty he tendered his resignation in 1885, and the next year led a special expedition to Alaska, under the auspices of "The New York Times," later making a voyage of discovery among the Aleutian Islands. In 1889 he conducted an expedition to Northern Mexico, where he found many interesting relics of Aztec civilization and of the cliff and cave-dwellers. He received the Roquette Arctic Medal from the Geographical Society of Paris, and a medal from the Imperial Geographical Society of Russia; also published several volumes relating to his researches, under the titles, "Along Alaska's Great River"; "The Franklin Search Under Lieutenant Schwatka"; "Nimrod of the North"; and "Children of the Cold." Died, at Portland, Ore., Nov. 2, 1892.

SCOTT, James W., journalist, was born in Walworth County, Wis., June 26, 1849, the son of a printer, editor and publisher. While a boy he accompanied his father to Galena, where the latter established a newspaper, and where he learned the printer's trade. After graduating from the Galena high school, he entered Beloit College, but left at the end of his sophomore year. Going to New York, he became interested in floriculture, at the same time contributing short articles to horticultural periodicals. Later he was a compositor in Washington. His first newspaper venture was the publication of a weekly newspaper in Maryland in 1872. Returning to Illinois, conjointly with his father he started "The Industrial Press" at Galena, but, in 1875, removed to Chicago. There he purchased "The Daily National Hotel Reporter," from which he withdrew a few years later. In May, 1881, in conjunction with others, he organized The Chicago Herald Company, in which he ultimately secured a controlling interest. His journalistic and executive capability soon brought additional responsibilities. He was chosen President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, of the Chicago Press Club, and of the United Press—the latter being an organization for the collection and dissemination of telegraphic news to journals throughout the United States and Canada. He was also conspicuously connected with the preliminary organization of the World's Columbian Exposition, and Chairman of the Press Committee. In 1893 he started an evening paper at Chicago, which he named "The Post." Early in 1895 he purchased "The Chicago Times," intending to consolidate it with "The Herald," but before the final consummation of his plans, he died suddenly, while on a business visit in New York, April 14, 1895.

SCOTT, John M., lawyer and jurist, was born in St. Clair County, Ill., August 1, 1824; his father being of Scotch-Irish descent and his mother a Virginian. His attendance upon district schools was supplemented by private tuition, and his early education was the best that the comparatively new country afforded. He read law at Belleville, was admitted to the bar in 1848, removed to McLean County, which continued to be his home for nearly fifty years. He served as County School Commissioner from 1849 to 1852, and, in the latter year, was elected County Judge. In 1856 he was an unsuccessful Republican candidate for the State Senate, frequently speaking from the same platform with Abraham Lincoln. In 1862 he was elected Judge of the Circuit Court of the Eighth Judicial Circuit, to succeed David Davis on the elevation of the latter to the bench of the United States Supreme Court, and was re-elected in 1867. In 1870, a new judicial election being rendered necessary by the adoption of the new Constitution, Judge Scott was chosen Justice of the Supreme Court for a term of nine years; was re-elected in 1879, but declined a renomination in 1888. The latter years of his life were devoted to his private affairs. Died, at Bloomington, Jan. 21, 1898. Shortly before his death Judge Scott published a volume containing a History of the Illinois Supreme Court, including brief sketches of the early occupants of the Supreme Court bench and early lawyers of the State.

SCOTT, Matthew Thompson, agriculturist and real estate operator, was born at Lexington, Ky. Feb. 24, 1828, graduated at Centre College in 1846, then spent several years looking after his father's landed interests in Ohio, when he came to Illinois and invested largely in lands for himself and others. He laid out the town of Chenoa in 1856, lived in Springfield in 1870-72, when he removed to Bloomington, where he organized the McLean County Coal Company, remaining as its head until his death; was also the founder of "The Bloomington Bulletin," in 1878. Died, at Bloomington, May 21, 1891.

SCOTT, Owen, journalist and ex-Congressman, was born in Jackson Township, Ellingham County, Ill., July 6, 1848, reared on a farm, and, after receiving a thorough common-school education, became a teacher, and was, for eight years, Superintendent of Schools for his native county. In January, 1874, he was admitted to the bar, but abandoned practice, ten years later, to engage in newspaper work. His first publication was "The Ellingham Democrat," which he left to become proprietor and manager of "The Bloomington Bulletin." He was also publisher of "The Illinois Freemason," a monthly periodical. Before removing to Bloomington he filled the offices of City Attorney and Mayor of Ellingham, and also served as Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue. In 1890 he was elected as a Democrat from the Fourteenth Illinois District to the Fifty-second Congress. In 1892 he was a candidate for re-election, but was defeated by his Republican opponent, Benjamin F. Funk. During the past few years, Mr. Scott has been editor of "The Bloomington Leader."

SCOTT COUNTY, lies in the western part of the State adjoining the Illinois River, and has an area of 218 square miles. The region was originally owned by the Kickapoo Indians, who ceded it to the Government by the treaty of Edwardsville, July 30, 1819. Six months later, in January, 1820, a party of Kentuckians settled near Lynnville (now in Morgan County); their names being Thomas Stevens, James Scott, Alfred Miller, Thomas Allen, John Scott and Adam Miller. Allen erected the first house in the county, John Scott the second and Adam Miller the third. About the same time came Stephen M. Umpstead, whose wife was the first white woman in the county. Other pioneers were Jedediah Webster, Stephen Pierce, Joseph Denmore, Jesse Roberts, and Samuel Bogard. The country was rough and the conveniences of civilization few and remote. Settlers took their corn to Edwardsville to be ground, and went to Alton for their mill. Turbulence early showed itself, and, in 1822, a band of "Regulators" was organized from the best citizens, who meted out a rough and ready sort of justice, until 1830, occasionally shooting a desperado at his cabin door. Scott County was cut off from Morgan and organized in 1839. It contains good farming land, much of it being originally timbered, and it is well watered by the Illinois River and numerous small streams. Winchester is the county-seat. Population of the county (1880), 10,741; (1890), 10,304; (1900), 10,455.

SCRIPPS, John L., journalist, was born near Cape Girardeau, Mo., Feb. 18, 1818; was taken to Rushville, Ill., in childhood, and educated at McKendree College; studied law and came to Chicago in 1847, with the intention of practicing, but, a year or so later, bought a third interest in "The Chicago Tribune," which had been established during the previous year. In 1852 he withdrew from "The Tribune," and, in conjunction with William Bross (afterwards Lieutenant-Governor), established "The Daily Democratic Press," which was consolidated with "The Tribune" in July, 1858, under the name of "The Press and Tribune." Mr. Scripps remaining one of the editors of the new concern. In 1861 he was appointed, by Mr. Lincoln, Postmaster of the city of Chicago, serving until 1865, when, having sold his interest in "The Tribune," he engaged in the banking business as a member of the firm of Scripps, Preston & Kean. His health, however, soon showed signs of failure, and he died, Sept. 21, 1866, at Minneapolis, Minn., whither he had gone in hopes of restoration. Mr. Scripps was a finished and able writer who did much to elevate the standard of Chicago journalism.

SCROGGS, George, journalist, was born at Wilmington, Clinton, County, Ohio, Oct. 7, 1842—the son of Dr. John W. Scroggs, who came to Champaign County, Ill., in 1851, and, in 1858, took charge of "The Central Illinois Gazette," in 1866-67 Dr. Scroggs was active in securing the location of the State University at Champaign, afterwards serving as a member of the first Board of Trustees of that institution. The son, at the age of 15, became an apprentice in his father's printing office, continuing until 1862, when he enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, being promoted through the positions of Sergeant-Major and Second Lieutenant, and finally serving on the staffs of Gen. Jeff. C. Davis and Gen. James D. Morgan, but declining a commission as Adjutant of the Sixtieth Illinois. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge and the march with Sherman to the sea, in the latter being severely wounded at Bentonville, N. C. He remained in the service until July, 1865; when he resigned; then entered the University at Champaign, later studied law, meanwhile writing for "The Champaign Gazette and Union," of which he finally became sole proprietor. In 1877 he was appointed an Aid-de-Camp on the staff of Governor Cullom, and, the following year, was elected to the Thirty-first General Assembly, but, before the close of the session (1879), received the appointment of United States Consul to Hamburg, Germany. He was compelled to surrender this position, a year later, on account of ill-health, and, returning home, died. Oct. 15, 1880.

SEATONVILLE, a village in Hall Township, Bureau County. Population (1900), 909.

SECRETARIES OF STATE. The following is a list of the Secretaries of State of Illinois from its admission into the Union down to the present time (1899), with the date and duration of the term of each incumbent: Elias Kent Kane, 1818-22; Samuel D. Lockwood, 1822-23; David Blackwell, 1823-24; Morris Birkbeck, October, 1824 to January, 1825 (failed of confirmation by the Senate); George Forquer, 1825-28; Alexander Pope Field, 1828-40; Stephen A. Douglas, 1840-41 (served three months—resigned to take a seat on the Supreme bench); Lyman Trumbull, 1841-43; Thompson Campbell, 1843-46; Horace S. Cooley, 1846-50; David L. Gregg, 1850-53; Alexander Starne, 1853-57; Ozias M. Hatch, 1857-65; Sharon Tyndale, 1865-69; Edward Rummel, 1869-73; George H. Harlow, 1873-81; Henry D. Dement, 1881-89; Isaac N. Pearson, 1889-93; William H. Hinrichsen, 1893-97; James A. Rose, 1897—, Nathaniel Pope and Joseph Phillips were the only Secretaries of Illinois during the Territorial period, the former serving from 1809 to 1816, and the latter from 1816 to 1818. Under the first Constitution (1818) the office of the Secretary of State was filled by appointment by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, but without limitation as to term of office. By the Constitution of 1848, and again by that of 1870, that officer was made elective by the people at the same time as the Governor, for a term of four years.

SECRET TREASONABLE SOCIETIES. Early in the War of the Rebellion there sprang up, at various points in the Northwest, organizations of persons disaffected toward the National Government. They were most numerous in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri. At first they were known by such titles as "Circles of Honor," "Mutual Protective Associations," etc. But they had kindred aims and their members were soon united in one organization, styled "Knights of the Golden Circle." Its secrets having been partially disclosed, this body ceased to exist—or, it would be more correct to say, changed its name—being soon succeeded (1863) by an organization of similar character, called the "American Knights." These societies, as first formed, were rather political than military. The "American Knights" had more forcible aims, but this, in turn, was also exposed, and the order was re-organized under the name of "Sons of Liberty." The last named order started in Indiana, and, owing to its more perfect organization, rapidly spread over the Northwest, acquiring much more strength and influence than its predecessors had done. The ultimate authority of the organization was vested in a Supreme Council, whose officers were a "supreme commander," "secretary of state," and "treasurer." Each State represented formed a division, under a "deputy grand commander." States were divided into military districts, under "major-generals." County lodges were termed "temples." The order was virtually an officered army, and its aims were aggressive. It had its commander-in-chief, its brigades and its regiments. Three degrees were recognized, and the oaths of secrecy taken at each initiation surpassed, in binding force, either the oath of allegiance or an oath taken in a court of justice. The maintenance of slavery, and forcible opposition to a coercive policy by the Government in dealing with secession, were the pivotal doctrines of the order. Its methods and purposes were to discourage enlistments and resist a draft; to aid and protect deserters; to disseminate treasonable literature; to aid the Confederates in destroying Government property. Clement L. Vallandigham, the expatriated traitor, was at its head, and, in 1864, claimed that it had a numerical strength of 400,000, of whom 65,000 were in Illinois. Many overt acts were committed, but the organization, having been exposed and defeated in its objects, disbanded in 1865. (See Camp Douglas Conspiracy.)

SELBY, Paul, editor, was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, July 20, 1825; removed with his parents, in 1837, to Van Buren County, Iowa, but, at the age of 19, went to Southern Illinois, where he spent four years teaching, chiefly in Madison County. In 1848 he entered the preparatory department of Illinois College at Jacksonville, but left the institution during his junior year to assume the editorship of "The Morgan Journal," at Jacksonville, with which he remained until the fall of 1858, covering the period of the organization of the Republican party, in which "The Journal" took an active part. He was a member of the Anti-Nebraska (afterwards known as Republican) State Convention, which met at Springfield, in October, 1854 (the first ever held in the State), and, on Feb. 22, 1856, attended and presided over a conference of Anti-Nebraska editors of the State at Decatur, called to devise a line of policy for the newly organizing Republican party. (See Anti-Nebraska Editorial Convention.) This body appointed the first Republican State Central Committee and designated the date of the Bloomington Convention of May 29, following, which put in nomination the first Republican State ticket ever named in Illinois, which ticket was elected in the following November (See Bloomington Convention.) In 1859 he prepared a pamphlet giving a history of the celebrated Canal scrip fraud, which was widely circulated. (See Canal Scrip Fraud.) Going South in the fall of 1859, he was engaged in teaching in the State of Louisiana until the last of June, 1861. Just two weeks before the fall of Fort Sumter he was denounced to his Southern neighbors as an "abolitionist" and falsely charged with having been connected with the "underground railroad," in letters from secession sympathizers in the North, whose personal and political enmity he had incurred while conducting a Republican paper in Illinois, some of whom referred to Jefferson Davis, Senator Sliedell, of Louisiana, and other Southern leaders as vouchers for their characters. He at once invited an investigation by the Board of Trustees of the institution, of which he was the Principal, when that body—although composed, for the most part, of Southern men—on the basis of testimonials from prominent citizens of Jacksonville, and other evidence, adopted resolutions declaring the charges prompted by personal hostility, and delivered the letters of his accusers into his hands. Returning North with his family in July, 1861, he spent some nine months in the commissary and transportation branches of the service at Cairo and at Paducah, Ky. In July, 1862, he became associate editor of "The Illinois State Journal" at Springfield, remaining until November, 1865. The next six months were spent as Assistant Deputy Collector in the Custom House at New Orleans, but, returning North in June, 1866, he soon after became identified with the Chicago press, serving, first upon the staff of "The Evening Journal" and, later, on "The Republican." In May, 1868, he assumed the editorship of "The Quincy Whig," ultimately becoming part proprietor of that paper, but, in January, 1874, resumed his old place on "The State Journal," four years later becoming one of its proprietors. In 1880 he was appointed by President Hayes Postmaster of Springfield, was reappointed by Arthur in 1884, but resigned in 1886. Meanwhile he had sold his interest in "The Journal," but the following year organized a new company for its purchase, when he resumed his former position as editor. In 1889 he disposed of his holding in "The Journal," finally removing to Chicago, where he has been employed in literary work. In all he has been engaged in editorial work over thirty-five years, of which eighteen were spent upon "The State Journal." In 1860 Mr. Selby was complimented by his Alma Mater with the honorary degree of A. M. He has been twice married, first to Miss Erra Post, of Springfield, who died in November, 1865, leaving two daughters, and, in 1870, to Mrs. Mary J. Hitchcock, of Quincy, by whom he had two children, both of whom died in infancy.

SEMPLE, James, United States Senator, was born in Green County, Ky., Jan. 5, 1798, of Scotch descent; after learning the tanner's trade, studied law and emigrated to Illinois in 1818, removing to Missouri four years later, where he was admitted to the bar. Returning to Illinois in 1828, he began practice at Edwardsville, but later became a citizen of Alton. During the Black Hawk War he served as Brigadier-General. He was thrice elected to the lower house of the Legislature (1822, '34 and '36), and was Speaker during the last two terms. In 1833 he was elected Attorney-General by the Legislature, but served only until the following year, and, in 1837, was appointed Minister to Granada, South America. In 1843 he was appointed, and afterwards elected, United States Senator to fill the unexpired term of Samuel McRoberts, at the expiration of his term (1847) retiring to private life. He laid out the town of Elsau, in Jersey County, just south of which he owned a large estate on the Mississippi bluffs, where he died. Dec. 20, 1866.

SENECA (formerly Crotty), a village of La Salle County, situated on the Illinois River, the Illinois & Michigan Canal and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railways, 13 miles east of Ottawa. It has a graded school, several churches, a bank, some manufactures, grain warehouses, coal mines, telephone system and one newspaper. Pop. (1890), 1,190; (1900), 1,036.

SENN, (Dr.) Nicholas, physician and surgeon, was born in the Canton of St. Gaul, Switzerland, Oct. 31, 1844; was brought to America at 8 years of age, his parents settling at Washington, Wis. He received a grammar school education at Fond du Lac, and, in 1864, began the study of medicine, graduating at the Chicago Medical College in 1868. After some eighteen months spent as resident physician in the Cook County Hospital, he began practice at Ashford, Wis., but removed to Milwaukee in 1874, where he became attending physician of the Milwaukee Hospital. In 1877 he visited Europe, graduated the following year from the University of Munich, and, on his return, became Professor of the Principles of Surgery and Surgical Pathology in Rush Medical College in Chicago—also has held the chair of the Practice of Surgery in the same institution. Dr. Senn has achieved great success and won an international reputation in the treatment of difficult cases of abdominal surgery. He is the author of a number of volumes on different branches of surgery which are recognized as standard authorities. A few years ago he purchased the extensive library of the late Dr. William Baum, Professor of Surgery in the University of Göttingen, which he presented to the Newberry Library of Chicago. In 1893, Dr. Senn was appointed Surgeon-General of the Illinois National Guard, and has also been President of the Association of Military Surgeons of the National Guard of the United States, besides being identified with various other medical bodies. Soon after the beginning of the Spanish-American War, he was appointed, by President McKinley, a Surgeon of Volunteers with the rank of Colonel, and rendered most efficient aid in the military branch of the service at Camp Chickamauga and in the Santiago campaign.

SEXTON, (Col.) James A., Commander-in-Chief of Grand Army of the Republic, was born in the city of Chicago, Jan. 5, 1844; in April, 1861, being then only a little over 17, enlisted as a private soldier under the first call for troops issued by President Lincoln; at the close of his term was appointed a Sergeant, with authority to recruit a company which afterwards was attached to the Fifty-first Volunteer Infantry. Later, he was transferred to the Sixty-seventh with the rank of Lieutenant, and, a few months after, to the Seventy-second with a commission as Captain of Company D, which he had recruited. As commander of his regiment, then constituting a part of the Seventeenth Army Corps, he participated in the battles of Columbia, Duck Creek, Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville, and in the Nashville campaign. Both at Nashville and Franklin he was wounded, and again, at Spanish Fort, by a piece of shell which broke his leg. His regiment took part in seven battles and eleven skirmishes, and, while it went out 967 strong in officers and men, it returned with only 332, all told, although it had been recruited by 234 men. He was known as "The boy Captain," being only 18 years old when he received his first commission, and 21 when, after participating in the Mobile campaign, he was mustered out with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. After the close of the war he engaged in planting in the South, purchasing a plantation in Lowndes County, Ala., but, in 1867, returned to Chicago, where he became a member of the firm of Cribben, Sexton & Co., stove manufacturers, from which he retired in 1898. In 1884 he served as Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket for the Fourth District, and, in 1889, was appointed, by President Harrison, Postmaster of the city of Chicago, serving over five years. In 1888 he was chosen Department Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic for the State of Illinois, and, ten years later, to the position of Commander-in-Chief of the order, which he held at the time of his death. He had also been, for a number of years, one of the Trustees of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Quincy, and, during most of the time, President of the Board. Towards the close of the year 1898, he was appointed by President McKinley a member of the Commission to investigate the conduct of the Spanish-American War, but, before the Commission had concluded its labors, was taken with "the grip," which developed into pneumonia, from which he died in Washington, Feb. 5, 1899.

SEYMOUR, George Franklin, Protestant Episcopal Bishop, was born in New York City, Jan. 5, 1829; graduated from Columbia College in 1850, and from the General Theological Seminary (New York) in 1854. He received both minor and major orders at the hands of Bishop Potter, being made deacon in 1851 and ordained priest in 1855. For several years he was engaged in missionary work. During this period he was prominently identified with the founding of St. Stephen's College. After serving as rector in various parishes, in 1865 he was made Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the New York Seminary, and, ten years later, was chosen Dean of the institution, still retaining his professorship. Racine College conferred upon him the degree of S. T. D., in 1867, and Columbia that of LL. D. in 1878. In 1874 he was elected Bishop of Illinois, but failed of confirmation in the House of Deputies. Upon the erection of the new diocese of Springfield (1877) he accepted and was consecrated Bishop at Trinity Church, N. Y., June 11, 1878. He was a prominent member of the Third Pan-Anglican Council (London, 1885), and has done much to foster the growth and extend the influence of his church in his diocese.

SHABONA, a village of De Kalb County, on the Iowa Division of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 25 miles west of Aurora. Population (1890), 502; (1900), 587.

SHABONA (or Shabbona), an Ottawa Chief, was born near the Maumee River, in Ohio, about 1775, and served under Tecumseh from 1807 to the battle of the Thames in 1813. In 1810 he accompanied Tecumseh and Capt. Billy Caldwell (see Saugumash) to the homes of the Pottawatomies and other tribes within the present limits of Illinois and Wisconsin, to secure their co-operation in driving the white settlers out of the country. At the battle of the Thames, he was by the side of Tecumseh when he fell, and both he and Caldwell, losing faith in their British allies, soon after submitted to the United States through General Cass at Detroit. Shabona was opposed to Black Hawk in 1832, and did much to thwart the plans of the latter and aid the whites. Having married a daughter of a Pottawatomie chief, who had a village on the Illinois River east of the present city of Ottawa, he lived there for some time, but finally removed 25 miles north to Shabona's Grove in De Kalb County. Here he remained till 1837, when he removed to Western Missouri. Black Hawk's followers having a reservation near by, hostilities began between them, in which a son and nephew of Shabona were killed. He finally returned to his old home in Illinois, but found it occupied by whites, who drove him from the grove that bore his name. Some friends then bought for him twenty acres of land on Mazon Creek, near Morris, where he died, July 27, 1859. He is described as a noble specimen of his race. A life of him has been published by N. Matson (Chicago, 1878).

SHANNON, a village of Carroll County, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, 18 miles southwest of Freeport. It is an important trade center, has a bank and one newspaper. Population (1890), 591; (1900), 678.

SHAW, Aaron, former Congressman, born in Orange County, N. Y., in 1811; was educated at the Montgomery Academy, studied law and was admitted to the bar at Goshen in that State. In 1833 he removed to Lawrence County, Ill. He has held various important public offices. He was a member of the first Internal Improvement Convention of the State; was chosen State's Attorney by the Legislature, in which body he served two terms; served four years as Judge of the Twenty-fifth Judicial Circuit; was elected to the Thirty-fifth Congress in 1836, and to the Forty-eighth in 1882, as a Democrat.

SHAW, James, lawyer, jurist, was born in Ireland, May 3, 1832, brought to this country in infancy and grew up on a farm in Cass County, Ill.; graduated from Illinois College in 1857, and, after admission to the bar, began practice at Mount Carroll. In 1870 he was elected to the lower house of the General Assembly, being re-elected in 1872, '76 and '78. He was Speaker of the House during the session of 1877, and one of the Republican leaders on the floor during the succeeding session. In 1872 he was chosen a Presidential Elector, and, in 1891, to a seat on the Circuit bench from the Thirteenth Circuit, and, in 1897 was re-elected for the Fifteenth Circuit.

SHAWNEETOWN, a city and the county-seat of Gallatin County, on the Ohio River 120 miles from its mouth and at the terminus of the Shawneetown Divisions of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the Louisville & Nashville Railroads; is one of the oldest towns in the State, having been laid out in 1808, and noted for the number of prominent men who resided there at an early day. Coal is extensively mined in that section, and Shawneetown is one of the largest shipping points for lumber, coal and farm products between Cairo and Louisville, navigation being open the year round. Some manufacturing is done here; the city has several mills, a foundry and machine shop, two or three banks, several churches, good schools and two weekly papers. Since the disastrous floods of 1884 and 1898, Shawneetown has reconstructed its levee system on a substantial scale, which is now believed to furnish ample protection against the recurrence of similar disaster. Pop. (1900), 1,698; (1903, est.), 2,200.

SHEAHAN, James W., journalist, was born in Baltimore, Md., spent his early life, after reaching manhood, in Washington City as a Congressional Reporter, and, in 1847, reported the proceedings of the Illinois State Constitutional Convention at Springfield. Through the influence of Senator Douglas he was induced, in 1854, to accept the editorship of "The Young America" newspaper at Chicago, which was soon after changed to "The Chicago Times." Here he remained until the fall of 1860, when, "The Times" having been sold and consolidated with "The Herald," a Buchanan-Breckenridge organ, he established a new paper called "The Morning Post." This he made representative of the views of the "War Democrats" as against "The Times," which was opposed to the war. In May, 1865, he sold the plant of "The Post" and it became "The Chicago Republican" — now "Inter Ocean." A few months later, Mr. Sheahan accepted a position as chief writer on the editorial staff of "The Chicago Tribune," which he retained until his death, June 17, 1883.

SHEFFIELD, a prosperous village of Bureau County, on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, 44 miles east of Rock Island; has valuable coal mines, a bank and one newspaper. Population (1890), 993; (1900), 1,265.

SHELBY COUNTY, lies south of the center of the State, and contains an area of 776 square miles. The tide of immigration to this county was at first from Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina, although later it began to set in from the Northern States. The first cabin in the county was built by Simeon Wakefield on what is now the site of Williamsburg, first called Cold Spring. Joseph Daniel was the earliest settler in what is now Shelbyville, pre-empting ten acres, which he soon afterward sold to Joseph Oliver, the pioneer merchant of the county, and father of the first white child born within its limits. Other pioneers were Shimei Wakefield, Levi Casey and Samuel Hall. In lieu of hats the early settlers wore caps made of squirrel or coon skin, with the tails dangling at the backs, and he was regarded as well dressed who boasted a fringed buckskin shirt and trousers, with moccasins. The county was formed in 1827, and Shelbyville made the county-seat. Both county and town are named in honor of Governor Shelby, of Kentucky. County Judge Joseph Oliver held the first court in the cabin of Barnett Bone, and Judge Theophilus W. Smith presided over the first Circuit Court in 1828. Coal is abundant, and limestone and sandstone are also found. The surface is somewhat rolling and well wooded. The Little Wabash and Kaskaskia Rivers flow through the central and southeastern portions. The county lies in the very heart of the great corn belt of the State, and has excellent transportation facilities, being penetrated by four lines of railway. Population (1880), 30,270; (1890), 31,191; (1900), 32,126.

SHELBYVILLE, the county-seat and an incorporated city of Shelby County, on the Kaskaskia River and two lines of railway, 32 miles southeast of Decatur. Agriculture is carried on extensively, and there is considerable coal mining in the immediate vicinity. The city has two flouring mills, a handle factory, a creamery, one National and one State bank, one daily and four weekly papers and one monthly periodical, an Orphans' Home, ten churches, two graded schools, and a public library. Population (1890), 3,162; (1900), 3,546.

SHELDON, a village of Iroquois County, at the intersection of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis and the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railways, 9 miles east of Watseka; has two banks and a newspaper. The region is agricultural. Pop. (1890), 910; (1900), 1,103.

SHELDON, Benjamin R., jurist, was born in Massachusetts in 1813, graduated from Williams College in 1831, studied law at the Yale Law School, and was admitted to practice in 1836. Emigrating to Illinois, he located temporarily at Hennepin, Putnam County, but soon removed to Galena, and finally to Rockford. In 1848 he was elected Circuit Judge of the Sixth Circuit, which afterwards being divided, he was assigned to the Fourteenth Circuit, remaining until 1870, when he was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court, presiding as Chief Justice in 1877. He was re-elected in 1879, but retired in 1888, being succeeded by the late Justice Bailey. Died, April 13, 1897.

SHEPPARD, Nathan, author and lecturer, was born in Baltimore, Md., Nov. 9, 1834; graduated at Rochester Theological Seminary in 1859; during the Civil War was special correspondent of "The New York World" and "The Chicago Journal" and "Tribune," and, during the Franco-German War, of "The Cincinnati Gazette;" also served as special American correspondent of "The London Times," and was a contributor to "Frazer's Magazine" and "Temple Bar." In 1873 he became a lecturer on Modern English Literature and Rhetoric in Chicago University and.

four years later, accepted a similar position in Allegheny College; also spent four years in Europe, lecturing in the principal towns of Great Britain and Ireland. In 1884 he founded the "Athenaeum" at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., of which he was President until his death, early in 1888. "The Dickens Reader," "Character Readings from George Eliot" and "Essays of George Eliot" were among the volumes issued by him between 1881 and 1887. Died in New York City, Jan. 24, 1888.

SHERMAN, Alson Smith, early Chicago Mayor, was born at Barre, Vt., April 24, 1811, remaining there until 1836, when he came to Chicago and began business as a contractor and builder. Several years later he opened the first stone quarries at Lemont, Ill. Mr. Sherman spent many years in the service of Chicago as a public official. From 1840 to 1842 he was Captain of a company of militia; for two years served as Chief of the Fire Department, and was elected Alderman in 1842, serving again in 1846. In 1844, he was chosen Mayor, his administration being marked by the first extensive public improvements made in Chicago. After his term as Mayor he did much to secure a better water supply for the city. He was especially interested in promoting common school education, being for several years a member of the City School Board. He was Vice-President of the first Board of Trustees of Northwestern University. Retired from active pursuits, Mr. Sherman is now (1899) spending a serene old age at Waukegan, Ill.—Oren (Sherman) brother of the preceding and early Chicago merchant, was born at Barre, Vt., March 5, 1816. After spending several years in a mercantile house in Montpelier, Vt., at the age of twenty he came west, first to New Buffalo, Mich., and, in 1836, to Chicago, opening a dry-goods store there the next spring. With various partners Mr. Sherman continued in a general mercantile business until 1853, at the same time being extensively engaged in the provision trade, one-half the entire transactions in pork in the city passing through his hands. Next he engaged in developing stone quarries at Lemont, Ill.; also became extensively interested in the marble business, continuing in this until a few years after the panic of 1873, when he retired in consequence of a shock of paralysis. Died, in Chicago, Dec. 15, 1898.

SHERMAN, Elijah B., lawyer, was born at Fairfield, Vt., June 18, 1832—his family being distantly related to Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the late Gen. W. T. Sherman; gained his education in the common schools and at Middlebury College, where he graduated in 1860; began teaching, but soon after enlisted as a private in the war for the Union; received a Lieutenant's commission, and served until captured on the eve of the battle at Antietam, when he was paroled and sent to Camp Douglas, Chicago, awaiting exchange. During this period he commenced reading law and, having resigned his commission, graduated from the law department of Chicago University in 1864. In 1876 he was elected Representative in the General Assembly from Cook County, and re-elected in 1878, and the following year appointed Master in Chancery of the United States District Court, a position which he still occupies. He has repeatedly been called upon to deliver addresses on political, literary and patriotic occasions, one of these being before the alumni of his alma mater, in 1884, when he was complimented with the degree of LL.D.

SHIELDS, James, soldier and United States Senator, was born in Ireland in 1810, emigrated to the United States at the age of sixteen and began the practice of law at Kaskaskia in 1832. He was elected to the Legislature in 1836, and State Auditor in 1839. In 1843 he became a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and, in 1845, was made Commissioner of the General Land Office. In July, 1846, he was commissioned Brigadier-General in the Mexican War gaining the brevet of Major-General at Cerro-Gordo, where he was severely wounded. He was again wounded at Chapultepec, and mustered out in 1848. The same year he was appointed Governor of Oregon Territory. In 1849 the Democrats in the Illinois Legislature elected him Senator, and he resigned his office in Oregon. In 1856 he removed to Minnesota, and, in 1858, was chosen United States Senator from that State, his term expiring in 1859, when he established a residence in California. At the outbreak of the Civil War (1861) he was superintending a mine in Mexico, but at once hastened to Washington to tender his services to the Government. He was commissioned Brigadier-General, and served with distinction until March, 1863, when the effect of numerous wounds caused him to resign. He subsequently removed to Missouri, practicing law at Carrollton and serving in the Legislature of that State in 1874 and 1879. In the latter year he was elected United States Senator to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Boggy, who had died in office—serving only six weeks, but being the only man in the history of the country who filled the office of United States Senator from three different States. Died, at Ottumwa, Iowa, June 1, 1879.

SHIPMAN, a town of Macoupin County, on the Chicago & Alton Railway, 19 miles north-northeast of Alton and 14 miles southwest of Carlinville. Population (1890), 410; (1900), 396.

SHIPMAN, George E., M.D., physician and philanthropist, born in New York City, March 4, 1820; graduated at the University of New York in 1839, and took a course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons; practiced for a time at Peoria, Ill., but, in 1846, located in Chicago, where he assisted in organizing the first Homeopathic Hospital in that city, and, in 1855, was one of the first Trustees of Hahnemann College. In 1871 he established in Chicago, the Foundlings' Home at his own expense, giving to it the latter years of his life. Died, Jan. 20, 1893.

SHOREY, Daniel Lewis, lawyer and philanthropist, was born at Jonesborough, Washington County, Maine, Jan. 31, 1824; educated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and at Dartmouth College, graduating from the latter in 1851; taught two years in Washington City, meanwhile reading law, afterwards taking a course at Dane Law School, Cambridge; was admitted to the bar in Boston in 1854, the next year locating at Davenport, Iowa, where he remained ten years. In 1865 he removed to Chicago, where he prosecuted his profession until 1890, when he retired. Mr. Shorey was prominent in the establishment of the Chicago Public Library, and a member of the first Library Board; was also a prominent member of the Chicago Literary Club, and was a Director in the new University of Chicago and deeply interested in its prosperity. Died, in Chicago, March 4, 1899.

SHORT, (Rev.) William F., clergyman and educator, was born in Ohio in 1829, brought to Morgan County, Ill., in childhood, and lived upon a farm until 20 years of age, when he entered McKendree College, spending his senior year, however, at Wesleyan University, Bloomington, where he graduated in 1854. He had meanwhile accepted a call to the Missouri Conference Seminary at Jackson, Mo.; where he remained three years, when he returned to Illinois, serving churches at Jacksonville and elsewhere, for a part of the time being Presiding Elder of the Jacksonville District. In 1875 he was elected President of Illinois Female College at Jacksonville, continuing in that position until 1893, when he was appointed Superintendent of the Illinois State Institution for the Blind at the same place, but resigned early in 1897. Dr. Short received the degree of D.D., conferred upon him by Ohio Wesleyan University.

SHOUP, George L., United States Senator, was born at Kittanning, Pa., June 15, 1836; came to Illinois in 1852, his father locating on a stock-farm near Galesburg; in 1859 removed to Colorado, where he engaged in mining and mercantile business until 1861, when he enlisted in a company of scouts, being advanced from the rank of First Lieutenant to the Colonelcy of the Third Colorado Cavalry, meanwhile serving as Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of 1864. Retiring to private life, he again engaged in mercantile and mining business, first in Nevada and then in Idaho; served two terms in the Territorial Legislature of the latter, was appointed Territorial Governor in 1889 and, in 1890, was chosen the first Governor of the State, in October of the same year being elected to the United States Senate, and re-elected in 1895 for a second term, which ends in 1901. Senator Shoup is one of the few Western Senators who remained faithful to the regular Republican organization, during the political campaign of 1896.

SHOWALTER, John W., jurist, was born in Mason County, Ky., Feb. 8, 1844; resided some years in Scott County in that State, and was educated in the local schools, at Maysville and Ohio University, finally graduating at Yale College in 1867; came to Chicago in 1869, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1870. He returned to Kentucky after the fire of 1871, but, in 1872, again came to Chicago and entered the employment of the firm of Moore & Caulfield, with whom he had been before the fire. In 1879 he became a member of the firm of Abbott, Oliver & Showalter (later, Oliver & Showalter), where he remained until his appointment as United States Circuit Judge, in March, 1895. Died, in Chicago, Dec. 12, 1898.

SHUMAN, Andrew, journalist and Lieutenant-Governor, was born at Manor, Lancaster County, Pa., Nov. 8, 1830. His father dying in 1837, he was reared by an uncle. At the age of 15 he became an apprentice in the office of "The Lancaster Union and Sentinel." A year later he accompanied his employer to Auburn, N. Y., working for two years on "The Daily Advertiser" of that city, then known as Governor Seward's "home organ." At the age of 18 he edited, published and distributed—during his leisure hours—a small weekly paper called "The Auburnian." At the conclusion of his apprenticeship he was employed, for a year or two, in editing and publishing "The Cayuga Chief," a temperance journal.

In 1851 he entered Hamilton College but, before the completion of his junior year, consented, at the solicitation of friends of William H. Seward, to assume editorial control of "The Syracuse Daily Journal." In July, 1856, he came to Chicago, to accept an editorial position on "The Evening Journal" of that city, later becoming editor-in-chief and President of the Journal Company. From 1865 to 1870 (first by executive appointment and afterward by popular election) he was a Commissioner of the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet, resigning the office four years before the expiration of his term. In 1876 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor on the Republican ticket. Owing to declining health, he abandoned active journalistic work in 1888, dying in Chicago, May 5, 1890. His home during the latter years of his life was at Evanston. Governor Shuman was author of a romance entitled "Loves of a Lawyer," besides numerous addresses before literary, commercial and scientific associations.

SHUMWAY, Dorice Dwight, merchant, was born at Williamsburg, Worcester County, Mass., Sept. 28, 1813, descended from French Huguenot ancestry; came to Zanesville, Ohio, in 1837, and to Montgomery County, Ill., in 1841; married a daughter of Hiram Rountree, an early resident of Hillsboro, and, in 1843, located in Christian County; was engaged for a time in merchandising at Taylorville, but retired in 1858, thereafter giving his attention to a large landed estate. In 1816 he was chosen Representative in the General Assembly, served in the Constitutional Convention of 1847, and four years as County Judge of Christian County. Died, May 9, 1870.—Hiram P. (Shumway), eldest son of the preceding, was born in Montgomery County, Ill., June, 1842; spent his boyhood on a farm in Christian County and in his father's store at Taylorville; took an academy course and in 1864, engaged in mercantile business; was Representative in the Twenty-eighth General Assembly and Senator in the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh, afterwards removing to Springfield, where he engaged in the stone business.

SHURTLEFF COLLEGE, an institution located at Upper Alton, and the third established in Illinois. It was originally incorporated as the "Alton College" in 1831, under a special charter which was not accepted, but re-incorporated in 1835, in an "omnibus bill" with Illinois and McKendree Colleges. (See Early Colleges.) Its primal origin was a school at Rock Spring in St. Clair County, founded about 1824, by Rev. John M. Peck. This became the "Rock Spring Seminary" in 1827, and, about 1831, was united with an academy at Upper Alton. This was the nucleus of "Alton" (afterward "Shurtleff") College. As far as its denominational control is concerned, it has always been dominated by Baptist influence. Dr. Peck's original idea was to found a school for teaching theology and Biblical literature, but this project was at first inhibited by the State. Hubbard Loomis and John Russell were among the first instructors. Later, Dr. Benjamin Shurtleff donated the college $10,000, and the institution was named in his honor. College classes were not organized until 1840, and several years elapsed before a class graduated. Its endowment in 1898 was over $126,000, in addition to $125,000 worth of real and personal property. About 255 students were in attendance. Besides preparatory and collegiate departments, the college also maintains a theological school. It has a faculty of twenty instructors and is co-educational.

SIBLEY, a village of Ford County, on the Chicago Division of the Wabash Railway, 105 miles south-southwest of Chicago; has banks and a weekly newspaper. The district is agricultural. Population (1890), 404; (1900), 444.

SIBLEY, Joseph, lawyer and jurist, was born at Westfield, Mass., in 1818; learned the trade of a whip-maker and afterwards engaged in merchandising. In 1843 he began the study of law at Syracuse, N. Y., and, upon admission to the bar, came west, finally settling at Nauvoo, Hancock County. He maintained a neutral attitude during the Mormon troubles, thus giving offense to a section of the community. In 1847 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Legislature, but was elected in 1850, and re-elected in 1852. In 1853 he removed to Warsaw, and, in 1855, was elected Judge of the Circuit Court, and re-elected in 1861, '67 and '73, being assigned to the bench of the Appellate Court of the Second District, in 1877. His residence, after 1865, was at Quincy, where he died, June 18, 1897.

SIDELL, a village of Vermillion County, on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroads; has a bank, electric light plant and a newspaper. Pop. (1900), 776.

SIDNEY, a village of Champaign County, on the main line of the Wabash Railway, at the junction of a branch to Champaign, 48 miles east-northeast of Decatur. It is in a farming district; has a bank and a newspaper. Population, (1900), 564.

SIM, (Dr.) William, pioneer physician, was born at Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1795, came to America in early manhood, and was the first physician to settle at Golconda, in Pope County, which he represented in the Fourth and Fifth General Assemblies (1824 and '28). He married a Miss Elizabeth Jack of Philadelphia, making the journey from Golconda to Philadelphia for that purpose on horseback. He had a family of five children, one son, Dr. Francis L. Sim, rising to distinction as a physician, and, for a time, being President of a Medical College at Memphis, Tenn. The elder Dr. Sim died at Golconda, in 1868.

SIMS, James, early legislator and Methodist preacher, was a native of South Carolina, but removed to Kentucky in early manhood, thence to St. Clair County, Ill., and, in 1820, to Sangamon County, where he was elected, in 1822, as the first Representative from that county in the Third General Assembly. At the succeeding session of the Legislature, he was one of those who voted against the Convention resolution designed to prepare the way for making Illinois a slave State. Mr. Sims resided for a time in Menard County, but finally removed to Morgan.

SINGER, Horace M., capitalist, was born in Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1823; came to Chicago in 1836 and found employment on the Illinois & Michigan Canal, serving as superintendent of repairs upon the Canal until 1853. While thus employed he became one of the proprietors of the stone-quarries at Lemont, managed by the firm of Singer & Talcott until about 1890, when they became the property of the Western Stone Company. Originally a Democrat, he became a Republican during the Civil War, and served as a member of the Twenty-fifth General Assembly (1867) for Cook County, was elected County Commissioner in 1870, and was Chairman of the Republican County Central Committee in 1880. He was also associated with several financial institutions, being a director of the First National Bank and of the Auditorium Company of Chicago, and a member of the Union League and Calumet Clubs. Died, at Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 28, 1896.

SINGLETON, James W., Congressman, born at Paxton, Va., Nov. 23, 1811; was educated at the Winchester (Va.) Academy, and removed to Illinois in 1833, settling first at Mount Sterling, Brown County, and, some twenty years later, near Quincy. By profession he was a lawyer, and was prominent in political and commercial affairs. In his later years he devoted considerable attention to stock-raising. He was elected Brigadier-General of the Illinois militia in 1844, being identified to some extent with the "Mormon War"; was a member of the Constitutional Conventions of 1847 and 1862, served six terms in the Legislature, and was elected, on the Democratic ticket, to Congress in 1878, and again in 1880. In 1882 he ran as an independent Democrat, but was defeated by the regular nominee of his party, James M. Riggs. During the War of the Rebellion he was one of the most conspicuous leaders of the "peace party." He constructed the Quincy & Toledo (now part of the Wabash) and the Quincy, Alton & St. Louis (now part of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy) Railways, being President of both companies. His death occurred at Baltimore, Md., April 4, 1892.

SIXNET, John S., pioneer, was born at Lexington, Ky., March 10, 1796; at three years of age, taken by his parents to Missouri; enlisted in the War of 1812, but, soon after the war, came to Illinois, and, about 1818, settled in what is now Christian County, locating on land constituting a part of the present city of Taylorville. In 1840 he removed to Tazewell County, dying there, Jan. 13, 1872.

SKINNER, Mark, jurist, was born at Manchester, Vt., Sept. 13, 1813; graduated from Middlebury College in 1833, studied law, and, in 1836, came to Chicago; was admitted to the bar in 1839, became City Attorney in 1840, later Master in Chancery for Cook County, and finally United States District Attorney under President Tyler. As member of the House Finance Committee in the Fifteenth General Assembly (1846-48), he aided influentially in securing the adoption of measures for refunding and paying the State debt. In 1851 he was elected Judge of the Court of Common Pleas (now Superior Court) of Cook County, but declined a re-election in 1853. Originally a Democrat, Judge Skinner was an ardent opponent of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill and a liberal supporter of the Government policy during the rebellion. He liberally aided the United States Sanitary Commission and was identified with all the leading charities of the city. Among the great business enterprises with which he was officially associated were the Galena & Chicago Union and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railways (in each of which he was a Director), the Chicago Marine & Fire Insurance Company, the Gas-Light and Coke Company and others. Died, Sept. 16, 1887. Judge Skinner's only surviving son was killed in the trenches before Petersburg, the last year of the Civil War.

SKINNER, Otis Ainsworth, clergyman and author, was born at Royalton, Vt., July 3, 1807;

In 1851 he entered Hamilton College, but, before the completion of his junior year, consented, at the solicitation of friends of William H. Seward, to assume editorial control of "The Syracuse Daily Journal." In July, 1856, he came to Chicago, to accept an editorial position on "The Evening Journal" of that city, later becoming editor-in-chief and President of the Journal Company. From 1865 to 1870 (first by executive appointment and afterward by popular election) he was a Commissioner of the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet, resigning the office four years before the expiration of his term. In 1876 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor on the Republican ticket. Owing to declining health, he abandoned active journalistic work in 1888, dying in Chicago, May 5, 1890. His home during the latter years of his life was at Evanston. Governor Shuman was author of a romance entitled "Loves of a Lawyer," besides numerous addresses before literary, commercial and scientific associations.

SHUMWAY, Dorice Dwight, merchant, was born at Williamsburg, Worcester County, Mass., Sept. 28, 1813, descended from French Huguenot ancestry; came to Zanesville, Ohio, in 1837, and to Montgomery County, Ill., in 1841; married a daughter of Hiram Rountree, an early resident of Hillsboro, and, in 1843, located in Christian County; was engaged for a time in merchandising at Taylorville, but retired in 1858, thereafter giving his attention to a large landed estate. In 1816 he was chosen Representative in the General Assembly, served in the Constitutional Convention of 1847, and four years as County Judge of Christian County. Died, May 9, 1870.—Hiram P. (Shumway), eldest son of the preceding, was born in Montgomery County, Ill., June, 1842; spent his boyhood on a farm in Christian County and in his father's store at Taylorville; took an academy course and, in 1864, engaged in mercantile business; was Representative in the Twenty-eighth General Assembly and Senator in the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh, afterwards removing to Springfield, where he engaged in the stone business.

SHURTLIFF COLLEGE, an institution located at Upper Alton, and the third established in Illinois. It was originally incorporated as the "Alton College" in 1831, under a special charter which was not accepted, but re-incorporated in 1835, in an "omnibus bill" with Illinois and McKendree Colleges. (See Early Colleges.) Its primal origin was a school at Rock Spring in St. Clair County, founded about 1824, by Rev. John M. Peck. This became the "Rock Spring Seminary" in 1827, and, about 1831, was united with an academy at Upper Alton. This was the nucleus of "Alton" (afterward "Shurtleff") College. As far as its denominational control is concerned, it has always been dominated by Baptist influence. Dr. Peck's original idea was to found a school for teaching theology and Biblical literature, but this project was at first inhibited by the State. Hubbard Loomis and John Russell were among the first instructors. Later, Dr. Benjamin Shurtleff donated the college $10,000, and the institution was named in his honor. College classes were not organized until 1840, and several years elapsed before a class graduated. Its endowment in 1898 was over $126,000, in addition to $125,000 worth of real and personal property. About 255 students were in attendance. Besides preparatory and collegiate departments, the college also maintains a theological school. It has a faculty of twenty instructors and is co-educational.

SIBLEY, a village of Ford County, on the Chicago Division of the Wabash Railway, 105 miles south-southwest of Chicago; has banks and a weekly newspaper. The district is agricultural. Population (1890), 404; (1900), 444.

SIBLEY, Joseph, lawyer and jurist, was born at Westfield, Mass., in 1818; learned the trade of a whip-maker and afterwards engaged in merchandising. In 1843 he began the study of law at Syracuse, N. Y., and, upon admission to the bar, came west, finally settling at Nauvoo, Hancock County. He maintained a neutral attitude during the Mormon troubles, thus giving offense to a section of the community. In 1847 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Legislature, but was elected in 1850, and re-elected in 1852. SKINNER, Otis Ainsworth, clergyman and author, was born at Royalton, Vt., July 3, 1807; taught for some time, became a Universalist minister, serving churches in Baltimore, Boston and New York between 1831 and 1857; then came to Elgin, Ill., was elected President of Lombard University at Galesburg, but the following year took charge of a church at Joliet. Died, at Naperville, Sept. 18, 1861. He wrote several volumes on religious topics, and, at different times, edited religious periodicals at Baltimore, Haverhill, Mass., and Boston.

SKINNER, Ozias C., lawyer and jurist, was born at Floyd, Oneida County, N. Y., in 1817; in 1836, removed to Illinois, settling in Peoria County, where he engaged in farming. In 1838 he began the study of law at Greenville, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar of that State in 1840. Eighteen months later he returned to Illinois, and began practice at Carthage, Hancock County, removing to Quincy in 1844. During the "Mormon War" he served as Aid-de-camp to Governor Ford. In 1848 he was elected to the lower house of the Sixteenth General Assembly, and, for a short time, served as Prosecuting Attorney for the district including Adams and Brown Counties. In 1851 he was elected Judge of the (then) Fifteenth Judicial Circuit, and, in 1855, succeeded Judge S. H. Treat on the Supreme bench, resigning this position in April, 1858, two months before the expiration of his term. He was a large land owner and had extensive agricultural interests. He built, and was the first President of the Carthage & Quincy Railroad, now a part of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy system. He was a prominent member of the Constitutional Convention of 1869, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary. Died in 1877.

SLADE, Charles, early Congressman; his early history, including date and place of birth, are unknown. In 1820 he was elected Representative from Washington County in the Second General Assembly, and, in 1826, was re-elected to the same body for Clinton and Washington. In 1832 he was elected one of the three Congressmen from Illinois, representing the First District. After attending the first session of the Twenty-third Congress, while on his way home, he was attacked with cholera, dying near Vincennes, Ind., July 11, 1834.

SLADE, James P., ex-State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was born at Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., Feb. 9, 1837, and spent his boyhood with his parents on a farm, except while absent at school; in 1856 removed to Belleville, Ill., where he soon became connected with the public schools, serving for a number of years as Principal of the Belleville High School. While connected with the Belleville schools, he was elected County Superintendent, remaining in office some ten years; later had charge of Almira College at Greenville, Bond County, served six years as Superintendent of Schools at East St. Louis and, in 1878, was elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction as the nominee of the Republican party. On retirement from the office of State Superintendent, he resumed his place at the head of Almira College, but, for the past few years, has been Superintendent of Schools at East St. Louis.

SLAVERY AGITATION OF 1823-24. (See Slavery and Slave Laws.)

SLAVERY AND SLAVE LAWS. African slaves were first brought into the Illinois country by a Frenchman named Pierre F. Renault, about 1722. At that time the present State formed a part of Louisiana, and the traffic in slaves was regulated by French royal edicts. When Great Britain acquired the territory, at the close of the French and Indian War, the former subjects of France were guaranteed security for their persons "and effects," and no interference with slavery was attempted. Upon the conquest of Illinois by Virginia (see Clark, George Rogers), the French very generally professed allegiance to that commonwealth, and, in her deed of cession to the United States, Virginia expressly stipulated for the protection of the "rights and liberties" of the French citizens. This was construed as recognizing the right of property in negro slaves. Even the Ordinance of 1787, while prohibiting slavery in the Northwest Territory, preserved to the settlers (reference being especially made to the French and Canadians) "of the Kaskaskias, St. Vincents and neighboring villages, their laws and customs, now (then) in force, relative to the descent and conveyance of property." A conservative construction of this clause was, that while it prohibited the extension of slavery and the importation of slaves, the status of those who were at that time in involuntary servitude, and of their descendants, was left unchanged. There were those, however, who denied the constitutionality of the Ordinance in toto, on the ground that Congress had exceeded its powers in its passage. There was also a party which claimed that all children of slaves, born after 1787, were free from birth. In 1794 a convention was held at Vincennes, pursuant to a call from Governor Harrison, and a memorial to Congress was adopted, praying for the repeal—or, at least a modification—of the sixth clause of the Ordinance of 1787. The first Congressional Committee, to which this petition was referred, reported adversely upon it; but a second committee recommended the suspension of the operation of the clause in question for ten years. But no action was taken by the National Legislature, and, in 1807, a counter petition, extensively signed, was forwarded to that body, and Congress left the matter in statu quo. It is worthy of note that some of the most earnest opponents of the measure were Representatives from Southern Slave States, John Randolph, of Virginia, being one of them. The pro-slavery party in the State then prepared what is popularly known as the "Indenture Law," which was one of the first acts adopted by Governor Edwards and his Council, and was re-enacted by the first Territorial Legislature in 1812. It was entitled, "An Act relating to the Introduction of Negroes and Mulattoes into this Territory," and gave permission to bring slaves above 15 years of age into the State, when they might be registered and kept in servitude within certain limitations. Slaves under that age might also be brought in, registered, and held in bondage until they reached the age of 35, if males, and 30, if females. The issue of registered slaves were to serve their mother's master until the age of 30 or 28, according to sex. The effect of this legislation was rapidly to increase the number of slaves. The Constitution of 1818 prohibited the introduction of slavery thereafter—that is to say, after its adoption. In 1822 the slave-holding party, with their supporters, began to agitate the question of so amending the organic law as to make Illinois a slave State. To effect such a change the calling of a convention was necessary, and, for eighteen months, the struggle between "conventionists" and their opponents was bitter and fierce. The question was submitted to a popular vote on August 2, 1824, the result of the count showing 4,972 votes for such convention and 6,640 against. This decisive result settled the question of slave-holding in Illinois for all future time, though the existence of slavery in the State continued to be recognized by the National Census until 1840. The number, according to the census of 1810, was 168; in 1820 they had increased to 917. Then the number began to diminish, being reduced in 1830 to 747, and, in 1840 (the last census which shows any portion of the population held in bondage), it was 331.

Hooper Warren—who has been mentioned elsewhere as editor of "The Edwardsville Spectator," and a leading factor in securing the defeat of the scheme to make Illinois a slave State in 1822—in an article in the first number of "The Genius of Liberty" (January, 1841), speaking of that contest, says there were, at its beginning, only three papers in the State—"The Intelligencer" at Vandalia, "The Gazette" at Shawneetown, and "The Spectator" at Edwardsville. The first two of these, at the outset, favored the Convention scheme, while "The Spectator" opposed it. The management of the campaign on the part of the pro-slavery party was assigned to Emanuel J. West, Theophilus W. Smith and Oliver L. Kelly, and a paper was established by the name of "The Illinois Republican," with Smith as editor. Among the active opponents of the measure were George Churchill, Thomas Lippincott, Samuel D. Lockwood, Henry Starr (afterwards of Cincinnati), Rev. John M. Peck and Rev. James Lemen, of St. Clair County. Others who contributed to the cause were Daniel P. Cook, Morris Birkbeck, Dr. Hugh Steel and — Burton of Jackson County, Dr. Henry Perrine of Bond; William Leggett of Edwardsville (afterwards editor of "The New York Evening Post"), Benjamin Lundy (then of Missouri), David Blackwell and Rev. John Dew, of St. Clair County. Still others were Nathaniel Pope (Judge of the United States District Court), William B. Archer, William H. Brown and Benjamin Mills (of Vandalia), John Tillson, Dr. Horatio Newhall, George Forquer, Col. Thomas Mather, Thomas Ford, Judge David J. Baker, Charles W. Hunter and Henry H. Snow (of Alton). This testimony is of interest as coming from one who probably had more to do with defeating the scheme, with the exception of Gov. Edward Coles. Outside of the more elaborate Histories of Illinois, the most accurate and detailed accounts of this particular period are to be found in "Sketch of Edward Coles" by the late E. B. Washburne, and "Early Movement in Illinois for the Legalization of Slavery," an address before the Chicago Historical Society (1864), by Hon. William H. Brown, of Chicago. (See also, Coles, Edward; Warren, Hooper; Brown, William H.; Churchill, George; Lippincott, Thomas; and Newspapers, Early, elsewhere in this volume.)

SLOAN, Wesley, legislator and jurist, was born in Dorchester County, Md., Feb. 20., 1806. At the age of 17, having received a fair academic education, he accompanied his parents to Philadelphia, where, for a year, he was employed in a wholesale grocery. His father dying, he returned to Maryland and engaged in teaching, at the same time studying law, and being admitted to the bar in 1831. He came to Illinois in 1838, going first to Chicago, and afterward to Kaskaskia, finally settling at Galesburg in 1839, which continued to be his home the remainder of his life. In 1848 he was elected to the Legislature, and re-elected in 1850, '52, and '56, serving three times as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He was one of the members of the first State Board of Education, created by Act of Feb. 18, 1857, and took a prominent part in the founding and organization of the State educational institutions. In 1857 he was elected to the bench of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit, and re-elected in 1861, but declined a re-election for a third term. Died, Jan. 15 1887.

SMITH, Abner, jurist, was born at Orange, Franklin County, Mass., August 1, 1843, of an old New England family, whose ancestors came to Massachusetts Colony about 1630; was educated in the public schools and at Middlebury College, Vt., graduating from the latter in 1866. After graduation he spent a year as a teacher in Newton Academy, at Shoreham, Vt., coming to Chicago in 1867, and entering upon the study of law, being admitted to the bar in 1868. The next twenty-five years were spent in the practice of his profession in Chicago, within that time serving as the attorney of several important corporations. In 1893 he was elected a Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, and re-elected in 1897, his term of service continuing until 1903.

SMITH, (Dr.) Charles Gilman, physician, was born at Exeter N. H., Jan. 4, 1828, received his early education at Phillips Academy, in his native place, finally graduating from Harvard University in 1847. He soon after commenced the study of medicine in the Harvard Medical School, but completed his course at the University of Pennsylvania in 1851. After two years spent as attending physician of the Almas House in South Boston, Mass., in 1853 he came to Chicago, where he soon acquired an extensive practice. During the Civil War he was one of six physicians employed by the Government for the treatment of prisoners of war in hospital at Camp Douglas. In 1868 he visited Europe for the purpose of observing the management of hospitals in Germany, France and England, on his return being invited to lecture in the Woman's Medical College in Chicago, and also becoming consulting physician in the Women's and Children's Hospital, as well as in the Presbyterian Hospital—a position which he continued to occupy for the remainder of his life, gaining a wide reputation in the treatment of women's and children's diseases. Died, Jan. 10, 1894.

SMITH, David Allen, lawyer, was born near Richmond, Va., June 18, 1809; removed with his father, at an early day, to Pulaski, Tenn.; at 17 went to Courtland, Lawrence County, Ala., where he studied law with Judge Bramlette and began practice. His father, dying about 1831, left him the owner of a number of slaves whom, in 1837, he brought to Carlinville, Ill., and emancipated, giving bond that they should not become a charge to the State. In 1839 he removed to Jacksonville, where he practiced law until his death. Col. John J. Hardin was his partner at the time of his death on the battle-field of Buena Vista. Mr. Smith was a Trustee and generous patron of Illinois College, for a quarter of a century, but never held any political office. As a lawyer he was conscientious and faithful to the interests of his clients; as a citizen, liberal, public-spirited and patriotic. He contributed liberally to the support of the Government during the war for the Union. Died, at Anoka, Minn., July 13, 1865, where he had gone to accompany an invalid son. — Thomas William (Smith), eldest son of the preceding, born at Courtland, Ala., Sept. 27, 1832; died at Clearwater, Minn., Oct. 29, 1865. He graduated at Illinois College in 1852, studied law and served as Captain in the Tenth Illinois Volunteers, until, broken in health, he returned home to die.

SMITH, Dietrich C., ex-Congressman, was born at Ostfriesland, Hanover, April 4, 1840, in boyhood came to the United States, and, since 1849, has been a resident of Pekin, Tazewell County. In 1861 he enlisted in the Eighth Illinois Volunteers, was promoted to a Lieutenantcy, and, while so serving, was severely wounded at Shiloh. Later, he was attached to the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Infantry, and was mustered out of service as Captain of Company C of that regiment. His business is that of banker and manufacturer, besides which he has had considerable experience in the construction and management of railroads. He was a member of the Thirtieth General Assembly, and, in 1880, was elected Representative in Congress from what was then the Thirteenth District, on the Republican ticket, defeating Adlai E. Stevenson, afterwards Vice-President. In 1882, his county (Tazewell) having been attached to the district for many years represented by Wm. M. Springer, he was defeated by the latter as a candidate for election.

SMITH, George, one of Chicago's pioneers and early bankers, was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, March 8, 1808. It was his early intention to study medicine, and he entered Aberdeen College with this end in view, but was forced to quit the institution at the end of two years, because of impaired vision. In 1833 he came to America, and, in 1834, settled in Chicago, where he resided until 1861, meanwhile spending one year in Scotland. He invested largely in real estate in Chicago and Wisconsin, at one time owning a considerable portion of the present site of Milwaukee. In 1837 he secured the charter for the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance Company, whose headquarters were at Milwaukee. He was really the owner of the company, although Alexander Mitchell, of Milwaukee, was its Secretary. Under this charter Mr. Smith was able to issue $1,500,000 in certificates, which circulated freely as currency. In 1839 he founded Chicago's first private banking house. About 1843 he was interested in a storage and commission business in Chicago, with a Mr. Webster as partner. He was a Director in the old Galena & Chicago Union Railroad (now a part of the Chicago & Northwestern), and aided it, while in course of construction, by loans of money; was also a charter member of the Chicago Board of Trade, organized in 1848. In 1854, the State of Wisconsin having prohibited the circulation of the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance certificates above mentioned, Mr. Smith sold out the company to his partner, Mitchell, and bought two Georgia bank charters, which, together, empowered him to issue $3,000,000 in currency. The notes were duly issued in Georgia, and put into circulation in Illinois, over the counter of George Smith & Co.'s Chicago bank. About 1856 Mr. Smith began winding up his affairs in Chicago, meanwhile spending most of his time in Scotland, but, returning in 1860, made extensive investments in railroad and other American securities, which netted him large profits. The amount of capital which he is reputed to have taken with him to his native land has been estimated at $10,000,000, though he retained considerable tracts of valuable lands in Wisconsin and about Chicago. Among those who were associated with him in business, either as employes or otherwise, and who have since been prominently identified with Chicago business affairs, were Hon. Charles B. Farwell, E. I. Tinkham (afterwards a prominent banker of Chicago), E. W. Willard, now of Newport, R. I., and others. Mr. Smith made several visits, during the last forty years, to the United States, but divided his time chiefly between Scotland (where he was the owner of a castle) and London. Died Oct. 7, 1899.

SMITH, George W., soldier, lawyer and State Treasurer, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 8, 1837. It was his intention to acquire a collegiate education, but his father's business embarrassments having compelled the abandonment of his studies, at 17 of years age he went to Arkansas and taught school for two years. In 1856 he returned to Albany and began the study of law, graduating from the law school in 1858. In October of that year he removed to Chicago, where he remained continuously in practice, with the exception of the years 1862-65, when he was serving in the Union army, and 1867-68, when he filled the office of State Treasurer. He was mustered into service, August 27, 1862, as a Captain in the Eighty-eighth Illinois Infantry—the second Board of Trade regiment. At Stone River, he was seriously wounded and captured. After four days' confinement, he was aided by a negro to escape. He made his way to the Union lines, but was granted leave of absence, being incapacitated for service. On his return to duty he joined his regiment in the Chattanooga campaign, and was officially complimented for his bravery at Gordon's Mills. At Mission Ridge he was again severely wounded, and was once more personally complimented in the official report. At Kenesaw Mountain (June 27, 1864), Capt. Smith commanded the regiment after the killing of Lieutenant-Colonel Chandler, and was promoted to a Lieutenant-Colonelcy for bravery on the field. He led the charge at Franklin, and was brevetted Colonel, and thanked by the commander for his gallant service. In the spring of 1865 he was brevetted Brigadier-General, and, in June following, was mustered out. Returning to Chicago, he resumed the practice of his profession, and gained a prominent position at the bar. In 1866 he was elected State Treasurer, and, after the expiration of his term, in January, 1869, held no public office. General Smith was, for many years, a Trustee of the Chicago Historical Society, and Vice-President of the Board. Died, in Chicago, Sept. 16, 1898.

SMITH, George W., lawyer and Congressman, was born in Putnam County, Ohio, August 18, 1846. When he was four years old, his father removed to Wayne County, Ill., settling on a farm. He attended the common schools and graduated from the literary department of McKendree College, at Lebanon, in 1868. In his youth he learned the trade of a blacksmith, but later determined to study law. After reading for a time at Fairfield, Ill., he entered the Law Department of the Bloomington (Ind.) University, graduating there in 1870. The same year he was admitted to the bar in Illinois, and has since practiced at Murphysboro. In 1880 he was a Republican Presidential Elector, and, in 1888, was elected a Republican Representative to Congress from the Twentieth Illinois District, and has been continuously re-elected, now (1899) serving his sixth consecutive term as Representative from the Twenty-second District.

SMITH, Giles Alexander, soldier, and Assistant Postmaster-General, was born in Jefferson County, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1829, engaged in dry-goods business in Cincinnati and Bloomington, Ill., in 1861 being proprietor of a hotel in the latter place, became a Captain in the Eighth Missouri Volunteers, was engaged at Forts Henry and Donelson, Shiloh and Corinth, and promoted Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel in 1862; led his regiment on the first attack on Vicksburg, and was severely wounded at Arkansas Post, was promoted Brigadier-General in August, 1863, for gallant and meritorious conduct, led a brigade of the Fifteenth Army Corps at Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge, as also in the Atlanta campaign, and a division of the Seventeenth Corps in the "March to the Sea." After the surrender of Lee he was transferred to the Twenty-fifth Army Corps, became Major-General in 1865, and resigned in 1866, having declined a commission as Colonel in the regular army, about 1869 was appointed, by President Grant Second Assistant Postmaster-General, but resigned on account of failing health in 1872. Died, at Bloomington, Nov. 8, 1876. General Smith was one of the founders of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee.

SMITH, Gustavus Adolphus, soldier, was born in Philadelphia, Dec. 26, 1820, at 16 joined two brothers who had located at Springfield, Ohio, where he learned the trade of a carriage-maker. In December, 1837, he arrived at Decatur, Ill., but soon after located at Springfield, where he resided some six years. Then, returning to Decatur, he devoted his attention to carriage manufacture, doing a large business with the South, but losing heavily as the result of the war. An original Whig, he became a Democrat on the dissolution of the Whig party, but early took ground in favor of the Union after the firing on Fort Sumter; was offered and accepted the colonelcy of the Thirty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, at the same time assisting Governor

Yates in the selection of Camp Butler as a camp of recruiting and instruction. Having been assigned to duty in Missouri, in the summer of 1861, he proceeded to Jefferson City, joined Fremont at Carthage in that State, and made a forced march to Springfield, afterwards taking part in the campaign in Arkansas and in the battle of Pea Ridge, where he had a horse shot under him and was severely (and, it was supposed, fatally) wounded, not recovering until 1868. Being compelled to return home, he received authority to raise an independent brigade, but was unable to accompany it to the field. In September, 1862, he was commissioned a Brigadier-General by President Lincoln, "for meritorious conduct," but was unable to enter into active service on account of his wound. Later, he was assigned to the command of a convalescent camp at Murfreesboro, Tenn., under Gen. George H. Thomas. In 1864 he took part in securing the second election of President Lincoln, and, in the early part of 1865, was commissioned by Governor Oglesby Colonel of a new regiment (the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Illinois), but, on account of his wounds, was assigned to court-martial duty, remaining in the service until January, 1866, when he was mustered out with the brevet rank of Brigadier-General. During the second year of his service he was presented with a magnificent sword by the rank and file of his regiment (the Thirty-fifth), for brave and gallant conduct at Pea Ridge. After retiring from the army, he engaged in cotton planting in Alabama, but was not successful; in 1868, canvassed Alabama for General Grant for President, but declined a nomination in his own favor for Congress. In 1870 he was appointed, by General Grant, United States Collector and Disbursing Agent for the District of New Mexico, where he continued to reside.

SMITH, John Corson, soldier, ex-Lieutenant-Governor and ex-State Treasurer, was born in Philadelphia, Feb. 13, 1832. At the age of 16 he was apprenticed to a carpenter and builder. In 1854 he came to Chicago, and worked at his trade, for a time, but soon removed to Galena, where he finally engaged in business as a contractor. In 1862 he enlisted as a private in the Seventy-fourth Illinois Volunteers, but, having received authority from Governor Yates, raised a company, of which he was chosen Captain, and which was incorporated in the Ninety-sixth Illinois Infantry. Of this regiment he was soon elected Major. After a short service about Cincinnati, Ohio, and Covington and Newport, Ky., the Ninety-sixth was sent to the front, and took part (among other battles) in the second engagement at Fort Donelson and in the bloody fight at Franklin, Tenn. Later, Major Smith was assigned to staff duty under Generals Baird and Steedman, serving through the Tullahoma campaign, and participating in the battles of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. Being promoted to a Lieutenant-Colonelcy, he rejoined his regiment, and was given command of a brigade. In the Atlanta campaign he served gallantly, taking a conspicuous part in its long series of bloody engagements, and being severely wounded at Kenesaw Mountain. In February, 1865, he was brevetted Colonel, and, in June, 1865, Brigadier-General. Soon after his return to Galena he was appointed Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue, but was legislated out of office in 1872. In 1873 he removed to Chicago and embarked in business. In 1874-76 he was a member (and Secretary) of the Illinois Board of Commissioners to the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. In 1875 he was appointed Chief Grain-Inspector at Chicago, and held the office for several years. In 1872 and '76 he was a delegate to the National Republican Conventions of those years, and, in 1878, was elected State Treasurer, as he was again in 1882. In 1884 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor, serving until 1889. He is a prominent Mason, Knight Templar and Odd Fellow, as well as a distinguished member of the Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and was prominently connected with the erection of the "Masonic Temple Building" in Chicago.

SMITH, John Eugene, soldier, was born in Switzerland, August 3, 1816, the son of an officer who had served under Napoleon, and after the downfall of the latter, emigrated to Philadelphia. The subject of this sketch received an academic education and became a jeweler; in 1861 entered the volunteer service as Colonel of the Forty-fifth Illinois Infantry; took part in the capture of Forts Henry and Donelson, in the battle of Shiloh and siege of Corinth; was promoted a Brigadier-General in November, 1862, and placed in command of a division in the Sixteenth Army Corps; led the Third Division of the Seventeenth Army Corps in the Vicksburg campaign, later being transferred to the Fifteenth, and taking part in the battle of Missionary Ridge and the Atlanta and Carolina campaigns of 1864-65. He received the brevet rank of Major-General of Volunteers in January, 1865, and, on his muster-out from the volunteer service, became Colonel of the Twenty-seventh United States Infantry, being transferred, in 1870, to the Fourteenth. In 1867 his services at Vicksburg and Savannah were further recognized by conferring upon him the brevets of Brigadier and Major-General in the regular army. In May, 1881, he was retired, afterwards residing in Chicago, where he died, Jan. 29, 1897.

SMITH, Joseph, the founder of the Mormon sect, was born at Sharon, Vt., Dec. 23, 1805. In 1815 his parents removed to Palmyra, N. Y., and still later to Manchester. He early showed a dreamy mental cast, and claimed to be able to locate stolen articles by means of a magic stone. In 1820 he claimed to have seen a vision, but his pretensions were ridiculed by his acquaintances. His story of the revelation of the golden plates by the angel Moroni, and of the latter's instructions to him, is well known. With the aid of Martin Harris and Oliver Cowdery he prepared the "Book of Mormon," alleging that he had deciphered it from heaven-sent characters, through the aid of miraculous spectacles. This was published in 1830. In later years Smith claimed to have received supplementary revelations, which so taxed the credulity of his followers that some of them apostatized. He also claimed supernatural power, such as exorcism, etc. He soon gained followers in considerable numbers, whom, in 1832, he led west, a part settling at Kirtland, Ohio, and the remainder in Jackson County, Mo. Driven out of Ohio five years later, the bulk of the sect found the way to their friends in Missouri, whence they were finally expelled after many conflicts with the authorities. Smith, with the other refugees, fled to Hancock County, Ill., founding the city of Nauvoo, which was incorporated in 1840. Here was begun, in the following year, the erection of a great temple, but again he aroused the hostility of the authorities, although soon wielding considerable political power. After various unsuccessful attempts to arrest him in 1844, Smith and a number of his followers were induced to surrender themselves under the promise of protection from violence and a fair trial. Having been taken to Carthage, the county-seat, all were discharged under recognizance to appear at court except Smith and his brother Hyrum, who were held under the new charge of "treason," and were placed in jail. So intense had been the feeling against the Mormons, that Governor Ford called out the militia to preserve the peace; but it is evident that the feeling among the latter was in sympathy with that of the populace. Most of the militia were disbanded after Smith's arrest, one company being left on duty at Carthage.

a commission tendered him by Governor Yates, devoted his time and means liberally to the recruiting and organization of regiments for service in the field, and procuring supplies for the sick and wounded. In 1866 he was elected to the lower house of the Legislature, and was re-elected in 1868 and '70, serving, during his last term, as Speaker. In 1875 he was appointed by Governor Cullom a member of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of which body he served as President until 1883. He was a man of remarkably genial temperament, liberal impulses, and wide popularity. Died, March 25, 1886.

SMITH, William Sooy, soldier and civil engineer, was born at Tarlton, Pickaway County, Ohio, July 22, 1830, graduated at Ohio University in 1849, and, at the United States Military Academy, in 1853, having among his classmates, at the latter, Generals McPherson, Schofield and Sheridan. Coming to Chicago the following year, he first found employment as an engineer on the Illinois Central Railroad, but later became assistant of Lieutenant-Colonel Graham in engineer service on the lakes; a year later took charge of a select school in Buffalo; in 1857 made the first surveys for the International Bridge at Niagara Falls, then went into the service of extensive locomotive and bridge-works at Trenton, N. J., in their interest making a visit to Cuba, and also superintending the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River. The war intervening, he returned North and was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel and assigned to duty as Assistant Adjutant-General at Camp Denison, Ohio, but, in June, 1862, was commissioned Colonel of the Thirtieth Ohio Volunteers, participating in the West Virginia campaigns, and later, at Shiloh and Perryville. In April, 1862, he was promoted Brigadier-General of volunteers, commanding divisions in the Army of the Ohio until the fall of 1862, when he joined Grant and took part in the Vicksburg campaign, as commander of the First Division of the Sixteenth Army Corps. Subsequently he was made Chief of the Cavalry Department, serving on the staffs of Grant and Sherman, until compelled to resign, in 1864, on account of impaired health. During the war General Smith rendered valuable service to the Union cause in great emergencies, by his knowledge of engineering. On retiring to private life he resumed his profession at Chicago, and since has been employed by the Government on some of its most stupendous works on the lakes, and has also planned several of the most important railroad bridges across the Missouri and other streams. He has been much consulted in reference to municipal engineering, and his name is connected with a number of the gigantic edifices in Chicago.

SMITHBORO, a village and railroad junction in Bond County, 3 miles east of Greenville. Population, 302, (1900), 314.

SNAPP, Henry, Congressman, born in Livingston County, N. Y., June 30, 1822, came to Illinois with his father when 11 years old, and, having read law at Joliet, was admitted to the bar in 1847. He practiced in Will County for twenty years before entering public life. In 1868 he was elected to the State Senate and occupied a seat in that body until his election, in 1871, to the Forty-second Congress, by the Republicans of the (then) Sixth Illinois District, as successor to B. C. Cook, who had resigned. Died, at Joliet, Nov. 23, 1895.

SNOW, Herman W., ex-Congressman, was born in La Porte County, Ind., July 3, 1836, but was reared in Kentucky, working upon a farm for five years, while yet in his minority becoming a resident of Illinois. For several years he was a school teacher, meanwhile studying law and being admitted to the bar. Early in the war he enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteers, rising to the rank of Captain. His term of service having expired, he re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-first Illinois, and was mustered out with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. After the close of the war he resumed teaching at the Chicago High School, and later served in the General Assembly (1873-74) as Representative from Woodford County. In 1890 he was elected, as a Democrat, to represent the Ninth Illinois District in Congress, but was defeated by his Republican opponent in 1892.

SNOWHOOK, William B., first Collector of Customs at Chicago, was born in Ireland in 1804; at the age of eight years was brought to New York, where he learned the printer's trade, and worked for some time in the same office with Horace Greeley. At 16 he went back to Ireland, remaining two years, but, returning to the United States, began the study of law; was also employed on the Passaic Canal; in 1836, came to Chicago, and was soon after associated with William B. Ogden in a contract on the Illinois & Michigan Canal, which lasted until 1841. As early as 1840 he became prominent as a leader in the Democratic party, and, in 1846, received from President Polk an appointment as first Collector of Customs for Chicago (having previously served as Special Surveyor of the Port, while attached to the District of Detroit); in 1853, was re-appointed to the Collectorship by President Pierce, serving two years. During the "Mormon War" (1844) he organized and equipped, at his own expense, the Montgomery Guards, and was commissioned Colonel, but the disturbances were brought to an end before the order to march. From 1856 he devoted his attention chiefly to his practice, but, in 1862, was one of the Democrats of Chicago who took part in a movement to sustain the Government by stimulating enlistments; was also a member of the Convention which nominated Mr. Greeley for President in 1872. Died, in Chicago, May 5, 1882.

SNYDER, Adam Wilson, pioneer lawyer, and early Congressman, was born at Connellsville, Pa., Oct. 6, 1799. In early life he followed the occupation of wool-curling for a livelihood, attending school in the winter. In 1815, he emigrated to Columbus, Ohio, and afterwards settled in Ridge Prairie, St. Clair County, Ill. Being offered a situation in a wool-curling and fulling mill at Cahokia, he removed thither in 1817. He formed the friendship of Judge Jesse B. Thomas, and, through the latter's encouragement and aid, studied law and gained a solid professional, political, social and financial position. In 1830 he was elected State Senator from St. Clair County, and re-elected for two successive terms. He served through the Black Hawk War as private, Adjutant and Captain. In 1833 he removed to Belleville, and, in 1834, was defeated for Congress by Governor Reynolds, whom he, in turn, defeated in 1836. Two years later Reynolds again defeated him for the same position, and, in 1840, he was elected State Senator. In 1841 he was the Democratic nominee for Governor. The election was held in August, 1842, but, in May preceding, he died at his home in Belleville. His place on the ticket was filled by Thomas Ford, who was elected.—William H. (Snyder), son of the preceding, was born in St. Clair County, Ill., July 12, 1825; educated at McKendree College, studied law with Lieutenant-Governor Koerner, and was admitted to practice in 1845; also served for a time as Postmaster of the city of Belleville, and, during the Mexican War, as First-Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Fifth Illinois Volunteers. From 1850 to '54 he represented his county in the Legislature; in 1855 was appointed, by Governor Matteson, State's Attorney, which position he filled for two years. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the office of Secretary of State in 1856, and, in 1857, was elected a Judge of the Twenty-fourth Circuit, was re-elected for the Third Circuit in '73, '79 and '85. He was also a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1869-70. Died, at Belleville, Dec. 24, 1892.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' HOME, a State charitable institution, founded by act of the Legislature in 1885, and located at Quincy, Adams County. The object of its establishment was to provide a comfortable home for such disabled or dependent veterans of the United States land or naval forces as had honorably served during the Civil War. It was opened for the reception of veterans on March 3, 1887, the first cost of site and buildings having been about $350,000. The total number of inmates admitted up to June 30, 1894, was 2,813; the number in attendance during the two previous years 988, and the whole number present on Nov. 10, 1894, 1,088. The value of property at that time was $393,636.08. Considerable appropriations have been made for additions to the buildings at subsequent sessions of the Legislature. The General Government pays to the State $100 per year for each veteran supported at the Home.

SOLDIERS' ORPHANS' HOME, ILLINOIS, an institution, created by act of 1865, for the maintenance and education of children of deceased soldiers of the Civil War. An eighty-acre tract, one mile north of Normal, was selected as the site, and the first principal building was completed and opened for the admission of beneficiaries on June 1, 1869. Its first cost was $135,000, the site having been donated. Repairs and the construction of new buildings, from time to time, have considerably increased this sum. In 1875 the benefits of the institution were extended, by legislative enactment, to the children of soldiers who had died after the close of the war. The aggregate number of inmates, in 1894, was 572, of whom 323 were males and 249 females.

SOLDIERS' WIDOWS' HOME. Provision was made for the establishment of this institution by the Thirty-ninth General Assembly, in an act, approved, June 13, 1895, appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of a site, the erection of buildings and furnishing the same. It is designed for the reception and care of the mothers, wives, widows and daughters of such honorably discharged soldiers or sailors, in the United States service, as may have died, or may be physically or mentally unable to provide for the families naturally dependent on them, provided that such persons have been residents of the State for at least one year previous to admission, and are without means or ability for self-support.

The affairs of the Home are managed by a board of five trustees, of whom two are men and three women, the former to be members of the Grand Army of the Republic and of different political parties, and the latter members of the Women's Relief Corps of this State. The institution was located at Wilmington, occupying a site of seventeen acres where it was formally opened in a house of eighteen rooms, March 11, 1896, with twenty-six applications for admittance. The plan contemplates an early enlargement by the erection of additional cottages.

SORENTO, a village of Bond County, at the intersection of the Jacksonville & St. Louis and the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railways, 14 miles southeast of Litchfield; has a bank and a newspaper. Its interests are agricultural and mining. Pop. (1890), 528, (1900), 1,000.

SOUARD, James Gaston, pioneer, born of French ancestry in St. Louis, Mo., July 15, 1798; resided there until 1821, when, having married the daughter of a soldier of the Revolution, he received an appointment at Fort Snelling, near the present city of St. Paul, then under command of Col. Snelling, who was his wife's brother-in-law. The Fort was reached after a tedious journey by flat-boat and overland, late in the fall of 1821, his wife accompanying him. Three years later they returned to St. Louis, where, being an engineer, he was engaged for several years in surveying. In 1827 he removed with his family to Galena, for the next six years had charge of a store of the Gratiot Brothers, early business men of that locality. Towards the close of this period he received the appointment of County Recorder, also holding the position of County Surveyor and Postmaster of Galena at the same time. His later years were devoted to farming and horticulture, his death taking place, Sept. 17, 1878. Mr. Souard was probably the first man to engage in freighting between Galena and Chicago. "The Galena Advertiser" of Sept. 11, 1829, makes mention of a wagon-load of lead sent by him to Chicago, his team taking back a load of salt, the paper remarking: "This is the first wagon that has ever passed from the Mississippi River to Chicago." Great results were predicted from the exchange of commodities between the lake and the lead mine district. — Mrs. Eliza M. Hunt (Souard), wife of the preceding, was born at Detroit, Dec. 18, 1801, her father being Col. Thomas A. Hunt, who had taken part in the Battle of Bunker Hill and remained in the army until his death, at St. Louis, in 1807. His descendants have maintained their connection with the army ever since, a son being a prominent artillery officer at the Battle of Gettysburg. Mrs. Souard was married at St. Louis, in 1820, and survive her husband some sixteen years, dying at Galena, August 11, 1891. She had resided in Galena nearly seventy years, and at the date of her death, in the 90th year of her age, she was that city's oldest resident.

SOUTHERN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, located at Albion, Edwards County, incorporated in 1891; had a faculty of ten teachers with 219 pupils (1897-98)—about equally male and female. Besides classical, scientific, normal, music and fine arts departments, instruction is given in preparatory studies and business education. Its property is valued at $16,500.

SOUTHERN HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, located at Anna, Union County, founded by act of the Legislature in 1869. The original site comprised 290 acres and cost a little more than $22,000, of which one-fourth was donated by citizens of the county. The construction of buildings was begun in 1869, but it was not until March, 1875, that the north wing (the first completed) was ready for occupancy. Other portions were completed a year later. The Trustees purchased 160 additional acres in 1883. The first cost (up to September, 1876) was nearly $635,000. In 1881 one wing of the main building was destroyed by fire, and was subsequently rebuilt; the patients being, meanwhile, cared for in temporary wooden barracks. The total value of lands and buildings belonging to the State, June 30, 1894, was estimated at $738,580, and, of property of all sorts, at $833,700. The wooden barracks were later converted into a permanent ward, additions made to the main buildings, a detached building for the accommodation of 300 patients erected, numerous outbuildings put up and general improvements made. A second fire on the night of Jan. 3, 1895, destroyed a large part of the main building, inflicting a loss upon the State of $175,000. Provision was made for rebuilding by the Legislature of that year. The institution has capacity for about 750 patients.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS NORMAL UNIVERSITY, established in 1869, and located, after competitive bidding, at Carbondale, which offered lands and bonds at first estimated to be of the value of $229,000, but which later depreciated, through shrinkage, to $75,000. Construction was commenced in May, 1870, and the first or main building was completed and appropriately dedicated in July, 1874. Its cost was $265,000, but it was destroyed by fire, Nov. 26, 1883. In February, 1887, a new structure was completed at a cost of $150,000. Two normal courses of instruction are given—classical and scientific—each extending over a period of four years. The conditions of admission require that the pupil shall be 16 years of age, and shall possess the qualifications enabling him to pass examination for a second-grade teacher's certificate. Those unable to do so may enter a preparatory department for six months. Pupils who pledge themselves to teach in the public schools, not less than half the time of their attendance at the University, receive free tuition with a small charge for incidentals, while others pay a tuition fee. The number of students in attendance for the year 1897-98 was 720, coming from forty-seven counties, chiefly in the southern half of the State, with representatives from eight other States. The teaching faculty for the same year consisted, besides the President, of sixteen instructors in the various departments, of whom five were ladies and eleven gentlemen.

SOUTHERN PENITENTIARY, THE, located near Chester, on the Mississippi River. Its erection was rendered necessary by the overcrowding of the Northern Penitentiary. (See Northern Penitentiary.) The law providing for its establishment required the Commissioners to select a site convenient of access, adjacent to stone and timber, and having a high elevation, with a never failing supply of water. In 1877, 123 acres were purchased at Chester, and the erection of buildings commenced. The first appropriation was of $200,000, and $300,000 was added in 1879. By March, 1878, 200 convicts were received, and their labor was utilized in the completion of the buildings, which are constructed upon approved modern principles. The prison receives convicts sent from the southern portion of the State, and has accommodation for some 1,200 prisoners. In connection with this penitentiary is an asylum for insane convicts, the erection of which was provided for by the Legislature in 1889.

SOUTH GROVE, a village of De Kalb County. Population (1890), 730.

SPALDING, Jesse, manufacturer. Collector of Customs and Street Railway President, was born at Athens, Bradford County, Pa., April 15, 1833; early commenced lumbering on the Susquehanna, and, at 23, began dealing on his own account. In 1857 he removed to Chicago, and soon after bought the property of the New York Lumber Company at the mouth of the Menominee River in Wisconsin, where, with different partners, and finally practically alone, he has carried on the business of lumber manufacture on a large scale ever since. In 1881 he was appointed, by President Arthur, Collector of the Port of Chicago, and, in 1889, received from President Harrison an appointment as one of the Government Directors of the Union Pacific Railway. Mr. Spalding was a zealous supporter of the Government during the War of the Rebellion and rendered valuable aid in the construction and equipment of Camp Douglas and the barracks at Chicago for the returning soldiers, receiving Auditor's warrants in payment, when no funds in the State treasury were available for the purpose. He was associated with William B. Ogden and others in the project for connecting Green Bay and Sturgeon Bay by a ship canal, which was completed in 1882, and, on the death of Mr. Ogden, succeeded to the Presidency of the Canal Company, serving until 1893, when the canal was turned over to the General Government. He has also been identified with many other public enterprises intimately connected with the development and prosperity of Chicago, and, in July, 1899, became President of the Chicago Union Traction Company, having control of the North and West Chicago Street Railway Systems.

SPALDING, John Lancaster, Catholic Bishop, was born in Lebanon, Ky., June 2, 1840; educated in the United States and in Europe, ordained a priest in the Catholic Church in 1863, and thereupon attached to the cathedral at Louisville, as assistant. In 1869 he organized a congregation of colored people, and built for their use the Church of St. Augustine, having been assigned to that parish as pastor. Soon afterwards he was appointed Secretary to the Bishop and made Chancellor of the Diocese. In 1873 he was transferred from Louisville to New York, where he was attached to the missionary parish of St. Michael's. He had, by this time, achieved no little fame as a pulpit orator and lecturer. When the diocese of Peoria, Ill., was created, in 1877, the choice of the Pope fell upon him for the new see, and he was consecrated Bishop, on May 1 of that year, by Cardinal McCloskey at New York. His administration has been characterized by both energy and success. He has devoted much attention to the subject of emigration, and has brought about the founding of many new settlements in the far West. He was also largely instrumental in bringing about the founding of the Catholic University at Washington. He is a frequent contributor to the reviews, and the author of a number of religious works.

SPANISH INVASION OF ILLINOIS. In the month of June, 1779, soon after the declaration of war between Spain and Great Britain, an expedition was organized in Canada, to attack the Spanish posts along the Mississippi. Simultaneously, a force was to be dispatched from Pensacola against New Orleans, then commanded by a young Spanish Colonel, Don Bernardo de Galvez. Secret instructions had been sent to British Commandants, all through the Western country, to co-operate with both expeditions. De Galvez, having learned of the scheme through intercepted letters, resolved to forestall the attack by becoming the assailant. At the head of a force of 670 men, he set out and captured Paton Rouge, Fort Mandeville and Nat'chez, almost without opposition. The British in Canada, being ignorant of what had been going on in the South, in February following dispatched a force from Mackinac to support the expedition from Pensacola, and, incidentally, to subdue the American rebels while en route. Cahokia and Kaskaskia were contemplated points of attack, as well as the Spanish forts at St. Louis and St. Genevieve. This movement was planned by Capt. Patrick Sinclair, commandant at Mackinac, but Captain Hesse was placed in charge of the expedition, which numbered some 750 men, including a force of Indians led by a chief named Wabasha. The British arrived before St. Louis, early on the morning of May 26, 1780, taking the Spaniards by surprise. Meanwhile Col. George Rogers Clark, having been apprised of the project, arrived at Cahokia from the falls of the Ohio, twenty-four hours in advance of the attack, his presence and readiness to co-operate with the Spanish, no doubt, contributing to the defeat of the expedition. The accounts of what followed are conflicting—the number of killed on the St. Louis shore being variously estimated from seven or eight to sixty eight—the last being the estimate of Capt. Sinclair in his official report. All agree, however that the invading party was forced to retreat in great haste. Colonel Montgomery, who had been in command at Cahokia, with a force of 350 and a party of Spanish allies, pursued the retreating invaders as far as the Rock River, destroying many Indian villages on the way. This movement on the part of the British served as a pretext for an attempted reprisal, undertaken by the Spaniards, with the aid of a number of Cahokians, early in 1781. Starting early in January, this latter expedition crossed Illinois, with the design of attacking Fort St. Joseph, at the head of Lake Michigan, which had been captured from the English by Thomas Brady and afterwards retaken. The Spaniards were commanded by Don Eugenio Pomre, and supported by a force of Cahokians and Indians. The fort was easily taken and the British flag replaced by the ensign of Spain. The affair was regarded as of but little moment, at the time, the post being evacuated in a few days, and the Spaniards returning to St. Louis. Yet it led to serious international complications, and the "conquest" was seriously urged by the Spanish ministry as giving that country a right to the territory traversed. This claim was supported by France before the signing of the Treaty of Paris, but was defeated, through the combined efforts of Messrs. Jay, Franklin and Adams, the American Commissioners in charge of the peace negotiations with England.

SPARKS, (Capt.) David R., manufacturer and legislator, was born near Lanesville, Ind., in 1823; in 1836, removed with his parents to Macoupin County, Ill.; in 1847, enlisted for the Mexican War, crossing the plains to Santa Fe, New Mexico. In 1850 he made the overland trip to California, returning the next year by the Isthmus of Panama. In 1855 he engaged in the milling business at Staunton, Macoupin County, but, in 1860, made a third trip across the plains in search of gold, taking a quartz-mill which was erected near where Central City, Colo., now is, and which was the second steam-engine in that region. He returned home in time to vote for Stephen A. Douglas for President, the same year, but became a stalwart Republican, two weeks later, when the advocates of secession began to develop their policy after the election of Lincoln. In 1861 he enlisted, under the call for 500,000 volunteers following the first battle of Bull Run, and was commissioned a Captain in the Third Illinois Cavalry (Col. Eugene A. Carr), serving two and a half years, during which time he took part in several hard-fought battles, and being present at the fall of Vicksburg. At the end of his service he became associated with his former partner in the erection of a large flouring mill at Litchfield, but, in 1869, the firm bought an extensive flouring mill at Alton, of which he became the principal owner in 1881, and which has since been greatly enlarged and improved, until it is now one of the most extensive establishments of its kind in the State. Capt. Sparks was elected to the House of Representatives in 1888, and to the State Senate in 1894, serving in the sessions of 1895 and '97; was also strongly supported as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in 1896.

SPARKS, William A. J., ex-Congressman, was born near New Albany, Ind., Nov. 19, 1828, at 8 years of age was brought by his parents to Illinois, and shortly afterwards left an orphan. Thrown on his own resources, he found work upon a farm, his attendance at the district schools being limited to the winter months. Later, he passed through McKendree College, supporting himself, meanwhile, by teaching, graduating in 1850. He read law with Judge Sidney Breese, and was admitted to the bar in 1851. His first public office was that of Receiver of the Land Office at Edwardsville, to which he was appointed by President Pierce in 1853, remaining until 1856, when he was chosen Presidential Elector on the Democratic ticket. The same year he was elected to the lower house of the General Assembly, and, in 1863-64, served in the State Senate for the unexpired term of James M. Rodgers, deceased. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1868, and a Democratic Representative in Congress from 1875 to 1883. In 1885 he was appointed, by President Cleveland, Commissioner of the General Land Office in Washington, retiring, by resignation, in 1887. His home is at Carlyle.

SPEED, Joshua Fry, merchant, and intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln; was educated in the local schools and at St. Joseph's College, Bardstow, Ky., after which he spent some time in a wholesale mercantile establishment in Louisville. About 1835 he came to Springfield, Ill., where he engaged in the mercantile business, later becoming the intimate friend and associate of Abraham Lincoln, to whom he offered the privilege of sharing a room over his store, when Mr. Lincoln removed from New Salem to Springfield, in 1836. Mr. Speed returned to Kentucky in 1842, but the friendship with Mr. Lincoln, which was of a most devoted character, continued until the death of the latter. Having located in Jefferson County, Ky., Mr. Speed was elected to the Legislature in 1848, but was never again willing to accept office, though often solicited to do so. In 1851 he removed to Louisville, where he acquired a handsome fortune in the real-estate business. On the breaking out of the rebellion in 1861, he heartily embraced the cause of the Union, and, during the war, was entrusted with many delicate and important duties in the interest of the Government, by Mr. Lincoln, whom he frequently visited in Washington. His death occurred at Louisville, May 29, 1882.—James (Speed), an older brother of the preceding, was a prominent Unionist of Kentucky, and, after the war, a leading Republican of that State, serving as delegate to the National Republican Conventions of 1872 and 1876. In 1864 he was appointed Attorney-General by Mr. Lincoln and served until 1866, when he resigned on account of disagreement with President Johnson. He died in 1887, at the age of 75 years.

SPOON RIVER, rises in Bureau County, flows southward through Stark County into Peoria, thence southwest through Knox, and to the south and southeast, through Fulton County, entering the Illinois River opposite Havana. It is about 150 miles long.

SPRINGER, (Rev.) Francis, D.D., educator and Army Chaplain, born in Franklin County, Pa., March 19, 1810; was left an orphan at an early age, and educated at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg; entered the Lutheran ministry in 1836, and, in 1839, removed to Springfield, Ill., where he preached and taught school; in 1847 became President of Hillsboro College, which, in 1852, was removed to Springfield and became Illinois State University, now known as Concordia Seminary. Later, he served for a time as Superintendent of Schools for the city of Springfield, but, in September, 1861, resigned to accept the Chaplaincy of the Tenth Illinois Cavalry; by successive resignations and appointments, held the positions of Chaplain of the First Arkansas Infantry (1863-64) and Post Chaplain at Fort Smith, Ark., serving in the latter position until April, 1867, when he was commissioned Chaplain of the United States Army. This position he resigned while stationed at Fort Harker, Kan., August 23, 1867. During a considerable part of his incumbency as Chaplain at Fort Smith, he acted as Agent of the Bureau of Refugees and Freedmen, performing important service in caring for non-combatants rendered homeless by the vicissitudes of war. After the war he served, for a time, as Superintendent of Schools for Montgomery County, Ill.; was instrumental in the founding of Carthage (Ill.) College, and was a member of its Board of Control at the time of his death. He was elected Chaplain of the Illinois House of Representatives at the session of the Thirty-fifth General Assembly (1857), and Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Illinois for two consecutive terms (1890-'92). He was also member of the Stephenson Post, No. 30, G. A. R., at Springfield, and served as its Chaplain from January, 1884, to his death, which occurred at Springfield, Oct. 21, 1892.

SPRINGER, William McKendree, ex-Congressman, Justice of United States Court, was born in Sullivan County, Ind., May 30, 1836. In 1848 he removed with his parents to Jacksonville, Ill., was fitted for college in the public high school at Jacksonville, under the tuition of the late Dr. Bateman, entered Illinois College, remaining three years, when he removed to the Indiana State University, graduating there in 1858. The following year he was admitted to the bar and commenced practice in Logan County, but soon after removed to Springfield. He entered public life as Secretary of the Constitutional Convention of 1862. In 1871-'72 he represented Sangamon County in the Legislature, and, in 1874, was elected to Congress from the Thirteenth Illinois District as a Democrat. From that time until the close of the Fifty-third Congress (1895), he served in Congress continuously, and was recognized as one of the leaders of his party on the floor, being at the head of many important committees when that party was in the ascendancy, and a candidate for the Democratic caucus nomination for Spenser, in 1893. In 1894 he was the candidate of his party for Congress for the eleventh time, but was defeated by his Republican opponent, James A. Connolly. In 1895 President Cleveland appointed him United States District Judge for Indian Territory.

SPRINGFIELD, the State capital, and the county-seat of Sangamon County, situated five miles south of the Sangamon River and 185 miles southwest of Chicago; is an important railway center. The first settlement on the site of the present city was made by John Kelly in 1819. On April 10, 1821, it was selected, by the first Board of County Commissioners, as the temporary county-seat of Sangamon County, the organization of which had been authorized by act of the Legislature in January previous, and the name Springfield was given to it. In 1823 the selection was made permanent. The latter year the first sale of lands took place, the original site being entered by Pascal P. Enos, Elijah Hes and Thomas Cox. The town was platted about the same time, and the name "Calhoun" was given to a section in the northwest quarter of the present city—this being the "hey-day" of the South Carolina statesman's greatest popularity—but the change was not popularly accepted, and the new name was soon dropped. It was incorporated as a town, April 2, 1832, and as a city, April 6, 1840; and re-incorporated, under the general law in 1882. It was made the State capital by act of the Legislature, passed at the session of 1837, which went into effect, July 4, 1839, and the Legislature first convened there in December of the latter year. The general surface is flat, though there is rolling ground to the west. The city has excellent water-works, a paid fire-department, six banks, electric street railways, gas and electric lighting, commodious hotels, fine churches, numerous handsome residences, beautiful parks, thorough sewerage, and is one of the best paved and handsomest cities in the State. The city proper, in 1890, contained an area of four square miles, but has since been enlarged by the annexation of the following suburbs: North Springfield, April 7, 1891; West Springfield, Jan. 4, 1898, and South Springfield and the village of Laurel, April 5, 1898. These additions give to the present city an area of 5.84 square miles. The population of the original city, according to the census of 1880, was 19,743, and, in 1890, 24,963, while that of the annexed suburbs, at the last census, was 2,109—making a total of 29,072. The latest school census (1898) showed a total population of 33,375—population by census (1900), 34,159. Besides the State House, the city has a handsome United States Government Building for United States Court and post-office purposes, a county courthouse (the former State capitol), a city hall and (State) Executive Mansion. Springfield was the home of Abraham Lincoln. His former residence has been donated to the State, and his tomb and monument are in the beautiful Oak Ridge cemetery, adjoining the city. Springfield is an important coal-mining center, and has many important industries, notably a watch factory, rolling mills, and extensive manufactories of agricultural implements and furniture. It is also the permanent location of the State Fairs, for which extensive buildings have been erected on the Fair Grounds north of the city. There are three daily papers—two morning and one evening—published here, besides various other publications. Pop. (1900), 34,159.

SPRINGFIELD, EFFINGHAM & SOUTH-EASTERN RAILROAD. (See St. Louis, Indianapolis & Eastern Railroad.)

SPRINGFIELD & ILLINOIS SOUTHEASTERN RAILROAD. (See Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad.)

SPRINGFIELD & NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD. (See Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad of Illinois.)

SPRING VALLEY, an incorporated city in Bureau County, at intersection of the Chicago & Northwestern, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and the Toluca, Marquette & Northern Railways, 100 miles southwest of Chicago. It lies in a coal-mining region and has important manufacturing interests as well. It has two banks, electric street and interurban railways, and two newspapers. Population (1890), 3,837; (1900), 6,214.

ST. AGATHA'S SCHOOL, an institution for young ladies, at Springfield, under the patronage of the Bishop of the Episcopal Church, incorporated in 1889. It has a faculty of eight teachers giving instruction in the preparatory and higher branches, including music and fine arts. It reported fifty-five pupils in 1894, and real estate valued at $15,000.

ST. ALBAN'S ACADEMY, a boys' and young men's school at Knoxville, Ill., incorporated in 1896 under the auspices of the Episcopal Church; in 1898 had a faculty of seven teachers, with forty-five pupils, and property valued at $61,100, of which $54,000 was real estate. Instruction is given in the classical and scientific branches, besides music and preparatory studies.

ST. ANNE, a village of Kankakee County, at the crossing of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railways, 60 miles south of Chicago. The town has two banks, tile and brick factory, and a weekly newspaper. Pop. (1900), 1,000.

ST. CHARLES, a city in Kane County, on both sides of Fox River, at intersection of the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago Great Western Railways; 38 miles west of Chicago and 10 miles south of Elgin. The river furnishes excellent water-power, which is being utilized by a number of important manufacturing enterprises. The city is connected with Chicago and many towns in the Fox River valley by interurban electric trolley lines; is also the seat of the State Home for Boys. Pop. (1890), 1,690; (1900), 2,675.

ST. CLAIR, Arthur, first Governor of the Northwest Territory, was born of titled ancestry at Thurso, Scotland, in 1734; came to America in 1757 as an ensign, having purchased his commission, participated in the capture of Louisbourg, Canada, in 1758, and fought under Wolfe at Quebec. In 1764 he settled in Pennsylvania, where he amassed a moderate fortune, and became prominent in public affairs. He served with distinction during the Revolutionary War, rising to the rank of Major-General, and succeeding General Gates in command at Ticonderoga, but, later, was censured by Washington for his hasty evacuation of the post, though finally vindicated by a military court. His Revolutionary record, however, was generally good, and even distinguished. He represented Pennsylvania in the Continental Congress, and presided over that body in 1787. He served as Governor of the Northwest Territory (including the present State of Illinois) from 1789 to 1802. As an executive he was not successful, being unpopular because of his arbitrariness. In November, 1791, he suffered a serious defeat by the Indians in the valley between the Miami and the Wabash. In this campaign he was badly crippled by the gout, and had to be carried on a litter; he was again vindicated by a Congressional investigation. His first visit to the Illinois Country was made in 1790, when he organized St. Clair County, which was named in his honor. In 1802 President Jefferson removed him from the governorship of Ohio Territory, of which he had continued to be the Governor after its separation from Indiana and Illinois. The remainder of his life was spent in comparative penury. Shortly before his decease, he was granted an annuity by the Pennsylvania Legislature and by Congress. Died, at Greensburg, Pa., August 31, 1818.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY, the first county organized within the territory comprised in the present State of Illinois—the whole region west of the Ohio River having been first placed under civil jurisdiction, under the name of "Illinois County," by an act of the Virginia House of Delegates, passed in October, 1778, a few months after the capture of Kaskaskia by Col. George Rogers Clark. (See Illinois; also Clark, George Rogers.) St. Clair County was finally set off by an order of Gov. Arthur St. Clair, on occasion of his first visit to the "Illinois Country," in April, 1790—more than two years after his assumption of the duties of Governor of the Northwest Territory, which then comprehended the "Illinois Country" as well as the whole region within the present States of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin. Governor St. Clair's order, which bears date, April 27, 1790, defines the boundaries of the new county—which took his own name—as follows: "Beginning at the mouth of the Little Michillimackeanack River, running thence southerly in a direct line to the mouth of the little river above Fort Massac upon the Ohio River, thence with the said river to its junction with the Mississippi, thence up the Mississippi to the mouth of the Illinois, and so up the Illinois River to the place of beginning, with all the adjacent islands of said rivers Illinois and Mississippi." The "Little Michillimackinack," the initial point mentioned in this description—also variously spelled "Makina" and "Mackinaw" the latter being the name by which the stream is now known—empties into the Illinois River on the south side a few miles below Pekin, in Tazewell County. The boundaries of St. Clair County, as given by Gov. St. Clair, indicate the imperfect knowledge of the topography of the "Illinois Country" existing in that day, as a line drawn south from the mouth of the Mackinaw River, instead of reaching the Ohio "above Fort Massac," would have followed the longitude of the present city of Springfield, striking the Mississippi about the northwestern corner of Jackson County, twenty-five miles west of the mouth of the Ohio. The object of Governor St. Clair's order was, of course, to include the settled portions of the Illinois Country in the new county; and, if it had had the effect intended, the eastern border of the county would have followed a line some fifty miles farther eastward, along the eastern border of Marion, Jefferson, Franklin, Williamson and Johnson Counties, reaching the Ohio River about the present site of Metropolis City in Massac County, and embracing about one-half of the area of the present State of Illinois. For all practical purposes it embraced all the Illinois Country, as it included that portion in which the white settlements were located. (See St. Clair, Arthur; also Illinois Country.)

The early records of St. Clair County are in the French language; its first settlers and its early civilization were French, and the first church to promulgate the doctrine of Christianity was the Roman Catholic. The first proceedings in court under the common law were had in 1796. The first Justices of the Peace were appointed in 1807, and, as there was no penitentiary, the whipping-post and pillory played an important part in the code of penalties, these punishments being impartially meted out as late as the time of Judge afterwards Governor Reynolds, to "the lame, the halt and the blind," for such offenses as the larceny of a silk handkerchief. At first three places—Cahokia, Prairie-du-Rocher and Kaskaskia—were named as county seats by Governor St. Clair, but Randolph County having been set off in 1805, Cahokia became the county-seat of the older county, so remaining until 1813, when Belleville was selected as the seat of justice. At that time it was a mere cornfield owned by George Blair, although settlements had previously been established in Ridge Prairie and at Badgley. Judge Jesse B. Thomas held his first court in a log-cabin, but a rude court house was erected in 1814, and, the same year, George E. Blair established a hostelry. Joseph Kerr opened a store, and, in 1817, additional improvements were inaugurated by Daniel Murray and others, from Baltimore. John H. Dennis and the Mitchells and Wests (from Virginia) settled soon afterward, becoming farmers and mechanics. Belleville was incorporated in 1819. In 1825 Governor Edwards bought the large landed interests of Etienne Personne, a large French land-owner, ordered a new survey of the town and infused fresh life into its development. Settlers began to arrive in large numbers, mainly Virginians, who brought with them their slaves, the right to hold which was, for many years, a fruitful and perennial source of strife. Emigrants from Germany began to arrive at an early day, and now a large proportion of the population of Belleville and St. Clair County is made up of that nationality. The county, as at present organized, lies on the western border of the south half of the State, immediately opposite St. Louis, and comprises some 680 square miles. Three-fourths of it are underlaid by a vein of coal, six to eight feet thick, and about one hundred feet below the surface. Considerable wheat is raised. The principal towns are Belleville, East St. Louis, Leland and Mascoutah. Population of the county (1880), 61,806; (1890), 66,571; (1900), 86,685.

ST. JOHN, an incorporated village of Perry County, on the Illinois Central Railway, one mile north of Duquoin. Coal is mined and salt manufactured here. Population about 500.

ST. JOSEPH, a village of Champaign County, on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, 10 miles east of Champaign; has inter-urban railroad connection. Pop. (1900), 637.

ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL, (Chicago), founded in 1860, by the Sisters of Charity. Having been destroyed in the fire of 1871, it was rebuilt in the following year. In 1892 it was reconstructed, enlarged and made thoroughly modern in its appointments. It can accommodate about 250 patients. The Sisters attend to the nursing, and conduct the domestic and financial affairs. The medical staff comprises ten physicians and surgeons, among whom are some of the most eminent in Chicago.

ST. LOUIS, ALTON & CHICAGO RAILROAD.

(See Chicago & Alton Railroad.)

ST. LOUIS, ALTON & SPRINGFIELD RAILROAD. (See St. Louis, Chicago & St. Paul Railroad.)

ST. LOUIS, ALTON & TERRE HAUTE RAILROAD, a corporation formerly operating an extensive system of railroads in Illinois. The Terre Haute & Alton Railroad Company (the original corporation) was chartered in January, 1851, work begun in 1852, and the main line from Terre Haute to Alton (172.5 miles) completed, March 1, 1856. The Belleville & Illinois town branch (from Belleville to East St. Louis) was chartered in 1852, and completed between the points named in the title, in the fall of 1854. This corporation secured authority to construct an extension from Illinois town (now East St. Louis) to Alton, which was completed in October, 1856, giving the first railroad connection between Alton & St. Louis. Simultaneously with this, these two roads (the Terre Haute & Alton and the Belleville & Illinois town) were consolidated under a single charter by special act of the Legislature in February, 1854, the consolidated line taking the name of the Terre Haute & St. Louis Railroad. Subsequently the road became financially embarrassed, was sold under foreclosure and reorganized, in 1862, under the name of the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad. June 1, 1867, the main line (from Terre Haute to St. Louis) was leased for ninety-nine years to the Indianapolis & St. Louis Railway Company (an Indiana corporation) guaranteed by certain other lines, but the lease was subsequently broken by the insolvency of the lessee and some of the guarantors. The Indianapolis & St. Louis went into the hands of a receiver in 1882, and was sold under foreclosure, in July of the same year, its interest being absorbed by the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, by which the main line is now operated. The properties officially reported as remaining in the hands of the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad, June 30, 1895, beside the Belleville Branch (14.40 miles), included the following leased and subsidiary lines: Belleville & Southern Illinois—"Cairo Short Line" (56.40 miles); Belleville & Eldorado, (50.20 miles); Belleville & Carondelet (17.30 miles); St. Louis Southern and branches (47.27 miles), and Chicago, St. Louis & Paducah Railway (53.50 miles). All these have been leased, since the close of the fiscal year 1895, to the Illinois Central. (For sketches of these several roads see headings of each.)

ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO & ST. PAUL RAILROAD, (Bluff Line), a line running from Springfield to Granite City, Ill., (opposite St. Louis), 102.1 miles, with a branch from Lock Haven to Grafton, Ill., 8.4 miles—total length of line in Illinois, 110.5 miles. The track is of standard gauge, laid with 56 to 70-pound steel rails.—(HISTORY.) The road was originally incorporated under the name of the St. Louis, Jerseyville & Springfield Railroad, built from Bates to Grafton in 1882, and absorbed by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company; was surrendered by the receivers of the latter in 1886, and passed under the control of the bond-holders, by whom it was transferred to a corporation known as the St. Louis & Central Illinois Railroad Company. In June, 1887, the St. Louis, Alton & Springfield Railroad Company was organized, with power to build extensions from Newbern to Alton, and from Bates to Springfield, which was done. In October, 1890, a receiver was appointed, followed by a reorganization under the present name (St. Louis, Chicago & St. Paul). Default was made on the interest and, in June following, it was again placed in the hands of receivers, by whom it was operated until 1898. The total earnings and income for the fiscal year 1897-98 were $318,815, operating expenses, $373,270; total capitalization, $4,833,536, of which, $1,500,000 was in the form of stock and $1,235,000 in income bonds.

ST. LOUIS, INDIANAPOLIS & EASTERN RAILROAD, a railroad line 90 miles in length, extending from Switz City, Ind., to Effingham, Ill.—56 miles being within the State of Illinois. It is of standard gauge and the track laid chiefly with iron rails.—(HISTORY.) The original corporation was chartered in 1869 as the Springfield, Effingham & Quincy Railway Company. It was built as a narrow-gauge line by the Cincinnati, Effingham & Quincy Construction Company, which went into the hands of a receiver in 1878. The road was completed by the receiver in 1880, and, in 1885, restored to the Construction Company by the discharge of the receiver. For a short time it was operated in connection with the Bloomfield Railroad of Indiana, but was reorganized in 1886 as the Indiana & Illinois Southern Railroad, and the gauge changed to standard in 1887. Having made default in the payment of interest, it was sold under foreclosure in 1890 and purchased in the interest of the bond-holders, by whom it was conveyed to the St. Louis, Indianapolis & Eastern Railroad Company, in whose name the line is operated. Its business Illinois, and a largely local. The total earnings in 1899 were $1,701,852 and the expenditures $697,112. Its capital stock is $10,000,000, bonded debt, $975,000 (other railroad mess), increasing the total capital investment to $10,736,736.

ST. LOUIS, PEORIA & NORTHERN RAILWAY, known as "Peoria Short Line" a corporation organized Feb. 29, 1896, to take over and unite the properties of the St. Louis & Eastern, the St. Louis & Peoria and the North and South Railways, and to extend the same due north from Springfield to Peoria (60 miles), and thence to Fulton or East Clinton, Ill., on the Upper Mississippi. The line extends from Springfield to Glen Carbon (84.46 miles), with trackage facilities over the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad and the Merchants' Terminal Bridge (8 miles) to St. Louis.—HISTORY. This road has been made up of three sections or divisions. (1) The initial section of the line was constructed under the name of the St. Louis & Chicago Railroad of Illinois, incorporated in 1885, and opened from Mount Olive to Alhambra in 1887. It passed into the hands of a receiver, was sold under foreclosure in 1889, and reorganized, in 1890, as the St. Louis & Peoria Railroad. The St. Louis & Eastern, chartered in 1889, built the line from Glen Carbon to Marine, which was opened in 1893; the following year bought the St. Louis & Peoria line, and, in 1895 constructed the link (8 miles) between Alhambra and Marine. (2) The North & South Railroad Company of Illinois, organized in 1890, as successor to the St. Louis & Chicago Railway Company, proceeded in the construction of the line (50.46 miles) from Mt. Olive to Springfield, which was subsequently leased to the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis, then under the management of the Jacksonville, Louisville & St. Louis Railway. The latter corporation having defaulted, the property passed into the hands of a receiver. By expiration of the lease in December, 1896, the property reverted to the proprietary Company, which took possession, Jan. 1, 1896. The St. Louis & Eastern then bought the line outright, and it was incorporated as a part of the new organization under the name of the St. Louis, Peoria & Northern Railway the North & South Railroad going out of existence. In May 1899, the St. Louis Peoria & Northern was sold to the reorganized Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, to be operated as a short line between Peoria & St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, ROCK ISLAND & CHICAGO RAILROAD. (See Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.)

ST. LOUIS SOUTHERN RAILROAD, a line running from Pinckneyville, Ill., via Murphysboro, to Carbondale. The company is also the lessee of the Carbondale & Shawneetown Railroad, extending from Carbondale to Marion, 17.5 miles—total, 50.5 miles. The track is of standard gauge and laid with 56 and 60-pound steel rails. The company was organized in August, 1886, to succeed to the property of the St. Louis Coal Railroad (organized in 1879) and the St. Louis Central Railway; and was leased for 99 years from Dec. 1, 1886, to the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad Company, at an annual rental equal to thirty per cent of the gross earnings, with a minimum guarantee of $32,000, which is sufficient to pay the interest on the first mortgage bonds. During the year 1896 this line passed under lease from the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad Company, into the hands of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

ST. LOUIS, SPRINGFIELD & VINCENTS RAILROAD COMPANY, a corporation organized in July, 1895, to take over the property of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway in the State of Illinois, known as the Ohio & Mississippi and the Springfield & Illinois Southeastern Railways—the former extending from Vincennes, Ind., to East St. Louis, and the latter from Beardstown to Shawneetown. The property was sold under foreclosure, at Cincinnati, July 10, 1899, and transferred, for purposes of reorganization, into the hands of the new corporation, July 28, 1899. (For history of the several lines see Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway.)

ST. LOUIS, VANDALIA & TERRE HAUTE RAILROAD. This line extends from East St. Louis eastward across the State, to the Indiana State line, a distance of 158.3 miles. The Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad Company is the lessee. The track is single, of standard gauge, and laid with steel rails. The outstanding capital stock, in 1898, was $3,924,058, the bonded debt, $4,496,000, and the floating debt, $218,480.—HISTORY. The St. Louis, Vandalia & Terre Haute Railroad was chartered in 1865, opened in 1870 and leased to the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad, for itself and the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

ST. LOUIS & CAIRO RAILROAD, extends from East St. Louis to Cairo, Ill., 151.6 miles, with a branch from Millstadt Junction to High Prairie, 9 miles. The track is of standard gauge and laid mainly with steel rails.—(HISTORY.) The original charter was granted to the Cairo & St. Louis Railroad Company, Feb. 16, 1865, and the road opened, March 1, 1875. Subsequently it passed into the hands of a receiver, was sold under foreclosure, July 14, 1881, and was taken charge of by a new company under its present name, Feb. 1, 1882. On Feb. 1, 1886, it was leased to the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company for forty-five years, and now constitutes the Illinois Division of that line, giving it a connection with St. Louis. ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL, located in Chicago. It was chartered in 1865, its incorporators, in their initial statement, substantially declaring their object to be the establishment of a free hospital under the control of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which should be open to the afflicted poor, without distinction of race or creed. The hospital was opened on a small scale, but steadily increased until 1879, when re-incorporation was effected under the general law. In 1885 a new building was erected on land donated for that purpose, at a cost exceeding $150,000, exclusive of $20,000 for furnishing. While its primary object has been to afford accommodation, with medical and surgical care, gratuitously, to the needy poor, the institution also provides a considerable number of comfortable, well-furnished private rooms for patients who are able and willing to pay for the same. It contains an amphitheater for surgical operations and clinics, and has a free dispensary for out-patients. During the past few years important additions have been made, the number of beds increased, and provision made for a training school for nurses. The medical staff (1896) consists of thirteen physicians and surgeons and two pathologists.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL, a young ladies' seminary, under the patronage of the Episcopal Church, at Knoxville, Knox County, Ill., was incorporated in 1858. In 1898 had a faculty of fourteen teachers, giving instruction to 113 pupils. The branches taught include the classics, the sciences, fine arts, music and preparatory studies. The institution has a library of 2,200 volumes, and owns property valued at $130,500, of which $100,000 is real estate.

STAGER, Anson, soldier and Telegraph Superintendent, was born in Ontario County, N. Y., April 20, 1825; at 16 years of age entered the service of Henry O'Reilly, a printer who afterwards became a pioneer in building telegraph lines, and with whom he became associated in various enterprises of this character. Having introduced several improvements in the construction of batteries and the arrangement of wires, he was, in 1852, made General Superintendent of the principal lines in the West, and, on the organization of the Western Union Company, was retained in this position. Early in the Civil War he was entrusted with the management of telegraph lines in Southern Ohio and along the Virginia border, and, in October following, was appointed General Superintendent of Government telegraphs, remaining in this position until September, 1868, his services being recognized in his promotion to a brevet Brigadier-Generalship of Volunteers. In 1869 General Stager returned to Chicago and, in addition to his duties as General Superintendent, engaged in the promotion of a number of enterprises connected with the manufacture of electrical appliances and other branches of the business. One of these was the consolidation of the telephone companies, of which he became President, as also of the Western Edison Electric Light Company, besides being a Director in several other corporations. Died, in Chicago, March 26, 1885.

STANDISH, John Van Ness, a lineal descendant of Capt. Miles Standish, the Pilgrim leader, was born at Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 26, 1825. His early years were spent on a farm, but a love of knowledge and books became his ruling passion, and he devoted several years to study, in the "Liberal Institute" at Lebanon, N. H., finally graduating, with the degree of A. B., at Norwich University in the class of 1847. Later, he received the degree of A. M., in due course, from his Alma Mater in 1855; that of Ph. D. from Knox College, in 1883, of LL. D. from St. Lawrence University in 1893, and from Norwich, in 1898. Dr. Standish chose the profession of a teacher, and has spent over fifty years, in his pursuit in connection with private and public schools and the College, of which more than forty years were as Professor and President of Lombard University at Galesburg. He has also lectured and conducted Teachers' Institutes all over the State, and, in 1859, was elected President of the State Teachers' Association. He made three visits to the Old World—in 1879, '82-'83, and '91-'92—and, during his second trip, traveled over 40,000 miles, visiting nearly every country of Europe, including the "Land of the Midnight Sun," besides Northern Africa from the Mediterranean to the Desert of Sahara, Egypt, Palestine, Syria and Asia Minor. A lover of art, he has visited nearly all the principal museums and picture galleries of the world. In politics he is a Republican, and, in opposition to many college men, a firm believer in the doctrine of protection. In religion, he is a Universalist.

STAPP, James T. B., State Auditor, was born in Woodford County, Ky., April 13, 1804; at the age of 12 accompanied his widowed mother to Kaskaskia, Ill., where she settled; before he was 20 years old, was employed as a clerk in the office of the State Auditor, and, upon the resignation of that officer, was appointed his successor, being twice thereafter elected by the Legislature, serving nearly five years. He resigned the auditorship to accept the Presidency of the State Bank at Vandalia, which post he filled for thirteen years; acted as Aid-de-camp on Governor Reynolds' staff in the Black Hawk War, and served as Adjutant of the Third Illinois Volunteers during the war with Mexico. President Taylor appointed Mr. Stapp Receiver of the United States Land Office at Vandalia, which office he held during the Fillmore administration, resigning in 1855. Two years later he removed to Decatur, where he continued to reside until his death in 1876. A handsome Methodist chapel, erected by him in that city, bears his name.

STARK COUNTY, an interior county in the northern half of the State, lying west of the Illinois River; has an area of 290 square miles. It has a rich, alluvial soil, well watered by numerous small streams. The principal industries are agriculture and stock-raising, and the chief towns are Toulon and Wyoming. The county was erected from Putnam and Knox in 1829, and named in honor of General Stark, of Revolutionary fame. The earliest settler was Isaac B. Essex, who built a cabin on Spoon River, in 1828, and gave his name to a township. Of other pioneer families, the Burwells, Smiths, Spencers and Eastmans came from New England, the Thomases, Moores, Holgates, Fullers and Whittakers from Pennsylvania; the Coxes from Ohio, the Perrys and Parkers from Virginia; the McClanahans from Kentucky; the Hendersons from Tennessee; the Lees and Hazens from New Jersey; the Halls from England, and the Turnbulls and Olivers from Scotland. The pioneer church was the Congregational at Toulon. Population (1880), 11,367; (1890), 9,982; (1900), 10,186.

STARVED ROCK, a celebrated rock or cliff on the south side of Illinois River, in La Salle County, upon which the French explorer, La Salle, and his lieutenant, Tonty, erected a fort in 1682, which they named Fort St. Louis. It was one mile north of the supposed location of the Indian village of La Vantum, the metropolis, so to speak, of the Illinois Indians about the time of the arrival of the first French explorers. The population of this village, in 1680, according to Father Membre, was some seven or eight thousand. Both La Vantum and Fort St. Louis were repeatedly attacked by the Iroquois. The Illinois were temporarily driven from La Vantum, but the French, for the time being, successfully defended their fortification. In 1702 the fort was abandoned as a military post, but continued to be used as a French trading-post until 1718, when it was burned by Indians. The Illinois were not again molested until 1722, when the Foxes made an unsuccessful attack upon them. The larger portion of the tribe, however, resolved to cast in their fortunes with other tribes on the Mississippi River. Those who remained fell an easy prey to the foes by whom they were surrounded. In 1769 they were attacked from the north by tribes who desired to avenge the murder of Pontiac. Finding themselves hard pressed, they betook themselves to the bluff where Fort St. Louis had formerly stood. Here they were besieged for twelve days, when, destitute of food or water, they made a gallant but hopeless sortie. According to a tradition handed down among the Indians, all were massacred by the besiegers in an attempt to escape by night, except one half-breed, who succeeded in evading his pursuers. This sanguinary catastrophe has given the rock its popular name. Elmer Baldwin, in his History of La Salle County (1877), says: "The bones of the victims lay scattered about the cliff in profusion after the settlement by the whites, and are still found mingled plentifully with the soil." (See La Salle, Robert Cavalier; Tonty; Fort St. Louis.)

STARNE, Alexander. Secretary of State and State Treasurer, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 21, 1813; in the spring of 1836 removed to Illinois, settling at Griggsville, Pike County, where he opened a general store. From 1839 to '42 he served as Commissioner of Pike County, and, in the latter year, was elected to the lower house of the General Assembly, and re-elected in 1844. Having, in the meanwhile, disposed of his store at Griggsville and removed to Pittsfield, he was appointed, by Judge Purple, Clerk of the Circuit Court, and elected to the same office for four years, when it was made elective. In 1852 he was elected Secretary of State, when he removed to Springfield, returning to Griggsville at the expiration of his term in 1857, to assume the Presidency of the old Hannibal and Naples Railroad (now a part of the Wabash system). He represented Pike and Brown Counties in the Constitutional Convention of 1862, and the same year was elected State Treasurer. He thereupon again removed to Springfield, where he resided until his death, being, with his sons, extensively engaged in coal mining. In 1870, and again in 1873, he was elected State Senator from Sangamon County. He died at Springfield, March 31, 1886.

STATE BANK OF ILLINOIS. The first legislation, having for its object the establishment of a bank within the territory which now constitutes the State of Illinois, was the passage, by the Territorial Legislature of 1816, of an act incorporating the "Bank of Illinois at Shawneetown, with branches at Edwardsville and Kaskaskia." In the Second General Assembly of the State (1820) an act was passed, over the Governor's veto and in defiance of the adverse judgment of the Council of Revision, establishing a State Bank at Vandalia with branches at Shawneetown, Edwardsville, and Brownsville in Jackson County. This was, in effect, a rechartering of the banks at Shawneetown and Edwardsville. So far as the former is concerned, it seems to have been well managed; but the official conduct of the officers of the latter, on the basis of charges made by Governor Edwards in 1826, was made the subject of a legislative investigation, which (although it resulted in nothing) seems to have had some basis of fact, in view of the losses finally sustained in winding up its affairs—that of the General Government amounting to $54,000. Grave charges were made in this connection against men who were then, or afterwards became, prominent in State affairs, including one Justice of the Supreme Court and one (still later) a United States Senator. The experiment was disastrous, as, ten years later (1831), it was found necessary for the State to incur a debt of $100,000 to redeem the outstanding circulation. Influenced, however, by the popular demand for an increase in the "circulating medium," the State continued its experiment of becoming a stockholder in banks managed by its citizens, and accordingly we find it, in 1835, legislating in the same direction for the establishing of a central "Bank of Illinois" at Springfield, with branches at other points as might be required, not to exceed six in number. One of these branches was established at Vandalia and another at Chicago, furnishing the first banking institution of the latter city. Two years later, when the State was entering upon its scheme of internal improvement, laws were enacted increasing the capital stock of these banks to $4,000,000 in the aggregate. Following the example of similar institutions elsewhere, they suspended specie payments a few months later, but were protected by "stay laws" and other devices until 1842, when the internal improvement scheme having been finally abandoned, they fell in general collapse. The State ceased to be a stock-holder in 1843, and the banks were put in course of liquidation, though it required several years to complete the work.

STATE CAPITALS. The first State capital of Illinois was Kaskaskia, where the first Territorial Legislature convened, Nov. 25, 1812. At that time there were but five counties in the State—St. Clair and Randolph being the most important, and Kaskaskia being the county-seat of the latter. Illinois was admitted into the Union as a State in 1818, and the first Constitution provided that the seat of government should remain at Kaskaskia until removed by legislative enactment. That instrument, however, made it obligatory upon the Legislature, at its first session, to petition Congress for a grant of not more than four sections of land, on which should be erected a town, which should remain the seat of government for twenty years. The petition was duly presented and granted; and, in accordance with the power granted by the Constitution, a Board of five Commissioners selected the site of the present city of Vandalia, then a point in the wilderness twenty miles north of any settlement. But so great was the faith of speculators in the future of the proposed city, that town lots were soon selling at $100 to $780 each. The Commissioners, in obedience to law, erected a plain two-story frame building—scarcely more than a commodious shanty—to which the State offices were removed in December, 1820. This building was burned Dec. 9, 1823, and a brick structure erected in its place. Later when the question of a second removal of the capital began to be agitated, the citizens of Vandalia assumed the risk of erecting a new brick State House, costing $16,000. Of this amount $6,000 was reimbursed by the Governor from the contingent fund, and the balance ($10,000) was appropriated in 1837, when the seat of government was removed to Springfield, by vote of the Tenth General Assembly on the fourth ballot. The other places receiving the principal vote at the time of the removal to Springfield, were Jacksonville, Vandalia, Peoria, Alton and Eliopolis—Springfield receiving the largest vote at each ballot. The law removing the capital appropriated $50,000 from the State Treasury, provided that a like amount should be raised by private subscription and guaranteed by bond, and that at least two acres of land should be donated as a site. Two State Houses have been erected at Springfield, the first cost of the present one (including furnishing) having been a little in excess of $1,000,000. Abraham Lincoln, who was a member of the Legislature from Sangamon County at the time, was an influential factor in securing the removal of the capital to Springfield.

STATE DEBT. The State debt, which proved so formidable a burden upon the State of Illinois for a generation and, for a part of that period, seriously checked its prosperity, was the direct outgrowth of the internal improvement scheme entered upon in 1837. (See Internal Improvement Policy.) At the time this enterprise was undertaken the aggregate debt of the State was less than $100,000—accumulated within the preceding six years. Two years later (1838) it had increased to over $6,500,000, while the total valuation of real and personal property, for the purposes of taxation, was less than $60,000,000, and the aggregate receipts of the State treasury, for the same year, amounted to less than $150,000. At the same time the disbursements, for the support of the State Government alone, had grown to more than twice the receipts. This disparity continued until the declining credit of the State forced upon the managers of public affairs an involuntary economy, when the means could no longer be secured for more lavish expenditures. The first bonds issued at the inception of the internal improvement scheme sold at a premium of 5 per cent, but rapidly declined until they were hawked in the markets of New York and London at a discount, in some cases falling into the hands of brokers who failed before completing their contracts, thus causing a direct loss to the State. If the internal improvement scheme was ill-advised, the time chosen to carry it into effect was most unfortunate, as it came simultaneously with the panic of 1837, rendering the disaster all the more complete. Of the various works undertaken by the State, only the Illinois & Michigan Canal brought a return, all the others resulting in more or less complete loss. The internal improvement scheme was abandoned in 1839-40, but not until State bonds exceeding $13,000,000 had been issued. For two years longer the State struggled with its embarrassments, increased by the failure of the State Bank in February, 1842, and, by that of the Bank of Illinois at Shawneetown, a few months later, with the proceeds of more than two and a half millions of the State's bonds in their possession. Thus left without credit, or means even of paying the accruing interest, there were those who regarded the State as hopelessly bankrupt, and advocated repudiation as the only means of escape. Better counsels prevailed, however, the Constitution of 1848 put the State on a basis of strict economy in the matter of salaries and general expenditures, with restrictions upon the Legislature in reference to incurring indebtedness, while the beneficent "two-mill tax" gave assurance to its creditors that its debts would be paid. While the growth of the State, in wealth and population, had previously been checked by the fear of excessive taxation, it now entered upon a new career of prosperity, in spite of its burdens—its increase in population, between 1850 and 1860, amounting to over 100 per cent. The movement of the State debt after 1840—when the internal improvement scheme was abandoned—chiefly by accretions of unpaid interest, has been estimated as follows: 1842, $15,637,350, 1841, $14,633,969; 1846, $16,389,817; 1848, $16,661,795. It reached its maximum in 1853—the first year of Governor Matteson's administration—when it was officially reported at $16,724,177. At this time the work of extinguishment began, and was prosecuted under successive administrations, except during the war, when the vast expense incurred in sending troops to the field caused an increase. During Governor Bissell's administration, the reduction amounted to over $3,000,000; during Oglesby's, to over five and a quarter million, besides two and a quarter million paid on interest. In 1880 the debt had been reduced to $281,659.11, and, before the close of 1882 it had been entirely extinguished, except a balance of $18,500 in bonds, which, having been called in years previously and never presented for

STATE GUARDIANS FOR GIRLS, a bureau organized for the care of female juvenile delinquents, by act of June 2, 1893. The Board consists of seven members, nominated by the Executive and confirmed by the Senate, and who constitute a body politic and corporate. Not more than two of the members may reside in the same Congressional District and, of the seven members, four must be women. (See also Home for Female Juvenile Offenders.) The term of office is six years.

STATE HOUSE, located at Springfield. Its construction was begun under an act passed by the Legislature in February, 1867, and completed in 1887. It stands in a park of about eight acres, donated to the State by the citizens of Springfield. A provision of the State Constitution of 1870 prohibited the expenditure of any sum in excess of $3,500,000 in the erection and furnishing of the building, without previous approval of such additional expenditure by the people. This amount proving insufficient, the Legislature, at its session of 1885, passed an act making an additional appropriation of $531,712, which having been approved by popular vote at the general election of 1886, the expenditure was made and the capitol completed during the following year, thus raising the total cost of construction and furnishing to a little in excess of $4,000,000. The building is cruciform as to its ground plan, and classic in its style of architecture; its extreme dimensions (including porticoes), from north to south, being 379 feet, and, from east to west, 286 feet. The walls are of dressed Joliet limestone, while the porticoes, which are spacious and lofty, are of sandstone, supported by polished columns of gray granite. The three stories of the building are surmounted by a Mansard roof, with two turrets and a central dome of stately dimensions. Its extreme height, to the top of the iron flag-staff, which rises from a lantern springing from the dome, is 364 feet.

STATE NORMAL UNIVERSITY, an institution for the education of teachers, organized under an act of the General Assembly, passed Feb. 18, 1857. This act placed the work of organization in the hands of a board of fifteen persons, which was styled "The Board of Education of the State of Illinois," and was constituted as follows: C. B. Denio of Jo Daviess County; Simeon Wright of Lee; Daniel Wilkins of McLean; Charles E. Hovey of Peoria; George P. Rex of Pike; Samuel W. Moulton of Shelby; John Gillespie of Jasper; George Bunsen of St. Clair; Wesley Sloan of Pope; Ninian W. Edwards of Sangamon; John R. Elen of Moultrie; Flavel Moseley and William Wells of Cook; Albert R. Shannon of White; and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, ex-officio. The object of the University, as defined in the organizing law, is to qualify teachers for the public schools of the State, and the course of instruction to be given embraces "the art of teaching, and all branches which pertain to a common-school education; in the elements of the natural sciences, including agricultural chemistry, animal and vegetable physiology; in the fundamental laws of the United States and of the State of Illinois in regard to the rights and duties of citizens, and such other studies as the Board of Education may, from time to time, prescribe." Various cities competed for the location of the institution, Bloomington being finally selected, its bid, including 160 acres of land, being estimated as equivalent to $141,725. The corner-stone was laid on September 29, 1857, and the first building was ready for permanent occupancy in September, 1860. Previously, however, it had been sufficiently advanced to permit of its being used, and the first commencement exercises were held on June 29 of the latter year. Three years earlier, the academic department had been organized under the charge of Charles E. Hovey. The first cost, including furniture, etc., was not far from $200,000. Gratuitous instruction is given to two pupils from each county, and to three from each Senatorial District. The departments are: Grammar school, high school, normal department and model school, all of which are overcrowded. The whole number of students in attendance on the institution during the school year, 1897-98, was 1,197, of whom 891 were in the normal department and 306 in the practice school department, including representatives from 86 counties of the State, with a few pupils from other States on the payment of tuition. The teaching faculty (including the President and Librarian) for the same year, was made up of twenty-six members—twelve ladies and fourteen gentlemen. The expenditures for the year 1897-98 aggregated $47,626.92, against $66,528.69 for 1896-97. Nearly $22,000 of the amount expended during the latter year was on account of the construction of a gymnasium building.

STATE PROPERTY. The United States Census of 1890 gave the value of real and personal property belonging to the State as follows: Public lands, $328,000; buildings, $22,164,000; miscellaneous property, $2,650,000—total, $25,142,000. The land may be subdivided thus: Camp-grounds of the Illinois National Guard near Springfield (donated), $40,000; Illinois and Michigan Canal, $108,000; Illinois University lands, in Illinois (donated by the General Government), $41,000; in Minnesota (similarly donated), $79,000. The buildings comprise those connected with the charitable, penal and educational institutions of the State; besides the State Arsenal, two buildings for the use of the Appellate Courts (at Ottawa and Mount Vernon), the State House, the Executive Mansion, and locks and dams erected at Henry and Copperas Creek. Of the miscellaneous property, $120,000 represents the equipment of the Illinois National Guard; $1,959,000 the value of the movable property of public buildings, $550,000 the endowment fund of the University of Illinois; and $21,000 the movable property of the Illinois & Michigan Canal. The figures given relative to the value of the public buildings include only the first appropriations for their erection. Considerable sums have since been expended upon some of them in repairs, enlargements and improvements.

STATE TREASURERS. The only Treasurer of Illinois during the Territorial period was John Thomas, who served from 1812 to 1818, and became the first incumbent under the State Government. Under the Constitution of 1818 the Treasurer was elected, biennially, by joint vote of the two Houses of the General Assembly; by the Constitution of 1848, this officer was made elective by the people for the same period, without limitations as to number of terms; under the Constitution of 1870, the manner of election and duration of term are unchanged, but the incumbent is ineligible to re-election, for two years from expiration of the term for which he may have been chosen. The following is a list of the State Treasurers, from the date of the admission of the State into the Union down to the present time (1899), with the date and duration of the term of each. John Thomas, 1818-19; Robert K. McLaughlin, 1819-23; Abner Field, 1823-27; James Hall, 1827-31; John Dement, 1831-36; Charles Gregory, 1836-37; John D. Whiteside, 1837-41; Milton Carpenter, 1841-48; John Moore, 1848-57; James Miller, 1857-59; William Butler, 1859-63; Alexander Starne, 1863-65; James H. Beveridge, 1865-67; George W. Smith, 1867-69; Erastus N. Bates, 1869-73; Edward Rutz, 1873-77; Thomas S. Ridgway, 1877-79; Edward Rutz, 1877-79; John C. Smith, 1879-81; Edward Rutz, 1881-83; John C. Smith, 1883-85; Jacob Gross, 1885-87; John R. Tanner, 1887-89; Charles Becker, 1889-91; Edward S. Wilson, 1891-93; Rufus N. Ramsay, 1893-95; Henry Wulff, 1895-97; Henry L. Hertz, 1897-99; Floyd K. Whittemore, 1899—.

STAUNTON, a village in the southeast corner of Macoupin County, on the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis and the Wabash Railways; is 36 miles northeast of St. Louis, and 14 miles southwest of Litchfield. Agriculture and coal-mining are the industries of the surrounding region. Staunton has two banks, eight churches and a weekly newspaper. Population (1880), 1,358; (1890), 2,209; (1900), 2,786.

STEEL PRODUCTION. In the manufacture of steel, Illinois has long ranked as the second State in the Union in the amount of its output, and, during the period between 1880 and 1890, the increase in production was 241 per cent. In 1880 there were but six steel works in the State; in 1890 these had increased to fourteen; and the production of steel of all kinds (in tons of 2,000 pounds) had risen from 254,569 tons to 868,250. Of the 3,837,039 tons of Bessemer steel ingots, or direct castings, produced in the United States in 1890, 22 per cent were turned out in Illinois, nearly all the steel produced in the State being made by that process. From the tonnage of ingots, as given above, Illinois produced 622,260 pounds of steel rails,—more than 30 per cent of the aggregate for the entire country. This fact is noteworthy, inasmuch as the competition in the manufacture of Bessemer steel rails, since 1880, has been so great that many rail mills have converted their steel into forms other than rails, experience having proved their production to any considerable extent, during the past few years, unprofitable except in works favorably located for obtaining cheap raw material, or operated under the latest and most approved methods of manufacture. Open-hearth steel is no longer made in Illinois, but the manufacture of crucible steel is slightly increasing, the output in 1890 being 445 tons, as against 130 in 1880. For purposes requiring special grades of steel the product of the crucible process will be always in demand, but the high cost of manufacture prevents it, in a majority of instances, from successfully competing in price with the other processes mentioned.

STEPHENSON, Benjamin, pioneer and early politician, came to Illinois from Kentucky in 1809, and was appointed the first Sheriff of Randolph County by Governor Edwards under the Territorial Government; afterwards served as a Colonel of Illinois militia during the War of 1812; represented Illinois Territory as Delegate in Congress, 1814-16, and, on his retirement from Congress, became Register of the Land Office at Edwardsville, finally dying at Edwardsville—Col. James W. (Stephenson), a son of the preceding, was a soldier during the Black Hawk War, afterwards became a prominent politician in the northwestern part of the State, served as Register of the Land Office at Galena and, in 1838, received the Democratic nomination for Governor, but withdrew before the election.

STEPHENSON, (Dr.) Benjamin Franklin, physician and soldier, was born in Wayne County, Ill., Oct. 30, 1822, and accompanied his parents, in 1825, to Sangamon County, where the family settled. His early educational advantages were meager, and he did not study his profession (medicine) until after reaching his majority, graduating from Rush Medical College, Chicago, in 1850. He began practice at Petersburg, but, in April, 1862, was mustered into the volunteer army as Surgeon of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry. After a little over two years service he was mustered out in June, 1864, when he took up his residence in Springfield, and, for a year, was engaged in the drug business there. In 1865 he resumed professional practice. He lacked tenacity of purpose, however, was indifferent to money, and always willing to give his own services and orders for medicine to the poor. Hence, his practice was not lucrative. He was one of the leaders in the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic (which see), in connection with which he is most widely known; but his services in its cause failed to receive, during his lifetime, the recognition which they deserved, nor did the organization promptly flourish, as he had hoped. He finally returned with his family to Petersburg. Died, at Rock Creek, Menard County, Ill., August 30, 1871.

STEPHENSON COUNTY, a northwestern county, with an area of 560 square miles. The soil is rich, productive and well timbered. Fruit-culture and stock-raising are among the chief industries. Not until 1827 did the aborigines quit the locality, and the county was organized, ten years later, and named for Gen. Benjamin Stephenson. A man named Kirker, who had been in the employment of Colonel Gratiot as a lead-miner, near Galena, is said to have built the first cabin within the present limits of what was called Burr Oak Grove, and set himself up as an Indian-trader in 1826, but only remained a short time. He was followed, the next year, by Oliver

W. Kellogg, who took Kirker's place, built a more pretentious dwelling and became the first permanent settler. Later came William Waddams, the Montagues, Baker, Kilpatrick, Preston, the Goddards, and others whose names are linked with the county's early history. The first house in Freeport was built by William Baker. Organization was effected in 1837, the total poll being eighty-four votes. The earliest teacher was Nelson Martin, who is said to have taught a school of some twelve pupils, in a house which stood on the site of the present city of Freeport. Population (1880), 31,963; (1890), 31,338; (1900), 34,933.

STERLING, a flourishing city on the north bank of Rock River, in Whiteside County, 109 miles west of Chicago, 29 miles east of Clinton, Iowa, and 52 miles east-northeast of Rock Island. It has ample railway facilities, furnished by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Sterling & Peoria, and the Chicago & Northwestern Railroads. It contains fourteen churches, an opera house, high and grade schools, Carnegie library, Government postoffice building, three banks, electric street and interurban car lines, electric and gas lighting, water-works, paved streets and sidewalks, fire department and four newspaper offices, two issuing daily editions. It has fine water-power, and is an important manufacturing center, its works turning out agricultural implements, carriages, paper, barbed-wire, school furniture, burial caskets, pumps, sash, doors, etc. It also has the Sterling Iron Works, besides foundries and machine shops. The river here flows through charming scenery. Pop (1890), 5,824; (1900), 6,309.

STEVENS, Bradford A., ex-Congressman, was born at Boscawen (afterwards Webster), N. H., Jan. 3, 1813. After attending schools in New Hampshire and at Montreal, he entered Dartmouth College, graduating therefrom in 1835. During the six years following, he devoted himself to teaching, at Hopkinsville, Ky., and New York City. In 1843 he removed to Bureau County, Ill., where he became a merchant and farmer. In 1868 he was chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and, in 1870, was elected to Congress, as an Independent Democrat, for the Fifth District.

STEVENS, Adlai E., ex-Vice-President of the United States, was born in Christian County, Ky., Oct. 23, 1835. In 1852 he removed with his parents to Bloomington, McLean County, Ill., where the family settled; was educated at the Illinois Wesleyan University and at Centre College, Ky., was admitted to the bar in 1858 and began practice at Metamora, Woodford County, where he was Master in Chancery, 1861-65, and State's Attorney, 1865-69. In 1864 he was candidate for Presidential Elector on the Democratic ticket. In 1869 he returned to Bloomington, where he has since resided. In 1874, and again in 1876, he was an unsuccessful candidate of his party for Congress, but was elected as a Greenback Democrat in 1878, though defeated in 1880 and 1882. In 1877 he was appointed by President Hayes a member of the Board of Visitors to West Point. During the first administration of President Cleveland (1885-89) he was First Assistant Postmaster General; was a member of the National Democratic Conventions of 1884 and 1892, being Chairman of the Illinois delegation the latter year. In 1892 he received his party's nomination for the Vice-Presidency, and was elected to that office, serving until 1897. Since retiring from office he has resumed his residence at Bloomington.

STEWART, Lewis, manufacturer and former Congressman, was born in Wayne County, Pa., Nov. 20, 1824, and received a common school education. At the age of 14 he accompanied his parents to Kendall County, Ill., where he afterwards resided, being engaged in farming and the manufacture of agricultural implements at Plano. He studied law but never practiced. In 1876 he was an unsuccessful candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket, being defeated by Shelby M. Cullom. In 1880 the Democrats of the Eighth Illinois District elected him to Congress. In 1892 he was again a candidate, but was defeated by his Republican opponent, Robert A. Childs, by the narrow margin of 27 votes, and, in 1894, was again defeated, this time being pitted against Albert J. Hopkins. Mr. Stewart died at his home at Plano, August 26, 1896.

STEWARDSON, a town of Shelby County, at the intersection of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railway with the Altamont branch of the Wabash, 12 miles southeast of Shelbyville; is in a grain and lumber region, has a bank and a weekly paper. Population, (1900), 677.

STICKNEY, William H., pioneer lawyer, was born in Baltimore, Md., Nov. 9, 1809, studied law and was admitted to the bar at Cincinnati in 1831, and, in Illinois in 1834, being at that time a resident of Shawneetown; was elected State's Attorney by the Legislature, in 1839, for the circuit embracing some fourteen counties in the southern and southeastern part of the State, for a time also, about 1835-36, officiated as editor of "The Gallatin Democrat," and "The Illinois Advertiser," published at Shawneetown. In 1846

Mr. Stickney was elected to the lower branch of the General Assembly from Gallatin County, and, twenty-eight years later—having come to Chicago in 1848—to the same body from Cook County, serving in the somewhat famous Twenty-ninth Assembly. He also held the office of Police Justice for some thirteen years, from 1860 onward. He lived to an advanced age, dying in Chicago, Feb. 14, 1898, being at the time the oldest surviving member of the Chicago bar.

STILES, Isaac Newton, lawyer and soldier, born at Suffield, Conn., July 16, 1833; was admitted to the bar at Lafayette, Ind., in 1855, became Prosecuting Attorney, a member of the Legislature and an effective speaker in the Fremont campaign of 1856; enlisted as a private soldier at the beginning of the war, went to the field as Adjutant, was captured at Malvern Hill, and, after six weeks' confinement in Libby prison, exchanged and returned to duty; was promoted Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel, and brevetted Brigadier-General for meritorious service. After the war he practiced his profession in Chicago, though almost totally blind. Died, Jan. 18, 1895.

STILLMAN, Stephen, first State Senator from Sangamon County, Ill., was a native of Massachusetts who came, with his widowed mother, to Sangamon County in 1820, and settled near Williamsville, where he became the first Postmaster in the first postoffice in the State north of the Sangamon River. In 1822, Mr. Stillman was elected as the first State Senator from Sangamon County, serving four years, and, at his first session, being one of the opponents of the pro-slavery Convention resolution. He died, in Peoria, somewhere between 1835 and 1840.

STILLMAN VALLEY, village in Ogle County, on Chicago Great Western and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railways; site of first battle Black Hawk War; has graded schools, four churches, a bank and a newspaper. Pop. 475.

STITES, Samuel, pioneer, was born near Mount Bethel, Somerset County, N. J., Oct. 31, 1776; died, August 16, 1839, on his farm, which subsequently became the site of the city of Trenton, in Clinton County, Ill. He was descended from John Stites, M.D., who was born in England in 1595, emigrated to America, and died at Hempstead, L. I., in 1717, at the age of 122 years. The family removed to New Jersey in the latter part of the seventeenth century. Samuel was a cousin of Benjamin Stites, the first white man to settle within the present limits of Cincinnati, and various members of the family were prominent in the settlement of the upper Ohio Valley as early as 1788. Samuel Stites married, Sept. 14, 1794, Martha Martin, daughter of Ephraim Martin, and grand-daughter of Col. Ephraim Martin, both soldiers of the New Jersey line during the Revolutionary War—with the last named of whom he had (in connection with John Cleves Symmes) been intimately associated in the purchase and settlement of the Miami Valley. In 1800 he removed to Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1803 to Greene County, and, in 1818, in company with his son-in-law, Anthony Wayne Casad, to St. Clair County, Ill., settling near Union Grove. Later, he removed to O'Fallon, and, still later, to Clinton County. He left a large family, several members of which became prominent pioneers in the movements toward Minnesota and Kansas.

STOLBRAND, Carlos John Mueller, soldier, was born in Sweden, May 11, 1821; at the age of 18, enlisted in the Royal Artillery of his native land, serving through the campaign of Schleswig-Holstein (1848); came to the United States soon after, and, in 1861, enlisted in the first battalion of Illinois Light Artillery, finally becoming Chief of Artillery under Gen. John A. Logan. When the latter became commander of the Fifteenth Army Corps, Col. Stolbrand was placed at the head of the artillery brigade; in February, 1865, was made Brigadier-General, and mustered out in January, 1866. After the war he went South, and was Secretary of the South Carolina Constitutional Convention of 1868. The same year he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago, and a Presidential Elector. He was an inventor and patented various improvements in steam engines and boilers; was also Superintendent of Public Buildings at Charleston, S. C., under President Harrison. Died, at Charleston, Feb. 3, 1894.

STONE, Daniel, early lawyer and legislator, was a native of Vermont and graduate of Middlebury College; became a member of the Springfield (Ill.) bar in 1833, and, in 1836, was elected to the General Assembly—being one of the celebrated "Long Nine" from Sangamon County, and joining Abraham Lincoln in his protest against a series of pro-slavery resolutions which had been adopted by the House. In 1837 he was a Circuit Court Judge and, being assigned to the north-western part of the State, removed to Galena, but was legislated out of office, when he left the State, dying a few years later, in Essex County, N. J.

STONE, Horatio O., pioneer, was born in Ontario (now Monroe) County, N. Y., Jan. 2, 1811; in boyhood learned the trade of shoemaker, and later acted as overseer of laborers on the Lackawanna Canal. In 1831, having located in Wayne County, Mich., he was drafted for the Black Hawk War, serving twenty-two days under Gen. Jacob Brown. In January, 1835, he came to Chicago and, having made a fortunate speculation in real estate in that early day, a few months later entered upon the grocery and provision trade, which he afterwards extended to grain; finally giving his chief attention to real estate, in which he was remarkably successful, leaving a large fortune at his death, which occurred in Chicago, June 20, 1877.

STONE, (Rev.) Luther, Baptist clergyman, was born in the town of Oxford, Worcester County, Mass., Sept. 26, 1815, and spent his boyhood on a farm. After acquiring a common school education, he prepared for college at Leicester Academy, and, in 1835, entered Brown University, graduating in the class of 1839. He then spent three years at the Theological Institute at Newton, Mass.; was ordained to the ministry at Oxford, in 1843, but, coming west the next year, entered upon evangelical work in Rock Island, Davenport, Burlington and neighboring towns. Later, he was pastor of the First Baptist Church at Rockford, Ill. In 1847 Mr. Stone came to Chicago and established "The Watchman of the Prairies," which survives today under the name of "The Standard," and has become the leading Baptist organ in the West. After six years of editorial work, he took up evangelistic work in Chicago, among the poor and criminal classes. During the Civil War he conducted religious services at Camp Douglas, Soldiers' Rest and the Marine Hospital. He was associated in the conduct and promotion of many educational and charitable institutions. He did much for the First Baptist Church of Chicago, and, during the latter years of his life, was attached to the Immanuel Baptist Church, which he labored to establish. Died, in July, 1890.

STONE, Melville E., journalist, banker, Manager of Associated Press, born at Hudson, Ill., August 18, 1848. Coming to Chicago in 1860, he graduated from the local high school in 1867, and, in 1870, acquired the sole proprietorship of a foundry and machine shop. Finding himself without resources after the great fire of 1871, he embarked in journalism, rising, through the successive grades of reporter, city editor, assistant editor and Washington correspondent, to the position of editor-in-chief of his own journal.

He was connected with various Chicago dailies between 1871 and 1875 and on Christmas Day of the latter year issued the first number of "The Chicago Daily News." He gradually disposed of his interest in this journal entirely severing his connection therewith in 1888. Since that date he has been engaged in banking in the city of Chicago, and is also General Manager of the Associated Press.

STONE, Samuel, philanthropist, was born at Chesterfield, Mass., Dec. 6, 1798, left an orphan at seven years of age, after a short term in Leicester Academy, and several years in a wholesale store in Boston, at the age of 19 removed to Rochester, N. Y., to take charge of interests in the "Holland Purchase," belonging to his father's estate; in 1843-49, was a resident of Detroit and interested in some of the early railroad enterprises centering there, but the latter year removed to Milwaukee, being there associated with Ezra Cornell in telegraph construction. In 1859 he became a citizen of Chicago, where he was one of the founders of the Chicago Historical Society, and a liberal patron of many enterprises of a public and benevolent character. Died, May 4, 1876.

STONE FORT, a village in the counties of Saline and Williamson. It is situated on the Cairo Division of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, 57 miles northeast of Cairo. Population (1900), 479.

STOREY, Wilbur F., journalist and newspaper publisher, was born at Salisbury, Vt., Dec. 19, 1819. He began to learn the printer's trade at 12, and, before he was 19, was part owner of a Democratic paper called "The Herald," published at La Porte, Ind. Later, he either edited or controlled journals published at Mishawaka, Ind., and Jackson and Detroit, Mich. In January, 1861, he became the principal owner of "The Chicago Times," then the leading Democratic organ of Chicago. His paper soon came to be regarded as the organ of the anti-war party throughout the Northwest, and, in June, 1863, was suppressed by a military order issued by General Burnside, which was subsequently revoked by President Lincoln. The net result was an increase in "The Times'" notoriety and circulation. Other charges, of an equally grave nature, relating to its sources of income, its character as a family newspaper, etc., were repeatedly made, but to all these Mr. Storey turned a deaf ear. He lost heavily in the fire of 1871, but, in 1872, appeared as the editor of "The Times," then destitute of political ties. About 1876 his health began to decline. Medical aid failed to afford relief, and, in August, 1884, he was adjudged to be of unsound mind, and his estate was placed in the hands of a conservator. On the 27th of the following October (1884), he died at his home in Chicago.

STORRS, Emery Alexander, lawyer, was born at Hinsdale, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., August 12, 1835, began the study of law with his father, later pursued a legal course at Buffalo, and, in 1853, was admitted to the bar; spent two years (1857-59) in New York City, the latter year removing to Chicago, where he attained great prominence as an advocate at the bar, as well as an orator on other occasions. Politically a Republican, he took an active part in Presidential campaigns, being a delegate-at-large from Illinois to the National Republican Conventions of 1868, '72, and '80, and serving as one of the Vice-Presidents in 1872. Erratic in habits and a master of epigram and repartee, many of his speeches are quoted with relish and appreciation by those who were his contemporaries at the Chicago bar. Died suddenly, while in attendance on the Supreme Court at Ottawa, Sept. 12, 1885.

STRAWN, Jacob, agriculturist and stock-dealer, born in Somerset County, Pa., May 30, 1800; removed to Licking County, Ohio, in 1817, and to Illinois, in 1831, settling four miles southwest of Jacksonville. He was one of the first to demonstrate the possibilities of Illinois as a live-stock state. Unpretentious and despising mere show, he illustrated the virtues of industry, frugality and honesty. At his death—which occurred August 23, 1865—he left an estate estimated in value at about $1,000,000, acquired by industry and business enterprise. He was a zealous Unionist during the war, at one time contributing $10,000 to the Christian Commission.

STREATOR, a city (laid out in 1868 and incorporated in 1882) in the southern part of La Salle County, 93 miles southwest of Chicago; situated on the Vermilion River and a central point for five railroads. It is surrounded by a rich agricultural country, and is underlain by coal seams (two of which are worked) and by shale and various clay products of value, adapted to the manufacture of fire and building brick, drain-pipe, etc. The city is thoroughly modern, having gas, electric lighting, street railways, water-works, a good fire-department, and a large, improved public park. Churches and schools are numerous, as are also fine public and private buildings. One of the chief industries is the manufacture of glass, including rolled-plate window-glass, flint and Bohemian ware and glass bottles. Other successful industries are foundries and machine shops, flour mills, and clay working establishments. There are several banks, and three daily and weekly papers are published here. The estimated property valuation, in 1884, was $12,000,000. Streator boasts some handsome public buildings, especially the Government post-office and the Carnegie public library building, both of which have been erected within the past few years. Pop. (1890), 11,414; (1900), 14,079.

STREET, Joseph M., pioneer and early politician, settled at Shawneetown about 1812, coming from Kentucky, though believed to have been a native of Eastern Virginia. In 1827 he was a Brigadier-General of militia, and appears to have been prominent in the affairs of that section of the State. His correspondence with Governor Edwards, about this time, shows him to have been a man of far more than ordinary education, with a good opinion of his merits and capabilities. He was a most persistent applicant for office, making urgent appeals to Governor Edwards, Henry Clay and other politicians in Kentucky, Virginia and Washington, on the ground of his poverty and large family. In 1827 he received the offer of the clerkship of the new county of Peoria, but, on visiting that region, was disgusted with the prospect; returning to Shawneetown, bought a farm in Sangamon County, but, before the close of the year, was appointed Indian Agent at Prairie du Chien. This was during the difficulties with the Winnebago Indians, upon which he made voluminous reports to the Secretary of War. Mr. Street was a son-in-law of Gen. Thomas Posey, a Revolutionary soldier, who was prominent in the early history of Indiana and its last Territorial Governor. (See Posey, (Gen.) Thomas.)

STREETER, Alson J., farmer and politician, was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1823; at the age of two years accompanied his father to Illinois, the family settling at Dixon, Lee County. He attended Knox College for three years, and, in 1849, went to California, where he spent two years in gold mining. Returning to Illinois, he purchased a farm of 240 acres near New Windsor, Mercer County, to which he has since added several thousand acres. In 1872 he was elected to the lower house of the Twenty-eighth General Assembly as a Democrat, but, in 1873, allied himself with the Greenback party, whose candidate for Congress he was in 1878, and for Governor in 1880, when he received nearly 3,000 votes more than his party's Presidential nominee, in Illinois.

In 1884 he was elected State Senator by a coalition of Greenbackers and Democrats in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, but acted as an independent throughout his entire term.

STRONG, William Emerson, soldier, was born at Granville, N. Y., in 1840; from 13 years of age, spent his early life in Wisconsin, studied law and was admitted to the bar at Racine in 1861. The same year he enlisted under the first call for troops, took part, as Captain of a Wisconsin Company, in the first battle of Bull Run; was afterwards promoted and assigned to duty as Inspector-General in the West, participated in the Vicksburg and Atlanta campaigns, being finally advanced to the rank of Brigadier-General. After some fifteen months spent in the position of Inspector-General of the Freedmen's Bureau (1865-66), he located in Chicago, and became connected with several important business enterprises, besides assisting, as an officer on the staff of Governor Cullom, in the organization of the Illinois National Guard. He was elected on the first Board of Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition, and, while making a tour of Europe in the interest of that enterprise, died, at Florence, Italy, April 10, 1891.

STUART, John Todd, lawyer and Congressman, born near Lexington, Ky., Nov. 10, 1807—the son of Robert Stuart, a Presbyterian minister and Professor of Languages in Transylvania University, and related, on the maternal side, to the Todd family, of whom Mrs. Abraham Lincoln was a member. He graduated at Centre College, Danville, in 1826, and, after studying law, removed to Springfield, Ill., in 1828, and began practice. In 1832 he was elected Representative in the General Assembly, re-elected in 1834, and, in 1836, defeated, as the Whig candidate for Congress, by Wm. L. May, though elected, two years later, over Stephen A. Douglas, and again in 1840. In 1837, Abraham Lincoln, who had been studying law under Mr. Stuart's advice and instruction, became his partner, the relationship continuing until 1841. He served in the State Senate, 1849-53, was the Bell-Everett candidate for Governor in 1860, and was elected to Congress, as a Democrat, for a third time, in 1862, but, in 1864, was defeated by Shelby M. Cullom, his former pupil. During the latter years of his life, Mr. Stuart was head of the law firm of Stuart, Edwards & Brown. Died, at Springfield, Nov. 28, 1885.

STURGES, Solomon, merchant and banker, was born at Fairfield, Conn., April 21, 1796, early manifested a passion for the sea and, in 1810, made a voyage, on a vessel of which his brother was captain, from New York to Georgetown, D. C., intending to continue it to Lisbon. At Georgetown he was induced to accept a position as clerk with a Mr. Williams, where he was associated with two other youths, as fellow-employees, who became eminent bankers and capitalists—W. W. Corcoran, afterwards the well-known banker of Washington, and George W. Peabody, who had a successful banking career in England, and won a name as one of the most liberal and public-spirited of philanthropists. During the War of 1812 young Sturges joined a volunteer infantry company, where he had, for comrades, George W. Peabody and Francis S. Key, the latter author of the popular national song, "The Star Spangled Banner." In 1814 Mr. Sturges accepted a clerkship in the store of his brother-in-law, Ebenezer Buckingham, at Putnam, Muskingum County, Ohio, two years later becoming a partner in the concern, where he developed that business capacity which laid the foundation for his future wealth. Before steamers navigated the waters of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, he piloted flat-boats, loaded with produce and merchandize, to New Orleans, returning overland. During one of his visits to that city, he witnessed the arrival of the "Washington," the first steamer to descend the Mississippi, as, in 1817, he saw the arrival of the "Walk in the Water" at Detroit, the first steamer to arrive from Buffalo—the occasion of his visit to Detroit being to carry funds to General Cass to pay off the United States troops. About 1849 he was associated with the construction of the Wabash & Erie Canal, from the Ohio River to Terre Haute, Ind., advancing money for the prosecution of the work, for which was reimbursed by the State. In 1854 he came to Chicago, and, in partnership with his brothers-in-law, C. P. and Alvah Buckingham, erected the first large grain-elevator in that city, on land leased from the Illinois Central Railroad Company, following it, two years later, by another of equal capacity. For a time, substantially all the grain coming into Chicago, by railroad, passed into these elevators. In 1857 he established the private banking house of Solomon Sturges & Sons, which, shortly after his death, under the management of his son, George Sturges, became the Northwestern National Bank of Chicago. He was intensely patriotic and, on the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, used of his means freely in support of the Government, equipping the Sturges Rifles, an independent company, at a cost of $20,000. He was also a subscriber to the first loan made by the Government, during this period, taking $100,000 in Government bonds. While devoted to his business, he was a hater of slams and corruption, and contributed freely to Christian and benevolent enterprises. Died, at the home of a daughter, at Zanesville, Ohio, Oct. 14, 1864, leaving a large fortune acquired by legitimate trade.

STURTEVANT, Julian Munson, D.D., LL.D., clergyman and educator, was born at Warren, Litchfield County, Conn., July 26, 1805; spent his youth in Summit County, Ohio, meanwhile preparing for college; in 1822, entered Yale College as the classmate of the celebrated Elizur Wright, graduating in 1826. After two years as Principal of an academy at Canaan, Conn., he entered Yale Divinity School, graduating there in 1829; then came west, and, after spending a year in superintending the erection of buildings, in December, 1830, as sole tutor, began instruction to a class of nine pupils in what is now Illinois College, at Jacksonville. Having been joined, the following year, by Dr. Edward Beecher as President, Mr. Sturtevant assumed the chair of Mathematics, Natural Philosophy and Astronomy, which he retained until 1844, when, by the retirement of Dr. Beecher, he succeeded to the offices of President and Professor of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy. Here he labored, incessantly and unselfishly, as a teacher during term time, and, as financial agent during vacations, in the interest of the institution of which he had been one of the chief founders, serving until 1876, when he resigned the Presidency, giving his attention, for the next ten years, to the duties of Professor of Mental Science and Science of Government, which he had discharged from 1870. In 1886 he retired from the institution entirely, having given to its service fifty-six years of his life. In 1863, Dr. Sturtevant visited Europe in the interest of the Union cause, delivering effective addresses at a number of points in England. He was a frequent contributor to the weekly religious and periodical press, and was the author of "Economics, or the Science of Wealth" (1876)—a text-book on political economy, and "Keys of Sect, or the Church of the New Testament" (1879), besides frequently occupying the pulpits of local and distant churches—having been early ordained a Congregational minister. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Missouri and that of LL.D. from Iowa University. Died, in Jacksonville, Feb. 11, 1886.—Julian M. (Sturtevant), Jr., son of the preceding, was born at Jacksonville, Ill., Feb. 3, 1834; fitted for college in the preparatory department of Illinois College and graduated from the college (proper) in 1854. After leaving college he served as teacher in the Jacksonville public schools one year, then spent a year as tutor in Illinois College, when he began the study of theology at Andover Theological Seminary, graduating there in 1859, meanwhile having discharged the duties of Chaplain of the Connecticut State's prison in 1858. He was ordained a minister of the Congregational Church at Hannibal, Mo., in 1860, remaining as pastor in that city nine years. He has since been engaged in pastoral work in New York City (1869-70), Ottawa, Ill., (1870-73); Denver, Colo., (1873-77); Grinnell, Iowa, (1877-84); Cleveland, Ohio, (1884-90); Galesburg, Ill., (1890-93), and Aurora, (1893-97). Since leaving the Congregational church at Aurora, Dr. Sturtevant has been engaged in pastoral work in Chicago. He was also editor of "The Congregationalist" of Iowa (1881-84), and, at different periods, has served as Trustee of Colorado, Marietta and Knox Colleges; being still an honored member of the Knox College Board. He received the degree of D.D. from Illinois College, in 1879.

SUBLETTE, a station and village on the Illinois Central Railroad, in Lee County, 8 miles northwest of Mendota. Population, (1900), 306.

SUFFRAGE, in general, the right or privilege of voting. The qualifications of electors (or voters), in the choice of public officers in Illinois, are fixed by the State Constitution (Art. VII.), except as to school officers, which are prescribed by law. Under the State Constitution the exercise of the right to vote is limited to persons who were electors at the time of the adoption of the Constitution of 1848, or who are native or naturalized male citizens of the United States, of the age of 21 years or over, who have been residents of the State one year, of the county ninety days, and of the district (or precinct) in which they offer to vote, 30 days. Under an act passed in 1891, women, of 21 years of age and upwards, are entitled to vote for school officers, and are also eligible to such offices under the same conditions, as to age and residence, as male citizens. (See Elections; Australian Ballot.)

SULLIVAN, a city and county-seat of Moultrie County, 25 miles southeast of Decatur and 14 miles northwest of Mattoon; is on three lines of railway. It is in an agricultural and stock-raising region; contains two State banks and four weekly newspapers. Population (1880), 1,305; (1890), 1,468; (1900), 2,399; (1900, est.), 3,100.

SULLIVAN, William K., journalist, was born at Waterford, Ireland, Nov. 10, 1843; educated at the Waterford Model School and in Dublin, came to the United States in 1863, and, after teaching for a time in Kane County, in 1864 enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers. Then, after a brief season spent in teaching and on a visit to his native land, he began work as a reporter on New York papers, later being employed on "The Chicago Tribune" and "The Evening Journal," on the latter, at different times, holding the position of city editor, managing editor and correspondent. He was also a Representative from Kane County in the Twenty-seventh Congress, probably, for three years a member of the Chicago Board of Education, and appointed United States Consul to the Bermudas by President Harrison, resigning in 1892. Died, in Chicago, January 17, 1899.

SULLIVANT, Michael Lucas, agriculturist, was born at Franklinton (a suburb of Columbus, Ohio), August 6, 1807; was educated at Ohio University and Centre College, Ky., and—after being engaged in the improvement of an immense tract of land inherited from his father near his birth-place, devoting much attention, meanwhile, to the raising of improved stock—in 1854 sold his Ohio lands and bought 80,000 acres, chiefly in Champaign and Piatt Counties, Ill., where he began farming on a larger scale than before. The enterprise proved a financial failure, and he was finally compelled to sell a considerable portion of his estate in Champaign County, known as Broad Lands, to John T. Alexander (see Alexander, John T.), retiring to a farm of 40,000 acres at Burr Oaks, Ill. He died, at Henderson, Ky., Jan. 29, 1879.

SUMMERFIELD, a village of St. Clair County, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway, 27 miles east of St. Louis; was the home of Gen. Fred. Hecker. Population (1900), 360.

SUMNER, a city of Lawrence County, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad, 19 miles west of Vincennes, Ind.; has a fine school house, four churches, two banks, two flour mills, telephones, and one weekly newspaper. Pop. (1890), 1,037; (1900), 1,268.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION. The office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction was created by act of the Legislature, at a special session held in 1854, its duties previous to that time, from 1845, having been discharged by the Secretary of State as Superintendent, ex-officio. The following is a list of the incumbents from the date of the formal creation of the office down to the present time (1899), with the date and duration of the term of each: Ninian W. Edwards (by appointment of the Governor), 1854-57; William H. Powell (by election), 1857-59; Newton Bateman, 1859-63; John P. Brooks, 1863-65; Newton Bateman, 1865-75; Samuel W. Eiter, 1875-79; James P. Slade, 1879-83; Henry Raab, 1883-87; Richard Edwards, 1887-91; Henry Raab, 1891-95; Samuel M. Inglis, 1895-98; James H. Freeman, June, 1898, to January, 1899 (by appointment of the Governor, to fill the unexpired term of Prof. Inglis, who died in office, June 1, 1898); Alfred Baylis, 1899—.

Previous to 1870 the tenure of the office was two years, but, by the Constitution adopted that year, it was extended to four years, the elections occurring on the even years between those for Governor and other State officers except State Treasurer.

SUPREME COURT, JUDGES OF THE. The following is a list of Justices of the Supreme Court of Illinois who have held office since the organization of the State Government, with the period of their respective incumbencies: Joseph Phillips, 1818-22 (resigned); Thomas C. Browne, 1818-48 (term expired on adoption of new Constitution); William P. Foster, Oct. 9, 1818, to July 7, 1819 (resigned); John Reynolds, 1818-25; Thomas Reynolds (vice Phillips), 1822-25; William Wilson (vice Foster) 1819-48 (term expired on adoption of new Constitution); Samuel D. Lockwood, 1825-48 (term expired on adoption of new Constitution); Theophilus W. Smith, 1825-42 (resigned); Thomas Ford, Feb. 15, 1841, to August 1, 1842 (resigned); Sidney Breese, Feb. 15, 1841, to Dec. 19, 1842 (resigned)—also (by re-elections), 1857-78 (died in office); Walter B. Seates, 1841-47 (resigned)—also (vice Trumbull), 1854-57 (resigned); Samuel H. Treat, 1841-55 (resigned); Stephen A. Douglas, 1841-42 (resigned); John D. Catton (vice Ford) August, 1842, to March, 1843—also (vice Robinson and by successive re-elections), May, 1843 to January, 1864 (resigned); James Semple (vice Breese), Jan. 11, 1843, to April 16, 1843 (resigned); Richard M. Young (vice Smith), 1843-47 (resigned); John M. Robinson (vice Ford), Jan. 14, 1843, to April 27, 1843 (died in office); Jesse B. Thomas, Jr., (vice Douglas), 1843-45 (resigned)—also (vice Young), 1847-48; James Shields (vice Semple), 1843-45 (resigned); Norman H. Purple (vice Thomas), 1843-48 (retired under Constitution of 1848); Gustavus Koerner (vice Shields), 1845-48 (retired by Constitution); William A. Denning (vice Seates), 1847-48 (retired by Constitution); Lyman Trumbull, 1848-53 (resigned); Ozias C. Skinner (vice Treat), 1855-58 (resigned); Pinkney H. Walker (vice Skinner), 1858-85 (deceased); Corydon Beckwith (by appointment, vice Catton), Jan. 7, 1864, to June 6, 1864; Charles B. Lawrence (one term), 1864-73; Anthony Thornton, 1870-73 (resigned); John M. Scott (two terms), 1870-88; Benjamin R. Sheldon (two terms), 1870-88; William K. McAllister, 1870-75 (resigned); John Scholfield (vice Thornton), 1873-93 (died); T. Lyle Dickey (vice McAllister), 1875-85 (died); David J. Baker (appointed, vice Breese), July 9, 1878, to June 2, 1879—also, 1888-97; John H. Mulkey, 1879-88; Damon G. Tunicliffe (appointed, vice Walker), Feb. 15, 1885, to June 1, 1885; Simeon P. Shope, 1885-94; Joseph M. Bailey, 1888-95 (died in office). The Supreme Court, as at present constituted (1899), is as follows: Carroll C. Boggs, elected, 1897; Jesse J. Phillips (vice Scholfield, deceased) elected, 1893, and re-elected, 1897; Jacob W. Wilkin, elected, 1888, and re-elected, 1897; Joseph N. Carter, elected, 1894; Alfred M. Craig, elected, 1873, and re-elected, 1882 and '91; James H. Cartwright (vice Bailey), elected, 1895, and re-elected, 1897; Benjamin D. Magruder (vice Dickey), elected, 1885, '88 and '97. The terms of Justices Boggs, Phillips, Wilkin, Cartwright and Magruder expire in 1906; that of Justice Carter on 1903; and Justice Craig's, in 1900. Under the Constitution of 1818, the Justices of the Supreme Court were chosen by joint ballot of the Legislature, but, under the Constitutions of 1848 and 1870, by popular vote for terms of nine years each. (See Judicial System; also sketches of individual members of the Supreme Court under their proper names.)

SURVEYS, EARLY GOVERNMENT. The first United States law passed on the subject of Government surveys was dated, May 20, 1785. After reserving certain lands to be allotted by way of pensions and to be donated for school purposes, it provided for the division of the remaining public lands among the original thirteen States. This, however, was, in effect, repealed by the Ordinance of 1788. The latter provided for a rectangular system of surveys which, with but little modification, has remained in force ever since. Briefly outlined, the system is as follows: Townships, six miles square, are laid out from principal bases, each township containing thirty-six sections of one square mile, numbered consecutively, the numeration to commence at the upper right hand corner of the township. The first principal meridian (84° 51' west of Greenwich), coincided with the line dividing Indiana and Ohio. The second (1° 37' farther west) had direct relation to surveys in Eastern Illinois. The third (89° 10' 30" west of Greenwich) and the fourth (90° 29' 56" west) governed the remainder of Illinois surveys. The first Public Surveyor was Thomas Hutchins, who was called "the geographer." (See Hutchins, Thomas.)

SWEET, (Gen.) Benjamin J., soldier, was born at Kirkland, Oneida County, N. Y., April 24, 1832; came with his father, in 1848, to Sheboygan, Wis., studied law, was elected to the State Senate in 1859, and, in 1861, enlisted in the Sixth Wisconsin Volunteers, being commissioned Major in 1862. Later, he resigned and, returning home, assisted in the organization of the Twenty-first and Twenty-second regiments, being elected Colonel of the former; and with it taking part in the campaign in Western Kentucky and Tennessee. In 1863 he was assigned to command at Camp Douglas, and was there on the exposure, in November, 1864, of the conspiracy to release the rebel prisoners. (See Camp Douglas Conspiracy.) The service which he rendered in the defeat of this bold and dangerous conspiracy evinced his courage and sagacity, and was of inestimable value to the country. After the war, General Sweet located at Lombard, near Chicago, was appointed Pension Agent at Chicago, afterwards served as Supervisor of Internal Revenue, and, in 1872, became Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington. Died, in Washington, Jan. 1, 1874. — Miss Ada C. (Sweet), for eight years (1874-82) the efficient Pension Agent at Chicago, is General Sweet's daughter.

SWEETSER, A. C., soldier and Department Commander G. A. R., was born in Oxford County, Maine, in 1839; came to Bloomington, Ill., in 1857; enlisted at the beginning of the Civil War in the Eighth Illinois Volunteers and, later, in the Thirty-ninth; at the battle of Wierbottom Church, Va., in June, 1864, was shot through both legs, necessitating the amputation of one of them. After the war he held several offices of trust, including those of City Collector of Bloomington and Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue for the Springfield District; in 1887 was elected Department Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic for Illinois. Died, at Bloomington, March 23, 1896.

SWETT, Leonard, lawyer, was born near Turner, Maine, August 11, 1825, was educated at Waterville College (now Colby University), but left before graduation, read law in Portland, and, while seeking a location in the West, enlisted in an Indiana regiment for the Mexican War, being attacked by climatic fever, was discharged before completing his term of enlistment. He soon after came to Bloomington, Ill., where he became the intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln and David Davis, traveling the circuit with them for a number of years. He early became active in State politics, was a member of the Republican State Convention of 1856, was elected to the lower house of the General Assembly in 1858, and, in 1860, was a zealous supporter of Mr. Lincoln as a Presidential Elector for the State-at-large. In 1862 he received the Republican nomination for Congress in his District, but was defeated. Removing to Chicago in 1865, he gained increased distinction as a lawyer, especially in the management of criminal cases. In 1872 he was a supporter of Horace Greeley for President, but later returned to the Republican party, and, in the National Republican Convention of 1888, presented the name of Judge Gresham for nomination for the Presidency. Died, June 8, 1889.

SWIGERT, Charles Philip, ex-Auditor of Public Accounts, was born in the Province of Baden, Germany, Nov. 27, 1843, brought by his parents to Chicago, Ill., in childhood, and, in his boyhood, attended the Scammon School in that city. In 1854 his family removed to a farm in Kankakee County, where, between the ages of 12 and 18, he assisted his father in "breaking" between 400 and 500 acres of prairie land. On the breaking out of the war, in 1861, although scarcely 18 years of age, he enlisted as a private in the Forty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and, in April, 1862, was one of twenty heroic volunteers who ran the blockade on the gunboat Carondelet, at Island No. 10, assisting materially in the reduction of that rebel stronghold, which resulted in the capture of 7,000 prisoners. At the battle of Farmington, Miss., during the siege of Corinth, in May, 1862, he had his right arm torn from its socket by a six-pound cannon-ball, compelling his retirement from the army. Returning home, after many weeks spent in hospital at Jefferson Barracks and Quincy, Ill., he received his final discharge, Dec. 21, 1862, spent a year in school, also took a course in Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College in Chicago, and having learned to write with his left hand, taught for a time in Kankakee County; served as letter-carrier in Chicago, and for a year as Deputy County Clerk of Kankakee County, followed by two terms (1867-69) as a student in the Soldiers' College at Fulton Ill. The latter year he entered upon the duties of Treasurer of Kankakee County, serving, by successive re-elections, until 1880, when he resigned to take the position of State Auditor, to which he was elected a second time in 1884. In all these positions Mr. Swigert has proved himself an upright, capable and high-minded public official. Of late years his residence has been in Chicago.

SWING, (Rev.) David, clergyman and pulpit orator, was born of German ancestry, at Cincinnati, Ohio, August 23, 1836. After 1837 (his father dying about this time), the family resided for a time at Reedsburgh, and, later, on a farm near Williamsburgh, in Clermont County, in the same State. In 1852, having graduated from the Miami (Ohio) University, he commenced the study of theology, but, in 1854, accepted the position of Professor of Languages in his Alma Mater, which he continued to fill for thirteen years. His first pastorate was in connection with the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Chicago, which he assumed in 1866. His church edifice was destroyed in the great Chicago fire, but was later rebuilt. As a preacher he was popular; but, in April, 1874, he was placed on trial, before an ecclesiastical court of his own denomination, on charges of heresy. He was acquitted by the trial court, but, before the appeal taken by the prosecution could be heard, he personally withdrew from affiliation with the denomination. Shortly afterward he became pastor of an independent religious organization known as the "Central Church," preaching, first at McVicker's Theatre and, afterward, at Central Music Hall, Chicago. He was a fluent and popular speaker on all themes, a frequent and valued contributor to numerous magazines, as well as the author of several volumes. Among his best known books are "Motives of Life," "Truths for To-day," and "Club Essays." Died, in Chicago, Oct. 3, 1891.

SYCAMORE, the county-seat of De Kalb County (founded in 1836), 56 miles west of Chicago, at the intersection of the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago Great Western Railroads; lies in a region devoted to agriculture, dairying and stock-raising. The city itself contains several factories, the principal products being agricultural implements, flour, insulated wire, brick, tile, varnish, furniture, soap and carriages and wagons. There are also works for canning vegetables and fruit, besides two creameries. The town is lighted by electricity, and has high-pressure water-works. There are eleven churches, three graded public schools and a young ladies' seminary. Population (1880, 3,028; (1890), 2,487; (1900), 3,653.

TAFT, Lorado, sculptor, was born at Elmwood, Peoria County, Ill., April 29, 1860; at an early age evinced a predilection for sculpture and began modeling; graduated at the University of Illinois in 1880, then went to Paris and studied sculpture in the famous Ecole des Beaux Arts until 1885. The following year he settled in Chicago, finally becoming associated with the Chicago Art Institute. He has been a lecturer on art in the Chicago University. Mr. Taft furnished the decorations of the Horticultural Building on the World's Fair Grounds, in 1893.

TALCOTT, Mancel, business man, was born in Rome, N. Y., Oct. 12, 1817; attended the common schools until 17 years of age, when he set out for the West, traveling on foot from Detroit to Chicago, and thence to Park Ridge, where he worked at farming until 1850. Then, having followed the occupation of a miner for some time, in California, with some success, he united with Horace M. Singer in establishing the firm of Singer & Talcott, stone-dealers, which lasted during most of his life. He served as a member of the Chicago City Council, on the Board of County Commissioners, as a member of the Police Board, and was one of the founders of the First National Bank, and President, for several years, of the Stock Yards National Bank. Liberal and public-spirited, he contributed freely to works of charity. Died, June 5, 1878.

TALCOTT, (Capt.) William, soldier of the War of 1812 and pioneer, was born in Gilead, Conn., March 6, 1774; emigrated to Rome, Oneida County, N. Y., in 1810, and engaged in farming; served as a Lieutenant in the Oneida County militia during the War of 1812-14, being stationed at Sackett's Harbor under the command of Gen. Winfield Scott. In 1835, in company with his eldest son, Thomas B. Talcott, he made an extended tour through the West, finally selecting a location in Illinois at the junction of Rock River and the Pecatonica, where the town of Rockton now stands—there being only two white families, at that time, within the present limits of Winnebago County. Two years later (1837), he brought his family to this point, with his sons took up a considerable body of Government land and erected two mills, to which customers came from a long distance. In 1838 Captain Talcott took part in the organization of the first Congregational Church in that section of the State. A zealous anti-slavery man, he supported James G.

Birney (the Liberty candidate for President) in 1844, continuing to act with that party until the organization of the Republican party in 1856; was deeply interested in the War for the Union, but died before its conclusion, Sept. 2, 1864.—Maj. Thomas B. (Talcott), oldest son of the preceding, was born at Hebron, Conn., April 17, 1806; was taken to Rome, N. Y., by his father in infancy, and after reaching maturity, engaged in mercantile business with his brother in Chemung County; in 1835 accompanied his father in a tour through the West, finally locating at Rockton, where he engaged in agriculture. On the organization of Winnebago County, in 1836, he was elected one of the first County Commissioners, and, in 1850, to the State Senate, serving four years. He also held various local offices. Died, Sept. 30, 1894.—Hon. Wait (Talcott), second son of Capt. William Talcott, was born at Hebron, Conn., Oct. 17, 1807, and taken to Rome, N. Y., where he remained until his 19th year, when he engaged in business at Booneville and, still later, in Utica; in 1838, removed to Illinois and joined his father at Rockton, finally becoming a citizen of Rockford, where, in his later years, he was extensively engaged in manufacturing, having become, in 1854, with his brother Sylvester, a partner of the firm of J. H. Manny & Co., in the manufacture of the Manny reaper and mower. He was an original anti-slavery man and, at one time, a Free-Soil candidate for Congress, but became a zealous Republican and ardent friend of Abraham Lincoln, whom he employed as an attorney in the famous suit of McCormick vs. the Manny Reaper Company for infringement of patent. In 1854 he was elected to the State Senate, succeeding his brother, Thomas B., and was the first Collector of Internal Revenue in the Second District, appointed by Mr. Lincoln in 1862, and continuing in office some five years. Though too old for active service in the field, during the Civil War, he voluntarily hired a substitute to take his place. Mr. Talcott was one of the original incorporators and Trustees of Beloit College, and a founder of Rockford Female Seminary, remaining a trustee of each for many years. Died, June 7, 1890.—Sylvester (Talcott), third son of William Talcott, born at Rome, N. Y., Oct. 14, 1810; when of age, engaged in mercantile business in Chemung County; in 1837 removed, with other members of the family, to Winnebago County, Ill., where he joined his father in the entry of Government lands and the erection of mills, as already detailed. He became one of the first Justices of the Peace in Winnebago County, also served as Supervisor for a number of years and, although a farmer, became interested, in 1854, with his brother Wait, in the Manny Reaper Company at Rockford. He also followed the example of his brother, just named, in furnishing a substitute for the War of the Rebellion, though too old for service himself. Died, June 19, 1885.—Henry Walter (Talcott), fourth son of William Talcott, was born at Rome, N. Y., Feb. 13, 1814; came with his father to Winnebago County, Ill., in 1835, and was connected with his father and brothers in business. Died, Dec. 9, 1870.—Dwight Lewis (Talcott), oldest son of Henry Walter Talcott, born in Winnebago County; at the age of 17 years enlisted at Belvidere, in January, 1864, as a soldier in the Ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry; served as provost guard some two months at Fort Pickering, near Memphis, and later took part in many of the important battles of that year in Mississippi and Tennessee. Having been captured at Campbellsville, Tenn., he was taken to Andersonville, Ga., where he suffered all the horrors of that famous prison-pen, until March, 1865, when he was released, arriving at home a helpless skeleton, the day after Abraham Lincoln's assassination. Mr. Talcott subsequently settled in Muscatine County, Iowa.

TALLULA, a prosperous village of Menard County, on the Jacksonville branch of the Chicago & Alton Railway, 24 miles northeast of Jacksonville; is in the midst of a grain, coal-mining, and stock-growing region; has a local bank and newspaper. Pop. (1890), 445; (1900), 639.

TAMAROA, a village in Perry County, situated at the junction of the Illinois Central with the Wabash, Chester & Western Railroad, 8 miles north of Duquoin, and 57 miles east-southeast of Belleville. It has a bank, a newspaper office, a large public school, five churches and two flouring mills. Coal is mined here and exported in large quantities. Pop. (1900), 853.

TAMAROA & MOUNT VERNON RAILROAD. (See Wabash, Chester & Western Railroad.)

TANNER, Edward Allen, clergyman and educator, was born of New England ancestry, at Waverly, Ill., Nov. 29, 1837—being the first child who could claim nativity there; was educated in the local schools and at Illinois College, graduating from the latter in 1857; spent four years teaching in his native place and at Jacksonville; then accepted the Professorship of Latin in Pacific University at Portland, Oregon, remaining four years, when he returned to his Alma Mater (1865), assuming there the chair of Latin and Rhetoric. In 1881 he was appointed financial agent of the latter institution, and, in 1882, its President. While in Oregon he had been ordained a minister of the Congregational Church, and, for a considerable period during his connection with Illinois College, officiated as Chaplain of the Central Hospital for the Insane at Jacksonville, besides supplying local and other pulpits. He labored earnestly for the benefit of the institution under his charge, and, during his incumbency, added materially to its endowment and resources. Died, at Jacksonville, Feb. 8, 1892.

TANNER, John R., Governor, was born in Warrick County, Ind., April 4, 1844, and brought to Southern Illinois in boyhood, where he grew up on a farm in the vicinity of Carbondale, enjoying only such educational advantages as were afforded by the common school; in 1863, at the age of 19, enlisted in the Ninety-eighth Illinois Volunteers, serving until June, 1865, when he was transferred to the Sixty-first, and finally mustered out in September following. All the male members of Governor Tanner's family were soldiers of the late war, his father dying in a rebel prison at Columbus, Miss., one of his brothers suffering the same fate from wounds at Nashville, Tenn., and another brother dying in hospital at Pine Bluff, Ark. Only one of this patriotic family, besides Governor Tanner, still survives—Mr. J. M. Tanner of Clay County, who left the service with the rank of Lieutenant of the Thirtieth Illinois Cavalry. Returning from the war, Mr. Tanner established himself in business as a farmer in Clay County, later engaging successfully in the milling and lumber business as the partner of his brother. The public positions held by him, since the war, include those of Sheriff of Clay County (1870-72), Clerk of the Circuit Court (1873-76), and State Senator (1880-83). During the latter year he received the appointment of United States Marshal for the Southern District of Illinois, serving until after the accession of President Cleveland in 1885. In 1886, he was the Republican nominee for State Treasurer and was elected by an unusually large majority; in 1891 was appointed, by Governor Fifer, a member of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, but, in 1892, received the appointment of Assistant United States Treasurer at Chicago, continuing in the latter office until December, 1893. For ten years (1874-84) he was a member of the Republican State Central Committee, returning to that body in 1894, when he was chosen Chairman and conducted the campaign which resulted in the unprecedented Republican successes of that year. In 1896 he received the nomination of his party for Governor, and was elected over Gov. John P. Altgeld, his Democratic opponent, by a plurality of over 113,000, and a majority, over all, of nearly 90,000 votes.

TANNER, Tazewell B., jurist, was born in Henry County, Va., and came to Jefferson County, Ill., about 1846 or '47, at first taking a position as teacher and Superintendent of Public Schools. Later, he was connected with "The Jeffersonian," a Democratic paper at Mount Vernon, and, in 1849, went to the gold regions of California, meeting with reasonable success as a miner. Returning in a year or two, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court, and, while in the discharge of his duties, prosecuted the study of law, finally, on admission to the bar, entering into partnership with the late Col. Thomas S. Casey. In 1854 he was elected Representative in the Nineteenth General Assembly, and was instrumental in securing the appropriation for the erection of a Supreme Court building at Mount Vernon. In 1862 he served as a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of that year; was elected Circuit Judge in 1873, and, in 1877, was assigned to duty on the Appellate bench, but, at the expiration of his term, declined a re-election and resumed the practice of his profession at Mount Vernon. Died, March 25, 1880.

TAXATION, in its legal sense, the mode of raising revenue. In its general sense its purposes are the support of the State and local governments, the promotion of the public good by fostering education and works of public improvement, the protection of society by the preservation of order and the punishment of crime, and the support of the helpless and destitute. In practice, and as prescribed by the Constitution, the raising of revenue is required to be done "by levying a tax by valuation, so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his, her or its property—such value to be ascertained by some person or persons, to be elected or appointed in such manner as the General Assembly shall direct, and not otherwise." (State Constitution, 1870—Art. Revenue, Sec. 1.) The person selected under the law to make this valuation is the Assessor of the county or the township (in counties under township organization), and he is required to make a return to the County Board at its July meeting each year—the latter having authority to hear complaints of taxpayers and adjust inequalities when found to exist. It is made the duty of the Assessor to include in his return, as real-estate, all lands and the buildings or other improvements erected thereon; and, under the head of personal property, all tangible effects, besides moneys, credits, bonds or stocks, shares of stock of companies or corporations, investments, annuities, franchises, royalties, etc. Property used for school, church or cemetery purposes, as well as public buildings and other property belonging to the State and General Government, municipalities, public charities, public libraries, agricultural and scientific societies, are declared exempt. Nominally, all property subject to taxation is required to be assessed at its cash valuation; but, in reality, the valuation, of late years, has been on a basis of twenty-five to thirty-three per cent of its estimated cash value. In the larger cities, however, the valuation is often much lower than this, while very large amounts escape assessment altogether. The Revenue Act, passed at the special session of the Fortieth General Assembly (1898), requires the Assessor to make a return of all property subject to taxation in his district, at its cash valuation, upon which a Board of Review fixes a tax on the basis of twenty per cent of such cash valuation. An abstract of the property assessment of each county goes before the State Board of Equalization, at its annual meeting in August, for the purpose of comparison and equalizing valuations between counties, but the Board has no power to modify the assessments of individual tax-payers. (See State Board of Equalization.) This Board has exclusive power to fix the valuation for purposes of taxation of the capital stock or franchises of companies (except certain specified manufacturing corporations), incorporated under the State laws, together with the "railroad track" and "rolling stock" of railroads, and the capital stock of railroads and telegraph lines, and to fix the distribution of the latter between counties in which they lie.—The Constitution of 1848 empowered the Legislature to impose a capitation tax, of not less than fifty cents nor more than one dollar, upon each free white male citizen entitled to the right of suffrage, between the ages of 21 and 60 years, but the Constitution of 1870 grants no such power, though it authorizes the extension of the "objects and subjects of taxation" in accordance with the principle contained in the first section of the Revenue Article.—Special assessments in cities, for the construction of sewers, pavements, etc., being local and in the form of benefits, cannot be said to come under the head of general taxation. The same is to be said of revenue derived from fines and penalties, which are forms of punishment for specific offenses, and go to the benefit of certain specified funds.

TAYLOR, Abner, ex-Congressman, is a native of Maine, and a resident of Chicago. He has been in active business all his life as contractor, builder and merchant, and, for some time, a member of the wholesale dry-goods firm of J. V. Farwell & Co., of Chicago. He was a member of the Thirty-fourth General Assembly, a delegate to the National Republican Convention of 1884, and represented the First Illinois District in the Fifty-first and Fifty-second Congresses, 1889 to 1893. Mr. Taylor was one of the contractors for the erection of the new State Capitol of Texas.

TAYLOR, Benjamin Franklin, journalist, poet and lecturer, was born at Lowville, N. Y., July 19, 1819; graduated at Madison University in 1839, the next year becoming literary and dramatic critic of "The Chicago Evening Journal." Here, in a few years, he acquired a wide reputation as a journalist and poet, and was much in demand as a lecturer on literary topics. His letters from the field during the Rebellion, as war correspondent of "The Evening Journal," won for him even a greater popularity, and were complimented by translation into more than one European language. After the war, he gave his attention more unreservedly to literature, his principal works appearing after that date. His publications in book form, including both prose and poetry, comprise the following: "Attractions of Language" (1845); "January and June" (1853); "Pictures in Camp and Field" (1871); "The World on Wheels" (1873); "Old Time Pictures and Sheaves of Rhyme" (1874); "Songs of Yesterday" (1877); "Summer Savory Gleaned from Rural Nooks" (1879); "Between the Gates"—pictures of California life—(1881); "Dulce Domum, the Burden of Song" (1884); and "Theophilus Trent, or Old Times in the Oak Openings," a novel (1887). The last was in the hands of the publishers at his death, Feb. 27, 1887. Among his most popular poems are "The Isle of the Long Ago," "The Old Village Choir," and "Rhymes of the River." "The London Times" complimented Mr. Taylor with the title of "The Oliver Goldsmith of America."

TAYLOR, Edmund Dick, early Indian-trader and legislator, was born at Fairfield C. H., Va., Oct. 18, 1802—the son of a commissary in the army of the Revolution, under General Greene, and a cousin of General (later, President) Zachary Taylor; left his native State in his youth and, at an early day, came to Springfield, Ill., where he opened an Indian-trading post and general store, was elected from Sangamon County to the lower branch of the Seventh General Assembly (1830) and re-elected in 1832—the latter year being a competitor of Abraham Lincoln, whom he defeated. In 1834 he was elected to the State Senate and, at the next session of the Legislature, was one of the celebrated "Long Nine" who secured the removal of the State Capital to Springfield. He resigned before the close of his term to accept, from President Jackson, the appointment of Receiver of Public Moneys at Chicago. Here he became one of the promoters of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad (1837), serving as one of the Commissioners to secure subscriptions of stock, and was also active in advocating the construction of the Illinois & Michigan Canal. The title of "Colonel," by which he was known during most of his life, was acquired by service, with that rank, on the staff of Gov. John Reynolds, during the Black Hawk War of 1832. After coming to Chicago, Colonel Taylor became one of the Trustees of the Chicago branch of the State Bank, and was later identified with various banking enterprises, as also a somewhat extensive operator in real estate. An active Democrat in the early part of his career in Illinois, Colonel Taylor was one of the members of his party to take ground against the Kansas-Nebraska bill in 1854, and advocated the election of General Bissell to the governorship in 1856. In 1860 he was again in line with his party in support of Senator Douglas for the Presidency and was an opponent of the war policy of the Government still later, as shown by his participation in the celebrated "Peace Convention" at Springfield, of June 17, 1863. In the latter years of his life he became extensively interested in coal lands in La Salle and adjoining counties, and, for a considerable time, served as President of the Northern Illinois Coal & Mining Company, his home, during a part of this period, being at Mendota. Died, in Chicago, Dec. 4, 1891.

TAYLORVILLE, a city and county-seat of Christian County, on the South Fork of the Sangamon River and on the Wabash Railway at its point of intersection with the Springfield Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern. It is about 27 miles southeast of Springfield, and 28 miles southwest of Decatur. It has several banks, flour mills, paper mill, electric light and gas plants, water works, two coal mines, carriage and wagon shops, a manufactory of farming implements, two daily and weekly papers, nine churches and five graded and township high schools. Much coal is mined in this vicinity. Pop. (1890), 2,839; (1900), 4,248.

TAZEWELL COUNTY, a central county on the Illinois River, was first settled in 1823 and organized in 1827; has an area of 650 square miles—was named for Governor Tazewell of Virginia. It is drained by the Illinois and Mackinaw Rivers and traversed by several lines of railway. The surface is generally level, the soil alluvial and rich, but requiring drainage, especially on the river bottoms. Gravel, coal and sandstone are found, but, generally speaking, Tazewell is an agricultural county. The cereals are extensively cultivated; wool is also clipped, and there are dairy interests of some importance. Distilling is extensively conducted at Pekin, the county-seat, which is also the seat of other mechanical industries. (See also Pekin.) Population of the county (1880), 29,606; (1890), 29,556; (1900), 33,221.

TEMPLE, JOHN TAYLOR, M.D., early Chicago physician, born in Virginia in 1804, graduated in medicine at Middlebury College, Vt., in 1830, and, in 1833, arrived in Chicago. At this time he had a contract for carrying the United States mail from Chicago to Fort Howard, near Green Bay, and the following year undertook a similar contract between Chicago and Ottawa. Having sold these out three years later, he devoted his attention to the practice of his profession, though interested, for a time, in contracts for the construction of the Illinois & Michigan Canal. Dr. Temple was instrumental in erecting the first house (after Rev. Jesse Walker's missionary station at Wolf Point), for public religious worship in Chicago, and, although himself a Baptist, it was used in common by Protestant denominations. He was a member of the first Board of Trustees of Rush Medical College, though he later became a convert to homeopathy, and finally, removing to St. Louis, assisted in founding the St. Louis School of Homeopathy, dying there, Feb. 24, 1877.

TENURE OF OFFICE. (See Elections.)

TERRE HAUTE, ALTON & ST. LOUIS RAILROAD. (See St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad.)

TERRE HAUTE & ALTON RAILROAD (See St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad.)

TERRE HAUTE & INDIANAPOLIS RAILROAD, a corporation operating no line of its own within the State, but the lessee and operator of the following lines (which see): St. Louis, Vandalia & Terre Haute, 158.3 miles; Terre Haute & Peoria, 145.12 miles; East St. Louis & Carondelet, 12.74 miles—total length of leased lines in Illinois, 316.16 miles. The Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad was incorporated in Indiana in 1847, as the Terre Haute & Richmond, completed a line between the points named in the title, in 1852, and took its present name in 1860. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company purchased a controlling interest in its stock in 1893.

TERRE HAUTE & PEORIA RAILROAD, (Vandalia Line), a line of road extending from Terre Haute, Ind., to Peoria, Ill., 145.12 miles, with 28.78 miles of trackage, making in all 173.9 miles in operation, all being in Illinois—operated by the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad Company. The gauge is standard, and the rails are steel. (HISTORY.) It was organized Feb. 7, 1887, successor to the Illinois Midland Railroad. The latter was made up by the consolidation (Nov. 4, 1874) of three lines: (1) The Peoria, Atlanta & Decatur Railroad, chartered in 1869 and opened in 1874; (2) the Paris & Decatur Railroad, chartered in 1861 and opened in December, 1873; and (3) the Paris & Terre Haute Railroad, chartered in 1873 and opened in 1874—the consolidated lines assuming the name of the Illinois Midland Railroad. In 1886 the Illinois Midland was sold under foreclosure and, in February, 1887, reorganized as the Terre Haute & Peoria Railroad. In 1892 it was leased for ninety-nine years to the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad Company, and is operated as a part of the "Vandalia System." The capital stock (1898) was $3,764,200; funded debt, $2,230,000.—total capital invested, $6,227,481.

TEUTOPOLIS, a village of Effingham County, on the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Railroad, 4 miles east of Effingham; was originally settled by a colony of Germans from Cincinnati. Population (1900), 498.

THOMAS, Horace H., lawyer and legislator, was born in Vermont, Dec. 18, 1831, graduated at Middlebury College, and, after admission to the bar, removed to Chicago, where he commenced practice. At the outbreak of the rebellion he enlisted and was commissioned Assistant Adjutant-General of the Army of the Ohio. At the close of the war he took up his residence in Tennessee, serving as Quartermaster upon the staff of Governor Brownlow. In 1867 he returned to Chicago and resumed practice. He was elected a Representative in the Legislature in 1878 and re-elected in 1880, being chosen Speaker of the House during his latter term. In 1888 he was elected State Senator from the Sixth District, serving during the sessions of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh General Assemblies. In 1897, General Thomas was appointed United States Appraiser in connection with the Custom House in Chicago.

THOMAS, Jesse Burgess, jurist and United States Senator, was born at Hagerstown, Md., claiming direct descent from Lord Baltimore. Taken west in childhood, he grew to manhood and settled at Lawrenceburg, Indiana Territory, in 1803; in 1805 was Speaker of the Territorial Legislature and, later, represented the Territory as Delegate in Congress. On the organization of Illinois Territory (which he had favored), he removed to Kaskaskia, was appointed one of the first Judges for the new Territory, and, in 1818, as Delegate from St. Clair County, presided over the first State Constitutional Convention, and, on the admission of the State, became one of the first United States Senators—Governor Edwards being his colleague. Though an avowed advocate of slavery, he gained no little prominence as the author of the celebrated "Missouri Compromise," adopted in 1820. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1823, serving until 1829. He subsequently removed to Mount Vernon, Ohio, where he died by suicide, May 4, 1853.—Jesse Burgess (Thomas), Jr., nephew of the United States Senator of the same name, was born at Lebanon, Ohio, July 31, 1806, was educated at Transylvania University, and, being admitted to the bar, located at Edwardsville, Ill. He first appeared in connection with public affairs as Secretary of the State Senate in 1830, being re-elected in 1832; in 1834 was elected Representative in the General Assembly from Madison County, but, in February following, was appointed Attorney-General, serving only one year. He afterwards held the position of Circuit Judge (1837-39), his home being then in Springfield; in 1843 he became Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, by appointment of the Governor, as successor to Stephen A. Douglas, and was afterwards elected to the same office by the Legislature, remaining until 1848. During a part of his professional career he was the partner of David Prickett and William L. May, at Springfield, and afterwards a member of the Galena bar, finally removing to Chicago, where he died, Feb. 21, 1850.—Jesse B. (Thomas) third, clergyman and son of the last named; born at Edwardsville, Ill., July 29, 1832; educated at Kenyon College, Ohio, and Rochester (N. Y.) Theological Seminary; practiced law for a time in Chicago, but finally entered the Baptist ministry, serving churches at Waukegan, Ill., Brooklyn, N. Y., and San Francisco (1862-69). He then became pastor of the Michigan Avenue Baptist Church, in Chicago, remaining until 1874, when he returned to Brooklyn. In 1887 he became Professor of Biblical History in the Theological Seminary at Newton, Mass., where he has since resided. He is the author of several volumes, and, in 1896, received the degree of D.D. from the old University of Chicago.

THOMAS, John, pioneer and soldier of the Black Hawk War, was born in Wythe County, Va., Jan. 11, 1800. At the age of 18 he accompanied his parents to St. Clair County, Ill., where the family located in what was then called the Alexander settlement, near the present site of Shiloh. When he was 22 he rented a farm (although he had not enough money to buy a horse) and married. Six years later he bought and stocked a farm, and, from that time forward, rapidly accumulated real property, until he became one of the most extensive owners of farming land in St. Clair County. In early life he was fond of military exercise, holding various offices in local organizations and serving as a Colonel in the Black Hawk War. In 1824 he was one of the leaders of the party opposed to the amendment of the State Constitution to sanction slavery, was a zealous opponent of the Kansas-Nebraska bill in 1854, and a firm supporter of the Republican party from the date of its formation. He was elected to the lower house of the General Assembly in 1838, '62, '64, '72 and '74; and to the State Senate in 1878, serving four years in the latter body. Died, at Belleville, Dec. 16, 1894, in the 95th year of his age.

THOMAS, John R., ex-Congressman, was born at Mount Vernon, Ill., Oct. 11, 1846. He served in the Union Army during the War of the Rebellion, rising from the ranks to a captaincy. After his return home he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1869. From 1872 to 1876 he was State's Attorney, and, from 1879 to 1889, represented his District in Congress. In 1897, Mr. Thomas was appointed by President McKinley an additional United States District Judge for Indian Territory. His home is now at Vanita, in that Territory.

THOMAS, William, pioneer lawyer and legislator, was born in what is now Allen County, Ky., Nov. 22, 1802; received a rudimentary education, and served as deputy of his father (who was Sheriff), and afterwards of the County Clerk; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1823; in 1826 removed to Jacksonville, Ill., where he taught school served as a private in the Winnebago War (1827), and at the session of 1828-29, reported the proceedings of the General Assembly for "The Vandalia Intelligencer"; was State's Attorney and School Commissioner of Morgan County; served as Quartermaster and Commissary in the Black Hawk War (1831-32), first under Gen. Joseph Duncan and, a year later, under General Whiteside; in 1839 was appointed Circuit Judge, but legislated out of office two years later. It was as a member of the Legislature, however, that he gained the greatest prominence, first as State Senator in 1834-40, and Representative in 1846-48 and 1850-52, when he was especially influential in the legislation which resulted in establishing the institutions for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind, and the Hospital for the Insane (the first in the State) at Jacksonville—serving, for a time, as a member of the Board of Trustees of the latter. He was also prominent in connection with many enterprises of a local character, including the establishment of the Illinois Female College, to which, although without children of his own, he was a liberal contributor. During the first year of the war he was a member of the Board of Army Auditors by appointment of Governor Yates. Died, at Jacksonville, August 22, 1889.

THORNTON, Anthony, jurist, was born in Bourbon County, Ky., Nov. 9, 1814—being descended from a Virginia family. After the usual primary instruction in the common schools, he spent two years in a high school at Galatin, Tenn., when he entered Centre College at Danville, Ky., afterwards continuing his studies at Miami University, Ohio, where he graduated in 1834. Having studied law with an uncle at Paris, Ky., he was licensed to practice in 1836, when he left his native State with a view to settling in Missouri, but, visiting his uncle, Gen. William F. Thornton, at Shelbyville, Ill., was induced to establish himself in practice there. He served as a member of the State Constitutional Conventions of 1847 and 1862, and as Representative in the Seventeenth General Assembly (1850-52) for Shelby County. In 1864 he was elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, and, in 1870, to the Illinois Supreme Court, but served only until 1873, when he resigned. In 1879 Judge Thornton removed to Decatur, Ill., but subsequently returned to Shelbyville, where (1898) he now resides.

THORNTON, William Fitzhugh, Commissioner of the Illinois & Michigan Canal, was born in Hanover County, Va., Oct. 4, 1789; in 1806, went to Alexandria, Va., where he conducted a drug business for a time, also acting as associate editor of "The Alexandria Gazette." Subsequently removing to Washington City, he conducted a paper there in the interest of John Quincy Adams for the Presidency. During the War of 1812-14 he served as a Captain of cavalry, and, for a time, as staff-officer of General Winder. On occasion of the visit of Marquis La Fayette to America (1824-25) he accompanied the distinguished Frenchman from Baltimore to Richmond. In 1829 he removed to Kentucky, and, in 1833, to Shelbyville, Ill., where he soon after engaged in mercantile business, to which he added a banking and brokerage business in 1859, with which he was actively associated until his death. In 1836, he was appointed, by Governor Duncan, one of the Commissioners of the Illinois & Michigan Canal, serving as President of the Board until 1842. In 1840, he made a visit to London, as financial agent of the State, in the interest of the Canal, and succeeded in making a sale of bonds to the amount of $1,000,000 on what were then considered favorable terms. General Thornton was an ardent Whig until the organization of the Republican party, when he became a Democrat. Died, at Shelbyville, Oct. 21, 1873.

TILLSON, John, pioneer, was born at Halifax, Mass., March 13, 1796; came to Illinois in 1819, locating at Hillsboro, Montgomery County, where he became a prominent and enterprising operator in real estate, doing a large business for eastern parties; was one of the founders of Hillsboro Academy and an influential and liberal friend of Illinois College, being a Trustee of the latter from its establishment until his death; was supported in the Legislature of 1827 for State Treasurer, but defeated by James Hall. Died, at Peoria, May 11, 1853.—Christiana Holmes (Tillson), wife of the preceding, was born at Kingston, Mass., Oct. 10, 1798; married to John Tillson in 1822, and immediately came to Illinois to reside; was a woman of rare culture and refinement, and deeply interested in benevolent enterprises. Died, in New York City, May 29, 1872.—Charles Holmes (Tillson), son of John and Christiana Holmes Tillson, was born at Hillsboro, Ill., Sept. 15, 1823; educated at Hillsboro Academy and Illinois College, graduating from the latter in 1844; studied law in St. Louis and at Transylvania University, was admitted to the bar in St. Louis and practiced there some years—also served several terms in the City Council, and was a member of the National Guard of Missouri in the War of the Rebellion. Died, Nov. 25, 1865.—John (Tillson), Jr., another son, was born at Hillsboro, Ill., Oct. 12, 1825; educated at Hillsboro Academy and Illinois College, but did not graduate from the latter; graduated from Transylvania Law School, Ky., in 1847, and was admitted to the bar at Quincy, Ill., the same year; practiced two years at Galena, when he returned to Quincy. In 1861 he enlisted in the Tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, became its Lieutenant-Colonel, on the promotion of Col. J. D. Morgan to Brigadier-General, was advanced to the colonelcy, and, in July, 1865, was mustered out with the rank of brevet Brigadier-General; for two years later held a commission as Captain in the regular army. During a portion of 1869-70 he was editor of "The Quincy Whig"; in 1873 was elected Representative in the Twenty-eighth General Assembly to succeed Nehemiah Bushnell, who had died in office, and, during the same year, was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the Quincy District, serving until 1881. Died, August 6, 1892.

TILLSON, Robert, pioneer, was born in Halifax County, Mass., August 12, 1800; came to Illinois in 1822, and was employed, for several years, as a clerk in the land agency of his brother, John Tillson, at Hillsboro. In 1826 he engaged in the mercantile business with Charles Holmes, Jr., in St. Louis, but, in 1828, removed to Quincy, Ill., where he opened the first general store in that city; also served as Postmaster for some ten years. During this period he built the first two-story frame building erected in Quincy, up to that date. Retiring from the mercantile business in 1840 he engaged in real estate, ultimately becoming the proprietor of considerable property of this character; was also a contractor for furnishing cavalry accouterments to the Government during the war. Soon after the war he erected one of the handsomest business blocks existing in the city at that time. Died, in Quincy, Dec. 27, 1892.

TINCHER, John L., banker, was born in Kentucky in 1821; brought by his parents to Vermillion County, Ind., in 1829, and left an orphan at 17; attended school in Coles County, Ill., and was employed as clerk in a store at Danville, 1843-53. He then became a member of the firm of Tinchler & English, merchants, later establishing a bank, which became the First National Bank of Danville. In 1864 Mr. Tinchler was elected Representative in the Twenty-fourth General Assembly and, two years later, to the Senate, being re-elected in 1870. He was also a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1869-70. Died, in Springfield, Dec. 17, 1871, while in attendance on the adjourned session of that year.

TIPTON, Thomas F., lawyer and jurist, was born in Franklin County, Ohio, August 29, 1833; has been a resident of McLean County, Ill., from the age of 10 years, his present home being at Bloomington. He was admitted to the bar in 1857, and, from January, 1867, to December, 1868, was State's Attorney for the Eighth Judicial Circuit. In 1870 he was elected Judge of the same circuit, and under the new Constitution, was chosen Judge of the new Fourteenth Circuit. From 1877 to 1879 he represented the (then) Thirteenth Illinois District in Congress, but, in 1878, was defeated by Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic nominee. In 1891 he was re-elected to a seat on the Circuit bench for the Bloomington Circuit, but resumed practice at the expiration of his term in 1897.

TISKILWA, a village of Bureau County, on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, 7 miles southwest of Princeton; has creameries and cheese factories, churches, school, library, water-works, bank and a newspaper. Pop. (1900), 965.

TODD, Col. John, soldier, was born in Montgomery County, Pa., in 1759; took part in the battle of Point Pleasant, Va., in 1774, as Adjutant-General of General Lewis; settled as a lawyer at Fincastle, Va., and, in 1775, removed to Fayette County, Ky., the next year locating near Lexington. He was one of the first two Delegates from Kentucky County to the Virginia House of Burgesses, and, in 1778, accompanied Col. George Rogers Clark on his expedition against Kaskaskia and Vincennes. In December, 1778, he was appointed by Gov. Patrick Henry, Lieutenant-Commandant of Illinois County, embracing the region northwest of the Ohio River, serving two years; in 1780, was again a member of the Virginia Legislature, where he procured grants of land for public schools and introduced a bill for negro-emancipation. He was killed by Indians, at the battle of Blue Licks, Ky., August 19, 1782.

TODD, (Dr.) John, physician, born near Lexington, Ky., April 27, 1787, was one of the earliest graduates of Transylvania University, also graduating at the Medical University of Philadelphia; was appointed Surgeon-General of Kentucky troops in the War of 1812, and captured at the battle of River Raisin. Returning to Lexington after his release, he practiced there and at Bardstown, removed to Edwardsville, Ill., in 1817, and, in 1827, to Springfield where he had been appointed Register of the Land Office by President John Quincy Adams, but was removed by Jackson in 1829. Dr. Todd continued to reside at Springfield until his death, which occurred, Jan. 9, 1865. He was a grandson of John Todd, who was appointed Commandant of Illinois County by Gov. Patrick Henry in 1778, and an uncle of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln.—John Blair Smith (Todd), son of the preceding, was born at Lexington, Ky., April 4, 1814; came with his father to Illinois in 1817; graduated at the United States Military Academy in 1837, serving afterwards in the Florida and Mexican wars and on the frontier; resigned, and was an Indian-trader in Dakota, 1856-61; the latter year, took his seat as a Delegate in Congress from Dakota, then served as Brigadier-General of Volunteers, 1861-62; was again Delegate in Congress in 1863-65. Speaker of the Dakota Legislature in 1867, and Governor of the Territory, 1869-71. Died, at Yankton City, Jan. 5, 1872.

TOLEDO, a village and the county-seat of Cumberland County, on the Illinois Central Railroad; founded in 1854; has five churches, a graded school, two banks, creamery, flour mill, elevator, and two weekly newspapers. There are no manufacturing, the leading industry in the surrounding country being agriculture. Pop. (1900), 676; (1900), 818.

TOLEDO, CINCINNATI & ST. LOUIS RAILROAD. (See Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railroad.)

TOLEDO, PEORIA & WARSAW RAILROAD. (See Toledo, Peoria & Western Railway.)

TOLEDO, PEORIA & WESTERN RAILROAD. (See Toledo, Peoria & Western Railway.)

TOLEDO, PEORIA & WESTERN RAILWAY, a line of railroad wholly within the State of Illinois, extending from Effner, at the Indiana State line, west to the Mississippi River at Warsaw. The length of the whole line is 230.7 miles, owned entirely by the company. It is made up of a division from Effner to Peoria (110.9 miles)—which is practically an air-line throughout nearly its entire length—and the Peoria and Warsaw Division (108.8 miles) with branches from La Harpe to Iowa Junction (10.4 miles) and 0.6 of a mile connecting with the Keokuk bridge at Hamilton.—(HISTORY.) The original charter for this line was granted, in 1863, under the name of the Toledo, Peoria & Warsaw Railroad; the main line was completed in 1868, and the La Harpe & Iowa Junction branch in 1873. Default was made in 1873 the road sold under foreclosure, in 1880, and reorganized as the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad, and the line leased for 49½ years to the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company. The latter defaulted in July, 1884, and, a year later, the Toledo, Peoria & Western was transferred to trustees for the first mortgage bond-holders, was sold under foreclosure in October, 1886, and, in March, 1887, the present company, under the name of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railway Company, was organized for the purpose of taking over the property. In 1893 the Pennsylvania Railroad Company obtained a controlling interest in the stock, and, in 1894, an agreement, for joint ownership and management, was entered into between that corporation and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company. The total capitalization, in 1898, was $9,712,433, of which $4,076,900 was in stock and $4,895,000 in bonds.

TOLEDO, ST. LOUIS & KANSAS CITY RAILROAD. This line crosses the State in a northeast direction from East St. Louis to Humrick, near the Indiana State line, with Toledo as its eastern terminus. The length of the entire line is 450.72 miles, of which 179½ miles are operated in Illinois.—(HISTORY.) The Illinois portion of the line grew out of the union of charters granted to the Tuscola, Charleston & Vincennes and the Charleston, Neoga & St. Louis Railroad Companies, which were consolidated in 1881 with certain Indiana lines under the name of the Toledo, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad. During 1882 a narrow-gauge road was constructed from Ridge Farm, in Vermillion County, to East St. Louis (172 miles). In 1885 this was sold under foreclosure and, in June, 1886, consolidated with the main line under the name of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railroad. The whole line was changed to standard gauge in 1887-89, and otherwise materially improved, but, in 1893, went into the hands of receivers. Plans of re-organization have been under consideration, but the receivers were still in control in 1898.

TOLEDO, WABASH & WESTERN RAILROAD. (See Wabash Railroad.)

TOLONO, a city in Champaign County, situated at the intersection of the Wabash and the Illinois Central Railroads, 9 miles south of Champaign and 37 miles east-northeast of Decatur. It is the business center of a prosperous agricultural region. The town has five churches, a graded school, a bank, a button factory, and a weekly newspaper. Population (1880), 905; (1890), 902; (1900), 845.

TONICA, a village of La Salle County, on the Illinois Central Railway, 9 miles south of La Salle; the district is agricultural, but the place has some manufactures and a newspaper. Population (1890), 473; (1900), 497.

TONTY, Chevalier Henry de, explorer and soldier, born at Gaeta, Italy, about 1650. What is now known as the Tontine system of insurance undoubtedly originated with his father. The younger Tonty was adventurous, and, even as a youth, took part in numerous land and naval encounters. In the course of his experience he lost a hand, which was replaced by an iron or copper substitute. He embarked with La Salle in 1678, and aided in the construction of a fort at Niagara. He advanced into the country of the Illinois and established friendly relations with them, only to witness the defeat of his putative savage allies by the Iroquois. After various encounters (chiefly under the direction of La Salle) with the Indians in Illinois, he returned to Green Bay in 1681. The same year—under La Salle's orders—he began the erection of Fort St. Louis, on what is now called "Starved Rock" in La Salle County. In 1682 he descended the Mississippi to its mouth, with La Salle, but was ordered back to Mackinaw for assistance. In 1684 he returned to Illinois and successfully repulsed the Iroquois from Fort St. Louis. In 1686 he again descended the Mississippi in search of La Salle. Disheartened by the death of his commander and the loss of his early comrades, he took up his residence with the Illinois Indians. Among them he was found by Iberville in 1700, as a hunter and fur trader. He died, in Mobile, in September, 1704. He was La Salle's most efficient coadjutor, and next to his ill-fated leader, did more than any other of the early French explorers to make Illinois known to the civilized world.

TOPOGRAPHY. Illinois is, generally speaking, an elevated table-land. If low water at Cairo be adopted as the maximum depression, and the summits of the two ridges hereinafter mentioned as the highest points of elevation, the altitude of this table land above the sea-level varies from 300 to 850 feet, the mean elevation being about 600 feet. The State has no mountain chains, and its few hills are probably the result of unequal denudation during the drift epoch. In some localities, particularly in the valley of the upper Mississippi, the streams have cut channels from 200 to 300 feet deep through the nearly horizontal strata, and here are found precipitous scarps, but, for the most part, the fundamental rocks are covered by a thick layer of detrital material. In the northwest there is a broken tract of uneven ground; the central portion of the State is almost wholly flat prairie, and, in the alluvial lands in the State, there are many deep valleys, eroded by the action of streams. The surface generally slopes toward the south and southwest, but the uniformity is broken by two ridges, which cross the State, one in either extremity. The northern ridge crosses the Rock River at Grand Detour and the Illinois at Split Rock, with an extreme altitude of 800 to 850 feet above sea level, though the altitude of Mount Morris, in Ogle County, exceeds 900 feet. That in the south consists of a range of hills in the latitude of Jonesboro, and extending from Shawneetown to Grand Tower. These hills are also about 800 feet above the level of the ocean. The highest point in the State is in Jo Daviess County, just south of the Wisconsin State line (near Scale's Mound) reaching an elevation of 1,257 feet above sea-level, while the highest in the south is in the northeast corner of Pope County—1,046 feet—a spur of the Ozark mountains. The following statistics regarding elevations are taken from a report of Prof. C. W. Rolfe, of the University of Illinois, based on observations made under the auspices of the Illinois Board of World's Fair Commissioners: The lowest gauge of the Ohio river, at its mouth (above sea-level), is 268.58 feet, and the mean level of Lake Michigan at Chicago 581.28 feet. The altitudes of a few prominent points are as follows. Highest point in Jackson County, 695 feet; "Bald Knob" in Union County, 985; highest point in Cook County (Barrington), 818; in La Salle County (Mendota), 747; in Livingston (Strawn), 770; in Will (Monroe), 804; in Pike (Arlen), 790; in Lake (Lake Zurich), 880; in Bureau, 910; in Boone, 1,010; in Lee (Carnahan), 1,017; in Stephenson (Waldam's Grove), 1,018; in Kane (Briar Hill), 974; in Winnebago, 985. The elevations of important towns are: Peoria, 465; Jacksonville, 602; Springfield, 596; Galesburg, 755; Joliet, 537; Rockford, 728; Bloomington, 821. Outside of the immediate valleys of the streams, and a few isolated groves or copses, little timber is found in the northern and central portions of the State, and such growth as there is, lacks the thriftiness characteristic of the forests in the Ohio valley. These forests cover a belt extending some sixty miles north of Cairo, and, while they generally include few coniferous trees, they abound in various species of oak black and white, walnut, white and yellow poplar, ash, elm, sugar maple, linden, honey locust, cottonwood, mulberry, sycamore, pecan, persimmon, and (in the immediate valley of the Ohio)

the cypress. From a commercial point of view, Illinois loses nothing through the lack of timber over three-fourths of the State's area. Chicago is an accessible market for the product of the forests of the upper lakes, so that the supply of lumber is ample, while extensive coal-fields supply abundant fuel. The rich soil of the prairies, with its abundance of organic matter (see Geological Formations), more than compensates for the want of pine forests, whose soil is ill adapted to agriculture. About two-thirds of the entire boundary of the State consists of navigable waters. These, with their tributary streams, ensure sufficient drainage.

TORRENS LAND TITLE SYSTEM. A system for the registration of titles to, and incumbrances upon, land, as well as transfers thereof, intended to remove all unnecessary obstructions to the cheap, simple and safe sale, acquisition and transfer of realty. The system has been in successful operation in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and British Columbia for many years, and it is also in force in some States in the American Union. An act providing for its introduction into Illinois was first passed by the Twenty-ninth General Assembly, and approved, June 13, 1895. The final legislation in reference thereto was enacted by the succeeding Legislature, and was approved, May 1, 1897. It is far more elaborate in its consideration of details, and is believed to be, in many respects, much better adapted to accomplish the ends in view, than was the original act of 1895. The law is applicable only to counties of the first and second class, and can be adopted in no county except by a vote of a majority of the qualified voters of the same—the vote "for" or "against" to be taken at either the November or April elections, or at an election for the choice of Judges. Thus far the only county to adopt the system has been Cook, and there it encountered strong opposition on the part of certain parties of influence and wealth. After its adoption, a test case was brought, raising the question of the constitutionality of the act. The issue was taken to the Supreme Court, which tribunal finally upheld the law.—The Torrens system substitutes a certificate of registration and of transfer for the more elaborate deeds and mortgages in use for centuries. Under it there can be no actual transfer of a title until the same is entered upon the public land register, kept in the office of the Registrar, in which case the deed or mortgage becomes a mere power of attorney to authorize the transfer to be made, upon the principle of an ordinary stock transfer, or of the registration of a United States bond, the actual transfer and public notice thereof being simultaneous. A brief synopsis of the provisions of the Illinois statute is given below: Recordors of deeds are made Registrars, and required to give bonds of either $50,000 or $200,000, according to the population of the county. Any person or corporation, having an interest in land, may make application to any court having chancery jurisdiction, to have his title thereto registered. Such application must be in writing, signed and verified by oath, and must conform, in matters of specification and detail, with the requirements of the act. The court may refer the application to one of the standing examiners appointed by the Registrar, who are required to be competent attorneys and to give bond to examine into the title, as well as the truth of the applicant's statements. Immediately upon the filing of the application, notice thereof is given by the clerk, through publication and the issuance of a summons to be served, as in other proceedings in chancery, against all persons mentioned in the petition as having or claiming any interest in the property described. Any person interested, whether named as a defendant or not, may enter an appearance within the time allowed. A failure to enter an appearance is regarded as a confession by default. The court, in passing upon the application, is in no case bound by the examiner's report, but may require other and further proof; and, in its final adjudication, passes upon all questions of title and incumbrance, directing the Registrar to register the title in the party in whom it is to be vested, and making provision as to the manner and order in which incumbrances thereon shall appear upon the certificate to be issued. An appeal may be allowed to the Supreme Court, if prayed at the time of entering the decree, upon like terms as in other cases in chancery; and a writ of error may be sued out from that tribunal within two years after the entry of the order or decree. The period last mentioned may be said to be the statutory period of limitation, after which the decree of the court must be regarded as final, although safeguards are provided for those who may have been defrauded, and for a few other classes of persons. Upon the filing of the order or decree of the court, it becomes the duty of the Registrar to issue a certificate of title, the form of which is prescribed by the act, making such notations at the end as shall show and preserve the priorities of all estates, mortgages, incumbrances and changes to which the owner's title is subject. For the purpose of preserving evidence of the owner's handwriting, a receipt for the certificate, duly witnessed or acknowledged, is required of him, which is preserved in the Registrar's office. In case any registered owner should desire to transfer the whole or any part of his estate, or any interest therein, he is required to execute a conveyance to the transferee, which, together with the certificate of title last issued, must be surrendered to the Registrar. That official thereupon issues a new certificate, stamping the word "cancelled" across the surrendered certificate, as well as upon the corresponding entry in his books of record. When land is first brought within the operation of the act, the receiver of the certificate of title is required to pay to the Registrar one-tenth of one per cent of the value of the land, the aggregate so received to be deposited with and invested by the County Treasurer, and reserved as an indemnity fund for the reimbursement of persons sustaining any loss through any omission, mistake or malfeasance of the Registrar or his subordinates. The advantage claimed for the Torrens system is, chiefly, that titles registered thereunder can be dealt with more safely, quickly and inexpensively than under the old system; it being possible to close the entire transaction within an hour or two, without the need of an abstract of title, while (as the law is administered in Cook County) the cost of transfer is only $3. It is asserted that a title, once registered, can be dealt with almost as quickly and cheaply, and quite as safely, as shares of stock or registered bonds.

TOULON, the county-seat of Stark County, on the Peoria & Rock Island Railroad, 37 miles north-northwest of Peoria, and 11 miles southeast of Galva. Besides the county court-house, the town has five churches and a high school, an academy, steam granite works, two banks, and two weekly papers. Population (1880), 967; (1890), 945; (1900), 1,057.

TOWER HILL, a village of Shelby County, on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroads, 7 miles east of Pana; has bank, grain elevators, and coal mine. Pop. (1900), 615.

TOWNSHEND, Richard W., lawyer and Congressman, was born in Prince George's County, Md., April 30, 1840. Between the ages of 10 and 18 he attended public and private schools at Washington, D. C. In 1858 he came to Illinois, where he began teaching, at the same time reading law with S. S. Marshall, at McLeansboro, where he was admitted to the bar in 1862, where he began practice. From 1863 to 1868 he was Circuit Clerk of Hamilton County, and, from 1868 to 1872, Prosecuting Attorney for the Twelfth Judicial Circuit. In 1873 he removed to Shawneetown, where he became an officer of the Gallatin National Bank. From 1864 to 1875 he was a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, and a delegate to the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore, in 1872. For twelve years (1877 to 1889) he represented his District in Congress; was re-elected in 1888, but died, March 9, 1889, a few days after the beginning of his seventh term.

TRACY, John M., artist, was born in Illinois about 1812; served in an Illinois regiment during the Civil War; studied painting in Paris in 1866-76, established himself as a portrait painter in St. Louis and, later, won a high reputation as a painter of animals, being regarded as an authority on the anatomy of the horse and the dog. Died, at Ocean Springs, Miss., March 20, 1893.

TREASURERS. (See State Treasurers.)

TREAT, Samuel Hubbel, lawyer and jurist, was born at Plainfield, Otsego County, N. Y., June 21, 1811, worked on his father's farm and studied law at Richfield, where he was admitted to practice. In 1834 he came to Springfield, Ill., traveling most of the way on foot. Here he formed a partnership with George Forquer, who had held the offices of Secretary of State and Attorney-General. In 1839 he was appointed a Circuit Judge, and, on the reorganization of the Supreme Court in 1841, was elevated to the Supreme bench, being acting Chief Justice at the time of the adoption of the Constitution of 1848. Having been elected to the Supreme bench under the new Constitution, he remained in office until March, 1855, when he resigned to take the position of Judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, to which he had been appointed by President Pierce. This position he continued to occupy until his death, which occurred at Springfield, March 27, 1887. Judge Treat's judicial career was one of the longest in the history of the State, covering a period of forty-eight years, of which fourteen were spent upon the Supreme bench, and thirty-two in the position of Judge of the United States District Court.

TREATIES. (See Greenville, Treaty of; Indian Treaties.)

TREE, Lambert, jurist, diplomat and ex-Congressman, was born in Washington, D. C., Nov. 29, 1832, of an ancestry distinguished in the War of the Revolution. He received a superior classical and professional education, and was admitted to the bar, at Washington, in October, 1855. Removing to Chicago soon afterward, his professional career has been chiefly connected with that city. In 1861 he was chosen President of the Law Institute, and served as Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County, from 1870 to 1875, when he resigned. The three following years he spent in foreign travel, returning to Chicago in 1878. In that year and again in 1889, he was the Democratic candidate for Congress from the Fourth Illinois District, but was defeated by his Republican opponent. In 1885 he was the candidate of his party for United States Senator, but was defeated by John A. Logan, by one vote. In 1884 he was a member of the National Democratic Convention which first nominated Grover Cleveland, and, in July, 1885, President Cleveland appointed him Minister to Belgium, conferring the Russian mission upon him in September, 1888. On March 3, 1889, he resigned this post and returned home. In 1890 he was appointed by President Harrison a Commissioner to the International Monetary Conference at Washington. The year before he had attended (although not as a delegate) the International Conference, at Brussels, looking to the suppression of the slave-trade, where he exerted all his influence on the side of humanity. In 1892 Belgium conferred upon him the distinction of "Councillor of Honor" upon its commission to the World's Columbian Exposition. In 1896 Judge Tree was one of the most earnest opponents of the free-silver policy, and, after the Spanish-American War, a zealous advocate of the policy of retaining the territory acquired from Spain.

TREMONT, a town of Tazewell County, on the Peoria Division of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, 9 miles southeast of Pekin; has two banks, two telephone exchanges, and one newspaper. Pop. (1900), 768.

TRENTON, a town of Clinton County, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway, 31 miles east of St. Louis; in agricultural district; has creamery, milk condensery, two coal mines, six churches, a public school and one newspaper. Pop. (1890), 1,384; (1900), 1,706; (1904), about 2,000.

TROY, a village of Madison County, on the Terre Haute & Indianapolis railroad, 21 miles northeast of St. Louis; has churches, a bank and a newspaper. Pop. (1900), 1,080.

TRUITT, James Madison, lawyer and soldier a native of Trimble County, Ky., was born Feb. 12, 1842, but lived in Illinois since 1843, his father having settled near Carrollton that year; was educated at Hillsboro and at McKendree College; enlisted in the One Hundred and Seventeenth Illinois Volunteers in 1862, and was promoted from the ranks to Lieutenant. After the war he studied law with Jesse J. Phillips, now of the Supreme Court, and, in 1872, was elected to the Twenty-eighth General Assembly, and, in 1888, a Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket. Mr. Truitt has been twice a prominent but unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for Attorney-General. His home is at Hillsboro, where he is engaged in the practice of his profession. Died July 26, 1900.

TRUMBULL, Lyman, statesman, was born at Colchester, Conn., Oct. 12, 1813, descended from a historical family, being a grand-nephew of Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut, from whom the name "Brother Jonathan" was derived as an appellation for Americans. Having received an academic education in his native town, at the age of 16 he began teaching a district school near his home, went South four years later, and engaged in teaching at Greenville, Ga. Here he studied law with Judge Hiram Warner, afterwards of the Supreme Court, and was admitted to the bar in 1837. Leaving Georgia the same year, he came to Illinois on horseback, visiting Vandalia, Belleville, Jacksonville, Springfield, Tremont and La Salle, and finally reaching Chicago, then a village of four or five thousand inhabitants. At Jacksonville he obtained a license to practice from Judge Lockwood, and, after visiting Michigan and his native State, he settled at Belleville, which continued to be his home for twenty years. His entrance into public life began with his election as Representative in the General Assembly in 1840. This was followed, in February, 1841, by his appointment by Governor Carlin, Secretary of State, as the successor of Stephen A. Douglas, who, after holding the position only two months, had resigned to accept a seat on the Supreme bench. Here he remained two years, when he was removed by Governor Ford, March 4, 1843, but, five years later (1848), was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court, was re-elected in 1852, but resigned in 1853 on account of impaired health. A year later (1854) he was elected to Congress from the Belleville District as an anti-Nebraska Democrat, but, before taking his seat, was promoted to the United States Senate, as the successor of General Shields in the memorable contest of 1855, which resulted in the defeat of Abraham Lincoln. Senator Trumbull's career of eighteen years in the United States Senate (being re-elected in 1861 and 1867) is one of the most memorable in the history of that body, covering, as it does, the whole history of the war for the Union, and the period of reconstruction which followed it. During this period, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Judiciary, he had more to do in shaping legislation on war and reconstruction measures than any other single member of that body. While he disagreed with a large majority of his Republican associates on the question of Andrew Johnson's impeachment, he was always found in sympathy with them on the vital questions affecting the war and restoration of the Union. The Civil Rights Bill and Freedmen's Bureau Bills were shaped by his hand. In 1872 he joined in the "Liberal Republican" movement and afterwards co-operated with the Democratic party, being their candidate for Governor in 1880. From 1863 his home was in Chicago, where, after retiring from the Senate, he continued in the practice of his profession until his death, which occurred in that city, June 25, 1896.

TUG MILLS. These were a sort of primitive machine used in grinding corn in Territorial and early State days. The mechanism consisted of an upright shaft, into the upper end of which were fastened bars, resembling those in the capstan of a ship. Into the outer end of each of these bars was driven a pin. A belt, made of a broad strip of ox-hide, twisted into a sort of rope, was stretched around these pins and wrapped twice around a circular piece of wood called a trundle head, through which passed a perpendicular flat bar of iron, which turned the mill-stone, usually about eighteen inches in diameter. From the upright shaft projected a beam, to which were hitched one or two horses, which furnished the motive power. Oxen were sometimes employed as motive power in lieu of horses. These rudimentary contrivances were capable of grinding about twelve bushels of corn, each, per day.

TULEY, Murray Floyd, lawyer and jurist, was born at Louisville, Ky., March 4, 1827, of English extraction and descended from the early settlers of Virginia. His father died in 1832, and, eleven years later, his mother, having married Col. Richard J. Hamilton, for many years a prominent lawyer of Chicago, removed with her family to that city. Young Tuley began reading law with his step-father and completed his studies at the Louisville Law Institute in 1847, the same year being admitted to the bar in Chicago. About the same time he enlisted in the Fifth Illinois Volunteers for service in the Mexican War, and was commissioned First Lieutenant. The war having ended, he settled at Santa Fe, N. M., where he practiced law, also served as Attorney-General and in the Territorial Legislature. Returning to Chicago in 1854, he was associated in practice, successively, with Andrew Harvie, Judge Gary and J. N. Barker, and finally as head of the firm of Tuley, Stiles & Lewis. From 1869 to 1873 he was Corporation Counsel, and during this time framed the General Incorporation Act for Cities, under which the City of Chicago was reincorporated. In 1879 he was elevated to the bench of the Circuit Court of Cook County, and re-elected every six years thereafter, his last election being in 1897. He is now serving his fourth term, some ten years of his incumbency having been spent in the capacity of Chief Justice.

TUNNICLIFFE, Damon G., lawyer and jurist, was born in Herkimer County, N. Y., August 20, 1829; at the age of 20, emigrated to Illinois, settling in Vermont, Fulton County, where, for a time, he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He subsequently studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1853. In 1854 he established himself at Macomb, McDonough County, where he built up a large and lucrative practice. In 1868 he was chosen Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket, and, from February to June, 1885, by appointment of Governor Oglesby, occupied a seat on the bench of the Supreme Court, vice Pinkney H. Walker, deceased, who had been one of his first professional preceptors.

TURCHIN, John Basil (Ivan Vasilevitch Turchinoff), soldier, engineer and author, was born in Russia, Jan. 30, 1822. He graduated from the artillery school at St. Petersburg, in 1841, and was commissioned ensign; participated in the Hungarian campaign of 1849, and, in 1852, was assigned to the staff of the Imperial Guards; served through the Crimean War, rising to the rank of Colonel, and being made senior staff officer of the active corps. In 1856 he came to this country, settling in Chicago, and, for five years, was in the service of the Illinois Central Railway Company as topographical engineer. In 1861 he was commissioned Colonel of the Nineteenth Illinois Volunteers, and, after leading his regiment in Missouri, Kentucky and Alabama, was, on July 7, 1862, promoted to a Brigadier-Generalship, being attached to the Army of the Cumberland until 1864, when he resigned. After the war he was, for six years, solicitor of patents at Chicago, but, in 1873, returned to engineering. In 1879 he established a Polish colony at Radom, in Washington County, in this State, and settled as a farmer. He is an occasional contributor to the press, writing usually on military or scientific subjects, and is the author of the "Campaign and Battle of Chickamauga" (Chicago, 1888).

TURNER (now WEST CHICAGO), a town and manufacturing center in Winfield Township, Du Page County, 30 miles west of Chicago, at the junction of two divisions of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern and the Chicago & Northwestern Railroads. The town has a rolling mill, manufactories of wagons and pumps, and railroad repair shops. It also has five churches, a graded school and two newspapers. Pop. (1900), 1,877; with suburb, 2,270.

TURNER, Col. Henry L., soldier and real-estate operator, was born at Oberlin, Ohio, August 26, 1845, and received a part of his education in the college there. During the Civil War he served as First Lieutenant in the One Hundred and Fiftieth Ohio Volunteers, and later, with the same rank in a colored regiment, taking part in the operations about Richmond, the capture of Fort Fisher, of Wilmington and of Gen. Joe Johnston's army. Coming to Chicago after the close of the war, he became connected with the business office of "The Advance," but later was employed in the banking house of Jay Cooke & Co., in Philadelphia. On the failure of that concern, in 1872, he returned to Chicago and bought "The Advance," which he conducted some two years, when he sold out and engaged in the real estate business, with which he has since been identified—being President of the Chicago Real Estate Board in 1888. He has also been President of the Western Publishing Company and a Trustee of Oberlin College. Colonel Turner is an enthusiastic member of the Illinois National Guard and, on the declaration of war between the United States and Spain, in April, 1898, promptly resumed his connection with the First Regiment of the Guard, and finally led it to Santiago de Cuba during the fighting there—his regiment being the only one from Illinois to see actual service in the field during the progress of the war. Colonel Turner won the admiration of his command and the entire nation by the manner in which he discharged his duty. The regiment was mustered out at Chicago, Nov. 17, 1898, when he retired to private life.

TURNER, John Bice, Railway President, was born at Colchester, Delaware County, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1799; after a brief business career in his native State, he became identified with the construction and operation of railroads. Among the works with which he was thus connected, were the Delaware Division of the New York & Erie and the Troy & Schenectady Roads. In 1843 he came to Chicago, having previously purchased a large body of land at Blue Island. In 1847 he joined with W. B. Ogden and others, in resuscitating the Galena & Chicago Union Railway, which had been incorporated in 1836. He became President of the Company in 1850, and assisted in constructing various sections of road in Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, which have since become portions of the Chicago & Northwestern system. He was also one of the original Directors of the North Side Street Railway Company, organized in 1859. Died, Feb. 26, 1871.

TURNER, Jonathan Baldwin, educator and agriculturist, was born in Templeton, Mass., Dec. 7, 1805; grew up on a farm and, before reaching his majority, began teaching in a country school. After spending a short time in an academy at Salem, in 1827 he entered the preparatory department of Yale College, supporting himself, in part, by manual labor and teaching in a gymnasium. In 1829 he matriculated in the classical department at Yale, graduated in 1833, and the same year accepted a position as tutor in Illinois College at Jacksonville, Ill., which had been opened, three years previous, by the late Dr. J. M. Sturtevant. In the next fourteen years he gave instruction in nearly every branch embraced in the college curriculum, though holding, during most of this period, the chair of Rhetoric and English Literature. In 1847 he retired from college duties to give attention to scientific agriculture, in which he had always manifested a deep interest. The cultivation and sale of the Osage orange as a hedge-plant now occupied his attention for many years, and its successful introduction in Illinois and other Western States—where the absence of timber rendered some substitute a necessity for fencing purposes—was largely due to his efforts. At the same time he took a deep interest in the cause of practical scientific education for the industrial classes, and, about 1850, began formulating that system of industrial education which, after twelve years of labor and agitation, he had the satisfaction of seeing recognized in the act adopted by Congress, and approved by President Lincoln, in July, 1862, making liberal donations of public lands for the establishment of "Industrial Colleges" in the several States, out of which grew the University of Illinois at Champaign. While Professor Turner had zealous collaborators in this field, in Illinois and elsewhere, to him, more than to any other single man in the Nation, belongs the credit for this magnificent achievement. (See Education, and University of Illinois.) He was also one of the chief factors in founding and building up the Illinois State Teachers' Association, and the State Agricultural and Horticultural Societies. His address on "The Millennium of Labor," delivered at the first State Agricultural Fair at Springfield, in 1853, is still remembered as marking an era in industrial progress in Illinois. A zealous champion of free thought, in both political and religious affairs, he long bore the reproach which attached to the radical Abolitionist, only to enjoy, in later years, the respect universally accorded to those who had the courage and independence to avow their honest convictions. Prof. Turner was twice an unsuccessful candidate for Congress—once as a Republican and once as an "Independent"—and wrote much on political, religious and educational topics. The evening of an honored and useful life was spent among friends in Jacksonville, which was his home for more than sixty years, his death taking place in that city, Jan. 10, 1899, at the advanced age of 93 years.—Mrs. Mary Turner Carriel, at the present time (1899) one of the Trustees of the University of Illinois, is Prof. Turner's only daughter.

TURNER, Thomas J., lawyer and Congressman, born in Trumbull County, Ohio, April 5, 1815. Leaving home at the age of 18, he spent three years in Indiana and in the mining districts about Galena and in Southern Wisconsin, locating in Stephenson County, in 1836, where he was admitted to the bar in 1840, and elected Probate Judge in 1841. Soon afterwards Governor Ford appointed him Prosecuting Attorney, in which capacity he secured the conviction and punishment of the murderers of Colonel Davenport. In 1846 he was elected to Congress as a Democrat, and, the following year, founded "The Prairie Democrat" (afterward "The Freeport Bulletin"), the first newspaper published in the county. Elected to the Legislature in 1854, he was chosen Speaker of the House, the next year becoming the first Mayor of Freeport. He was a member of the Peace Conference of 1861, and, in May of that year, was commissioned, by Governor Yates, Colonel of the Fifteenth Illinois Volunteers, but resigned in 1862. He served as a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1869-70, and, in 1871, was again elected to the Legislature, where he received the Democratic caucus nomination for United States Senator against General Logan. In 1871 he removed to Chicago, and was twice an unsuccessful candidate for the office of State's Attorney. In February, 1874, he went to Hot Springs, Ark., for medical treatment, and died there, April 3 following.

TUSCOLA, a city and the county-seat of Douglas County, located at the intersection of the Illinois Central and two other trunk lines of railway, 22 miles south of Champaign, and 36 miles east of Decatur. Besides a brick court-house it has five churches, a graded school, a national bank, two weekly newspapers and two establishments for the manufacture of carriages and wagons. Population (1880), 1,457; (1890), 1,897; (1900), 2,569.

TUSCOLA, CHARLESTON & VINCENNES RAILROAD. (See Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railroad.)

TUTHILL, Richard Stanley, jurist, was born at Vergennes, Jackson County, Ill., Nov. 10, 1841. After passing through the common schools of his native county, he took a preparatory course in a high school at St. Louis and in Illinois College, Jacksonville, when he entered Middlebury College, Vt., graduating there in 1863. Immediately thereafter he joined the Federal army at Vicksburg, and, after serving for some time in a company of scouts attached to General Logan's command, was commissioned a Lieutenant in the First Michigan Light Artillery, with which he served until the close of the war, meanwhile being twice promoted. During this time he was with General Sherman in the march to Meridian, and in the Atlanta campaign, also took part with General Thomas in the operations against the rebel General Hood in Tennessee, and in the battle of Nashville. Having resigned his commission in May, 1865, he took up the study of law, which he had prosecuted as he had opportunity while in the army, and was admitted to the bar at Nashville in 1866, afterwards serving for a time as Prosecuting Attorney on the Nashville circuit. In 1873 he removed to Chicago, two years later was elected City Attorney and re-elected in 1877; was a delegate to the Republican National Convention of 1880 and, in 1884, was appointed United States District Attorney for the Northern District, serving until 1886. In 1887 he was elected Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Rogers, was re-elected for a full term in 1891, and again in 1897.

TYNDALE, Sharon, Secretary of State, born in Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 19, 1816; at the age of 17 came to Belleville, Ill., and was engaged for a time in mercantile business, later being employed in a surveyor's corps under the internal improvement system of 1837. Having married in 1839, he returned soon after to Philadelphia, where he engaged in mercantile business with his father, then came to Illinois, a second time, in 1845, spending a year or two in business at Peoria. About 1847 he returned to Belleville and entered upon a course of mathematical study, with a view to fitting himself more thoroughly for the profession of a civil engineer. In 1851 he graduated in engineering at Cambridge, Mass., after which he was employed for a time on the Sunbury & Erie Railroad, and later on certain Illinois railroads. In 1857 he was elected County Surveyor of St. Clair County, and, in 1861, by appointment of President Lincoln, became Postmaster of the city of Belleville. He held this position until 1864, when he received the Republican nomination for Secretary of State and was elected, remaining in office four years. He was an earnest advocate, and virtually author, of the first act for the registration of voters in Illinois, passed at the session of 1865. After retiring from office in 1869, he continued to reside in Springfield, and was employed for a time in the survey of the Gilman, Clinton & Springfield Railway—now the Springfield Division of the Illinois Central. At an early hour on the morning of April 29, 1871, while going from his home to the railroad station at Springfield, to take the train for St. Louis, he was assassinated upon the street by shooting, as supposed for the purpose of robbery—his dead body being found a few hours later at the scene of the tragedy. Mr. Tyndale was a brother of Gen. Hector Tyndale of Pennsylvania, who won a high reputation by his services during the war. His second wife, who survived him, was a daughter of Shadrach Penn, an editor of considerable reputation who was the contemporary and rival of George D. Prentice at Louisville, for some years.

"UNDERGROUND RAILROAD," THE. A history of Illinois would be incomplete without reference to the unique system which existed there, as in other Northern States, from forty to seventy years ago, known by the somewhat mysterious title of "The Underground Railroad." The origin of the term has been traced (probably in a spirit of facetiousness) to the expression of a Kentucky planter who, having pursued a fugitive slave across the Ohio River, was so surprised by his sudden disappearance, as soon as he had reached the opposite shore, that he was led to remark, "The nigger must have gone off on an underground road." From "underground road" to "underground railroad," the transition would appear to have been easy, especially in view of the increased facility with which the work was performed when railroads came into use. For readers of the present generation, it may be well to explain what "The Underground Railroad" really was. It may be defined as the figurative appellation for a spontaneous movement in the free States—extending, sometimes, into the slave States themselves—to assist slaves in their efforts to escape from bondage to freedom. The movement dates back to a period close to the Revolutionary War, long before it received a definite name. Assistance given to fugitives from one State by citizens of another, became a cause of complaint almost as soon as the Government was organized. In fact, the first President himself lost a slave who took refuge at Portsmouth, N. H., where the public sentiment was so strong against his return, that the patriotic and philosophic "Father of his Country" chose to let him remain unmolested, rather than "excite a mob or riot, or even uneasy sensations, in the minds of well-disposed citizens." That the matter was already one of concern in the minds of slaveholders, is shown by the fact that a provision was inserted in the Constitution for their conciliation, guaranteeing the return of fugitives from labor, as well as from justice, from one State to another.

In 1793 Congress passed the first Fugitive Slave Law, which was signed by President Washington. This law provided that the owner, his agent or attorney, might follow the slave into any State or Territory, and, upon oath or affidavit before a court or magistrate, be entitled to a warrant for his return. Any person who should hinder the arrest of the fugitive, or who should harbor, aid or assist him, knowing him to be such, was subject to a fine of $500 for each offense.—In 1850, fifty-seven years later, the first act having proved inefficacious, or conditions having changed, a second and more stringent law was enacted. This is the one usually referred to in discussions of the subject. It provided for an increased fine, not to exceed $1,000, and imprisonment not exceeding six months, with liability for civil damages to the party injured. No proof of ownership was required beyond the statement of a claimant, and the accused was not permitted to testify for himself. The fee of the United States Commissioner, before whom the case was tried, was ten dollars if he found for the claimant; if not, five dollars. This seemed to many an indirect form of bribery; clearly, it made it to the Judge's pecuniary advantage to decide in favor of the claimant. The law made it possible and easy for a white man to arrest, and carry into slavery, any free negro who could not immediately prove, by other witnesses, that he was born free, or had purchased his freedom.

Instead of discouraging the disposition, on the part of the opponents of slavery, to aid fugitives in their efforts to reach a region where they would be secure in their freedom, the effect of the Fugitive Slave Law of 1850 (as that of 1793 had been in a smaller degree) was the very opposite of that intended by its authors—unless, indeed, they meant to make matters worse. The provisions of the act seemed, to many people, so unfair, so one-sided, that they rebelled in spirit and refused to be made parties to its enforcement. The law aroused the anti-slavery sentiment of the North, and stimulated the active friends of the fugitives to take greater risks in their behalf. New efforts on the part of the slaveholders were met by a determination to evade, hinder and nullify the law.

And here a strange anomaly is presented. The slaveholder, in attempting to recover his slave, was acting within his constitutional and legal rights. The slave was his property in law. He had purchased or inherited his bondman on the same plane with his horse or his land, and, apart from the right to hold a human being in bondage, regarded his legal rights to the one as good as the other. From a legal standpoint his position was impregnable. The slave was his, representing so much of money value, and whoever was instrumental in the loss of that slave was, both theoretically and technically, a partner in robbery. Therefore he looked on "The Underground Railway" as the work of thieves, and entertained bitter hatred toward all concerned in its operation. On the other hand, men who were, in all other respects, good citizens—often religiously devout and pillars of the church—became bold and flagrant violators of the law in relation to this sort of property. They set at naught a plain provision of the Constitution and the act of Congress for its enforcement. Without hope of personal gain or reward, at the risk of fine and imprisonment, with the certainty of social ostracism and bitter opposition, they harbored the fugitive and helped him forward on every occasion. And why? Because they saw in him a man, with the same inherent right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" that they themselves possessed. To them this was a higher law than any Legislature, State or National, could enact. They denied that there could be truly such a thing as property in man. Believing that the law violated human rights, they justified themselves in rendering it null and void.

For the most part, the "Underground Railroad" operators and promoters were plain, obscure men, without hope of fame or desire for notoriety. Yet there were some whose names are conspicuous in history, such as Wendell Phillips, Thomas Wentworth Higginson and Theodore Parker of Massachusetts; Gerrit Smith and Thurlow Weed of New York; Joshua R. Giddings of Ohio, and Owen Lovejoy of Illinois. These had their followers and sympathizers in all the Northern States, and even in some portions of the South. It is a curious fact, that some of the most active spirits connected with the "Underground Railroad" were natives of the South, or had resided there long enough to become thoroughly acquainted with the "institution." Levi Coffin, who had the reputation of being the "President of the Underground Railroad"—at least so far as the region west of the Ohio was concerned—was an active operator on the line in North Carolina before his removal from that State to Indiana in 1826. Indeed, as a system, it is claimed to have had its origin at Guilford College, in the "Old North State" in 1819, though the evidence of this may not be conclusive.

Owing to the peculiar nature of their business, no official reports were made, no lists of officers, conductors, station agents or operators preserved, and few records kept which are now accessible. Consequently, we are dependent chiefly upon the personal recollection of individual operators for a history of their transactions. Each station on the road was the house of a "friend" and it is significant, in this connection, that in every settlement of Friends, or Quakers, there was sure to be a house of refuge for the slave. For this reason it was, perhaps, that one of the most frequently traveled lines extended from Virginia and Maryland through Eastern Pennsylvania, and then on towards New York or directly to Canada. From the proximity of Ohio to Virginia and Kentucky, and the fact that it offered the shortest route through free soil to Canada, it was traversed by more lines than any other State, although Indiana was pretty thoroughly "grid ironed" by roads to freedom. In all, however, the routes were irregular, often zigzag, for purposes of security, and the "conductor" was any one who conveyed fugitives from one station to another. The "train" was sometimes a farm-wagon, loaded with produce for market at some town (or depot) on the line, frequently a closed carriage, and it is related that once, in Ohio, a number of carriages conveying a large party, were made to represent a funeral procession. Occasionally the train ran on foot, for convenience of side-tracking into the woods or a cornfield, in case of pursuit by a wild locomotive.

Then, again, there were not wanting lawyers who, in case the operator, conductor or station agent got into trouble, were ready, without fee or reward, to defend either him or his human freight in the courts. These included such names of national repute as Salmon P. Chase, Thaddeus Stevens, Charles Sumner, William H. Seward, Rutherford B. Hayes, Richard H. Dana, and Isaac N. Arnold, while, taking the whole country over, their "name was legion." And there were a few men of wealth, like Thomas Garrett of Delaware, willing to contribute money by thousands to their assistance. Although technically acting in violation of law—or, as claimed by themselves, in obedience to a "higher law"—the time has already come when there is a disposition to look upon the actors as, in a certain sense, heroes, and their deeds as fitly belonging to the field of romance.

The most comprehensive collection of material relating to the history of this movement has been furnished in a recent volume entitled, "The Underground Railroad from Slavery to Freedom," by Prof. Wilbur H. Siebert, of Ohio State University; and, while it is not wholly free from errors, both as to individual names and facts, it will probably remain as the best compilation of history bearing on this subject—especially as the principal actors are fast passing away. One of the interesting features of Prof. Siebert's book is a map purporting to give the principal routes and stations in the States northwest of the Ohio, yet the accuracy of this, as well as the correctness of personal names given, has been questioned by some best informed on the subject. As might be expected from its geographical position between two slave States—Kentucky and Missouri—on the one hand, and the lakes offering a highway to Canada on the other, it is naturally to be assumed that Illinois would be an attractive field, both for the fugitive and his sympathizer.

The period of greatest activity of the system in this State was between 1840 and 1861—the latter being the year when the pro-slavery party in the South, by their attempt forcibly to dissolve the Union, took the business out of the hands of the secret agents of the "Underground Railroad," and—in a certain sense—placed it in the hands of the Union armies. It was in 1841 that Abraham Lincoln—then a conservative opponent of the extension of slavery—on an appeal from a judgment, rendered by the Circuit Court in Tazewell County, in favor of the holder of a note given for the service of the indentured slave-girl "Nance," obtained a decision from the Supreme Court of Illinois upholding the doctrine that the girl was free under the Ordinance of 1787 and the State Constitution, and that the note, given to the person who claimed to be her owner, was void. And it is a somewhat curious coincidence that the same Abraham Lincoln, as President of the United States, in the second year of the War of the Rebellion, issued the Proclamation of Emancipation which finally resulted in striking the shackles from the limbs of every slave in the Union.

In the practical operation of aiding fugitives in Illinois, it was natural that the towns along the border upon the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, should have served as a sort of entrepôts, or initial stations, for the reception of this class of freight—especially if adjacent to some anti-slavery community. This was the case at Chester, from which access was easy to Sparta, where a colony of Covenanters, or Seceders, was located, and whence a route extended, by way of Oakdale, Nashville and Centralia, in the direction of Chicago. Alton offered convenient access to Bond County, where there was a community of anti-slavery people at an early day, or the fugitives could be forwarded northward by way of Jerseyville, Waverly and Jacksonville, about each of which there was a strong anti-slavery sentiment. Quincy, in spite of an intense hostility among the mass of the community to anything savoring of abolitionism, became the theater of great activity on the part of the opponents of the institution, especially after the advent there of Dr. David Nelson and Dr. Richard Eells, both of whom had rendered themselves obnoxious to the people of Missouri by extending aid to fugitives. The former was a practical abolitionist who, having freed his slaves in his native State of Virginia, removed to Missouri and attempted to establish Marion College, a few miles from Palmyra, but was soon driven to Illinois. Locating near Quincy, he founded the "Mission Institute" there, at which he continued to disseminate his anti-slavery views, while educating young men for missionary work. The "Institute" was finally burned by emissaries from Missouri, while three young men who had been connected with it, having been caught in Missouri, were condemned to twelve years' confinement in the penitentiary of that State—partly on the testimony of a negro, although a negro was not then a legal witness in the courts against a white man. Dr. Eells was prosecuted before Stephen A. Douglas (then a Judge of the Circuit Court), and fined for aiding a fugitive to escape, and the judgment against him was finally confirmed by the Supreme Court after his death, in 1852, ten years after the original indictment.

A map in Professor Siebert's book, showing the routes and principal stations of the "Underground Railroad," makes mention of the following places in Illinois, in addition to those already referred to: Carlinville, in Macoupin County; Payson and Mendon, in Adams; Washington, in Tazewell; Metamora, in Woodford; Magnolia, in Putnam; Galesburg, in Knox; Princeton (the home of Owen Lovejoy and the Bryants), in Bureau; and many more. Ottawa appears to have been the meeting point of a number of lines, as well as the home of a strong colony of practical abolitionists. Cairo also became an important transfer station for fugitives arriving by river, after the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad, especially as it offered the speediest way of reaching Chicago, towards which nearly all the lines converged. It was here that the fugitives could be most safely disposed of by placing them upon vessels, which, without stopping at intermediate ports, could soon land them on Canadian soil.

As to methods, these differed according to circumstances, the emergencies of the occasion, or the taste, convenience or resources of the operator. Deacon Levi Morse, of Woodford County, near Metamora, had a route towards Magnolia, Putnam County; and his favorite "car" was a farm wagon in which there was a double bottom. The passengers were snugly placed below, and grain sacks, filled with bran or other light material, were laid over, so that the whole presented the appearance of an ordinary load of grain on its way to market. The same was true as to stations and routes. One, who was an operator, says: "Wherever an abolitionist happened on a fugitive, or the converse, there was a station, for the time, and the route was to the next anti-slavery man to the east or the north. As a general rule, the agent preferred not to know anything beyond the operation of his own immediate section of the road. If he knew nothing about the operations of another, and the other knew nothing of his, they could not be witnesses in court.

We have it on the authority of Judge Harvey B. Hurd, of Chicago, that runaways were usually forwarded from that city to Canada by way of the Lakes, there being several steamers available for that purpose. On one occasion thirteen were put aboard a vessel under the eyes of a United States Marshal and his deputies. The fugitives, secreted in a woodshed, one by one took the planks of colored stavedories carrying wood aboard the ship. Possibly the term, "There's a nigger in the woodpile," may have originated in this incident. Thirteen was an "unlucky number" in this instance—for the masters.

Among the notable trials for assisting runaways in violation of the Fugitive Slave Law, in addition to the case of Dr. Eells, already mentioned, were those of Owen Lovejoy of Princeton, and Deacon Cushing of Will County, both of whom were defended by Judge James Collins of Chicago. John Hossack and Dr. Joseph Stout of Ottawa, with some half-dozen of their neighbors and friends, were tried at Ottawa, in 1859, for assisting a fugitive and acquitted on a technicality. A strong array of attorneys, afterwards widely known through the northern part of the State, appeared for the defense, including Isaac N. Arnold, Joseph Knox, B. C. Cook, J. V. Eustace, Edward S. Leland and E. C. Larned. Joseph T. Morse, of Woodford County, was also arrested, taken to Peoria and committed to jail, but acquitted on trial.

Another noteworthy case was that of Dr. Samuel Willard (now of Chicago) and his father, Julius A. Willard, charged with assisting in the escape of a fugitive at Jacksonville, in 1843, when the Doctor was a student in Illinois College. "The National Corporation Reporter," a few years ago, gave an account of this affair, together with a letter from Dr. Willard, in which he states that, after protracted litigation, during which the case was carried to the Supreme Court, it was ended by his pleading guilty before Judge Samuel D. Lockwood, when he was fined one dollar and costs—the latter amounting to twenty dollars. The Doctor frankly adds: "My father, as well as myself, helped many fugitives afterwards." It did not always happen, however, that offenders escaped so easily.

Judge Harvey B. Hurd, already referred to, and an active anti-slavery man in the days of the Fugitive Slave Law, relates the following: Once, when the trial of a fugitive was going on before Justice Korcheval, in a room on the second floor of a two-story frame building on Clark Street in the city of Chicago, the crowd in attendance filled the room, the stairway and the adjoining sidewalk. In some way the prisoner got mixed in with the audience, and passed down over the heads of those on the stairs, where the officers were unable to follow.

In another case, tried before United States Commissioner Geo. W. Mecker, the result was made to hinge upon a point in the indictment to the effect that the fugitive was "copper-colored." The Commissioner, as the story goes, being inclined to favor public sentiment, called for a large copper cent, that he might make comparison. The decision was, that the prisoner was "off color," so to speak, and he was hustled out of the room before the officers could re-arrest him, as they had been instructed to do.

Dr. Samuel Willard, in a review of Professor Siebert's book, published in "The Dial" of Chicago, makes mention of Henry Irving and William Chauncey Carter as among his active allies at Jacksonville, with Rev. Bilious Pond and Deacon Lyman of Farmington (near the present village of Farmingdale in Sangamon County), Luther Ransom of Springfield, Andrew Borders of Randolph County, Joseph Gerrish of Jersey and William T. Allan of Henry, as their coadjutors in other parts of the State. Other active agents or promoters, in the same field, included such names as Dr. Charles V. Dyer, Philo Carpenter, Calvin De Wolf, L. C. P. Freer, Zelima Eastman, James H. Collins, Harvey B. Hurd, J. Young Scammon, Col. J. F. Farnsworth and others of Chicago, whose names have already been mentioned, Rev. Asa Turner, Deacon Ballard, J. K. Van Dorn and Erastus Benton, of Quincy and Adams County; President Rufus Blanchard of Knox College, Galesburg, John Leeper of Bond, the late Prof. J. B. Turner and Eblin Wolcott of Jacksonville, Capt. Parker Morse and his four sons—Joseph T., Levi P., Parker, Jr., and Mark—of Woodford County; Rev. William Sloane of Randolph, William Strawn of La Salle, besides a host who were willing to aid their fellow men in their aspirations to freedom, without advertising their own exploits.

Among the incidents of "Underground Railroad" in Illinois is one which had some importance politically, having for its climax a dramatic scene in Congress, but of which, so far as known, no full account has ever been written. About 1855, Ephraim Lombard, a Mississippi planter, but a New Englander by birth, purchased a large body of prairie land in the northeastern part of Stark County, and, taking up his residence temporarily in the village of Bradford, began its improvement. He had brought with him from Mississippi a negro gray-haired and bent with age, a slave of probably no great value. "Old Mose," as he was called, soon came to be well known and a favorite in the neighborhood. Lombard boldly stated that he had brought him there as a slave; that, by virtue of the Dred Scott decision (then of recent date), he had a constitutional right to take his slaves wherever he pleased, and that "Old Mose" was just as much his property in Illinois as in Mississippi. It soon became evident to some, that his bringing of the negro to Illinois was an experiment to test the law and the feelings of the Northern people. This being the case, a shrewd play would have been to let him have his way till other slaves should have been brought to stock the new plantation. But this was too slow a process for the abolitionists, to whom the holding of a slave in the free State of Illinois appeared an unbearable outrage. It was feared that he might take the old negro back to Mississippi and fail to bring any others. It was reported, also, that "Old Mose" was ill-treated; that he was given only the coarsest food in a back shed, as if he were a horse or a dog, instead of being permitted to eat at table with the family. The prairie citizen of that time was very particular upon this point of etiquette. The hired man or woman, debarred from the table of his or her employer, would not have remained a day. A quiet consultation with "Old Mose" revealed the fact that he would hail the gift of freedom joyously. Accordingly, one Peter Risedorf, and another equally daring, met him by the light of the stars and, before morning, he was placed in the care of Owen Lovejoy, at Princeton, twenty miles away. From there he was speedily "franked" by the member of Congress to friends in Canada.

There was a great commotion in Bradford over the "stealing" of "Old Mose." Lombard and his friends denounced the act in terms bitter and profane, and threatened vengeance upon the perpetrators. The conductors were known only to a few, and they kept their secret well. Lovejoy's part in the affair, however, soon leaked out. Lombard returned to Mississippi, where he related his experiences to Mr. Singleton, the Representative in Congress from his district. During the next session of Congress, Singleton took occasion, in a speech, to sneer at Lovejoy as a "nigger-stealer," citing the case of "Old Mose." Mr. Lovejoy replied in his usual fervid and dramatic style, making a speech which ensured his election to Congress for life—"Is it desired to call attention to this fact of my assisting fugitive slaves?" he said. "Owen Lovejoy lives at Princeton, Ill., three-quarters of a mile east of the village, and he aids every slave that comes to his door and asks it. Thou invisible Demon of Slavery, dost thou think to cross my humble threshold and forbid me to give bread to the hungry and shelter to the homeless? I bid you defiance, in the name of my God!"

With another incident of an amusing character this article may be closed: Hon. J. Young Scammon, of Chicago, being accused of conniving at the escape of a slave from officers of the law, was asked by the court what he would do if summoned as one of a posse to pursue and capture a fugitive. "I would certainly obey the summons," he replied, "but—I should probably stub my toe and fall down before I reached him."

NOTE.—Those who wish to pursue the subject of the "Underground Railroad" in Illinois further, are referred to the work of Dr. Siebert, already mentioned, and to the various County Histories which have been issued and may be found in the public libraries; also for interesting incidents, to "Reminiscences of Levi Coffin," Johnson's "From Dixie to Canada," Pettit's Sketches, "Still, Underground Railroad," and a pamphlet of the same title by James H. Fairbaird, ex-President of Oberlin College.

UNDERWOOD, William H., lawyer, legislator and jurist, was born at Schoharie Court House, N. Y., Feb. 21, 1818, and, after admission to the bar, removed to Belleville, Ill., where he began practice in 1840. The following year he was elected State's Attorney, and re-elected in 1843. In 1846 he was chosen a member of the lower house of the General Assembly, and, in 1848-54, sat as Judge of the Second Circuit. During this period he declined a nomination to Congress, although equivalent to an election. In 1856 he was elected State Senator, and re-elected in 1860. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1869-70, and, in 1870, was again elected to the Senate, retiring to private life in 1872. Died, Sept. 23, 1875.

UNION COUNTY, one of the fifteen counties into which Illinois was divided at the time of its admission as a State—having been organized, under the Territorial Government, in January, 1818. It is situated in the southern division of the State, bounded on the west by the Mississippi River, and has an area of 400 square miles. The eastern and interior portions are drained by the Cache River and Clear Creek. The western part of the county comprises the broad, rich bottom lands lying along the Mississippi, but is subject to frequent overflow, while the eastern portion is hilly, and most of its area originally heavily timbered. The county is especially rich in minerals. Iron-ore, lead, bituminous coal, chalk, alum and potter's clay are found in considerable abundance. Several lines of railway (the most important being the Illinois Central) either cross or tap the county. The chief occupation is agriculture, although manufacturing is carried on to a limited extent. Fruit is extensively cultivated. Jonesboro is the county-seat, and Cobden and Anna important shipping stations. The latter is the location of the Southern Hospital for the Insane. The population of the county, in 1890, was 21,529. Being next to St. Clair, Randolph and Gallatin, one of the earliest settled counties in the State, many prominent men found their first home, on coming into the State, at Jonesboro, and this region, for a time, exerted a strong influence in public affairs. Pop. (1900), 22,610.

UNION LEAGUE OF AMERICA, a secret political and patriotic order which had its origin early in the late Civil War, for the avowed purpose of sustaining the cause of the Union and counteracting the machinations of the secret organizations designed to promote the success of the Rebellion. The first regular Council of the order was organized at Pekin, Tazewell County, June 25, 1862, consisting of eleven members, as follows: John W. Glasgow, Dr. D. A. Cheever, Hart Montgomery, Maj. Richard N. Cullom (father of Senator Cullom), Alexander Small, Rev. J. W. M. Vernon, George H. Harlow (afterward Secretary of State), Charles Turner, Col. Jonathan Merriam, Henry Pratt and L. F. Garrett. One of the number was a Union refugee from Tennessee, who dictated the first oath from memory, as administered to members of a somewhat similar order which had been organized among the Unionists of his own State. It solemnly pledged the taker, (1) to preserve inviolate the secrets and business of the order; (2) to "support, maintain, protect and defend the civil liberties of the Union of these United States against all enemies, either domestic or foreign, at all times and under all circumstances," even "if necessary, to the sacrifice of life"; (3) to aid in electing only true Union men to offices of trust in the town, county, State and General Government; (4) to assist, protect and defend any member of the order who might be in peril from his connection with the order, and (5) to obey all laws, rules or regulations of any Council to which the taker of the oath might be attached. The oath was taken upon the Bible, the Declaration of Independence and Constitution of the United States, the taker pledging his sacred honor to its fulfillment. A special reason for the organization existed in the activity, about this time, of the "Knights of the Golden Circle," a disloyal organization which had been introduced from the South, and which afterwards took the name, in the North, of "American Knights" and "Sons of Liberty." (See Secret Treasonable Societies.) Three months later, the organization had extended to a number of other counties of the State and, on the 25th of September following, the first State Council met at Bloomington—twelve counties being represented—and a State organization was effected. At this meeting the following general officers were chosen: Grand President—Judge Mark Bangs, of Marshall County (now of Chicago); Grand Vice-President—Prof. Daniel Wilkin, of McLean; Grand Secretary—George H. Harlow, of Tazewell; Grand Treasurer—H. S. Austin, of Peoria, Grand Marshal—J. R. Gorin, of Macon; Grand Herald—A. Gould, of Henry; Grand Sentinel—John E. Rosette, of Sangamon. An Executive Committee was also appointed, consisting of Joseph Medill of "The Chicago Tribune"; Dr. A. J. McFarland, of Morgan County; J. K. Warren, of Macon; Rev. J. C. Rybolt, of La Salle; the President, Judge Bangs; Enoch Emery, of Peoria; and John E. Rosette. Under the direction of this Committee, with Mr. Medill as its Chairman, the constitution and by-laws were thoroughly revised and a new ritual adopted, which materially changed the phraseology and removed some of the crudities of the original obligation, as well as increased the beauty and impressiveness of the initiatory ceremonies. New signs, grips and pass-words were also adopted, which were finally accepted by the various organizations of the order throughout the Union, which, by this time, included many soldiers in the army, as well as civilians. The second Grand (or State) Council was held at Springfield, January 14, 1863, with only seven counties represented. The limited representation was discouraging, but the members took heart from the inspiring words of Governor Yates, addressed to a committee of the order who waited upon him. At a special session of the Executive Committee, held at Peoria, six days later, a vigorous campaign was mapped out, under which agents were sent into nearly every county in the State. In October, 1862, the strength of the order in Illinois was estimated at three to five thousand; a few months later, the number of enrolled members had increased to 50,000—so rapid had been the growth of the order. On March 25, 1863, a Grand Council met in Chicago—404 Councils in Illinois being represented, with a number from Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. At this meeting a Committee was appointed to prepare a plan of organization for a National Grand Council, which was carried out at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 20th of May following—the constitution, ritual and signs of the Illinois organization being adopted with slight modifications. The revised obligation—taken upon the Bible, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States—bound members of the League to “support, protect and defend the Government of the United States and the flag thereof, against all enemies, foreign and domestic,” and to “bear true faith and allegiance to the same”; to “defend the State against invasion or insurrection”; to support only “true and reliable men” for offices of trust and profit; to protect and defend worthy members, and to preserve inviolate the secrets of the order. The address to new members was a model of impressiveness and a powerful appeal to their patriotism. The organization extended rapidly, not only throughout the Northwest, but in the South also, especially in the army. In 1864 the number of Councils in Illinois was estimated at 1,300, with a membership of 175,000; and it is estimated that the total membership, throughout the Union, was 2,000,000. The influence of the silent, but zealous and effective, operations of the organization, was shown, not only in the stimulus given to enlistments and support of the war policy of the Government, but in the raising of supplies for the sick and wounded soldiers in the field. Within a few weeks before the fall of Vicksburg, over $25,000 in cash, besides large quantities of stores, were sent to Col. John Williams (then in charge of the Sanitary Bureau at Springfield), as the direct result of appeals made through circulars sent out by the officers of the “League.” Large contributions of money and supplies also reached the sick and wounded in hospital through the medium of the Sanitary Commission in Chicago. Zealous efforts were made by the opposition to get at the secrets of the order, and, in one case, a complete copy of the ritual was published by one of their organs; but the effect was so far the reverse of what was anticipated, that this line of attack was not continued. During the stormy session of the Legislature in 1863, the League is said to have rendered effective service in protecting Governor Yates from threatened assassination. It continued its silent but effective operations until the complete overthrow of the rebellion, when it ceased to exist as a political organization.

UNITED STATES SENATORS. The following is a list of United States senators from Illinois, from the date of the admission of the State into the Union until 1899, with the date and duration of the term of each: Ninian Edwards, 1818-24; Jesse B. Thomas, Sr., 1818-29; John McLean, 1824-25 and 1829-30; Elias Kent Kane, 1825-35; David Jewett Baker, Nov. 12 to Dec. 11, 1830; John M. Robinson, 1830-41; William L. D. Ewing, 1835-37; Richard M. Young, 1837-43; Samuel McRoberts, 1841-43; Sidney Breesee, 1843-49; James Semple, 1843-47; Stephen A. Douglas, 1847-61; James Shields, 1849-55; Lyman Trumbull, 1855-73; Orville H. Browning, 1861-63; William A. Richardson, 1863-65; Richard Yates, 1865-71; John A. Logan, 1871-77 and 1879-86; Richard J. Oglesby, 1873-79; David Davis, 1877-83; Shelby M. Cullom, first elected in 1883, and re-elected in '89 and '95, his third term expiring in 1901; Charles B. Farwell, 1887-91; John McAuley Palmer, 1891-97; William E. Mason, elected in 1897, for the term expiring, March 4, 1903.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO (The New). One of the leading educational institutions of the country, located at Chicago. It is the outgrowth of an attempt, put forth by the American Educational Society (organized at Washington in 1888), to supply the place which the original institution of the same name had been designed to fill. (See University of Chicago—The Old.) The following year, Mr. John D. Rockefeller of New York tendered a contribution of $600,000 toward the endowment of the enterprise, conditioned upon securing additional pledges to the amount of $400,000 by June 1, 1890. The offer was accepted, and the sum promptly raised. In addition, a site, covering four blocks of land in the city of Chicago, was secured—two and one-half blocks being acquired by purchase for $282,500, and one and one-half (valued at $125,000) donated by Mr. Marshall Field. A charter was secured and an organization effected, Sept. 10, 1890. The Presidency of the institution was tendered to, and accepted by, Dr. William R. Harper. Since that time the University has been the recipient of other generous benefactions by Mr. Rockefeller and others, until the aggregate donations (1898) exceed $10,000,000. Of this amount over one-half has been contributed by Mr. Rockefeller, while he has pledged himself to make additional contributions of $2,000,000, conditioned upon the raising of a like sum, from other donors, by Jan. 1, 1900. The buildings erected on the campus, prior to 1890, include a chemical laboratory costing $182,000, a lecture hall, $150,000; a physical laboratory $150,000; a museum, $100,000; an academy dormitory, $30,000; three dormitories for women, $150,000, two dormitories for men, $100,000, to which several important additions were made during 1896 and 97. The faculty embraces over 150 instructors, selected with reference to their fitness for their respective departments from among the most eminent scholars in America and Europe. Women are admitted as students and graduated upon an equality with men. The work of practical instruction began in October, 1892, with 589 registered students, coming from nearly every Northern State, and including 250 graduates from other institutions, to which accessions were made, during the year, raising the aggregate to over 900. The second year the number exceeded 1,100; the third, it rose to 1,750, and the fourth (1895-96), to some 2,000, including representatives from every State of the Union, besides many from foreign countries. Special features of the institution include the admission of graduates from other institutions to a post-graduate course, and the University Extension Division, which is conducted largely by means of lecture courses, in other cities, or through lecture centers in the vicinity of the University, non-resident students having the privilege of written examinations. The various libraries embrace over 300,000 volumes, of which nearly 60,000 belong to what are called the "Departmental Libraries," besides a large and valuable collection of maps and pamphlets.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO (The Old), an educational institution at Chicago, under the care of the Baptist denomination, for some years known as the Douglas University. Senator Stephen A. Douglas offered, in 1854, to donate ten acres of land, in what was then near the southern border of the city of Chicago, as a site for an institution of learning, provided buildings costing $100,000, be erected thereon within a stipulated time. The corner-stone of the main building was laid, July 4, 1857, but the financial panic of that year prevented its completion, and Mr. Douglas extended the time, and finally deeded the land to the trustees without reserve. For eighteen years the institution led a precarious existence, struggling under a heavy debt. By 1885, mortgages to the amount of $220,000 having accumulated, the trustees abandoned further effort, and acquiesced in the sale of the property under foreclosure proceedings. The original plan of the institution contemplated preparatory and collegiate departments, together with a college of law and a theological school.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS, the leading educational institution under control of the State, located at Urbana and adjoining the city of Champaign. The Legislature at the session of 1863 accepted a grant of 480,000 acres of land under Act of Congress, approved July 2, 1862, making an appropriation of public lands to States—30,000 acres for each Senator and each Representative in Congress—establishing colleges for teaching agriculture and the mechanic arts, though not to the exclusion of classical and scientific studies. Land-scrip under this grant was issued and placed in the hands of Governor Yates, and a Board of Trustees appointed under the State law was organized in March, 1867, the institution being located the same year. Departments and courses of study were established, and Dr. John M. Gregory, of Michigan, was chosen Regent (President).—The landscrip issued to Illinois was sold at an early day for what it would bring in open market, except 25,000 acres, which was located in Nebraska and Minnesota. This has recently been sold, realizing a larger sum than was received for all the scrip otherwise disposed of. The entire sum thus secured for permanent endowment aggregates $613,026. The University revenues were further increased by donations from Congress to each institution organized under the Act of 1862, of $15,000 per annum for the maintenance of an Agricultural Experiment Station, and, in 1890, of a similar amount for instruction—the latter to be increased $1,000 annually until it should reach $25,000.—A mechanical building was erected in 1871, and this is claimed to have been the first of its kind in America intended for strictly educational purposes. What was called "the main building" was formally opened in December, 1873. Other buildings embrace a "Science Hall," opened in 1892; a new "Engineering Hall," 1894; a fine Library Building, 1897. Eleven other principal structures and a number of smaller ones have been erected as conditions required. The value of property aggregates nearly $2,500,000, and appropriations from the State, for all purposes, previous to 1904, foot up $5,123,517.90.—Since 1871 the institution has been open to women. The courses of study embrace agriculture, chemistry, polytechnics, military tactics, natural and general sciences, languages and literature, economics, household science, trade and commerce. The Graduate School dates from 1891. In 1896 the Chicago College of Pharmacy was connected with the University; a College of Law and a Library School were opened in 1897, and the same year the Chicago College of Physicians and Surgeons was affiliated as the College of Medicine—a School of Dentistry being added to the latter in 1901. In 1885 the State Laboratory of Natural History was transferred from Normal, Ill., and an Agricultural Experiment Station established in 1888, from which bulletins are sent to farmers throughout the State who may desire them.—The first name of the Institution was "Illinois Industrial University," but, in 1885, this was changed to "University of Illinois." In 1887 the Trustees (of whom there are nine) were made elective by popular vote—three being elected every two years, each holding office six years. Dr. Gregory, having resigned the office of Regent in 1880, was succeeded by Dr. Selim H. Peabody, who had been Professor of Mechanical and Civil Engineering. Dr. Peabody resigned in 1891. The duties of Regent were then discharged by Prof. Thomas J. Burrill until August, 1894, when Dr. Andrew Sloan Draper, former State Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of New York, was installed as President, serving until 1904.—The corps of instruction (1904) includes over 100 Professors, 60 Associate and Assistant Professors and 200 Instructors and Assistants, besides special lecturers, demonstrators and clerks. The number of students has increased rapidly in recent years, as shown by the following totals for successive years from 1890-91 to 1903-04, inclusive: 519; 583; 714; 743; 810; 852; 1,075; 1,582; 1,824; 2,234; 2,505; 2,933; 3,289; 3,589. Of the last number, 2,271 were men and 718 women. During 1903-04 there were in all departments at Urbana, 2,547 students (256 being in the Preparatory Academy); and in the three Professional Departments in Chicago, 1,042, of whom 694 were in the College of Medicine, 185 in the School of Pharmacy, and 163 in the School of Dentistry. The University Library contains 63,700 volumes and 14,500 pamphlets, not including 5,350 volumes and 15,850 pamphlets in the State Laboratory of Natural History.—The University occupies a conspicuous and attractive site, embracing 220 acres adjacent to the line between Urbana and Champaign, and near the residence portion of the two cities. The athletic field of 11 acres, on which stand the gymnasium and armory, is enclosed with an ornamental iron fence. The campus, otherwise, is an open and beautiful park with fine landscape effects.

UNORGANIZED COUNTIES. In addition to the 102 counties into which Illinois is divided, acts were passed by the General Assembly, at different times, providing for the organization of a number of others, a few of which were subsequently organized under different names, but the majority of which were never organized at all—the proposition for such organization being rejected by vote of the people within the proposed boundaries, or allowed to lapse by non-action. These unorganized counties, with the date of the several acts authorizing them, and the territory which they were intended to include, were as follows: Allen County (1841)—comprising portions of Sangamon, Morgan and Macoupin Counties; Audobon (Audubon) County (1843)—from portions of Montgomery, Fayette and Shelby; Benton County (1843)—from Morgan, Greene and Macoupin; Coffee County (1837)—with substantially the same territory now comprised within the boundaries of Stark County, authorized two years later; Dane County (1839)—name changed to Christian in 1840; Harrison County (1855)—from McLean, Champaign and Vermilion, comprising territory since partially incorporated in Ford County; Holmes County (1857)—from Champaign and Vermilion; Marquette County (1843), changed (1847) to Highland—comprising the northern portion of Adams, (this act was accepted, with Columbus as the county-seat, but organization finally vacated); Michigan County (1837)—from a part of Cook; Milton County (1843)—from the south part of Vermilion; Okaw County (1841)—comprising substantially the same territory as Moultrie, organized under act of 1843; Oregon County (1851)—from parts of Sangamon, Morgan and Macoupin Counties, and covering substantially the same territory as proposed to be incorporated in Alleu County ten years earlier. The last act of this character was passed in 1867, when an attempt was made to organize Lincoln County out of parts of Champaign and Vermilion, but which failed for want of an affirmative vote.

UPPER ALTON, a city of Madison County, situated on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles northeast of Alton—laid out in 1816. It has several churches, and is the seat of Shurtleff College and the Western Military Academy, the former founded about 1831, and controlled by the Baptist denomination. Beds of excellent clay are found in the vicinity and utilized in pottery manufacture. Pop. (1890), 1,803; (1900), 2,373.

UPTON, George Putnam, journalist, was born at Roxbury, Mass., Oct. 25, 1834; graduated from Brown University in 1854, removed to Chicago in 1855, and began newspaper work on "The Native American," the following year taking the place of city editor of "The Evening Journal." In 1862, Mr. Upton became musical critic on "The Chicago Tribune," serving for a time also as its war correspondent in the field, later (about 1881) taking a place on the general editorial staff, which he still retains. He is regarded as an authority on musical and dramatic topics. Mr. Upton is also a stockholder in, and, for several years, has been Vice-President of the "Tribune" Company. Besides numerous contributions to magazines, his works include: "Letters of Peregrine Pickle" (1869); "Memories, a Story of German Love," translated from the German of Max Muller (1879); "Woman in Music" (1880); "Lives of German Composers" (3 vols.—1883-84); besides four volumes of standard operas, oratorios, cantatas, and symphonies (1885-88).

URBANA, a flourishing city, the county-seat of Champaign County, on the "Big Four," the Illinois Central and the Wabash Railways; 130 miles south of Chicago and 31 miles west of Danville; in agricultural and coal-mining region. The mechanical industries include extensive railroad shops, manufacture of brick, suspenders and lawn-mowers. The Cunningham Deaconesses' Home and Orphanage is located here. The city has water-works, gas and electric light plants, electric car-lines (local and interurban), superior schools, nine churches, three banks and three newspapers. Urbana is the seat of the University of Illinois. Pop. (1890), 3,511; (1900), 5,728.

USREY, William J., editor and soldier, was born at Washington (near Natchez), Miss., May 16, 1827; was educated at Natchez, and, before reaching manhood, came to Macon County, Ill., where he engaged in teaching until 1846, when he enlisted as a private in Company C, Fourth Illinois Volunteers, for the Mexican War. In 1855, he joined with a Mr. Wingate in the establishment, at Decatur, of "The Illinois State Chronicle," of which he soon after took sole charge, conducting the paper until 1861, when he enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Illinois Volunteers and was appointed Adjutant. Although born and educated in a slave State, Mr. Usrey was an earnest opponent of slavery, as proved by the attitude of his paper in opposition to the Kansas-Nebraska Bill. He was one of the most zealous endorsers of the proposition for a conference of the Anti-Nebraska editors of the State of Illinois, to agree upon a line of policy in opposition to the further extension of slavery, and, when that body met at Decatur, on Feb. 22, 1856, he served as its Secretary, thus taking a prominent part in the initial steps which resulted in the organization of the Republican party in Illinois. (See Anti-Nebraska Editorial Convention.) After returning from the war he resumed his place as editor of "The Chronicle," but finally retired from newspaper work in 1871. He was twice Postmaster of the city of Decatur, first previous to 1850, and again under the administration of President Grant; served also as a member of the City Council and was a member of the local Post of the G. A. R., and Secretary of the Macon County Association of Mexican War Veterans. Died, at Decatur, Jan. 20, 1894.

UTICA, (also called North Utica), a village of La Salle County, on the Illinois and Michigan Canal and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, 10 miles west of Ottawa, situated on the Illinois River opposite "Starved Rock," also believed to stand on the site of the Kaskaskia village found by the French Explorer, La Salle, when he first visited Illinois. "Utica cement" is produced here; it also has several factories or mills besides banks and a weekly paper. Population (1890), 767; (1890), 1,094; (1900), 1,150.

VAN ARNAM, John, lawyer and soldier, was born at Plattsburg, N. Y., March 3, 1820. Having lost his father at five years of age, he went to live with a farmer, but ran away in his boyhood; later, began teaching, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in New York City, beginning practice at Marshall, Mich. In 1858 he removed to Chicago, and, as a member of the firm of Walker, Van Arnam & Dexter, became prominent as a criminal lawyer and railroad attorney, being for a time Solicitor of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. In 1862 he assisted in organizing the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry and was commissioned its Colonel, but was compelled to resign on account of illness. After spending some time in California, he resumed practice in Chicago in 1865. His later years were spent in California, dying at San Diego, in that State, April 6, 1890.

VANDALIA, the principal city and county-seat of Fayette County. It is situated on the Kaskaskia River, 30 miles north of Centralia, 62 miles south by west of Decatur, and 68 miles east-northeast of St. Louis. It is an intersecting point for the Illinois Central and the St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute Railroads. It was the capital of the State from 1820 to 1839, the seat of government being removed to Springfield, the latter year, in accordance with act of the General Assembly passed at the session of 1837. It contains a court house (old State Capitol building), six churches, two banks, three weekly papers, a graded school, flour, saw and paper mills, foundry, stove and heading mill, carriage and wagon and brick works. Pop. (1890), 2,144; (1900), 2,665.

VANDEVEER, Heratio M., pioneer lawyer, was born in Washington County, Ind., March 1, 1816; came with his family to Illinois at an early age, settling on Clear Creek, now in Christian County; taught school and studied law, using books borrowed from the late Hon. John T. Stuart of Springfield; was elected first County Recorder of Christian County and, soon after, appointed Circuit Clerk, filling both offices three years. He also held the office of County Judge from 1848 to 1857; was twice chosen Representative in the General Assembly (1842 and 1850) and once to the State Senate (1862); in 1846, enlisted and was chosen Captain of a company for the Mexican War, but, having been rejected on account of the quota being full, was appointed Assistant-Quartermaster, in this capacity serving on the staff of General Taylor at the battle of Buena Vista. Among other offices held by Mr. Vandever, were those of Postmaster of Taylorville, Master in Chancery, Presidential Elector (1848), Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1862, and Judge of the Circuit Court (1870-79). In 1868 Judge Vandever established the private banking firm of H. M. Vandever & Co., at Taylorville, which, in conjunction with his sons, he continued successfully during the remainder of his life. Died, March 12, 1894.

VAN HORNE, William C., Railway Manager and President, was born in Will County, Ill., February, 1843; began his career as a telegraph operator on the Illinois Central Railroad in 1856, was attached to the Michigan Central and Chicago & Alton Railroads (1858-72), later being General Manager or General Superintendent of various other lines (1872-79). He next served as General Superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, but soon after became General Manager of the Canadian Pacific, which he assisted to construct to the Pacific Coast; was elected Vice-President of the line in 1884, and its President in 1888. His services have been recognized by conferring upon him the order of knighthood by the British Government.

VASSEUR, Noel C., pioneer Indian-trader, was born of French parentage in Canada, Dec. 25, 1799; at the age of 17 made a trip with a trading party to the West, crossing Wisconsin by way of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers, the route pursued by Joliet and Marquette in 1673; later, was associated with Gurdon S. Hubbard in the service of the American Fur Company, in 1820 visiting the region now embraced in Iroquois County, where he and Hubbard subsequently established a trading post among the Pottawatomie Indians, believed to have been the site of the present town of Iroquois. The way of reaching their station from Chicago was by the Chicago and Des Plaines Rivers to the Kankakee, and ascending the latter and the Iroquois. Here Vasseur remained in trade until the removal of the Indians west of the Mississippi, in which he served as agent of the Government. While in the Iroquois region he married Watseka, a somewhat famous Pottawatomie woman, for whom the town of Watseka was named, and who had previously been the Indian wife of a fellow-trader. His later years were spent at Bourbonnais Grove, in Kankakee County, where he died, Dec. 12, 1879.

VENICE, a city of Madison County, on the Mississippi River opposite St. Louis and 2 miles north of East St. Louis; is touched by six trunk lines of railroad, and at the eastern approach to the new "Merchants' Bridge," with its round-house, has two ferries to St. Louis, street car line, electric lights, water-works, some manufactures and a newspaper. Pop. (1890), 932; (1900), 2,450.

VENICE & CARONDELET RAILROAD. (See Louisville, Ercusville & St. Louis (Consolidated) Railroad.)

VERMILION COUNTY, an eastern county, bordering on the Indiana State line, and drained by the Vermilion and Little Vermilion Rivers, from which it takes its name. It was originally organized in 1826, when it extended north to Lake Michigan. Its present area is 926 square miles. The discovery of salt springs, in 1819, aided in attracting immigration to this region, but the manufacture of salt was abandoned many years ago. Early settlers were Seymour Treat, James Butler, Henry Johnston, Harvey Lidington, Gurdon S. Hubbard and Daniel W. Beckwith. James Butler and Achilles Morgan were the first County Commissioners. Many interesting fossil remains have been found, among them the skeleton of a mastodon (1868). Fire clay is found in large quantities, and two coal seams cross the county. The surface is level and the soil fertile. Corn is the chief agricultural product, although oats, wheat, rye, and potatoes are extensively cultivated. Stock-raising and wool-growing are important industries. There are also several manufactories, chiefly at Danville, which is the county-seat. Coal mining is carried on extensively, especially in the vicinity of Danville. Population (1880), 41,588; (1890), 49,905; (1900), 65,635.

VERMILION RIVER, a tributary of the Illinois; rises in Ford and the northern part of McLean County, and, running northwestward through Livingston and the southern part of La Salle Counties, enters the Illinois River nearly opposite the city of La Salle. has a length of about 80 miles.

VERMILION RIVER, an affluent of the Wabash, formed by the union of the North, Middle and South Forks, which rise in Illinois, and come together near Danville in this State. It flows southeastward, and enters the Wabash in Vermilion County, Ind. The main stream is about 28 miles long. The South Fork, however, which rises in Claypaign County and runs eastward, has a length of nearly 75 miles. The Little Vermilion River enters the Wabash about 7 or 8 miles below the Vermilion, which is sometimes called the Big Vermilion, by way of distinction.

VERMONT, a village in Fulton County, at junction of Galesburg and St. Louis Division of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 24 miles north of Beardstown; has a carriage manufactory, flour and saw-mills, brick and tile works, electric light plant, besides two banks, four churches, two graded schools, and one weekly newspaper. An artesian well has been sunk here to the depth of 2,600 feet. Pop. (1900), 1,195.

VERSAILLES, a town of Brown County, on the Wabash Railway, 48 miles east of Quincy; is in a timber and agricultural district; has a bank and weekly newspaper. Population (1900), 524.

VIENNA, the county-seat of Johnson County, situated on the Cairo and Vincennes branch of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, 36 miles north-northwest of Cairo. It has a court house, several churches, a graded school, banks and two weekly newspapers. Population (1880), 494; (1890), 828; (1900), 1,217.

VIGO, Francois, pioneer and early Indian-trader, was born at Mondovi, Sardinia (Western Italy), in 1747, served as a private soldier, first at Havana and afterwards at New Orleans. When he left the Spanish army he came to St. Louis, then the military headquarters of Spain for Upper Louisiana, where he became a partner of Commandant de Leba, and was extensively engaged in the fur-trade among the Indians on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. On the occupation of Kaskaskia by Col. George Rogers Clark in 1778, he rendered valuable aid to the Americans, turning out supplies to feed Clark's destitute soldiers, and accepting Virginia Continental money, at par, in payment, incurring liabilities in excess of $20,000. This, followed by the confiscation policy of the British Colonel Hamilton, at Vincennes, where Vigo had considerable property, reduced him to extreme penury. H. W. Beckwith says that, towards the close of his life, he lived on his little homestead near Vincennes, in great poverty but cheerful to the last. He was never recompensed during his life for his sacrifices in behalf of the American cause, though a tardy restitution was attempted, after his death, by the United States Government, for the benefit of his heirs. He died, at a ripe old age, at Vincennes, Ind., March 22, 1835.

VILLA RIDGE, a village of Pulaski County, on the Illinois Central Railway, 10 miles north of Cairo. Population, 500.

VINCENNES, Jean Baptiste Bissot, a Canadian explorer, born at Quebec, January, 1688, of aristocratic and wealthy ancestry. He was closely connected with Louis Joliet — probably his brother-in-law, although some historians say that he was the latter's nephew. He entered the Canadian army as ensign in 1701, and had a long and varied experience as an Indian fighter. About 1725 he took up his residence on what is now the site of the present city of Vincennes, Ind., which is named in his honor. Here he erected an earth fort and established a trading-post. In 1726, under orders, he co-operated with D'Artaquiette (then the French Governor of Illinois) in an expedition against the Chickasaws. The expedition resulted disastrously. Vincennes and D'Artaquiette were captured and burned at the stake, together with Father Senat (a Jesuit priest) and others of the command. (See also D'Artaquiette; French Governors of Illinois.)

VIRDEN, a city of Macoupin County, on the Chicago & Alton and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroads, 21 miles south by west from Springfield, and 31 miles east-southeast of Jacksonville. It has five churches, two banks, two newspapers, telephone service, electric lights, grain elevators, machine shop, and extensive coal mines. Pop (1900), 2,280; (school census 1903), 3,651.

VIRGINIA, an incorporated city, the county-seat of Cass County, situated at the intersection of the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis, with the Springfield Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad, 15 miles north of Jacksonville, and 33 miles west-northwest of Springfield. It lies in the heart of a rich agricultural region. There is a flouring mill here, besides manufactories of wagons and cigars. The city has two National and one State bank, five churches, a high school, and two weekly papers. Pop (1890), 1,602; (1900), 1,600.

VOCKE, William, lawyer, was born at Minden, Westphalia (Germany), in 1839, the son of a Government Secretary in the Prussian service. Having lost his father at an early age, he emigrated to America in 1856, and, after a short stay in New York, came to Chicago, where he found employment as a paper-carrier for "The Staats-Zeitung," meanwhile giving his attention to the study of law. Later, he became associated with a real-estate firm; on the commencement of the Civil War, enlisted as a private in a three-months' regiment, and, finally, in the Twenty-fourth Illinois (the first Hecker regiment), in which he rose to the rank of Captain. Returning from the army, he was employed as city editor of "The Staats-Zeitung," but, in 1865, became Clerk of the Chicago Police Court, serving until 1869. Meanwhile he had been admitted to the bar, and, on retirement from office, began practice, but, in 1870, was elected Representative in the Twenty-seventh General Assembly, in which he bore a leading part in framing "the burnt record act" made necessary by the fire of 1871. He has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, having been, for a number of years, attorney for the German Consulate at Chicago, also serving, for several years, on the Chicago Board of Education. Mr. Vocke is a man of high literary tastes, as shown by his publication, in 1869, of a volume of poems translated from the German, which has been highly commended, besides a legal work on "The Administration of Justice in the United States, and a Synopsis of the Mode of Procedure in our Federal and State Courts and All Federal and State Laws relating to Subjects of Interest to Aliens," which has been published in the German Language, and is highly valued by German lawyers and business men. Mr. Vocke was a member of the Republican National Convention of 1872 at Philadelphia, which nominated General Grant for the Presidency a second time.

VOLK, Leonard Wells, a distinguished Illinois sculptor, born at Wellstown (afterwards Wells), N. Y., Nov. 7, 1828. Later, his father, who was a marble cutter, removed to Pittsfield, Mass., and, at the age of 16, Leonard began work in his shop. In 1848 he came west and began modeling in clay and drawing at St. Louis, being only self-taught. He married a cousin of Stephen A. Douglas, and the latter, in 1855, aided him in the prosecution of his art studies in Italy. Two years afterward he settled in Chicago, where he modeled the first portrait bust ever made in the city, having for his subject his first patron—the "Little Giant." The next year (1858) he made a life-size marble statue of Douglas. In 1860 he made a portrait bust of Abraham Lincoln, which passed into the possession of the Chicago Historical Society and was destroyed in the great fire of 1871. In 1868-69, and again in 1871-72, he revisited Italy for purposes of study. In 1867 he was elected academician of the Chicago Academy, and was its President for eight years. He was genial, companionable and charitable, and always ready to assist his younger and less fortunate professional brethren. His best known works are the Douglas Monument, in Chicago, several soldiers' monuments in different parts of the country, the statuary for the Henry Keep mausoleum at Watertown, N. Y., life-size statues of Lincoln and Douglas, in the State House at Springfield, and numerous portrait busts of men eminent in political, ecclesiastical and commercial life. Died, at Osceola, Wis., August 18, 1895.

VOSS, Arno, journalist, lawyer and soldier, born in Prussia, April 16, 1821; emigrated to the United States and was admitted to the bar in Chicago, in 1848, the same year becoming editor of "The Staats-Zeitung"; was elected City Attorney in 1852, and again in 1853; in 1861 became Major of the Sixth Illinois Cavalry, but afterwards assisted in organizing the Twelfth Cavalry, of which he was commissioned Colonel, still later serving with his command in Virginia. He was at Harper's Ferry at the time of the capture of that place in September, 1862, but succeeded in cutting his way, with his command, through the rebel lines, escaping into Pennsylvania. Compelled by ill-health to leave the service in 1863, he retired to a farm in Will County, but, in 1869, returned to Chicago, where he served as Master in Chancery and was elected to the lower branch of the General Assembly in 1876, but declined a re-election in 1878. Died, in Chicago, March 23, 1888.

WABASH, CHESTER & WESTERN RAILROAD, a railway running from Chester to Mount Vernon, Ill., 63.33 miles, with a branch extending from Chester to Menard, 1.5 miles; total mileage, 64.83. It is of standard gauge, and almost entirely laid with 60-pound steel rails.—(HISTORY.) It was organized, Feb. 20, 1878, as successor to the Iron Mountain, Chester & Eastern Railroad. During the fiscal year 1893-94 the Company purchased the Tamaroa & Mount Vernon Railroad, extending from Mount Vernon to Tamaroa, 22.5 miles. Capital stock (1898), $1,250,000; bonded indebtedness, $690,000; total capitalization, $2,028,573.

WABASH COUNTY, situated in the southeast corner of the State; area 220 square miles. The county was carved out from Edwards in 1824, and the first court house built at Centerville, in May, 1826. Later, Mount Carmel was made the county-seat. (See Mount Carmel.) The Wabash River drains the county on the east; other streams are the Bon Pas, Coffee and Crawfish Creeks. The surface is undulating with a fair growth of timber. The chief industries are the raising of live-stock and the cultivation of cereals. The wool-crop is likewise valuable. The county is crossed by the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis and the Cairo and Vincennes Division of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroads. Population (1880), 4,945; (1890), 11,866; (1900), 12,583.

WABASH RAILROAD, an extensive railroad system connecting the cities of Detroit and Toledo, on the east, with Kansas City and Council Bluffs, on the west, with branches to Chicago, St. Louis, Quincy and Altamont, Ill., and to Keokuk and Des Moines, Iowa. The total mileage (1898) is 1,874.96 miles, of which 677.4 miles are in Illinois—all of the latter being the property of the company, besides 176.7 miles of yard-tracks, sidings and spurs. The company has trackage privileges over the Toledo, Peoria & Western (6.5 miles) between Elvaston and Keokuk bridge, and over the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy (21.8 miles) between Camp Point and Quincy.—(HISTORY.) A considerable portion of this road in Illinois is constructed on the line upon which the Northern Cross Railroad was projected, in the "internal improvement" scheme adopted in 1837, and embraces the only section of road completed under that scheme—that between the Illinois River and Springfield. (1) The construction of this section was begun by the State, May 11, 1837, the first rail laid, May 9, 1838, the road completed to Jacksonville, Jan. 1, 1840, and to Springfield, May 13, 1842. It was operated for a time by "mule power," but the income was insufficient to keep the line in repair and it was finally abandoned. In 1817 the line was sold for $21,100 to N. H. Ridgely and Thomas Mather of Springfield, and by them transferred to New York capitalists, who organized the Sangamon & Morgan Railroad Company, reconstructed the road from Springfield to Naples and opened it for business in 1849. (2) In 1853 two corporations were organized in Ohio and Indiana, respectively, under the name of the Toledo & Illinois Railroad and the Lake Erie, Wabash & St. Louis Railroad, which were consolidated as the Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad, June 25, 1856. In 1858 these lines were sold separately under foreclosure, and finally reorganized, under a special charter granted by the Illinois Legislature, under the name of the Great Western Railroad Company. (3) The Quincy & Toledo Railroad, extending from Camp Point to the Illinois River opposite Meredosia, was constructed in 1858-59, and that, with the Illinois & Southern Iowa (from Clayton to Keokuk), was united, July 1, 1865, with the eastern divisions extending to Toledo, the new organization taking the name of the main line, (Toledo, Wabash & Western). (4) The Hannibal & Naples Division (49.6 miles), from Bluffs to Hannibal, Mo., was chartered in 1863, opened for business in 1870 and leased to the Toledo, Wabash & Western. The latter defaulted on its interest in 1875, was placed in the hands of a receiver and, in 1877, was turned over to a new company under the name of the Wabash Railway Company. (5) In 1868 the company, as it then existed, promoted and secured the construction, and afterwards acquired the ownership, of a line extending from Decatur to East St. Louis (119.5 miles) under the name of the Decatur & East St. Louis Railroad. (6) The Eel River Railroad, from Butler to Logansport, Ind., was acquired in 1877, and afterwards extended to Detroit under the name of the Detroit, Butler & St. Louis Railroad, completing the connection from Logansport to Detroit.—In November, 1879, the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company was organized, took the property and consolidated it with certain lines west of the Mississippi, of which the chief was the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern. A line had been projected from Decatur to Chicago as early as 1870, but, not having been constructed in 1881, the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific purchased what was known as the Chicago & Peoria Railroad, uniting with the main line at Bement, and (by way of the Decatur and St. Louis Division) giving a direct line between Chicago and St. Louis. At this time the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific was operating the following additional leased lines: Pekin, Lincoln & Decatur (67.2 miles); Hannibal & Central Missouri (70.2 miles); Lafayette, Muncie & Bloomington (36.7 miles), and the Lafayette Bloomington & Muncie (80 miles). A connection between Chicago on the west and Toledo and Detroit on the east was established over the Grand Trunk road in 1882, but, in 1890, the company constructed a line from Montpelier, Ohio, to Clark, Ind. (149.7 miles), thence by track lease to Chicago (17.5 miles), giving an independent line between Chicago and Detroit by what is known to investors as the Detroit & Chicago Division.

The total mileage of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific system, in 1884, amounted to over 3,600 miles; but, in May of that year, default having been made in the payment of interest, the work of disintegration began. The main line east of the Mississippi and that on the west were separated, the latter taking the name of the "Wabash Western." The Eastern Division was placed in the hands of a receiver, so remaining until May, 1889, when the two divisions, having been bought in by a purchasing committee, were consolidated under the present name. The total earnings and income of the road in Illinois, for the fiscal year 1898, were $4,402,621, and the expenses $4,836,110. The total capital invested (1898) was $139,889,643, including capital stock of $52,000,000 and bonds to the amount of $81,534,000.

WABASH RIVER, rises in northwestern Ohio, passes into Indiana, and runs northwest to Huntington. It then flows nearly due west to Logansport, thence southwest to Covington, finally turning southward to Terre Haute, a few miles below which it strikes the western boundary of Indiana. It forms the boundary between Illinois and Indiana (taking into account its numerous windings) for some 200 miles. Below Vincennes it runs in a south-southwesterly direction, and enters the Ohio at the south-west extremity of Indiana, near latitude 37° 49' north. Its length is estimated at 557 miles.

WAIT, William Smith, pioneer, and original suggestor of the Illinois Central Railroad, was born in Portland, Maine, March 5, 1789, and educated in the public schools of his native place. In his youth he entered a book-publishing house in which his father was a partner, and was for a time associated with the publication of a weekly paper. Later the business was conducted at Boston, and extended over the Eastern, Middle, and Southern States, the subject of this sketch making extensive tours in the interest of the firm. In 1817 he made a tour to the West, reaching St. Louis, and, early in the following year, visited Bond County, Ill., where he made his first entry of land from the Government. Returning to Boston a few months later, he continued in the service of the publishing firm until 1830, when he again came to Illinois, and, in 1831, began farming in Ripley Township, Bond County. Returning East in 1824, he spent the next ten years in the employment of the publishing firm, with occasional visits to Illinois. In 1835 he located permanently near Greenville, Bond County, and engaged extensively in farming and fruit-raising, planting one of the largest apple orchards in the State at that early day. In 1845 he presided as chairman over the National Industrial Convention in New York, and, in 1848, was nominated as the candidate of the National Reform Association for Vice-President on the ticket with Gerrit Smith of New York, but declined. He was also prominent in County and State Agricultural Societies. Mr Wait has been credited with being one of the first (if not the very first) to suggest the construction of the Illinois Central Railroad, which he did as early as 1835; was also one of the prime movers in the construction of the Mississippi & Atlantic Railroad—now the "Vandalia Line"—giving much time to the latter enterprise from 1846 for many years, and was one of the original incorporators of the St. Louis & Illinois Bridge Company. Died, July 17, 1865.

WALKER, Cyrus, pioneer, lawyer, born in Rockbridge County, Va., May 14, 1791; was taken while an infant to Adair County, Ky., and came to Macomb, Ill., in 1833, being the second lawyer to locate in McDonough County. He had a wide reputation as a successful advocate, especially in criminal cases, and practiced extensively in the courts of Western Illinois and also in Iowa. Died, Dec. 1, 1875. Mr. Walker was uncle of the late Pinkney H. Walker of the Supreme Court, who studied law with him. He was Whig candidate for Presidential Elector for the State-at-large in 1840.

WALKER, James Barr, clergyman, was born in Philadelphia, July 29, 1805; in his youth served as errand-boy in a country store near Pittsburg and spent four years in a printing office; then became clerk in the office of Mordecai M. Noah, in New York, studied law and graduated from Western Reserve College, Ohio; edited various religious papers, including "The Watchman of the Prairies" (now "The Advance") of Chicago, was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Chicago, and for some time was lecturer on "Harmony between Science and Revealed Religion" at Oberlin College and Chicago Theological Seminary. He was author of several volumes, one of which—"The Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation," published anonymously under the editorship of Prof. Calvin E. Stowe (1855)—ran through several editions and was translated into five different languages, including Hindustanee. Died, at Wheaton Ill., March 6, 1887.

WALKER, James Monroe, corporation lawyer and Railway President, was born at Claremont, N. H., Feb. 14, 1820. At fifteen he removed with his parents to a farm in Michigan; was educated at Oberlin, Ohio, and at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, graduating from the latter in 1849. He then entered a law office as clerk and student, was admitted to the bar the next year, and soon after elected Prosecuting Attorney of Washtenaw County; was also local attorney for the Michigan Central Railway, for which, after his removal to Chicago in 1853, he became General Solicitor. Two years later the firm of Sedgwick & Walker, which had been organized in Michigan, became attorneys for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and, until his death, Mr. Walker was associated with this company, either as General Solicitor, General Counsel or President, filling the latter position from 1870 to 1875. Mr. Walker organized both the Chicago and Kansas City stock-yards, and was President of these corporations, as also of the Wilmington Coal Company, down to the time of his death, which occurred on Jan. 22, 1881, as a result of heart disease.

WALKER, (Rev.) Jesse, Methodist Episcopal missionary, was born in Rockingham County, Va., June 9, 1766; in 1800 removed to Tennessee, became a traveling preacher in 1802, and, in 1806, came to Illinois under the presiding-elder-ship of Rev. William McKendree (afterwards Bishop), locating first at Turkey Hill, St. Clair County. In 1807 he held a camp meeting near Edwardsville—the first on Illinois soil. Later, he transferred his labors to Northern Illinois; was at Peoria in 1824; at Ottawa in 1825, and devoted much time to missionary work among the Pottawatomies, maintaining a school among them for a time. He visited Chicago in 1826, and there is evidence that he was a prominent resident there for several years, occupying a log house, which he used as a church and living-room, on "Wolf Point" at the junction of the North and South Branches of the Chicago River. While acting as superintendent of the Fox River mission, his residence appears to have been at Plainfield, in the northern part of Will County. Died, Oct. 5, 1835.

WALKER, Pinckney H., lawyer and jurist, was born in Adair County, Ky., June 18, 1815. His boyhood was chiefly passed in farm work and as clerk in a general store; in 1834 he came to Illinois, settling at Rushville, where he worked in a store for four years. In 1838 he removed to Macomb, where he began attendance at an academy and the study of law with his uncle, Cyrus Walker, a leading lawyer of his time. He was admitted to the bar in 1839, practicing at Macomb until 1848, when he returned to Rushville. In 1853 he was elected Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, to fill a vacancy, and re-elected in 1855. This position he resigned in 1858, having been appointed, by Governor Bissell, to fill the vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court occasioned by the resignation of Judge Skinner. Two months later he was elected to the same position, and re-elected in 1867 and '76. He presided as Chief Justice from January, 1864, to June, '67, and again from June, 1874, to June, '75. Before the expiration of his last term he died, Feb. 7, 1885.

WALL, George Willard, lawyer, politician and Judge, was born at Chillicothe, Ohio, April 22, 1839; brought to Perry County, Ill., in infancy, and received his preparatory education at McKendree College finally graduating from the University of Michigan in 1858, and from the Cincinnati Law School in 1859, when he began practice at Duquoin, Ill. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1862, and, from 1864 to '68, served as State's Attorney for the Third Judicial District; was also a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of 1869-70. In 1872 he was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Congress, although running ahead of his ticket. In 1877 he was elected to the bench of the Third Circuit, and re-elected in '79, '85 and '91, much of the time since 1877 being on duty upon the Appellate bench. His home is at Duquoin.

WALLACE, (Rev.) Peter, D.D., clergyman and soldier; was born in Mason County, Ky., April 11 1813; taken in infancy to Brown County, Ohio, where he grew up on a farm until 15 years of age, when he was apprenticed to a carpenter; at the age of 20 came to Illinois, where he became a contractor and builder, following this occupation for a number of years. He was converted in 1835 at Springfield, Ill., and, some years later, having decided to enter the ministry, was admitted to the Illinois Conference as a deacon by Bishop E. S. Janes in 1853, and placed in charge of the Danville Circuit. Two years later he was ordained by Bishop Scott, and, in the next few years, held pastorates at various places in the central and eastern parts of the State. From 1867 to 1874 he was Presiding Elder of the Mattoon and Quincy Districts, and, for six years, held the position of President of the Board of Trustees of Chaddock College at Quincy, from which he received the degree of D.D. in 1881. In the second year of the Civil War he raised a company in Sangamon County, was chosen its Captain and assigned to the Seventy-third Illinois Volunteers, known as the "preachers' regiment"—all of its officers being ministers. In 1864 he was compelled by ill-health to resign his commission. While pastor of the church at Saybrook, Ill., he was offered the position of Postmaster of that place, which he decided to accept, and was allowed to retire from the active ministry. On retirement from office, in 1884, he removed to Chicago. In 1889 he was appointed by Governor Fifer the first Chaplain of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Quincy, but retired some four years afterward, when he returned to Chicago. Dr. Wallace was an eloquent and effective preacher and continued to preach, at intervals, until within a short time of his decease, which occurred in Chicago, Feb. 21, 1897, in his 84th year. A zealous patriot, he frequently spoke very effectively upon the political rostrum. Originally a Whig, he became a Republican on the organization of that party, and took pride in the fact that the first vote he ever cast was for Abraham Lincoln, for Representative in the Legislature, in 1834. He was a Knight Templar, Vice-President of the Tippecanoe Club of Chicago, and, at his death, Chaplain of America Post, No. 708, G. A. R.

WALLACE, William Henry Lamb, lawyer and soldier, was born at Urbana, Ohio, July 8, 1821; brought to Illinois in 1833, his father settling near La Salle and, afterwards, at Mount Morris, Ogle County, where young Wallace attended the Rock River Seminary; was admitted to the bar in 1845; in 1846 enlisted as a private in the First Illinois Volunteers (Col. John J. Hardin's regiment), for the Mexican War, rising to the rank of Adjutant and participating in the battle of Buena Vista (where his commander was killed), and in other engagements. Returning to his profession at Ottawa, he served as District Attorney (1852-56), then became partner of his father-in-law, Col. T. Lyle Dickey, afterwards of the Supreme Court. In April, 1861, he was one of the first to answer the call for troops by enlisting, and became Colonel of the Eleventh Illinois (three-months' men), afterwards re-enlisting for three years. As commander of a brigade he participated in the capture of Forts Henry and Donelson, in February, 1862, receiving promotion as Brigadier-General for gallantry. At Pittsburg Landing (Shiloh), as commander of Gen. C. F. Smith's Division, devolving on him on account of the illness of his superior officer, he showed great courage, but fell mortally wounded, dying at Charleston, Tenn., April 10, 1862. His career promised great brilliancy and his loss was greatly deplored.—Martin R. M. (Wallace), brother of the preceding, was born at Urbana, Ohio, Sept. 29, 1829, came to La Salle County, Ill., with his father's family and was educated in the local schools and at Rock River Seminary; studied law at Ottawa, and was admitted to the bar in 1856, soon after locating in Chicago. In 1861 he assisted in organizing the Fourth Regiment Illinois Cavalry, of which he became Lieutenant-Colonel, and was complimented, in 1865, with the rank of brevet Brigadier-General. After the war he served as Assessor of Internal Revenue (1866-69); County Judge (1869-77); Prosecuting Attorney (1884); and, for many years past, has been one of the Justices of the Peace of the city of Chicago.

WALNUT, a town of Bureau County, on the Mendota and Fulton branch of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 26 miles west of Mendota; is in a farming and stock-raising district; has two banks and two newspapers. Population (1890), 605; (1900), 791.

WAR OF 1812. Upon the declaration of war by Congress, in June, 1812, the Pottawatomes, and most of the other tribes of Indians in the Territory of Illinois, strongly sympathized with the British. The savages had been hostile and restless for some time previous, and blockhouses and family forts had been erected at a number of points, especially in the settlements most exposed to the incursions of the savages. Governor Edwards, becoming apprehensive of an outbreak, constructed Fort Russell, a few miles from Edwardsville. Taking the field in person, he made this his headquarters, and collected a force of 250 mounted volunteers, who were later reinforced by two companies of rangers, under Col. William Russell, numbering about 100 men. An independent company of twenty-one spies, of which John Reynolds—afterwards Governor—was a member, was also formed and led by Capt. Samuel Judy. The Governor organized his little army into two regiments under Colonels Rector and Stephenson, Colonel Russell serving as second to the commander-in-chief, other members of his staff being Secretary Nathaniel Pope and Robert K. McLaughlin. On Oct. 18, 1812, Governor Edwards, with his men, set out for Peoria, where it was expected that their force would meet that of General Hopkins, who had been sent from Kentucky with a force of 2,000 men. En route, two Kickapoo villages were burned, and a number of Indians unnecessarily slain by Edwards' party. Hopkins had orders to disperse the Indians on the Illinois and Wabash Rivers, and destroy their villages. He determined, however, on reaching the headwaters of the Vermillion to proceed no farther. Governor Edwards reached the head of Peoria Lake, but, failing to meet Hopkins, returned to Fort Russell. About the same time Capt. Thomas E. Craig led a party, in two boats, up the Illinois River to Peoria. His boats, as he alleged, having been fired upon in the night by Indians, who were harbored and protected by the French citizens of Peoria, he burned the greater part of the village, and capturing the population, carried them down the river, putting them on shore, in the early part of the winter, just below Alton. Other desultory expeditions marked the campaigns of 1813 and 1814. The Indians meanwhile gaining courage, remote settlements were continually harassed by marauding bands. Later in 1814, an expedition, led by Major (afterwards President) Zachary Taylor, ascended the Mississippi as far as Rock Island, where he found a large force of Indians, supported by British regulars with artillery. Finding himself unable to cope with so formidable a foe, Major Taylor retreated down the river. On the site of the present town of Warsaw he threw up fortifications, which he named Fort Edwards, from which point he was subsequently compelled to retreat. The same year the British, with their Indian allies, descended from Mackinac, captured Prairie du Chien, and burned Forts Madison and Johnston, after which they retired to Cap au Gris. The treaty of Ghent, signed Dec. 24, 1814, closed the war, although no formal treaties were made with the tribes until the year following.

WAR OF THE REBELLION. At the outbreak of the Civil War, the executive chair, in Illinois, was occupied by Gov. Richard Yates. Immediately upon the issuance of President Lincoln's first call for troops (April 15, 1861), the Governor issued his proclamation summoning the Legislature together in special session and, the same day, issued a call for "six regiments of militia," the quota assigned to the State under call of the President. Public excitement was at fever heat, and dormant patriotism in both sexes was aroused as never before. Party lines were broken down and, with comparatively few exceptions, the mass of the people were actuated by a common sentiment of patriotism. On April 19, Governor Yates was instructed, by the Secretary of War, to take possession of Cairo as an important strategic point. At that time, the State militia organizations were few in number and poorly equipped, consisting chiefly of independent companies in the larger cities. The Governor acted with great promptitude, and, on April 21, seven companies, numbering 595 men, commanded by Gen. Richard K. Swift of Chicago, were en route to Cairo. The first volunteer company to tender its services, in response to Governor Yates' proclamation, on April 16, was the Zouave Grays of Springfield. Eleven other companies were tendered the same day, and, by the evening of the 18th, the number had been increased to fifty. Simultaneously with these proceedings, Chicago bankers tendered to the Governor a war loan of $500,000, and those of Springfield, $100,000. The Legislature, at its special session, passed acts increasing the efficiency of the militia law, and provided for the creation of a war fund of $2,000,000. Besides the six regiments already called for, the raising of ten additional volunteer regiments and one battery of light artillery was authorized. The last of the six regiments, apportioned to Illinois under the first presidential call, was dispatched to Cairo early in May. The six regiments were numbered the Seventh to Twelfth, inclusive—the earlier numbers, First to Sixth, being conceded to the six regiments which had served in the war with Mexico. The regiments were commanded, respectively, by Colonels John Cook, Richard J. Oglesby, Eleazer A. Paine, James D. Morgan, William H. L. Wallace, and John McArthur, constituting the "First Brigade of Illinois Volunteers." Benjamin M. Prentiss, having been chosen Brigadier-General on arrival at Cairo, assumed command, relieving General Swift. The quota under the second call, consisting of ten regiments, was mustered into service within sixty days, 200 companies being tendered immediately. Many more volunteered than could be accepted, and large numbers crossed to Missouri and enlisted in regiments forming in that State. During June and July the Secretary of War authorized Governor Yates to recruit twenty-two additional regiments (seventeen infantry and five cavalry), which were promptly raised. On July 23, the day following the defeat of the Union army at Bull Run, President Lincoln called for 500,000 more volunteers. Governor Yates immediately responded with an offer to the War Department of sixteen more regiments (thirteen of infantry and three of cavalry), and a battalion of artillery, adding, that the State claimed it as her right, to do her full share toward the preservation of the Union. Under supplemental authority, received from the Secretary of War in August, 1861, twelve additional regiments of infantry and five of cavalry were raised, and, by December, 1861, the State had 43,000 volunteers in the field and 17,000 in camps of instruction. Other calls were made in July and August, 1862, each for 300,000 men. Illinois' quota, under both calls, was over 52,000 men, no regard being paid to the fact that the State had already furnished 16,000 troops in excess of its quotas under previous calls. Unless this number of volunteers was raised by September 1, a draft would be ordered. The tax was a severe one, inasmuch as it would fall chiefly upon the prosperous citizens, the floating population, the idle and the extremely poor having already followed the army's march, either as soldiers or as camp-followers. But recruiting was actively carried on, and, aided by liberal bounties in many of the counties, in less than a fortnight the 52,000 new troops were secured, the volunteers coming largely from the substantial classes—agricultural, mercantile, artisan and professional. By the end of December, fifty-nine regiments and four batteries had been dispatched to the front, besides a considerable number to fill up regiments already in the field, which had suffered severely from battle, exposure and disease. At this time, Illinois had an aggregate of over 135,000 enlisted men in the field. The issue of President Lincoln's preliminary proclamation of emancipation, in September, 1862, was met by a storm of hostile criticism from his political opponents, who—aided by the absence of so large a proportion of the loyal population of the State in the field—were able to carry the elections of that year. Consequently, when the Twenty-third General Assembly convened in regular session at Springfield, on Jan. 5, 1863, a large majority of that body was not only opposed to both the National and State administrations, but avowedly opposed to the further prosecution of the war under the existing policy. The Legislature reconvened in June, but was prorogued by Governor Yates Between Oct. 1, 1863, and July 1, 1864, 16,000 veterans re-enlisted and 87,000 new volunteers were enrolled; and, by the date last mentioned, Illinois had furnished to the Union army 244,496 men, being 14,596 in excess of the allotted quotas, constituting fifteen per cent of the entire population. These were comprised in 151 regiments of infantry, 17 of cavalry and two complete regiments of artillery, besides twelve independent batteries. The total losses of Illinois organizations, during the war, has been reported at 34,834, of which 5,874 were killed in battle, 4,020 died from wounds, 23,786 from disease and 2,154 from other causes—being a total of thirteen per cent of the entire force of the State in the service. The part which Illinois played in the contest was conspicuous for patriotism, promptness in response to every call, and the bravery and efficiency of its troops in the field—reflecting honor upon the State and its history. Nor were its loyal citizens—who, while staying at home, furnished moral and material support to the men at the front—less worthy of praise than those who volunteered. By upholding the Government—National and State—and by their zeal and energy in collecting and sending forward immense quantities of supplies—surgical, medical and other—often at no little sacrifice, they contributed much to the success of the Union arms. WAR OF THE REBELLION (HISTORY OF ILLINOIS REGIMENTS). The following is a list of the various military organizations mustered into the service during the Civil War (1861-65), with the terms of service and a summary of the more important events in the history of each, while in the field:

SEVENTH INFANTRY. Illinois having sent six regiments to the Mexican War, by courtesy the numbering of the regiments which took part in the war for the Union began with number Seven. A number of regiments which responded to the first call of the President, claimed the right to be recognized as the first regiment in the field, but the honor was finally accorded to that organized at Springfield by Col. John Cook, and hence his regiment was numbered Seventh. It was mustered into the service, April 25, 1861, and remained at Mound City during the three months' service, the period of its first enlistment. It was subsequently reorganized and mustered for the three years' service, July 25, 1861, and was engaged in the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Cherokee, Allatoona Pass, Salkahatchie Swamp, Bentonville and Columbia. The regiment re-enlisted as veterans at Pulaski, Tenn., Dec. 22, 1863; was mustered out at Louisville, July 9, 1865, and paid off and discharged at Springfield, July 11.

EIGHTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, and mustered in for three months' service, April 26, 1861. Richard J. Oglesby of Decatur, being appointed Colonel. It remained at Cairo during its term of service, when it was mustered out. July 25, 1861, it was reorganized and mustered in for three years' service. It participated in the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Fort Gibson, Thompson Hill, Raymond, Champion Hill, Vicksburg, Brownsville, and Spanish Fort, re-enlisted as veterans, March 24, 1864; was mustered out at Baton Rouge, May 4, 1866, paid off and discharged, May 13, having served five years.

NINTH INFANTRY. Mustered into the service at Springfield, April 26, 1861, for the term of three months, under Col. Eleazer A. Paine. It was reorganized at Cairo, in August, for three years, being composed of companies from St. Clair, Madison, Montgomery, Pulaski, Alexander and Mercer Counties; was engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Jackson (Tenn.), Mead Creek Swamps, Salem, Wyatt, Florence, Montezuma, Athens and Grenada. The regiment was mounted, March 15, 1863, and so continued during the remainder of its service. Mustered out at Louisville, July 9, 1865.

TENTH INFANTRY. Organized and mustered into the service for three months, on April 29, 1861, at Cairo, and on July 29, 1861, was mustered into the service for three years, with Col. James D. Morgan in command. It was engaged at Sykeston, New Madrid, Corinth, Missionary Ridge, Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Rome, Kenesaw, Chattahoochee, Savannah and Bentonville. Re-enlisted as veterans, Jan. 1, 1864, and mustered out of service, July 4, 1865, at Louisville, and received final discharge and pay, July 11, 1865, at Chicago.

ELEVENTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered into service, April 30, 1861, for three months. July 30, the regiment was mustered out, and re-enlisted for three years' service. It was engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Tallahatchie, Vicksburg, Liverpool Heights, Yazoo City, Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely. W. H. L. Wallace, afterwards Brigadier-General and killed at Shiloh, was its first Colonel. Mustered out of service, at Baton Rouge, July 14, 1865; paid off and discharged at Springfield.

TWELFTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service for three years, August 1, 1861; was engaged at Columbus, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Lay's Ferry, Rome Cross Roads, Dallas, Kenesaw, Nickajack Creek, Bald Knob, Decatur, Ezra Church, Atlanta, Allatoona and Goldsboro. On Jan. 16, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans. John McArthur was its first Colonel, succeeded by Augustus L. Chetlain, both being promoted to Brigadier-Generalships. Mustered out of service at Louisville, Ky., July 10, 1865, and received final pay and discharge, at Springfield, July 18.

THIRTEENTH INFANTRY. One of the regiments organized under the act known as the "Ten Regiment Bill"; was mustered into service on May 24, 1861, for three years, at Dixon, with John B. Wyman as Colonel; was engaged at Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Vicksburg, Jackson, Missionary Ridge, Rossville and Ringgold Gap. Mustered out at Springfield, June 18, 1864, having served three years and two months.

FOURTEENTH INFANTRY. One of the regiments raised under the "Ten Regiment Bill," which anticipated the requirements of the General Government by organizing, equipping and drilling a regiment in each Congressional District in the State for thirty days, unless sooner required for service by the United States. It was mustered in at Jacksonville for three years, May 25, 1861, under command of John M. Palmer as its first Colonel; was engaged at Shiloh, Corinth, Metamora, Vicksburg, Jackson, Fort Beanregard and Meridian; consolidated with the Fifteenth Infantry, as a veteran battalion (both regiments having enlisted as veterans), on July 1, 1864. In October, 1864, the major part of the battalion was captured by General Hood and sent to Andersonville. The remainder participated in the "March to the Sea," and through the campaign in the Carolinas. In the spring of 1865 the battalion organization was discontinued, both regiments having been filled up by recruits. The regiment was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 16, 1865; and arrived at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22, 2865, where it received final payment and discharge. The aggregate number of men who belonged to this organization was 1,980, and the aggregate mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, 480. During its four years and four months of service, the regiment marched 4,490 miles, traveled by rail, 2,330 miles, and, by river, 4,490 miles—making an aggregate of 11,670 miles.

FIFTEENTH INFANTRY. Raised under the "Ten Regiment Act," in the (then) First Congressional District; was organized at Freeport, and mustered into service, May 24, 1861. It was engaged at Sedalia, Shiloh, Corinth, Metamora Hill, Vicksburg, Fort Beauregard, Champion Hill, Allatoona and Bentonville. In March, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and, in July, 1864, was consolidated with the Fourteenth Infantry as a Veteran Battalion. At Big Shanty and Ackworth a large portion of the battalion was captured by General Hood. At Raleigh the Veteran Battalion was discontinued and the Fifteenth reorganized. From July 1, to Sept. 1, 1865, the regiment was stationed at Forts Leavenworth and Kearney. Having been mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, it was sent to Springfield for final payment and discharge—having served four years and four months. Miles marched, 4,299; miles by rail, 2,403, miles by steamer, 4,310; men enlisted from date of organization, 1,963; strength at date of muster-out, 640.

SIXTEENTH INFANTRY. Organized and mustered into service at Quincy under the "Ten-Regiment Act," May 24, 1861. The regiment was engaged at New Madrid, Tiptonville, Corinth, Buzzards' Roost, Resaca, Rome, Kenesaw Mountain, Chattahoochie River, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Savannah, Columbia, Fayetteville, Aversyboro and Bentonville. In December, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans; was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., July 8, 1865, after a term of service of four years and three months, and, a week later, arrived at Springfield, where it received its final pay and discharge papers.

SEVENTEENTH INFANTRY. Mustered into the service at Peoria, Ill., on May 24, 1861; was engaged at Fredericktown (Mo.), Greenfield (Ark.), Shiloh, Corinth, Hatchie and Vicksburg. In May, 1864, the term of enlistment having expired, the regiment was ordered to Springfield for pay and discharge. Those men and officers who re-enlisted, and those whose term had not expired, were consolidated with the Eighth Infantry, which was mustered out in the spring of 1866.

EIGHTEENTH INFANTRY. Organized under the provisions of the "Ten Regiment Bill," at Anna, and mustered into the service on May 28, 1861, the term of enlistment being for three years. The regiment participated in the capture of Fort McHenry, and was actively engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh and Corinth. It was mustered out at Little Rock, Dec. 16, 1865, and Dec. 31, thereafter, arrived at Springfield, Ill., for payment and discharge. The aggregate enlistments in the regiment, from its organization to date of discharge (rank and file), numbered 2,043.

NINETEENTH INFANTRY. Mustered into the United States service for three years, June 17, 1861, at Chicago, embracing four companies which had been accepted under the call for three months' men; participated in the battle of Stone River and in the Tullahoma and Chattanooga campaigns; was also engaged at Davis' Cross Roads, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Resaca. It was mustered out of service on July 9, 1864, at Chicago. Originally consisting of nearly 1,000 men, besides a large number of recruits received during the war, its strength at the final muster-out was less than 350.

TWENTIETH INFANTRY Organized, May 14, 1861, at Joliet, and June 13, 1861, and mustered into the service for a term of three years. It participated in the following engagements, battles, sieges, etc.: Fredericktown (Mo.), Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Thompson's Plantation, Champion Hills, Big Black River, Vicksburg, Kenesaw Mountain and Atlanta. After marching through the Carolinas, the regiment was finally ordered to Louisville, where it was mustered out, July 16, 1865, receiving its final discharge at Chicago, on July 24.

TWENTY-FIRST INFANTRY. Organized under the "Ten Regiment Bill," from the (then) Seventh Congressional District, at Mattoon, and mustered into service for three years, June 28, 1861. Its first Colonel was U. S. Grant, who was in command until August 7, when he was commissioned Brigadier-General. It was engaged at Fredericktown (Mo.), Corinth, Perryville, Murfreesboro, Liberty Gap, Chickamauga, Jonesboro, Franklin and Nashville. The regiment re-enlisted as veterans, at Chattanooga, in February, 1864. From June, 1864, to December, 1865, it was on duty in Texas. Mustered out at San Antonio, Dec. 16, 1865, and paid off and discharged at Springfield, Jan. 18, 1866.

TWENTY-SECOND INFANTRY. Organized at Belleville, and mustered into service, for three years, at Caseyville, Ill., June 25, 1861; was engaged at Belmont, Charleston (Mo.), Sikestown, Tiptonville, Farmington, Corinth, Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, New Hope Church, and all the battles of the Atlanta campaign, except Rocky Face Ridge. It was mustered out at Springfield, July 7, 1864, the veterans and recruits, whose term of service had not expired, being consolidated with the Forty-second Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers.

TWENTY-THIRD INFANTRY. The organization of the Twenty-third Infantry Volunteers commenced, at Chicago, under the popular name of the "Irish Brigade," immediately upon the opening of hostilities at Sumter. The formal muster of the regiment, under the command of Col. James A. Mulligan, was made, June 15, 1861, at Chicago, when it was occupying barracks known as Kane's brewery near the river on West Polk Street. It was early ordered to Northern Missouri, and was doing garrison duty at Lexington, when, in September, 1861, it surrendered with the rest of the garrison, to the forces under the rebel General Price, and was paroled. From Oct. 8, 1861, to June 14, 1862, it was detailed to guard prisoners at Camp Douglas. Thereafter it participated in engagements in the Virginias, as follows: at South Fork, Greenland Gap, Philippi, Hedgeville, Leetown, Maryland Heights, Snicker's Gap, Kernstown, Cedar Creek, Winchester, Charlestown, Berryville, Opequan Creek, Fisher's Hill, Harrisonburg, Hatcher's Run and Petersburg. It also took part in the siege of Richmond and the pursuit of Lee, being present at the surrender at Appomattox. In January and February, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, at Greenland Gap, W. Va. In August, 1864, the ten companies of the Regiment, then numbering 440, were consolidated into five companies and designated, "Battalion, Twenty-third Regiment, Illinois Veteran Volunteer Infantry." The regiment was thanked by Congress for its part at Lexington, and was authorized to inscribe Lexington upon its colors. (See also Mulligan, James A.)

TWENTY-FOURTH INFANTRY, (known as the First Hecker Regiment). Organized at Chicago, with two companies—to-wit: the Union Cadets and the Lincoln Rifles—from the three months' service, in June, 1861, and mustered in, July 8, 1861. It participated in the battles of Perryville, Murfreesboro, Chickamauga, Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain and other engagements in the Atlanta campaign. It was mustered out of service at Chicago, August 6, 1864. A fraction of the regiment, which had been recruited in the field, and whose term of service had not expired at the date of muster-out, was organized into one company and attached to the Third Brigade, First Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, and mustered out at Camp Butler, August 1, 1865.

TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Organized from the counties of Kankakee, Iroquois, Ford, Vermilion, Douglas, Coles, Champaign and Edgar, and mustered into service at St. Louis, August 4, 1861. It participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, in the siege of Corinth, the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, the siege of Atlanta, and innumerable skirmishes; was mustered out at Springfield, Sept. 5, 1864. During its three years' service the regiment traveled 4,962 miles, of which 3,252 were on foot, the remainder by steamboat and railroad.

TWENTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service, consisting of seven companies, at Springfield, August 31, 1861. On Jan. 1, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans. It was authorized by the commanding General to inscribe upon its banners "New Madrid;" "Island No. 10;" "Farming-ton;" "Siege of Corinth;" "Luka;" "Corinth—3d and 4th, 1862;" "Resaca;" "Kenesaw;" "Ezra Church;" "Atlanta;" "Jonesboro;" "Griswoldville;" "McAllister;" "Savannah;" "Columbia," and "Bentonville." It was mustered out at Louisville, July 20, 1865, and paid off and discharged, at Springfield, July 28—the regiment having marched, during its four years of service, 6,931 miles, and fought twenty-eight hard battles, besides innumerable skirmishes.

TWENTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY. First organized, with only seven companies, at Springfield, August 10, 1861, and organization completed by the addition of three more companies, at Cairo, on September 1. It took part in the battle of Belmont, the siege of Island No. 10, and the battles of Farmington, Nashville, Murfreesboro, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Calhoun, Adairsville, Dallas, Pine Top Mountain and Kenesaw Mountain, as well as in the investment of Atlanta; was relieved from duty, August 25, 1864, while at the front, and mustered out at Springfield, September 20. Its veterans, with the recruits whose term of service had not expired, were consolidated with the Ninth Infantry.

TWENTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY. Composed of companies from Pike, Fulton, Schuyler, Mason, Scott and Menard Counties; was organized at Springfield, August 15, 1861, and mustered into service for three years. It participated in the battles of Shiloh and Metamora, the siege of Vicksburg and the battles of Jackson, Mississippi, and Fort Beauregard, and in the capture of Spanish Fort, Fort Blakely and Mobile. From June, 1864, to March, 1866, it was stationed in Texas, and was mustered out at Brownsville, in that State, March 15, 1866, having served four years and seven months. It was discharged, at Springfield, May 13, 1866.

TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service at Springfield, August 19, 1861, and was engaged at Fort Donelson and Shiloh, and in the sieges of Corinth, Vicksburg and Mobile. Eight companies were detailed for duty at Holly Springs, and were there captured by General Van Dorn, in December, 1862, but were exchanged, six months later. In January, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and, from June, 1864, to November, 1865, was on duty in Texas. It was mustered out of service in that State, Nov. 6, 1865, and received final discharge on November 28.

THIRTIETH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, August 28, 1861; was engaged at Belmont, Fort Donelson, the siege of Corinth, Medan Station, Raymond, Champion Hills, the sieges of Vicksburg and Jackson, Big Shanty, Atlanta, Savannah, Pocotaligo, Orangeburg, Columbia, Cheraw, and Fayetteville; mustered out, July 17, 1865, and received final payment and discharge at Springfield, July 27, 1865.

THIRTY-FIRST INFANTRY. Organized at Cairo, and there mustered into service on Sept. 18, 1861; was engaged at Belmont, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, in the two expeditions against Vicksburg, at Thompson's Hill, Ingram Heights, Raymond, Jackson, Champion Hill, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, Lovejoy Station and Jonesboro; also participated in the "March to the Sea" and took part in the battles and skirmishes at Columbia, Cheraw, Fayetteville and Bentonville. A majority of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans in March, 1864. It was mustered out at Louisville, July 19, 1865, and finally discharged at Springfield, July 23.

THIRTY-SECOND INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered into service, Dec. 31, 1861. By special authority from the War Department, it originally consisted of ten companies of infantry, one of cavalry, and a battery. It was engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, in the sieges of Corinth and Vicksburg, and in the battles of La Grange, Grand Junction, Metamora, Harrisonburg, Kenesaw Mountain, Nickajack Creek, Allatoona, Savannah, Columbia, Cheraw and Bentonville. In January, 1864, the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, and, in June, 1865, was ordered to Fort Leavenworth. Mustered out there, Sept. 16, 1865, and finally discharged at Springfield.

THIRTY-THIRD INFANTRY. Organized and mustered into service at Springfield in September, 1861; was engaged at Fredericktown (Mo.), Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, the assault and siege of Vicksburg, siege of Jackson, Fort Esperanza, and in the expedition against Mobile. The regiment veteranized at Vicksburg, Jan. 1, 1864; was mustered out, at the same point, Nov. 24, 1865, and finally discharged at Springfield, Dec. 6 and 7, 1865. The aggregate enrollment of the regiment was between 1,900 and 2,000.

THIRTY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, Sept. 7, 1861, was engaged at Shiloh, Corinth, Murfreesboro, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, Jonesboro, and, after participating in the "March to the Sea" and through the Carolinas, took part in the battle of Bentonville. After the surrender of Johnston, the regiment went with Sherman's Army to Washington, D. C., and took part in the grand review, May 24, 1865; left Washington, June 13, and arrived at Louisville, Ky., June 18, where it was mustered out, on July 12; was discharged and paid at Chicago, July 17, 1865.

THIRTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Organized at Decatur on July 3, 1861, and its services tendered to the President, being accepted by the Secretary of War as "Col. G. A. Smith's Independent Regiment of Illinois Volunteers," on July 23, and mustered into service at St. Louis, August 12. It was engaged at Pea Ridge and in the siege of Corinth, also participated in the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Dallas and Kenesaw. Its final muster-out took place at Springfield, Sept. 27, 1864, the regiment having marched (exclusive of railroad and steamboat transportation) 3,056 miles.

THIRTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Organized at Camp Hammond, near Aurora, Ill., and mustered into service, Sept. 23, 1861, for a term of three years. The regiment, at its organization, numbered 965 officers and enlisted men, and had two companies of Cavalry ("A" and "B"), 186 officers and men. It was engaged at Leetown, Pea Ridge, Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, the siege of Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face Ridge, Resaca, Adairsville, New Hope Church, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Jonesboro, Franklin and Nashville. Mustered out, Oct. 8, 1865, and disbanded, at Springfield, Oct. 27, having marched and been transported, during its term of service, more than 10,000 miles.

THIRTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY. Familiarly known as "Fremont Rifles"; organized in August, 1861, and mustered into service, Sept. 18. The regiment was presented with battle-flags by the Chicago Board of Trade. It participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Neosho, Prairie Grove and Chalk Bluffs, the siege of Vicksburg, and in the battles of Yazoo City and Morgan's Bend. In October, 1863, it was ordered to the defense of the frontier along the Rio Grande; re-enlisted as veterans in February, 1864; took part in the siege and storming of Fort Blakely and the capture of Mobile; from July, 1865, to May, 1866, was again on duty in Texas; was mustered out at Houston, May 15, 1866, and finally discharged at Springfield, May 31, having traveled some 17,000 miles, of which nearly 3,300 were by marching.

THIRTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, in September, 1861. The regiment was engaged in the battles of Fredericktown, Perryville, Knob Gap, Stone River, Liberty Gap, Chickamauga, Pine Top, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Franklin and Nashville; re-enlisted as veterans in February, 1864; from June to December, 1865, was on duty in Louisiana and Texas, was mustered out at Victoria, Texas, Dec. 31, 1865, and received final discharge at Springfield.

THIRTY-NINTH INFANTRY. The organization of this Regiment was commenced as soon as the news of the firing on Fort Sumter reached Chicago. General Thomas O. Osborne was one of its contemplated field officers, and labored zealously to get it accepted under the first call for troops, but did not accomplish his object. The regiment had already assumed the name of the "Yates Phalanx" in honor of Governor Yates. It was accepted by the War Department on the day succeeding the first Bull Run disaster (July 22, 1861), and Aust in Light, of Chicago, was appointed Colonel. Under his direction the organization was completed, and the regiment left Camp Mather, Chicago, on the morning of Oct. 13, 1861. It participated in the battles of Winchester, Malvern Hill (the second), Morris Island, Fort Wagner, Drury's Bluff, and in numerous engagements before Petersburg and Richmond, including the capture of Fort Greigg, and was present at Lee's surrender at Appomattox. In the meantime the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, at Hilton Head, S. C., in September, 1863. It was mustered out at Norfolk, Dec. 6, 1865, and received final discharge at Chicago, December 16.

FORTIETH INFANTRY. Enlisted from the counties of Franklin, Hamilton, Wayne, White, Wabash, Marion, Clay and Fayette, and mustered into service for three years at Springfield, August 10, 1861. After the review at Washington, the regiment was mustered out, June 6, and returned to Chicago, June 9, 1865, where it was finally discharged.

NINETY-FIRST INFANTRY. Organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield, in August, 1862, and mustered in on Sept. 8, 1862; participated in the campaigns against Vicksburg and New Orleans, and all along the southwestern frontier in Louisiana and Texas, as well as in the investiture and capture of Mobile. It was mustered out at Mobile, July 12, 1865, starting for home the same day, and being finally paid off and discharged on July 28, following.

NINETY-SECOND INFANTRY (Mounted). Organized and mustered into service, Sept. 4, 1862, being recruited from Ogle, Stephenson and Carroll Counties. During its term of service, the Ninety-second was in more than sixty battles and skirmishes, including Ringgold, Chickamauga, and the numerous engagements on the "March to the Sea," and during the pursuit of Johnston through the Carolinas. It was mustered out at Concord, N. C., and paid and discharged from the service at Chicago, July 10, 1865.

NINETY-THIRD INFANTRY. Organized at Chicago, in September, 1862, and mustered in, Oct. 13, 998 strong. It participated in the movements against Jackson and Vicksburg, and was engaged at Champion Hills and at Fort Fisher; also was engaged in the battles of Missionary Ridge, Dallas, Resaca, and many minor engagements, following Sherman in his campaign through the Carolinas. Mustered out of service, June 23, 1865, and, on the 25th, arrived at Chicago, receiving final payment and discharge, July 7, 1865, the regiment having marched 2,554 miles, traveled by water, 2,296 miles, and, by railroad, 1,237 miles—total, 6,087 miles.

NINETY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Organized at Bloomington in August, 1862, and enlisted wholly in McLean County. After some warm experience in Southwest Missouri, the regiment took part in the siege and capture of Vicksburg, and was, later, actively engaged in the campaigns in Louisiana and Texas. It participated in the capture of Mobile, leading the final assault. After several months of garrison duty, the regiment was mustered out at Galveston, Texas, on July 17, 1865, reaching Bloomington on August 9, following, having served just three years, marched 1,200 miles, traveled by railroad 610 miles, and, by steamer, 6,000 miles, and taken part in nine battles, sieges and skirmishes.

NINETY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Organized at Rockford and mustered into service, Sept. 4, 1862. It was recruited from the counties of McHenry and Boone—three companies from the latter and seven from the former. It took part in the campaigns in Northern Mississippi and against Vicksburg in the Red River expedition, the campaigns against Price in Missouri and Arkansas, against Mobile and around Atlanta. Among the battles in which the regiment was engaged were those of the Tallahatchie River, Grand Gulf, Raymond, Champion Hills, Fort de Russey, Old River, Cloutierville, Mansura, Yellow Bayou, Guntown, Nashville, Spanish Fort, Fort Blakely, Kenesaw Mountain, Chattahoochie River, Atlanta, Ezra Church, Jonesboro, Lovejoy Station and Nashville. The distance traveled by the regiment, while in the service, was 9,960 miles. It was transferred to the Forty-seventh Illinois Infantry, August 25, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-THIRD INFANTRY. Mustered into service at Mattoon, Sept. 6, 1862; participated in the battles of Perryville, Milton, Hoover's Gap, and Farmington; also took part in the entire Atlanta campaign, marching as cavalry and fighting as infantry. Later, it served as mounted infantry in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama, taking a prominent part in the capture of Selma. The regiment was discharged at Springfield, July 11, 1865—the recruits, whose terms had not expired, being transferred to the Sixty-first Volunteer Infantry.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Mustered into the service, Sept. 10, 1862, at Springfield; took part in the Vicksburg campaign and in the battles of Port Gibson, Raymond and Champion Hills, the siege of Vicksburg, the Meridian raid, the Yazoo expedition, and the capture of Mobile. On the 16th of August, 1865, eleven days less than three years after the first company went into camp at Springfield, the regiment was mustered out at Chicago. Colonel Howe's history of the battle-flag of the regiment, stated that it had been borne 4,100 miles, in fourteen skirmishes, ten battles and two sieges of forty-seven days and nights, and thirteen days and nights, respectively.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service, Sept. 3, 1862; participated in the battles of Perryville, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta and Jonesboro, and in the "March to the Sea" and the Carolina campaign, being engaged at Averysboro and Bentonville. It was mustered out at Washington, D. C., June 9, 1865, and finally discharged at Chicago.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Organized at Alton and mustered in, Sept. 4, 1862, and participated in the siege of Vicksburg. Six companies were engaged in skirmish line, near Humboldt, Tenn., and the regiment took part in the capture of Little Rock and in the fight at Clarendon, Ark. It was mustered out July 12, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service at Chicago, Sept. 6, 1862; took part in the first campaign against Vicksburg, and in the battle of Arkansas Post, the siege of Vicksburg under Grant, the capture of Jackson (Miss.), the battles of Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain, the Meridian raid, and in the fighting at Resaca, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta and Jonesboro; also accompanied Sherman in his march through Georgia and the Carolinas, taking part in the battle of Bentonville; was mustered out at Chicago June 17, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY. Mustered in, Dec. 18, 1862, but remained in service less than five months, when, its number of officers and men having been reduced from 860 to 161 (largely by desertions), a number of officers were dismissed, and the few remaining officers and men were formed into a detachment, and transferred to another Illinois regiment.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY. Organized at Pontiac, in August, 1862, and mustered into the service Sept. 8. Prior to May, 1864, the regiment was chiefly engaged in garrison duty. It marched with Sherman in the Atlanta campaign and through Georgia and the Carolinas, and took part in the battles of Resaca, Buzzard's Roost, Lost Mountain, Dallas, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Averysboro and Bentonville. It received final pay and discharge at Chicago, June 10, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTIETH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered into service, Oct. 25, 1862; was engaged at Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, Vicksburg, Jackson (Miss.), and in the Red River expedition. While on this expedition almost the entire regiment was captured at the battle of Mansfield, and not paroled until near the close of the war. The remaining officers and men were consolidated with the Seventy-seventh Infantry in January, 1865, and participated in the capture of Mobile. Six months later its regimental reorganization, as the One Hundred and Thirtieth, was ordered. It was mustered out at New Orleans, August 15, 1865, and discharged at Springfield, August 31.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIRST INFANTRY. Organized in September, 1862, and mustered into the service, Nov. 13, with 815 men, exclusive of officers. In October, 1863, it was consolidated with the Twenty-ninth Infantry, and ceased to exist as a separate organization. Up to that time the regiment had been in but a few conflicts and in no pitched battle.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SECOND INFANTRY. Organized at Chicago and mustered in for 100 days from June 1, 1864. The regiment remained on duty at Paducah until the expiration of its service, when it moved to Chicago, and was mustered out, Oct. 17, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Organized at Chicago and mustered in, May 31, 1864, for 100 days; was assigned to garrison duty at Columbus, Ky., and mustered out of service, Oct. 25, 1864, at Chicago.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Mustered in for 100-days' service at Mattoon, June 6, 1864, having a strength of 852 men. It was chiefly engaged, during its term of service, in doing garrison duty and guarding railroads. It was mustered out at Springfield, Sept. 28, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Enlisted about the first of May, 1864, for 100 days, and went into camp at Centralia, Ill., but was not mustered into service until June 1, following. Its principal service was garrison duty, with occasional scouts and raids amongst guerrillas. At the end of its term of service the regiment re-enlisted for fifteen days; was mustered out at Springfield, Oct. 22, 1864, and discharged eight days later.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY. Organized at Quincy, with ex-Gov. John Wood as its Colonel, and mustered in, June 5, 1864, for 100 days. Was on duty at Memphis, Tenn., and mustered out of service at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 4, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY. Organized at Quincy, and mustered in, June 21, 1864, for 100 days; was assigned to garrison duty at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and in Western Missouri. It was mustered out of service at Springfield, Ill., Oct. 14, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-NINTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service as a 100-day's regiment, at Peoria, June 1, 1864; was engaged in garrison duty at Columbus and Cairo, in making reprisals for guerrilla raids, and in the pursuit of the Confederate General Price in Missouri. The latter service was rendered, at the President's request, after the term of enlistment had expired. It was mustered out at Peoria, Oct. 25, 1864, having been in the service nearly five months.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTIETH INFANTRY. Organized as a 100-days' regiment, at Springfield, June 18, 1864, and mustered into service on that date. The regiment was engaged in guarding railroads between Memphis and Holly Springs, and in garrison duty at Memphis. After the term of enlistment had expired and the regiment had been mustered out, it aided in the pursuit of General Price through Missouri; was finally discharged at Chicago, after serving about five months.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIRST INFANTRY. Mustered into service as a 100-days' regiment, at Elgin, June 16, 1864—strength, 842 men; departed for the field, June 27, 1864; was mustered out at Chicago, Oct. 10, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SECOND INFANTRY. Organized at Freeport as a battalion of eight companies, and sent to Camp Butler, where two companies were added and the regiment mustered into service for 100 days, June 18, 1864. It was ordered to Memphis, Tenn., five days later, and assigned to duty at White's Station, eleven miles from that city, where it was employed in guarding the Memphis & Charleston railroad. It was mustered out at Chicago, on Oct. 27, 1864, the men having voluntarily served one month beyond their term of enlistment.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-THIRD INFANTRY. Organized at Mattoon, and mustered in, June 11, 1864, for 100 days. It was assigned to garrison duty, and mustered out at Mattoon, Sept. 26, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Organized at Alton, in 1864, as a one-year regiment; was mustered into the service, Oct. 21, its strength being 1,159 men. It was mustered out, July 14, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Mustered into service at Springfield, June 9, 1864; strength, 880 men. It departed for the field, June 12, 1864; was mustered out, Sept. 23, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, Sept. 18, 1864, for one year. Was assigned to the duty of guarding drafted men at Brighton, Quincy, Jacksonville and Springfield, and mustered out at Springfield, July 5, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY. Organized at Chicago, and mustered into service for one year, Feb. 18 and 19, 1865; was engaged chiefly on guard or garrison duty, in scouting and in skirmishing with guerrillas. Mustered out at Nashville, Jan. 22, 1866, and received final discharge at Springfield, Feb. 4.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, Feb. 21, 1865, for the term of one year; was assigned to garrison and guard duty and mustered out, Sept. 5, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn.; arrived at Springfield, Sept. 9, 1865, where it was paid off and discharged.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-NINTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, Feb. 11, 1865, and mustered in for one year; was engaged in garrison and guard duty; mustered out, Jan. 27, 1866, at Dalton, Ga., and ordered to Springfield, where it received final payment and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, and mustered in, Feb. 14, 1865, for one year; was on duty in Tennessee and Georgia, guarding railroads and garrisoning towns. It was mustered out, Jan. 16, 1866, at Atlanta, Ga., and ordered to Springfield, where it received final payment and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FIRST INFANTRY. This regiment was organized at Quincy, Ill., and mustered into the United States service, Feb. 23, 1865, and was composed of companies from various parts of the State, recruited, under the call of Dec. 19, 1864. It was engaged in guard duty, with a few guerrilla skirmishes, and was present at the surrender of General Warford's army, at Kingston, Ga.; was mustered out at Columbus, Ga., Jan. 24, 1866, and ordered to Springfield, where it received final payment and discharge, Feb. 8, 1866.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SECOND INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered in, Feb. 18, 1865, for one year; was mustered out of service, to date Sept. 11, at Memphis, Tenn., and arrived at Camp Butler, Sept. 9, 1865, where it received final payment and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-THIRD INFANTRY. Organized at Chicago, and mustered in, Feb. 27, 1865, for one year; was not engaged in any battles. It was mustered out, Sept. 15, 1865, and moved to Springfield, Ill., and, Sept. 24, received final pay and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOURTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield, Feb. 21, 1865, for one year. Sept. 18, 1865, the regiment was mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., and ordered to Springfield for final payment and discharge, where it arrived, Sept. 22; was paid off and discharged at Camp Butler, Sept. 29.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FIFTH INFANTRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered in Feb. 28, 1865, for one year, 904 strong. On Sept. 4, 1865, it was mustered out of service, and moved to Camp Butler, where it received final pay and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SIXTH INFANTRY. Organized and mustered in during the months of February and March, 1865, from the northern counties of the State, for the term of one year. The officers of the regiment have left no written record of its history, but its service seems to have been rendered chiefly in Tennessee in the neighborhood of Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga. Judging by the muster-rolls of the Adjutant-General, the regiment would appear to have been greatly depleted by desertions and otherwise, the remnant being finally mustered out, Sept. 20, 1865.

FIRST CAVALRY. Organized — consisting of seven companies, A, B, C, D, E, F and G — at Alton, in 1861, and mustered into the United States service, July 3. After some service in Missouri, the regiment participated in the battle of Lexington, in that State, and was surrendered, with the remainder of the garrison, Sept. 20, 1861. The officers were paroled, and the men sworn not to take up arms again until discharged. No exchange having been effected in November, the non-commissioned officers and privates were ordered to Springfield and discharged. In June, 1862, the regiment was reorganized at Benton Barracks, Mo., being afterwards employed in guarding supply trains and supply depots at various points. Mustered out, at Benton Barracks, July 14, 1862.

SECOND CAVALRY. Organized at Springfield and mustered into service, August 12, 1861, with Company M (which joined the regiment some months later), numbering 47 commissioned officers and 1,040 enlisted men. This number was increased by recruits and re-enlistments, during its four and a half year's term of service, to 2,236 enlisted men and 145 commissioned officers. It was engaged at Belmont; a portion of the regiment took part in the battles at Fort Henry, Fort Donelson and Shiloh, another portion at Merriweather's Ferry, Bolivar and Holly Springs, and participated in the investment of Vicksburg. In January, 1864, the major part of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, later, participating in the Red River expedition and the investment of Fort Blakely. It was mustered out at San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 22, 1865, and finally paid and discharged at Springfield, Jan. 3, 1866.

THIRD CAVALRY. Composed of twelve companies, from various localities in the State, the grand total of company officers and enlisted men, under the first organization, being 1,433. It was organized at Springfield, in August, 1861; participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Haines' Bluff, Arkansas Post, Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, and the siege of Vicksburg. In July, 1864, a large portion of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans. The remainder were mustered out, Sept. 5, 1864. The veterans participated in the repulse of Forrest, at Memphis, and in the battles of Lawrenceburg, Spring Hill, Campbellsville and Franklin. From May to October, 1865, engaged in service against the Indians in the Northwest. The regiment was mustered out at Springfield, Oct. 18, 1865.

FOURTH CAVALRY. Mustered into service, Sept. 26, 1861, and participated in the battles of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, and Shiloh; in the siege of Corinth, and in many engagements of less historic note; was mustered out at Springfield in November, 1864. By order of the War Department, of June 18, 1865, the members of the regiment whose terms had not expired, were consolidated with the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry.

FIFTH CAVALRY. Organized at Camp Butler, in November, 1861; took part in the Meridian raid and the expedition against Jackson, Miss., and in numerous minor expeditions, doing effective work at Canton, Grenada, Woodville, and other points. On Jan. 1, 1864, a large portion of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans. Its final muster-out took place, Oct. 27, 1865, and it received final payment and discharge, October 30.

SIXTH CAVALRY. Organized at Springfield, Nov. 19, 1861; participated in Sherman's advance upon Grenada; in the Grierson raid through Mississippi and Louisiana, the siege of Port Hudson, the battles of Moscow (Tenn.), West Point (Miss.), Franklin and Nashville; re-enlisted as veterans, March 30, 1864; was mustered out at Selma, Ala., Nov. 5, 1865, and received discharge, November 20, at Springfield.

SEVENTH CAVALRY. Organized at Springfield, and was mustered into service, Oct. 13, 1861. It participated in the battles of Farmington, Iuka, Corinth (second battle); in Grierson's raid through Mississippi and Louisiana; in the engagement at Plain's Store (La.), and the investment of Port Hudson. In March, 1864, 288 officers and men re-enlisted as veterans. The non-veterans were engaged at Guntown, and the entire regiment took part in the battle of Franklin. After the close of hostilities, it was stationed in Alabama and Mississippi, until the latter part of October, 1865; was mustered out at Nashville, and finally discharged at Springfield, Nov. 17, 1865.

EIGHTH CAVALRY. Organized at St. Charles, Ill., and mustered in, Sept. 18, 1861. The regiment was ordered to Virginia, and participated in the general advance on Manassas in March, 1862; was engaged at Mechanicsville, Gaines' Hill, Malvern Hill, Sugar Loaf Mountain, Middletown, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Sulphur Springs, Warrenton, Rapidan Station, Northern Neck, Gettysburg, Williamsburg, Funkstown, Falling Water, Chester Gap, Sandy Hook, Culpepper, Brandy Station, and in many raids and skirmishes. It was mustered out of service at Benton Barracks, Mo., July 17, 1865, and ordered to Chicago, where it received final payment and discharge.

NINTH CAVALRY. Organized at Chicago, in the autumn of 1861, and mustered in, November 30; was engaged at Coldwater, Grenada, Wyatt, Saulsbury, Moscow, Guntown, Pontotoc, Tupelo, Old Town Creek, Hurricane Creek, Lawrenceburg, Campbellsville, Franklin and Nashville. The regiment re-enlisted as veterans, March 16, 1864; was mustered out of service at Selma, Ala., Oct. 31, 1865, and ordered to Springfield, where the men received final payment and discharge.

TENTH CAVALRY. Organized at Springfield in the latter part of September, 1861, and mustered into service, Nov. 25, 1861; was engaged at Prairie Grove, Cotton Plant, Arkansas Post, in the Yazoo Pass expedition, at Richmond (La.), Brownsville, Bayou Metoe, Bayou La Fourche and Little Rock. In February, 1864, a large portion of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, the non-veterans accompanying General Banks in his Red River expedition. On Jan. 27, 1865, the veterans and recruits were consolidated with the Fifteenth Cavalry, and all reorganized under the name of the Tenth Illinois Veteran Volunteer Cavalry. Mustered out of service at San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 22, 1865, and received final discharge at Springfield, Jan. 6, 1866.

ELEVENTH CAVALRY. Robert G. Ingersoll of Peoria, and Basil D. Meeks, of Woodford County, obtained permission to raise a regiment of cavalry, and recruiting commenced in October, 1861. The regiment was recruited from the counties of Peoria, Fulton, Tazewell, Woodford, Marshall, Stark, Knox, Henderson and Warren; was mustered into the service at Peoria, Dec. 20, 1861, and was first under fire at Shiloh. It also took part in the raid in the rear of Corinth, and in the battles of Bolivar, Corinth (second battle), Iuka, Lexington and Jackson (Tenn.); in McPherson's expedition to Canton and Sherman's Meridian raid, in the relief of Yazoo City, and in numerous less important raids and skirmishes. Most of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans in December, 1863; the non-veterans being mustered out at Memphis, in the autumn of 1864. The veterans were mustered out at the same place, Sept. 30, 1865, and discharged at Springfield, October 20.

TWELFTH CAVALRY. Organized at Springfield, in February, 1862, and remained there guarding rebel prisoners until June 25, when it was mounted and sent to Martinsburg, Va. It was engaged at Fredericksburg, Williamsport, Falling Waters, the Rapidan and Stevensburg. On Nov. 26, 1863, the regiment was relieved from service and ordered home to reorganize as veterans. Subsequently it joined Banks in the Red River expedition and in Davidson's expedition against Mobile. While at Memphis the Twelfth Cavalry was consolidated into an eight-company organization, and the Fourth Cavalry, having previously been consolidated into a battalion of five companies, was consolidated with the Twelfth. The consolidated regiment was mustered out at Houston, Texas, May 29, 1866, and, on June 18, received final pay and discharge at Springfield.

THIRTEENTH CAVALRY. Organized at Chicago, in December, 1861; moved to the front from Benton Barracks, Mo., in February, 1862, and was engaged in the following battles and skirmishes (all in Missouri and Arkansas): Putnam's Ferry, Cotton Plant, Union City (twice), Camp Pillow, Bloomfield (first and second battles), Van Buren, Allen, Eleven Point River, Jackson, White River, Chalk Bluff, Busby Creek, near Helena, Grand Prairie, White River, Deadman's Lake, Brownsville, Bayou Metoe, Austin, Little Rock, Benton, Batesville, Pine Bluff, Arkadelphia, Okolona, Little Missouri River, Prairie du Anue, Camden, Jenkins' Ferry, Cross Roads, Mount Elba, Douglas Landing and Monticello. The regiment was mustered out, August 31, 1865, and received final pay and discharge at Springfield, Sept. 13, 1865.

FOURTEENTH CAVALRY. Mustered into service at Peoria, in January and February, 1863; participated in the battle of Cumberland Gap, in the defense of Knoxville and the pursuit of Longstreet, in the engagements at Bean Station and Dandridge, in the Macon raid, and in the cavalry battle at Sunshine Church. In the latter General Stoneman surrendered, but the Fourteenth cut its way out. On their retreat the men were betrayed by a guide and the regiment bally cut up and scattered, those escaping being hunted by soldiers with bloodhounds. Later, it was engaged at Waynesboro and in the battles of Franklin and Nashville, and was mustered out at Nashville, July 31, 1865, having marched over 10,000 miles, exclusive of duty done by detachments.

FIFTEENTH CAVALRY. Composed of companies originally independent, attached to infantry regiments and acting as such; participated in the battles of Fort Donelson and Shiloh, and in the siege and capture of Corinth. Regimental organization was effected in the spring of 1863, and thereafter it was engaged chiefly in scouting and post duty. It was mustered out at Springfield August 25, 1864, the recruits (whose term of service had not expired) being consolidated with the Tenth Cavalry.

SIXTEENTH CAVALRY. Composed principally of Chicago men—Thieleman's and Schambeck's Cavalry Companies, raised at the outset of the war, forming the nucleus of the regiment. The former served as General Sherman's body-guard for some time. Captain Thieleman was made a Major and authorized to raise a battalion, the two companies named thenceforth being known as Thieleman's Battalion. In September, 1862, the War Department authorized the extension of the battalion to a regiment, and, on the 11th of June, 1863, the regimental organization was completed. It took part in the East Tennessee campaign, a portion of the regiment aiding in the defense of Knoxville, a part garrisoning Cumberland Gap, and one battalion being captured by Longstreet. The regiment also participated in the battles of Rocky Face Ridge, Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Kingston, Cassville, Cartersville, Allatoona, Kenesaw, Lost Mountain, Mines Ridge, Powder Springs, Chattahoochie, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Franklin and Nashville. It arrived in Chicago, August 23, 1865, for final payment and discharge, having marched about 5,000 miles and engaged in thirty-one battles, besides numerous skirmishes.

SEVENTEENTH CAVALRY. Mustered into service in January and February, 1864; aided in the repulse of Price at Jefferson City, Mo., and was engaged at Booneville, Independence, Mine Creek, and Fort Scott, besides doing garrison duty, scouting and raiding. It was mustered out in November and December, 1865, at Leavenworth, Kan. Gov. John L. Beveridge, who had previously been a Captain and Major of the Eighth Cavalry, was the Colonel of this regiment.

FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY. Consisted of ten batteries. Battery A was organized under the first call for State troops, April 21, 1861, but not mustered into the three years' service until July 16; was engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, the sieges of Vicksburg and Jackson, and in the Atlanta campaign; was in reserve at Champion Hills and Nashville, and mustered out July 3, 1865, at Chicago.

Battery B was organized in April, 1861, engaged at Belmont, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, in the siege of Corinth and at La Grange, Holly Springs, Memphis, Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, the siege of Vicksburg, Mechanicsburg, Richmond (La.), the Atlanta campaign and the battle of Nashville. The Battery was reorganized by consolidation with Battery A, and mustered out at Chicago, July 2, 1865.

Battery D was organized at Cairo, Sept. 2, 1861; was engaged at Fort Donelson and at Shiloh, and mustered out, July 28, 1865, at Chicago.

Battery E was organized at Camp Douglas and mustered into service, Dec. 19, 1861; was engaged at Shiloh, Corinth, Jackson, Vicksburg, Gun-town, Pontotoc, Tupelo and Nashville, and mustered out at Louisville, Dec. 24, 1864.

Battery F was recruited at Dixon and mustered in at Springfield, Feb. 25, 1862. It took part in the siege of Corinth and the Yocona expedition, and was consolidated with the other batteries in the regiment, March 7, 1865.

Battery G was organized at Cairo and mustered in Sept. 28, 1861; was engaged in the siege and the second battle of Corinth, and mustered out at Springfield, July 24, 1865.

Battery H was recruited in and about Chicago, during January and February, 1862; participated in the battle of Shiloh, siege of Vicksburg, and in the Atlanta campaign, the "March to the Sea," and through the Carolinas with Sherman.

Battery I was organized at Camp Douglas and mustered in, Feb. 10, 1862; was engaged at Shiloh, in the Tallahatchie raid, the sieges of Vicksburg and Jackson, and in the battles of Chattanooga and Vicksburg. It veteranized, March 17, 1864, and was mustered out, July 26, 1865.

Battery K was organized at Shawneetown and mustered in, Jan. 9, 1862, participated in Burnside's campaign in Tennessee, and in the capture of Knoxville. Part of the men were mustered out at Springfield in June, 1865, and the remainder at Chicago in July.

Battery M was organized at Camp Douglas and mustered into the service, August 12, 1863, for three years. It served through the Chickamauga campaign, being engaged at Chickamauga; also was engaged at Missionary Ridge, was besieged at Chattanooga, and took part in all the important battles of the Atlanta campaign. It was mustered out at Chicago, July 24, 1864, having traveled 3,192 miles and been under fire 178 days.

SECOND LIGHT ARTILLERY. Consisted of nine batteries. Battery A was organized at Peoria, and mustered into service, May 23, 1861; served in Missouri and Arkansas, doing brilliant work at Pea Ridge. It was mustered out of service at Springfield, July 27, 1865.

Battery D was organized at Cairo, and mustered into service in December, 1861; was engaged at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Jackson, Meridian and Decatur, and mustered out at Louisville, Nov. 21, 1864.

Battery E was organized at St. Louis, Mo., in August, 1861, and mustered into service, August 29, at that point. It was engaged at Fort Donelson and Shiloh, and in the siege of Corinth and the Yocona expedition—was consolidated with Battery A.

Battery F was organized at Cape Girardeau, Mo., and mustered in, Dec. 11, 1861; was engaged at Shiloh, in the siege and second battle of Corinth, and the Meridian campaign; also at Kenesaw, Atlanta and Jonesboro. It was mustered out, July 27, 1865, at Springfield.

Battery H was organized at Springfield, December, 1861, and mustered in, Dec. 31, 1861; was engaged at Fort Donelson and in the siege of Fort Pillow; veteranized, Jan. 1, 1864, was mounted as cavalry the following summer, and mustered out at Springfield, July 29, 1865.

Battery I was recruited in Will County, and mustered into service at Camp Butler, Dec. 31, 1861. It participated in the siege of Island No. 10, in the advance upon Corinth, and in the battles of Perryville, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and Chattanooga. It veteranized, Jan. 1, 1864, marched with Sherman to Atlanta, and thence to Savannah and through the Carolinas, and was mustered out at Springfield.

Battery K was organized at Springfield and mustered in Dec. 31, 1863; was engaged at Fort Pillow, the capture of Clarkston, Mo., and the siege of Vicksburg. It was mustered out, July 14, 1865, at Chicago.

Battery L was organized at Chicago and mustered in, Feb. 28, 1862; participated in the advance on Corinth, the battle of Hatchie and the advance on the Tallahatchie, and was mustered out at Chicago, August 9, 1865.

Battery M was organized at Chicago, and mustered in at Springfield, June, 1862; was engaged at Jonesboro, Blue Spring, Blountsville and Rogersville, being finally consolidated with other batteries of the regiment.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE BATTERY. Organized through the efforts of the Chicago Board of Trade, which raised $15,000 for its equipment, within forty-eight hours. It was mustered into service, August 1, 1862, was engaged at Lawrenceburg, Murfreesboro, Stone River, Chickamauga, Farmington, Decatur (Ga.), Atlanta, Lovejoy Station, Nashville, Selma and Columbus (Ga.) It was mustered out at Chicago, June 30, 1865, and paid in full, July 3, having marched 5,268 miles and traveled by rail 1,231 miles. The battery was in eleven of the hardest battles fought in the West, and in twenty-six minor battles, being in action forty-two times while on scouts, reconnaissances or outpost duty.

CHICAGO MERCANTILE BATTERY. Recruited and organized under the auspices of the Mercantile Association, an association of prominent and patriotic merchants of the City of Chicago. It was mustered into service, August 29, 1862, at Camp Douglas, participated in the Tallahatchie and Yazoo expeditions, the first attack upon Vicksburg, the battle of Arkansas Post, the siege of Vicksburg, the battles of Magnolia Hills, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge and Jackson (Miss.); also took part in Banks' Red River expedition; was mustered out at Chicago, and received final payment, July 10, 1865, having traveled, by river, sea and land, over 11,000 miles.

SPRINGFIELD LIGHT ARTILLERY. Recruited principally from the cities of Springfield, Belleville and Wenona, and mustered into service at Springfield, for the term of three years, August 21, 1862, numbering 199 men and officers. It participated in the capture of Little Rock and in the Red River expedition, and was mustered out at Springfield, 114 strong, June 30, 1865.

COGSWELL'S BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY. Organized at Ottawa, Ill., and mustered in, Nov. 11, 1861, as Company A (Artillery) Fifty-third Illinois Volunteers, Colonel Cushman commanding the regiment. It participated in the advance on Corinth, the siege of Vicksburg, the battle of Missionary Ridge, and the capture of Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely, near Mobile. The regiment was mustered out at Springfield, August 14, 1865, having served three years and nine months, marched over 7,500 miles, and participated in seven sieges and battles.

STURGES RIFLES. An independent company, organized at Chicago, armed, equipped and subsisted for nearly two months, by the patriotic generosity of Mr. Solomon Sturges; was mustered into service, May 6, 1861; in June following, was ordered to West Virginia, serving as body-guard of General McClellan; was engaged at Rich Mountain, in the siege of Yorktown, and in the seven days' battle of the Chickahominy. A portion of the company was at Antietam, the remainder having been detached as foragers, scouts, etc. It was mustered out at Washington, Nov. 25, 1862.

WAR, THE SPANISH-AMERICAN. The oppressions and misrule which had characterized the administration of affairs by the Spanish Government and its agents for generations, in the Island of Cuba, culminated, in April, 1898, in mutual declarations of war between Spain and the United States. The causes leading up to this result were the injurious effects upon American commerce and the interests of American citizens owning property in Cuba, as well as the constant expense imposed upon the Government of the United States in the maintenance of a large navy along the South Atlantic coast to suppress filibustering, superadded to the friction and unrest produced among the people of this country by the long continuance of disorders and abuses so near to our own shores, which aroused the sympathy and indignation of the entire civilized world. For three years a large proportion of the Cuban population had been in open rebellion against the Spanish Government, and, while the latter had imported a large army to the island and subjected the insurgents and their families and sympathizers to the grossest cruelties, not even excepting torture and starvation itself, their policy had failed to bring the insurgents into subjection or to restore order. In this condition of affairs the United States Government had endeavored, through negotiation, to secure a mitigation of the evils complained of, by a modification of the Spanish policy of government in the island; but all suggestions in this direction had either been resented by Spain as unwarrantable interference in her affairs, or promises of reform, when made, had been as invariably broken.

In the meantime an increasing sentiment had been growing up in the United States in favor of conceding belligerent rights to the Cuban insurgents, or the recognition of their independence, which found expression in measures proposed in Congress—all offers of friendly intervention by the United States having been rejected by Spain with evidences of indignation. Compelled, at last, to recognize its inability to subdue the insurrection, the Spanish Government, in November, 1895, made a pretense of tendering autonomy to the Cuban people, with the privilege of amnesty to the insurgents on laying down their arms. The long duration of the war and the outrages perpetrated upon the helpless "reconcentrados," coupled with the increased confidence of the insurgents in the final triumph of their cause, rendered this movement—even if intended to be carried out to the letter—of no avail. The proffer came too late, and was promptly rejected.

In this condition of affairs and with a view to greater security for American interests, the American battleship Maine was ordered to Havana, on Jan. 24, 1898. It arrived in Havana Harbor the following day, and was anchored at a point designated by the Spanish commander. On the night of February 15, following, it was blown up and destroyed by some force, as shown by after investigation, applied from without. Of a crew of 354 men belonging to the vessel at the time, 266 were either killed outright by the explosion, or died from their wounds. Not only the American people, but the entire civilized world, was shocked by the catastrophe. An act of horrible treachery had been perpetrated against an American vessel and its crew on a peaceful mission in the harbor of a professedly friendly nation.

The successive steps leading to actual hostilities were rapid and eventful. One of the earliest and most significant of these was the passage, by a unanimous vote of both houses of Congress, on March 9, of an appropriation placing $50,000,000 in the hands of the President as an emergency fund for purposes of national defense. This was followed, two days later, by an order for the mobilization of the army. The more important events following this step were: An order, under date of April 5, withdrawing American consuls from Spanish stations; the departure, on April 9, of Consul-General Fitzhugh Lee from Havana; April 19 the adoption by Congress of concurrent resolutions declaring Cuba independent and directing the President to use the land and naval forces of the United States to put an end to Spanish authority in the island; April 20, the sending to the Spanish Government, by the President, of an ultimatum in accordance with this act; April 21, the delivery to Minister Woodford, at Madrid, of his passports without waiting for the presentation of the ultimatum, with the departure of the Spanish Minister from Washington; April 23, the issue of a call by the President for 125,000 volunteers; April 24, the final declaration of war by Spain; April 25, the adoption by Congress of a resolution declaring that war had existed from April 21; on the same date an order to Admiral Dewey, in command of the Asiatic Squadron at Hongkong, to sail for Manila with a view to investing that city and blockading Philippine ports.

The chief events subsequent to the declaration of war embraced the following: May 1, the destruction by Admiral Dewey's squadron of the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Manila; May 19, the arrival of the Spanish Admiral Cervera's fleet at Santiago de Cuba; May 25, a second call by the President for 75,000 volunteers; July 3, the attempt of Cervera's fleet to escape, and its destruction off Santiago; July 17, the surrender of Santiago to the forces under General Shafter; July 30, the statement by the President, through the French Ambassador at Washington, of the terms on which the United States would consent to make peace; August 9, acceptance of the peace terms by Spain, followed, three days later, by the signing of the peace protocol; September 9, the appointment by the President of Peace Commissioners on the part of the United States; Sept. 18, the announcement of the Peace Commissioners selected by Spain; October 1, the beginning of the Peace Conference by the representatives of the two powers, at Paris, and the formal signing, on December 10, of the peace treaty, including the recognition by Spain of the freedom of Cuba, with the transfer to the United States of Porto Rico and her other West India islands, together with the surrender of the Philippines for a consideration of $20,000,000.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of nations have such vast and far-reaching results been accomplished within so short a period. The war, which practically began with the destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila Harbor—an event which aroused the enthusiasm of the whole American people, and won the respect and admiration of other nations—was practically ended by the surrender of Santiago and the declaration by the President of the conditions of peace just three months later. Succeeding events, up to the formal signing of the peace treaty, were merely the recognition of results previously determined.

HISTORY OF ILLINOIS REGIMENTS.—The part played by Illinois in connection with these events may be briefly summarized in the history of Illinois regiments and other organizations. Under the first call of the President for 125,000 volunteers, eight regiments—seven of infantry and one of cavalry—were assigned to Illinois, to which was subsequently added, on application through Governor Tanner, one battery of light artillery. The infantry regiments were made up of the Illinois National Guard, numbered consecutively from one to seven, and were practically mobilized at their home stations within forty-eight hours from the receipt of the call, and began to arrive at Camp Tanner, near Springfield, the place of rendezvous, on April 26, the day after the issue of the Governor's call. The record of Illinois troops is conspicuous for the promptness of their response and the completeness of their organization—in this respect being unsurpassed by those of any other State. Under the call of May 25 for an additional force of 75,000 men, the quota assigned to Illinois was two regiments, which were promptly furnished, taking the names of the Eighth and Ninth. The first of these belonged to the Illinois National Guard, as the regiments mustered in under the first call had done, while the Ninth was one of a number of "Provisional Regiments" which had tendered their services to the Government. Some twenty-five other regiments of this class, more or less complete, stood ready to perfect their organizations should there be occasion for their services. The aggregate strength of Illinois organizations at date of muster out from the United States service was 12,280—11,789 men and 491 officers.

FIRST REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS (originally Illinois National Guard) was organized at Chicago, and mustered into the United States service at Camp Tanner (Springfield), under the command of Col. Henry L. Turner, May 13, 1898; left Springfield for Camp Thomas (Chickamauga) May 17; assigned to First Brigade, Third Division, of the First Army Corps; started for Tampa, Fla., June 2, but soon after arrival there was transferred to Picnic Island, and assigned to provost duty in place of the First United States Infantry. On June 30 the bulk of the regiment embarked for Cuba, but was detained in the harbor at Key West until July 5, when the vessel sailed for Santiago, arriving in Guantanamo Bay on the evening of the 8th. Disembarking on the 10th, the whole regiment arrived on the firing line on the 11th, spent several days and nights in the trenches before Santiago, and were present at the surrender of that city on the 17th. Two companies had previously been detached for the scarcely less perilous duty of service in the fever hospitals and in caring for their wounded comrades. The next month was spent on guard duty in the captured city, until August 25, when, depleted in numbers and weakened by fever, the bulk of the regiment was transferred by hospital boats to Camp Wikoff, on Montauk Point, L. I. The members of the regiment able to travel left Camp Wikoff, September 8, for Chicago, arriving two days later, where they met an enthusiastic reception and were mustered out, November 17, 1,235 strong (rank and file)—a considerable number of recruits having joined the regiment just before leaving Tampa. The record of the First was conspicuous by the fact that it was the only Illinois regiment to see service in Cuba during the progress of actual hostilities. Before leaving Tampa some eighty members of the regiment were detailed for engineering duty in Porto Rico, sailed for that island on July 12, and were among the first to perform service there. The First suffered severely from yellow fever while in Cuba, but, as a regiment, while in the service, made a brilliant record, which was highly complimented in the official reports of its commanding officers.

SECOND REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (originally Second I. N. G.). This regiment, also from Chicago, began to arrive at Springfield, April 27, 1898—at that time numbering 1,202 men and 47 officers, under command of Col. George M. Moulton; was mustered in between May 4 and May 15; on May 17 started for Tampa, Fla., but en route its destination was changed to Jacksonville, where, as a part of the Seventh Army Corps, under command of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, it assisted in the dedication of Camp Cuba Libre. October 25 it was transferred to Savannah, Ga., remaining at "Camp Lee" until December 8, when two battalions embarked for Havana, landing on the 15th, being followed, a few days later, by the Third Battalion, and stationed at Camp Columbia. From Dec. 17 to Jan. 11, 1899, Colonel Moulton served as Chief of Police for the city of Havana. On March 28 to 30 the regiment left Camp Columbia in detachments for Augusta, Ga., where it arrived April 5, and was mustered out, April 26, 1,051 strong (rank and file), and returned to Chicago. During its stay in Cuba the regiment did not lose a man. A history of this regiment has been written by Rev. H. W. Bolton, its late Chaplain.

THIRD REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY, composed of companies of the Illinois National Guard from the counties of La Salle, Livingston, Kane, Kankakee, McHenry, Ogle, Will, and Winnebago, under command of Col. Fred Bennett, reported at Springfield, with 1,170 men and 50 officers, on April 27; was mustered in May 7, 1898; transferred from Springfield to Camp Thomas (Chickamauga), May 14; on July 22 left Chickamauga for Porto Rico; on the 28th sailed from Newport News, on the liner St. Louis, arriving at Ponce, Porto Rico, on July 31; soon after disembarking captured Arroyo, and assisted in the capture of Guayama, which was the beginning of General Brooke's advance across the island to San Juan, when intelligence was received of the signing of the peace protocol by Spain. From August 13 to October 1 the Third continued in the performance of guard duty in Porto Rico; on October 22, 986 men and 39 officers took transport for home by way of New York, arriving in Chicago, November 11, the several companies being mustered out at their respective home stations. Its strength at final muster-out was 1,273 men and officers. This regiment had the distinction of being one of the first to see service in Porto Rico, but suffered severely from fever and other diseases during the three months of its stay in the island.

FOURTH ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY, composed of companies from Champaign, Coles, Douglas, Edgar, Effingham, Fayette, Jackson, Jefferson, Montgomery, Richland, and St. Clair counties; mustered into the service at Springfield, May 20, under command of Col. Casimer Andel; started immediately for Tampa, Fla., but en route its destination was changed to Jacksonville, where it was stationed at Camp Cuba Libre as a part of the Seventh Corps under command of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee; in October was transferred to Savannah, Ga., remaining at Camp Onward until about the first of January, when the regiment took ship for Havana. Here the regiment was stationed at Camp Columbia until April 4, 1899, when it returned to Augusta, Ga., and was mustered out at Camp Mackenzie (Augusta), May 2, the companies returning to their respective home stations. During a part of its stay at Jacksonville, and again at Savannah, the regiment was employed on guard duty. While at Jacksonville Colonel Andel was suspended by court-martial and finally tendered his resignation, his place being supplied by Lieut.-Col. Eben Swift, of the Ninth.

FIFTH REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY was the first regiment to report, and was mustered in at Springfield, May 7, 1898, under command of Col. James S. Culver, being finally composed of twelve companies from Pike, Christian, Sangamon, McLean, Montgomery, Adams, Tazewell, Macon, Morgan, Peoria, and Fulton counties; on May 14 left Springfield for Camp Thomas (Chickamauga, Ga.), being assigned to the command of General Brooke; August 3 left Chickamauga for Newport News, Va., with the expectation of embarking for Porto Rico—a previous order of July 26 to the same purport having been countermanded; at Newport News embarked on the transport Oblam, but again the order was rescinded, and, after remaining on board thirty-six hours, the regiment was disembarked. The next move was made to Lexington Ky., where the regiment—having lost hope of reaching "the front"—remained until Sept. 5, when it returned to Springfield for final muster-out. This regiment was composed of some of the best material in the State, and anxious for active service, but after a succession of disappointments, was compelled to return to its home station without meeting the enemy. After its arrival at Springfield the regiment was furloughed for thirty days and finally mustered out, October 16, numbering 1,213 men and 47 officers.

SIXTH REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY, consisting of twelve companies from the counties of Rock Island, Knox, Whiteside, Lee, Carroll, Stephenson, Henry, Warren, Bureau, and Jo Daviess, was mustered in May 11, 1898, under command of Col. D. Jack Foster; on May 17 left Springfield for Camp Alger, Va.; July 5 the regiment moved to Charleston, S. C., where a part embarked for Siboney, Cuba, but the whole regiment was soon after united in General Miles' expedition for the invasion of Porto Rico, landing at Guanico on July 25, and advancing into the interior as far as Aljunta and Utaulo. After several weeks' service in the interior, the regiment returned to Ponce, and on September 7 took transport for the return home, arrived at Springfield a week later, and was mustered out November 25, the regiment at that time consisting of 1,339 men and 19 officers.

SEVENTH ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (known as the "Hibernian Rifles"). Two battalions of this regiment reported at Springfield, April 27, with 33 officers and 765 enlisted men, being afterwards increased to the maxi-mun; was mustered into the United States service, under command of Col. Marcus Kavanagh, May 18, 1898; on May 28 started for Camp Alger, Va.; was afterwards encamped at Thoroughfare Gap and Camp Meade; on September 9 returned to Springfield, was furloughed for thirty days, and mustered out, October 20, numbering 1,260 men and 49 officers. Like the Fifth, the Seventh saw no actual service in the field.

EIGHTH ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (colored regiment), mustered into the service at Springfield under the second call of the President, July 23, 1898, being composed wholly of Afro-Americans under officers of their own race, with Col. John R. Marshall in command, the muster-roll showing 1,195 men and 76 officers. The six companies, from A to F, were from Chicago, the other five being, respectively, from Bloomington, Springfield, Quincy, Litchfield, Mound City and Metropolis, and Cairo. The regiment having tendered their services to relieve the First Illinois on duty at Santiago de Cuba, it started for Cuba, August 8, by way of New York; immediately on arrival at Santiago, a week later, was assigned to duty, but subsequently transferred to San Luis, where Colone, Marshall was made military governor. The major part of the regiment remained here until ordered home early in March, 1899, arrived at Chicago, March 15, and was mustered out, April 3, 1,226 strong, rank and file, having been in service nine months and six days.

NINTH ILLINOIS VOLUNTEER INFANTRY was organized from the counties of Southern Illinois, and mustered in at Springfield under the second call of the President, July 4-11, 1898, under command of Col. James R. Campbell; arrived at Camp Cuba Libre (Jacksonville, Fla.), August 9; two months later was transferred to Savannah, Ga.; was moved to Havana in December, where it remained until May, 1899, when it returned to Augusta, Ga., and was mustered out there, May 20, 1899, at that time consisting of 1,095 men and 46 officers. From Augusta the several companies returned to their respective home stations. The Ninth was the only "Provisional Regiment" from Illinois mustered into the service during the war, the other regiments all belonging to the National Guard.

FIRST ILLINOIS CAVALRY was organized at Chicago immediately after the President's first call, seven companies being recruited from Chicago, two from Bloomington, and one each from Springfield, Elkhart, and Lacon: was mustered in at Springfield, May 21, 1898, under command of Col. Edward C. Young; left Springfield for Camp Thomas, Ga., May 30, remaining there until August 24, when it returned to Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, where it was stationed until October 11, when it was mustered out, at that time consisting of 1,158 men and 50 officers. Although the regiment saw no active service in the field, it established an excellent record for itself in respect to discipline.

FIRST ENGINEERING CORPS, consisting of 80 men detailed from the First Illinois Volunteers, were among the first Illinois soldiers to see service in Porto Rico, accompanying General Miles' expedition in the latter part of July, and being engaged for a time in the construction of bridges in aid of the intended advance across the island. On September 8 they embarked for the return home, arrived at Chicago, September 17, and were mustered out November 20.

BATTERY A (I. N. G.), from Danville, Ill., was mustered in under a special order of the War Department, May 12, 1898, under command of Capt. Oscar P. Yaeger, consisting of 118 men; left Springfield for Camp Thomas, Ga., May 19, and, two months later, joined in General Miles' Porto Rico expedition, landing at Guanico on August 3, and taking part in the affair at Guayama on the 12th. News of peace having been received, the Battery returned to Ponce, where it remained until September 7, when it started on the return home by way of New York, arrived at Danville, September 17, was furloughed for sixty days, and mustered out November 25. The Battery was equipped with modern breech-loading rapid-firing guns, operated by practical artillerymen and prepared for effective service.

NAVAL RESERVES.—One of the earliest steps taken by the Government after it became apparent that hostilities could not be averted, was to begin preparation for strengthening the naval arm of the service. The existence of the "Naval Militia," first organized in 1893, placed Illinois in an exceptionally favorable position for making a prompt response to the call of the Government, as well as furnishing a superior class of men for service—a fact evidenced during the operations in the West Indies. Gen. John McNulta, as head of the local committee, was active in calling the attention of the Navy Department to the value of the service to be rendered by this organization, which resulted in its being enlisted practically as a body, taking the name of "Naval Reserves"—all but eighty-eight of the number passing the physical examination, the places of these being promptly filled by new recruits. The first deachment of over 200 left Chicago May 2, under the command of Lieut. Com. John M. Hawley, followed soon after by the remainder of the First Battalion, making the whole number from Chicago 400, with 267, constituting the Second Battalion, from other towns of the State. The latter was made up of 147 men from Moline, 58 from Quincy, and 62 from Alton—making a total from the State of 667. This does not include others, not belonging to this organization, who enlisted for service in the navy during the war, which raised the whole number for the State over 1,000. The Reserves enlisted from Illinois occupied a different relation to the Government from that of the "naval militia" of other States, which retained their State organizations, while those from Illinois were regularly mustered into the United States service. The recruits from Illinois were embarked at Key West, Norfolk and New York, and distributed among fifty-two different vessels, including nearly every vessel belonging to the North Atlantic Squadron. They saw service in nearly every department from the position of stokers in the hold to that of gunners in the turrets of the big battleships, the largest number (60) being assigned to the famous battleship Oregon, while the cruiser Yale followed with 47; the Harvard with 35; Cincinnati, 27; Yankton, 19; Franklin, 18; Montgomery and Indiana, each, 17; Hector, 14; Marietta, 11; Wilmington and Lancaster, 10 each, and others down to one each. Illinois sailors thus had the privilege of participating in the brilliant affair of July 3, which resulted in the destruction of Cervera's fleet off Santiago, as also in nearly every other event in the West Indies of less importance, without the loss of a man while in the service, although among the most exposed. They were mustered out at different times, as they could be spared from the service, or the vessels to which they were attached went out of commission, a portion serving out their full term of one year. The Reserves from Chicago retain their organization under the name of "Naval Reserve Veterans," with headquarters in the Masonic Temple Building, Chicago.

WARD, James H., ex-Congressman, was born in Chicago, Nov. 30, 1853, and educated in the Chicago public schools and at the University of Notre Dame, graduating from the latter in 1873. Three years later he graduated from the Union College of Law, Chicago, and was admitted to the bar. Since then he has continued to practice his profession in his native city. In 1879 he was elected Supervisor of the town of West Chicago, and, in 1884, was a candidate for Presidential Elector on the Democratic ticket, and the same year, was the successful candidate of his party for Congress in the Third Illinois District, serving one term.

WINNEBAGO INDIANS, a tribe of the Dakota, or Sioux, stock, which at one time occupied a part of Northern Illinois. The word Winnebago is a corruption of the French Oninebegoutz, Ouinebegonc, etc., the diphthong "ou" taking the place of the consonant "w," which is wanting in the French alphabet. These were, in turn, French misspellings of an Algonquin term meaning "fetid," which the latter tribe applied to the Winnebagoes because they had come from the western ocean—the salt (or "fetid") water. In their advance towards the East the Winnebagoes early invaded the country of the Illinois, but were finally driven northward by the latter, who surpassed them in numbers rather than in bravery. The invaders settled in Wisconsin, near the Fox River, and here they were first visited by the Jesuit Fathers in the seventeenth century. (See Jesuit Relations.) The Winnebagoes are commonly regarded as a Wisconsin tribe; yet, that they claimed territorial rights in Illinois is shown by the fact that the treaty of Prairie du Chien (August 1, 1829), alludes to a Winnebago village located in what is now Jo Daviess County, near the mouth of the Pecatonica River. While, as a rule, the tribe, if left to itself, was disposed to live in amity with the whites, it was carried away by the eloquence and diplomacy of Tecumseh and the cajoleries of "The Prophet." General Harrison especially alludes to the bravery of the Winnebago warriors at Tippecanoe, which he attributes in part, however, to a superstitious faith in "The Prophet." In June or July, 1827, an unprovoked and brutal outrage by the whites upon an unoffending and practically defenseless party of Winnebagoes, near Prairie du Chien brought on what is known as the "Winnebago War." (See Winnebago War.) The tribe took no part in the Black Hawk War, largely because of the great influence and shrewd tactic of their chief, Naw-caw. By treaties executed in 1832 and 1837 the Winnebagoes ceded to the United States all their lands lying east of the Mississippi. They were finally removed west of that river, and, after many shiftings of location, were placed upon the Omaha Reservation in Eastern Nebraska, where their industry, thrift and peaceable disposition elicited high praise from Government officials.

WARNER, Vespasian, lawyer and Member of Congress, was born in De Witt County, Ill., April 23, 1842, and has lived all his life in his native county—his present residence being Clinton. After a short course in Lombard University, while studying law in the office of Hon. Lawrence Weldon, at Clinton, he enlisted as a private soldier of the Twentieth Illinois Volunteers, in June, 1861, serving until July, 1866, when he was mustered out with the rank of Captain and brevet Major. He received a gunshot wound at Shiloh, but continued to serve in the Army of the Tennessee until the evacuation of Atlanta, when he was ordered North on account of disability. His last service was in fighting Indians on the plains. After the war he completed his law studies at Harvard University, graduating in 1868, when he entered into a law partnership with Clifton H. Moore of Clinton. He served as Judge-Advocate General of the Illinois National Guard for several years, with the rank of Colonel, under the administrations of Governors Hamilton, Oglesby and Fifer, and, in 1894, was nominated and elected, as a Republican, to the Fifty-fourth Congress for the Thirteenth District, being re-elected in 1896, and again in 1898. In the Fifty-fifth Congress, Mr. Warner was a member of the Committees on Agriculture and Invalide Pensions, and Chairman of the Committee on Revision of the Laws.

WARREN, a village in Jo Daviess County, at intersection of the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railways, 26 miles west-northwest of Freeport and 27 miles east by north of Galena. The surrounding region is agricultural and stock-raising; there are also lead mines in the vicinity. Tobacco is grown to some extent. Warren has a flouring mill, tin factory, creamery and stone quarries, a State bank, water supply from artesian wells, fire department, gas plant, two weekly newspapers, five churches, a high school, an academy and a public library. Pop. (1890), 1,172; (1900), 1,327.

WARREN, Calvin A., lawyer, was born in Essex County, N. Y., June 3, 1807; in his youth, worked for a time, as a typographer, in the office of "The Northern Spectator," at Poughkeepsie, Vt., side by side with Horace Greeley, afterwards the founder of "The New York Tribune." Later, he became one of the publishers of "The Palladium" at Ballston, N. Y., but, in 1832, removed to Hamilton County, Ohio, where he began the study of law, completing his course at Transylvania University, Ky., in 1834, and beginning practice at Batavia, Ohio, as the partner of Thomas Morris, then a United States Senator from Ohio, whose daughter he married, thereby becoming the brother-in-law of the late Isaac N. Morris, of Quincy, Ill. In 1836, Mr. Warren came to Quincy, Adams County, Ill., but soon after removed to Warsaw in Hancock County, where he resided until 1839, when he returned to Quincy. Here he continued in practice, either alone or as a partner, at different times, of several of the leading attorneys of that city. Although he held no office except that of Master in Chancery, which he occupied for some sixteen years, the possession of an inexhaustible fund of humor, with strong practical sense and decided ability as a speaker, gave him great popularity at the bar and upon the stump, and made him a recognized leader in the ranks of the Democratic party, of which he was a life-long member. He served as Presidential Elector on the Pierce ticket in 1852, and was the nominee of his party for the same position on one or two other occasions. Died, at Quincy, Feb. 22, 1881.

WARREN, Hooper, pioneer journalist, was born at Walpole, N. H., in 1790; learned the printer's trade on the Rutland (Vt.) "Herald"; in 1814 went to Delaware, whence, three years later, he emigrated to Kentucky, working for a time on a paper at Frankfort. In 1818 he came to St. Louis and worked in the office of the old "Missouri Gazette" (the predecessor of "The Republican"), and also acted as the agent of a lumber company at Cairo, Ill., when the whole population of that place consisted of one family domiciled on a grounded flat-boat. In March, 1819, he established, at Edwardsville, the third paper in Illinois, its predecessors being "The Illinois Intelligencer," at Kaskaskia, and "The Illinois Emigrant," at Shawneetown. The name given to the new paper was "The Spectator," and the contest over the effort to introduce a pro-slavery clause in the State Constitution soon brought it into prominence. Backed by Governor Coles, Congressman Daniel P. Cook, Judge S. D. Lockwood, Rev. Thomas Lippincott, Judge Wm. H. Brown (afterwards of Chicago), George Churchill and other opponents of slavery, "The Spectator" made a sturdy fight in opposition to the scheme, which ended in defeat of the measure by the rejection at the polls, in 1824, of the proposition for a Constitutional Convention. Warren left the Edwardsville paper in 1825, and was, for a time, associated with "The National Crisis," an anti-slavery paper at Cincinnati, but soon returned to Illinois and established "The Sangamon Spectator"—the first paper ever published at the present State capital. This he sold out in 1829, and, for the next three years, was connected with "The Advertiser and Upper Mississippi Herald," at Galena. Abandoning this field in 1832, he removed to Hennepin, where, within the next five years, he held the offices of Clerk of the Circuit and County Commissioners' Courts and ex officio Recorder of Deeds. In 1836 he began the publication of the third paper in Chicago—"The Commercial Advertiser," a weekly—which was continued a little more than a year, when it was abandoned, and he settled on a farm at Henry, Marshall County. His further newspaper ventures were, as the associate of Zebina Eastman, in the publication of "The Genius of Liberty," at Lowell, La Salle County, and "The Western Citizen"—afterwards "The Free West"—in Chicago. (See Eastman, Zebina, and Lundy, Benjamin.) On the discontinuance of "The Free West" in 1856, he again retired to his farm at Henry, where he spent the remainder of his days. While returning home from a visit to Chicago, in August, 1864, he was taken ill at Mendota, dying there on the 22d of the month.

WARREN, John Esaias, diplomatist and real-estate operator, was born in Troy, N. Y., in 1826, graduated at Union College and was connected with the American Legation to Spain during the administration of President Pierce; in 1859-60 was a member of the Minnesota Legislature and, in 1861-62, Mayor of St. Paul. In 1867, came to Chicago, where, while engaged in real-estate business, he became known to the press as the author of a series of articles entitled "Topics of the Time." In 1886 he took up his residence in Brussels, Belgium, where he died, July 6, 1896. Mr. Warren was author of several volumes of travel, of which "An Attache in Spain" and "Para" are most important.

WARREN COUNTY. A western county, created by act of the Legislature, in 1825, but not fully organized until 1830, having at that time about 350 inhabitants; has an area of 540 square miles, and was named for Gen. Joseph Warren. It is drained by the Henderson River and its affluents, and is traversed by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy two divisions, the Iowa Central and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroads. Bituminous coal is mined and limestone is quarried in large quantities. The county's early development was retarded in consequence of having become the "seat of war," during the Black Hawk War. The principal products are grain and live-stock, although manufacturing is carried on to some extent. The county-seat and chief city is Monmouth (which see). Roseville is a shipping point. Population (1880), 22,933. (1890), 21,284; (1900), 23,163.

WARRENSBURG, a town of Macon County, on Peoria Division Ill. Cent. Railway, 9 miles northwest of Decatur; has elevators, canning factory, a bank and newspaper. Pop. (1900), 503.

WARSAW, the largest town in Hancock County, and admirably situated for trade. It stands on a bluff on the Mississippi River, some three miles below Keokuk, and about 40 miles above Quincy. It is the western terminus of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railway, and lies 116 miles west-southwest of Peoria. Old Fort Edwards, established by Gen. Zachary Taylor, during the War of 1812, was located within the limits of the present city of Warsaw, opposite the mouth of the Des Moines River. An iron foundry, a large woolen mill, a plow factory and cooperage works are its principal manufacturing establishments. The channel of the Mississippi admits of the passage of the largest steamers up to this point. Warsaw has eight churches, a system of common schools comprising one high and three grammar schools, a National bank and two weekly newspapers. Population (1880), 3,105; (1890), 2,721; (1900), 2,335.

WASHBURN, a village of Woodford County, on a branch of the Chicago & Alton Railway 25 miles northeast of Peoria; has banks and a weekly paper; the district is agricultural. Population (1890), 598; (1900), 703.

WASHBURNE, Elisha Benjamin, Congressman and diplomatist, was born at Livermore, Maine, Sept. 23, 1816; in early life learned the trade of a printer, but graduated from Harvard Law School and was admitted to the bar in 1840. Coming west, he settled at Galena, forming a partnership with Charles S. Hempstead, for the practice of law, in 1841. He was a stalwart Whig, and, as such, was elected to Congress in 1852. He continued to represent his District until 1869, taking a prominent position, as a Republican, on the organization of that party. On account of his long service he was known as the "Father of the House," administering the Speaker's oath three times to Schuyler Colfax and once to James G. Blaine. He was appointed Secretary of State by General Grant in 1869, but surrendered his portfolio to become Envoy to France, in which capacity he achieved great distinction. He was the only official representative of a foreign government who remained in Paris, during the siege of that city by the Germans (1870-71) and the reign of the "Commune." For his conduct he was honored by the Governments of France and Germany alike. On his return to the United States, he made his home in Chicago, where he devoted his latter years chiefly to literary labor, and where he died, Oct. 22, 1887. He was strongly favored as a candidate for the Presidency in 1880.

WASHINGTON, a city in Tazewell County, situated at the intersection of the Chicago & Alton, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroads. It is 21 miles west of El Paso, and 12 miles east of Peoria. Carriages, plows and farming implements constitute the manufactured output. It is also an important shipping-point for farm products. It has electric light and water-works plants, eight churches, a graded school, two banks and two newspapers. Pop. (1890), 1,301; (1900), 1,431.

WASHINGTON COUNTY, an interior county of Southern Illinois, east of St. Louis; is drained by the Kaskaskia River and the Elkhorn, Beaucoup and Muddy Creeks; was organized in 1818, and has an area of 540 square miles. The surface is diversified, well watered and timbered. The soil is of variable fertility. Corn, wheat and oats are the chief agricultural products. Manufacturing is carried on to some extent, among the products being agricultural implements, flour, carriages and wagons. The most important town is Nashville, which is also the county-seat. Population (1890), 12,262; (1900), 19,526. Washington was one of the fifteen counties into which Illinois was divided at the organization of the State Government, being one of the last three created during the Territorial period—the other two being Franklin and Union.

WASHINGTON HEIGHTS, a village of Cook County, on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railways, 12 miles southwest of Chicago; has a graded school, female seminary, military school, a car factory, several churches and a newspaper. Annexed to City of Chicago, 1890.

WATAGA, a village of Knox County, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 8 miles northeast of Galesburg. Population (1900), 545.

WATERLOO, the county-seat and chief town of Monroe County, on the Illinois Division of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, 24 miles east of south from St. Louis. The region is chiefly agricultural, but underlaid with coal. Its industries embrace two flour mills, a plow factory, distillery, creamery, two ice plants, and some minor concerns. The city has municipal water and electric light plants, four churches, a graded school and two newspapers. Pop. (1890), 1,860; (1900), 2,114.

WATERMAN, Arba Nelson, lawyer and jurist, was born at Greensboro, Orleans County, Vt., Feb. 3, 1836. After receiving an academic education and teaching for a time, he read law at Montpelier and, later, passed through the Albany Law School. In 1861 he was admitted to the bar, removed to Joliet, Ill., and opened an office. In 1862 he enlisted as a private in the One Hundredth Illinois Volunteers, serving with the Army of the Cumberland for two years, and being mustered out in August, 1864, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. On leaving the army, Colonel Waterman commenced practice in Chicago. In 1873-74 he represented the Eleventh Ward in the City Council. In 1887 he was elected to the bench of the Cook County Circuit Court, and was re-elected in 1891 and, again, in 1897. In 1890 he was assigned as one of the Judges of the Appellate Court.

WATSEKA, the county-seat of Iroquois County, situated on the Iroquois River, at the mouth of Sugar Creek, and at the intersection of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroads, 77 miles south of Chicago, 46 miles north of Danville and 14 miles east of Gilman. It has flour-mills, brick and tile works and foundries, besides several churches, banks, a graded school and three weekly newspapers. Artesian well water is obtained by boring to the depth of 100 to 160 feet, and some forty flowing streams from these shafts are in the place. Population (1890), 2,017; (1900), 2,505.

WATTS, Amos, jurist, was born in St. Clair County, Ill., Oct. 25, 1821, but removed to Washington County in boyhood, and was elected County Clerk in 1847, '49 and '53, and State's Attorney for the Second Judicial District in 1856 and '60; then became editor and proprietor of a newspaper, later resuming the practice of law, and, in 1873, was elected Circuit Judge, remaining in office until his death, at Nashville, Ill. Dec. 6, 1888.

WAUKEGAN, the county-seat and principal city of Lake County, situated on the shore of Lake Michigan and on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, about 36 miles north by west from Chicago, and 50 miles south of Milwaukee; is also the northern terminus of the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railroad and connected by electric lines with Chicago and Fox Lake. Lake Michigan is about 80 miles wide opposite this point. Waukegan was first known as "Little Fort," from the remains of an old fort that stood on its site. The principal part of the city is built on a bluff, which rises abruptly to the height of about fifty feet. Between the bluff and the shore is a flat tract about 400 yards wide which is occupied by gardens, dwellings, warehouses and manufactories. The manufactories include steel-wire, refined sugar, scales, agricultural implements, brass and iron products, sash, doors and blinds, leather, beer, etc.; the city has paved streets, gas and electric light plants, three banks, eight or ten churches, graded and high schools and two newspapers. A large trade in grain, lumber, coal and dairy products is carried on. Pop. (1890), 4,915; (1900), 9,426.

WAUKEGAN & SOUTHWESTERN RAILWAY. (See Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railway.)

WAVERLY, a city in Morgan County, 18 miles southeast of Jacksonville, on the Jacksonville & St. Louis and the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroads. It was originally settled by enterprising emigrants from New England, whose descendants constitute a large proportion of the population. It is the center of a rich agricultural region, has a fine graded school, six or seven churches, two banks, two newspapers and tile works. Population (1880), 1,124; (1890), 1,337; (1900), 1,573.

WAYNE, (Gen.) Anthony, soldier, was born in Chester County, Pa., Jan. 1, 1745, of Anglo-Irish descent, graduated as a Surveyor, and first practiced his profession in Nova Scotia. During the years immediately antecedent to the Revolution he was prominent in the colonial councils of his native State, to which he had returned in 1767, where he became a member of the "Committee of Safety." On June 3, 1776, he was commissioned Colonel of the Fourth Regiment of Pennsylvania troops in the Continental army, and, during the War of the Revolution, was conspicuous for his courage and ability as a leader. One of his most daring and successful achievements was the capture of Stony Point, in 1779, when—the works having been carried and Wayne having received, what was supposed to be, his death-wound—he entered the fort, supported by his aids. For this service he was awarded a gold medal by Congress. He also took a conspicuous part in the investiture and capture of Yorktown. In October, 1783, he was brevetted Major-General. In 1784 he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature. A few years later he settled in Georgia, which State he represented in Congress for seven months, when his seat was declared vacant after contest. In April, 1792, he was confirmed as General-in-Chief of the United States Army, on nomination of President Washington. His connection with Illinois history began shortly after

St. Clair's defeat when he led a force into Ohio (1783) and erected a stockade at Greenville, which he named Fort Recovery; his object being to subdue the hostile savage tribes. In this he was eminently successful and, on August 3, 1793, after a victorious campaign, negotiated the Treaty of Greenville, as broad in its provisions as it was far-reaching in its influence. He was a daring fighter, and although Washington called him "prudent," his dauntlessness earned for him the sobriquet of "Mad Anthony." In matters of dress he was punctilious, and, on this account, he was sometimes dubbed "Dandy Wayne." He was one of the few white officers whom all the Western Indian tribes at once feared and respected. They named him "Black Snake" and "Tornado." He died at Presque Isle near Erie, Dec. 15, 1796. Thirteen years afterward his remains were removed by one of his sons, and interred in Badnor churchyard, in his native county. The Pennsylvania Historical Society erected a marble monument over his grave, and appropriately dedicated it on July 4 of the same year.

WAYNE COUNTY, in the southeast quarter of the State; has an area of 720 square miles; was organized in 1819, and named for Gen. Anthony Wayne. The county is watered and drained by the Little Wash and its branches, notably the Skillet Fork. At the first election held in the county, only fifteen votes were cast. Early life was exceedingly primitive, the first settlers pounding corn into meal with a wooden pestle, a hollowed stump being used as a mortar. The first mill erected (of the antique South Carolina pattern) charged 25 cents per bushel for grinding. Prairie and woodland make up the surface, and the soil is fertile. Railroad facilities are furnished by the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis and the Baltimore & Ohio (Southwestern) Railroads. Corn, oats, tobacco, wheat, hay and wool are the chief agricultural products. Saw mills are numerous and there are also carriage and wagon factories. Fairfield is the county-seat. Population (1880), 21,291; (1890), 23,806; (1900), 27,626.

WEAS, THE, a branch of the Miami tribe of Indians. They called themselves "We-wee-hahs," and were spoken of by the French as "Oui-a-nons" and "Oui-as." Other corruptions of the name were common among the British and American colonists. In 1718 they had a village at Chicago, but abandoned it through fear of their hostile neighbors, the Chippewas and Pottawatomies. The Weas were, at one time, brave and warlike; but their numbers were reduced by constant warfare and disease, and, in the end, debauchery enervated and demoralized them. They were removed west of the Mississippi and given a reservation in Miami County, Kan. This they ultimately sold, and, under the leadership of Baptiste Peoria, united with their few remaining brethren of the Miamis and with the remnant of the Ill-ni under the title of the "confederated tribes," and settled in Indian Territory. WEBB, Edwin B., early lawyer and politician, was born about 1802, came to the vicinity of Carmi, White County, Ill., about 1828 to 1830, and, still later, studied law at Transylvania University. He held the office of Prosecuting Attorney of White County, and, in 1834, was elected to the lower branch of the General Assembly, serving, by successive re-elections, until 1842, and, in the Senate, from 1842 to '46. During his service in the House he was a colleague and political and personal friend of Abraham Lincoln. He opposed the internal improvement scheme of 1837, predicting many of the disasters which were actually realized a few years later. He was a candidate for Presidential Elector on the Whig ticket, in 1844 and '48, and, in 1852, received the nomination for Governor as the opponent of Joel A. Matteson, two years later, being an unsuccessful candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court in opposition to Judge W. B. Scates. While practicing law at Carmi, he was also a partner of his brother in the mercantile business. Died, Oct. 14, 1858, in the 56th year of his age.

WEBB, Henry Livingston, soldier and pioneer (an elder brother of James Watson Webb, a noted New York journalist), was born at Claverack, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1795; served as a soldier in the War of 1812, came to Southern Illinois in 1817, and became one of the founders of the town of America near the mouth of the Ohio; was Representative in the Fourth and Eleventh General Assemblies, a Major in the Black Hawk War and Captain of volunteers and, afterwards, Colonel of regulars, in the Mexican War. In 1860 he went to Texas and served, for a time, in a semi-military capacity under the Confederate Government; returned to Illinois in 1869, and died, at Makanda, Oct. 5, 1876.

WEBSTER, Fletcher, lawyer and soldier, was born at Portsmouth, N. H., July 23, 1813; graduated at Harvard in 1833, and studied law with his father (Daniel Webster); in 1837, located at Peru, Ill., where he practiced three years. His father having been appointed Secretary of State in 1841, the son became his private secretary, was also Secretary of Legation to Caleb Cushing (Minister to China) in 1843, a member of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1847, and Surveyor of the Port of Boston, 1850-61, the latter year became Colonel of the Twelfth Massachusetts Volunteers, and was killed in the second battle of Bull Run, August 30, 1862.

WEBSTER, Joseph Dana, civil engineer and soldier, was born at Old Hampton, N. H., August 25, 1811. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1832, and afterwards read law at Newburyport, Mass. His natural inclination was for engineering, and, after serving for a time in the Engineer and War offices, at Washington, was made a United States civil engineer (1835) and, on July 7, 1838, entered the army as Second Lieutenant of Topographical Engineers. He served through the Mexican War, was made First Lieutenant in 1849, and promoted to a captaincy, in March, 1853. Thirteen months later he resigned, removing to Chicago, where he made his permanent home, and soon after was identified, for a time, with the proprietorship of "The Chicago Tribune." He was President of the commission that perfected the Chicago sewerage system, and designed and executed the raising of the grade of a large portion of the city from two to eight feet, whole blocks of buildings being raised by jack screws, while new foundations were inserted. At the outbreak of the Civil War he tendered his services to the Government and superintended the erection of the fortifications at Cairo, Ill., and Paducah, Ky. On April 7, 1861, he was commissioned Paymaster of Volunteers, with the rank of Major, and, in February, 1862, Colonel of the First Illinois Artillery. For several months he was chief of General Grant's staff, participating in the capture of Forts Donelson and Henry, and in the battle of Shiloh, in the latter as Chief of Artillery. In October, 1862, the War Department detailed him to make a survey of the Illinois & Michigan Canal, and, the following month, he was commissioned Brigadier-General of Volunteers, serving as Military Governor of Memphis and Superintendent of military railroads. He was again chief of staff to General Grant during the Vicksburg campaign, and, from 1864 until the close of the war, occupied the same relation to General Sherman. He was brevetted Major-General of Volunteers, March 13, 1865, but, resigning Nov. 6, following, returned to Chicago, where he spent the remainder of his life. From 1869 to 1872 he was Assessor of Internal Revenue there, and, later, Assistant United States Treasurer, and, in July, 1872, was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue. Died, at Chicago, March 12, 1876.

WELCH, William R., lawyer and jurist, was born in Jessamine County, Ky., Jan. 22, 1828, educated at Transylvania University, Lexington, graduating from the academic department in 1847, and, from the law school, in 1851. In 1864 he removed to Carlinville, Macoupin County, Ill., which place he made his permanent home. In 1877 he was elected to the bench of the Fifth Circuit, and re-elected in 1879 and '85. In 1884 he was assigned to the bench of the Appellate Court for the Second District. Died, Sept. 1, 1888.

WELDON, Lawrence, one of the Judges of the United States Court of Claims, Washington, D. C., was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, in 1829; while a child, removed with his parents to Madison County, and was educated in the common schools, the local academy and at Wittenberg College, Springfield, in the same State; read law with Hon. R. A. Harrison, a prominent member of the Ohio bar, and was admitted to practice in 1854, meanwhile, in 1852-53, having served as a clerk in the office of the Secretary of State at Columbus. In 1854 he removed to Illinois, locating at Clinton, DeWitt County, where he engaged in practice; in 1860 was elected a Representative in the Twenty-second General Assembly, was also chosen a Presidential Elector the same year, and assisted in the first election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency. Early in 1861 he resigned his seat in the Legislature to accept the position of United States District Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, tendered him by President Lincoln, but resigned the latter office in 1866 and, the following year, removed to Bloomington, where he continued the practice of his profession until 1883, when he was appointed, by President Arthur, an Associate Justice of the United States Court of Claims at Washington—a position which he still (1899) continues to fill. Judge Weldon is among the remaining few who rode the circuit and practiced law with Mr. Lincoln. From the time of coming to the State in 1854 to 1860, he was one of Mr. Lincoln's most intimate traveling companions in the old Eighth Circuit, which extended from Sangamon County on the west to Vermilion on the east, and of which Judge David Davis, afterwards of the Supreme Court of the United States and United States Senator, was the presiding Justice. The Judge holds in his memory many pleasant reminiscences of that day, especially of the eastern portion of the District, where he was accustomed to meet the late Senator Voorhees, Senator McDonald and other leading lawyers of Indiana, as well as the historic men whom he met at the State capital.

WELLS, Albert W., lawyer and legislator, was born at Woodstock, Conn., May 9, 1839, and enjoyed only such educational and other advantages as belonged to the average New England boy of that period. During his boyhood his family removed to New Jersey, where he attended an academy, later, graduating from Columbia College and Law School in New York City, and began practice with State Senator Robert Allen at Red Bank, N. J. During the Civil War he enlisted in a New Jersey regiment and took part in the battle of Gettysburg, resuming his profession at the close of the war. Coming west in 1870, he settled in Quincy, Ill., where he continued practice. In 1886 he was elected to the House of Representatives from Adams County, as a Democrat, and re-elected two years later. In 1890 he was advanced to the Senate, where, by re-election in 1894, he served continuously until his death in office, March 5, 1897. His abilities and long service—covering the sessions of the Thirty-fifth to the Fortieth General Assemblies—placed him at the head of the Democratic side of the Senate during the latter part of his legislative career.

WELLS, William, soldier and victim of the Fort Dearborn massacre, was born in Kentucky, about 1770. When a boy of 12, he was captured by the Miami Indians, whose chief, Little Turtle, adopted him, giving him his daughter in marriage when he grew to manhood. He was highly esteemed by the tribe as a warrior, and, in 1790, was present at the battle where Gen. Arthur St. Clair was defeated. He then realized that he was fighting against his own race, and informed his father-in-law that he intended to ally himself with the whites. Leaving the Miamis, he made his way to General Wayne, who made him Captain of a company of scouts. After the treaty of Greenville (1795) he settled on a farm near Fort Wayne, where he was joined by his Indian wife. Here he acted as Indian Agent and Justice of the Peace. In 1812 he learned of the contemplated evacuation of Fort Dearborn, and, at the head of thirty Miamis, he set out for the post, his intention being to furnish a body-guard to the non-combatants on their proposed march to Fort Wayne. On August 13, he marched out of the fort with fifteen of his dusky warriors behind him, the remainder bringing up the rear. Before a mile and a half had been traveled, the party fell into an Indian ambush, and an indiscriminate massacre followed. (See Fort Dearborn.) The Miamis fled, and Captain Wells' body was riddled with bullets, his head cut off and his heart taken out. He was an uncle of Mrs. Heald, wife of the commander of Fort Dearborn.

WELLS, William Harvey, educator, was born in Tolland, Conn., Feb. 27, 1812; lived on a farm until 17 years old, attending school irregularly, but made such progress that he became successively a teacher in the Teachers' Seminary at Andover and Newburyport, and, finally, Principal of the State Normal School at Westfield, Mass. In 1856 he accepted the position of Superintendent of Public Schools for the city of Chicago, serving till 1864, when he resigned. He was an organizer of the Massachusetts State Teachers' Association, one of the first editors of "The Massachusetts Teacher" and prominently connected with various benevolent, educational and learned societies; was also author of several textbooks, and assisted in the revision of "Webster's Unabridged Dictionary." Died, Jan. 21, 1885.

WENONA, city on the eastern border of Marshall County, 20 miles south of La Salle, has zinc works, public and parochial schools, a weekly paper, two banks, and five churches. A good quality of soft coal is mined here. Population (1880), 911; (1890), 1,053; (1900), 1,486.

WENTWORTH, John, early journalist and Congressman, was born at Sandwich, N. H., March 5, 1815, graduated from Dartmouth College in 1836, and came to Chicago the same year, where he became editor of "The Chicago Democrat," which had been established by John Calhoun three years previous. He soon after became proprietor of "The Democrat," of which he continued to be the publisher until it was merged into "The Chicago Tribune," July 24, 1864. He also studied law, and was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1841. He served in Congress as a Democrat from 1843 to 1851, and again from 1853 to 1855, but left the Democratic party on the repeal of the Missouri Compromise. He was elected Mayor of Chicago in 1857, and again in 1860, during his incumbency introducing a number of important municipal reforms; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1862, and twice served on the Board of Education. He again represented Illinois in Congress as a Republican from 1865 to 1867—making fourteen years of service in that body. In 1872 he joined in the Greeley movement, but later renewed his allegiance to the Republican party. In 1874 Mr. Wentworth published an elaborate genealogical work in three volumes, entitled "History of the Wentworth Family." A volume of "Congressional Reminiscences" and two by him on "Early Chicago," published in connection with the Fergus Historical Series, contain some valuable information on early local and national history. On account of his extraordinary height he received the sobriquet of "Long John," by which he was familiarly known throughout the State. Died, in Chicago, Oct. 16, 1888.

WEST, Edward M., merchant and banker, was born in Virginia, May 2, 1814; came with his father to Illinois in 1818; in 1829 became a clerk in the Recorder's office at Edwardsville, also served as deputy postmaster, and, in 1833, took a position in the United States Land Office there. Two years later he engaged in mercantile business, which he prosecuted over thirty years—meanwhile filling the office of County Treasurer, ex-officio Superintendent of Schools, and Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1847. In 1867, in conjunction with W. R. Prickett, he established a bank at Edwardsville, with which he was connected until his death, Oct. 31, 1887. Mr. West officiated frequently as a "local preacher" of the Methodist Church, in which capacity he showed much ability as a public speaker.

WEST, Mary Allen, educator and philanthropist, was born at Galesburg, Ill., July 31, 1837; graduated at Knox Seminary in 1854 and taught until 1873, when she was elected County Superintendent of Schools, serving nine years. She took an active and influential interest in educational and reformatory movements, was for two years editor of "Our Home Monthly," in Philadelphia, and also a contributor to other journals, besides being editor-in-chief of "The Union Signal," Chicago, the organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union—in which she held the position of President; was also President, in the latter days of her life, of the Illinois Woman's Press Association of Chicago, that city having become her home in 1885. In 1892, Miss West started on a tour of the world for the benefit of her health, but died at Tokio, Japan, Dec. 1, 1892.

WESTERN HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, an institution for the treatment of the insane, located at Watertown, Rock Island County, in accordance with an act of the General Assembly, approved, May 22, 1895. The Thirty-ninth General Assembly made an appropriation of $100,000 for the erection of fire-proof buildings, while Rock Island County donated a tract of 400 acres of land valued at $10,000. The site selected by the Commissioners, is a commanding one overlooking the Mississippi River, eight miles above Rock Island, and five and a half miles from Moline, and the buildings are of the most modern style of construction. Watertown is reached by two lines of railroad—the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy—besides the Mississippi River. The erection of buildings was begun in 1896, and they were opened for the reception of patients in 1898. They have a capacity for 800 patients.

WESTERN MILITARY ACADEMY, an institution located at Upper Alton, Madison County, incorporated in 1892; has a faculty of eight members and reports eighty pupils for 1897-98, with property valued at $70,000. The institution gives instruction in literary and scientific branches, besides preparatory and business courses.

WESTERN NORMAL COLLEGE, located at Bushnell, McDonough County; incorporated in 1888. It is co-educational, has a corps of twelve instructors and reported 500 pupils for 1897-98, 300 males and 200 females.

WESTERN SPRINGS, a village of Cook County, and residence suburb of the city of Chicago, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 15 miles west of the initial station. Population (1890), 451; (1900), 662.

WESTERN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, located in Chicago and controlled by the Protestant Episcopal Church. It was founded in 1883 through the munificence of Dr Tolman Wheeler, and was opened for students two years later. It has two buildings, of a superior order of architecture—one including the school and lecture rooms and the other a dormitory. A hospital and gymnasium are attached to the latter, and a school for boys is conducted on the first floor of the main building, which is known as Wheeler Hall. The institution is under the general supervision of Rt. Rev. William E. McLaren, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Illinois.

WESTFIELD, village of Clark County, on Cin., Ham. & Dayton R. R., 10 m s. e. of Charleston; seat of Westfield College, has a bank, five churches and two newspapers. Pop. (1900) 820.

WEST SALEM, a town of Edwards County, on the Peoria-Evansville Div. Ill. Cent. R. R., 12 miles northeast of Albion, has a bank and a weekly paper. Pop. (1890) 476, (1900), 700.

WETHERELL, Emma Abbott, vocalist, was born in Chicago, Dec. 9, 1849, in her childhood attracted attention while singing with her father (a poor musician) in hotels and on the streets in Chicago, Peoria and elsewhere; at 18 years of age, went to New York to study, earning her way by giving concerts en route, and receiving aid and encouragement from Clara Louisa Kellogg; in New York was patronized by Henry Ward Beecher and others, and aided in securing the training of European masters. Compelled to surmount many obstacles from poverty and other causes, her after success in her profession was phenomenal. Died, during a professional tour, at Salt Lake City, Jan. 5, 1891. Miss Abbott married her manager, Eugene Wetherell, who died before her.

WHEATON, a city and the county-seat of Du Page County, situated on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, 25 miles west of Chicago. Agriculture and stock-raising are the chief industries in the surrounding region. The city owns a new water-works plant (costing $600,000) and has a public library valued at $75,000, the gift of a resident, Mr. John Quincy Adams; has a court house, electric light plant, sewerage and drainage system, seven churches, three graded schools, four weekly newspapers and a State bank. Wheaton is the seat of Wheaton College (which see). Population (1880), 1,160; (1890), 1,622, (1900), 2,345.

WHEATON COLLEGE, an educational institution located at Wheaton, Du Page County, and under Congregational control. It was founded in 1853, as the Illinois Institute, and was chartered under its present name in 1860. Its early existence was one of struggle, but of late years it has been established on a better foundation, in 1898 having $54,000 invested in productive funds, and property aggregating $136,000. The faculty comprises fifteen professors, and, in 1898, there were 321 students in attendance. It is co-educational and instruction is given in business and preparatory studies, as well as the fine arts, music and classical literature.

WHEELER, David Hilton, D.D., LL.D., clergyman, was born at Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 19, 1829; graduated at Rock River Seminary, Mount Morris, in 1851; edited "The Carroll County Republican" and held a professorship in Cornell College, Iowa, (1857-61); was United States Consul at Geneva, Switzerland, (1861-66); Professor of English Literature in Northwestern University (1867-75); edited "The Methodist" in New York seven years, and was President of Allegheny College (1883-87); received the degree of D.D. from Cornell College in 1867, and that of LL.D. from the Northwestern University in 1881. He is the author of "Brigandage in South Italy"

(two volumes, 1864) and "By-Ways of Literature" (1883), besides some translations.

WHEELER, Hamilton K., ex-Congressman, was born at Ballston, N. Y., August 5, 1848, but emigrated with his parents to Illinois in 1852; remained on a farm until 19 years of age, his educational advantages being limited to three months' attendance upon a district school each year. In 1871, he was admitted to the bar at Kankakee, where he has since continued to practice. In 1884 he was elected to represent the Sixteenth District in the State Senate, where he served on many important committees, being Chairman of that on the Judicial Department. In 1892 he was elected Representative in Congress from the Ninth Illinois District, on the Republican ticket.

WHEELING, a town on the northern border of Cook County, on the Wisconsin Central Railway. Population (1890), 811; (1900), 331.

WHISTLER, (Maj.) John, soldier and builder of the first Fort Dearborn, was born in Ulster, Ireland, about 1756; served under Burgoyne in the Revolution, and was with the force surrendered by that officer at Saratoga, in 1777. After the peace he returned to the United States, settled at Hagerstown, Md., and entered the United States Army, serving at first in the ranks and being severely wounded in the disastrous Indian campaigns of 1791. Later, he was promoted to a captaincy and, in the summer of 1803, sent with his company, to the head of Lake Michigan, where he constructed the first Fort Dearborn within the limits of the present city of Chicago, remaining in command until 1811, when he was succeeded by Captain Heald. He received the brevet rank of Major, in 1815 was appointed military store-keeper at Newport, Ky., and afterwards at Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, where he died, Sept. 3, 1829. Lieut. William Whistler, his son, who was with his father, for a time, in old Fort Dearborn—but transferred, in 1809, to Fort Wayne—was of the force included in Hull's surrender at Detroit in 1812. After his exchange he was promoted to a captaincy, to the rank of Major in 1826 and to a Lieutenant-Colonelcy in 1845, dying at Newport, Ky., in 1863. James Abbott McNeil Whistler, the celebrated, but eccentric artist of that name, is a grandson of the first Major Whistler.

WHITE, George E., ex-Congressman, was born in Massachusetts in 1848; after graduating, at the age of 16, he enlisted as a private in the Fifty-seventh Massachusetts Veteran Volunteers, serving under General Grant in the campaign against Richmond from the battle of the Wilderness until the surrender of Lee. Having taken a course in a commercial college at Worcester, Mass., in 1867 he came to Chicago, securing employment in a lumber yard, but a year later began business on his own account, which he has successfully conducted. In 1878 he was elected to the State Senate, as a Republican, from one of the Chicago Districts, and re-elected four years later, serving in that body eight years. He declined a nomination for Congress in 1884, but accepted in 1894, and was elected for the Fifth District, as he was again in 1896, but was defeated, in 1898, by Edward T. Noonan, Democrat.

WHITE, Horace, journalist, was born at Colebrook, N. H., August 10, 1834; in 1853 graduated at Beloit College, Wis., whither his father had removed in 1837; engaged in journalism as city editor of "The Chicago Evening Journal," later becoming agent of the Associated Press, and, in 1857, an editorial writer on "The Chicago Tribune," during a part of the war acting as its Washington correspondent. He also served, in 1856, as Assistant Secretary of the Kansas National Committee, and, later, as Secretary of the Republican State Central Committee. In 1864 he purchased an interest in "The Tribune," a year or so later becoming editor-in-chief, but retired in October, 1874. After a protracted European tour, he united with Carl Schurz and E. L. Godkin of "The Nation," in the purchase and reorganization of "The New York Evening Post," of which he is now editor-in-chief.

WHITE, Julius, soldier, was born in Cazenovia, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1816; removed to Illinois in 1836, residing there and in Wisconsin, where he was a member of the Legislature of 1849; in 1861 was made Collector of Customs at Chicago, but resigned to assume the colonelcy of the Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteers, which he commanded on the Fremont expedition to Southwest Missouri. He afterwards served with General Curtiss in Arkansas, participated in the battle of Pea Ridge and was promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General. He was subsequently assigned to the Department of the Shenandoah, but finding his position at Martinsburg, W. Va., untenable, retired to Harper's Ferry, voluntarily serving under Colonel Miles, his inferior in command. When this post was surrendered (Sept. 15, 1862), he was made a prisoner, but released under parole; was tried by a court of inquiry at his own request, and acquitted, the court finding that he had acted with courage and capability.

He resigned in 1864, and, in March, 1865, was brevetted Major-General of Volunteers. Died, at Evanston, May 12, 1890.

WHITE COUNTY, situated in the southeastern quarter of the State, and bounded on the east by the Wabash River; was organized in 1816, being the tenth county organized during the Territorial period; area, 500 square miles. The county is crossed by three railroads and drained by the Wabash and Little Wabash Rivers. The surface consists of prairie and woodland, and the soil is, for the most part, highly productive. The principal agricultural products are corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, tobacco, fruit, butter, sorghum and wool. The principal industrial establishments are carriage factories, saw mills and flour mills. Carmi is the county-seat. Other towns are Enfield, Grayville and Norris City. Population (1880), 23,087; (1890), 25,005; (1900), 25,386.

WHITEHALL, a city in Greene County, at the intersection of the Chicago & Alton and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroads, 65 miles north of St. Louis and 24 miles south-southwest of Jacksonville; in rich farming region; has stoneware and sewer-pipe factories, foundry and machine shop, flour mill, elevators, wagon shops, creamery, water system, sanitarium, heating, electric light and power system nurseries and fruit-supply houses, and two poultry packing houses; also has five churches, a graded school, two banks and three newspapers—one daily. Population (1890), 1,961; (1900), 2,403.

WHITEHOUSE, Henry John, Protestant Episcopal Bishop, was born in New York City, August 19, 1803; graduated from Columbia College in 1821, and from the (New York) General Theological Seminary in 1824. After ordination he was rector of various parishes in Pennsylvania and New York until 1851, when he was chosen Assistant Bishop of Illinois, succeeding Bishop Chase in 1852. In 1867, by invitation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, he delivered the opening sermon before the Pan-Anglican Conference held in England. During this visit he received the degree of D.D. from Oxford University, and that of LL.D. from Cambridge. His rigid views as a churchman and a disciplinarian, were illustrated in his prosecution of Rev. Charles Edward Cheney, which resulted in the formation of the Reformed Episcopal Church. He was a brilliant orator and a trenchant and unyielding controversialist. Died, in Chicago, August 10, 1874.

WHITESIDE COUNTY, in the northwestern portion of the State bordering on the Mississippi River; created by act of the Legislature passed in 1836, and named for Capt. Samuel Whiteside, a noted Indian fighter; area, 700 square miles. The surface is level, diversified by prairies and woodland, and the soil is extremely fertile. The county-seat was first fixed at Lyndon, then at Sterling, and finally at Morrison, its present location. The Rock River crosses the county and furnishes abundant water power for numerous factories, turning out agricultural implements, carriages and wagons, furniture, woolen goods, flour and wrapping paper. There are also distilling and brewing interests, besides saw and planing mills. Corn is the staple agricultural product, although all the leading cereals are extensively grown. The principal towns are Morrison, Sterling, Fulton and Rock Falls. Population (1880), 30,885; (1890), 30,854; (1900), 34,710.

WHITESIDE, William, pioneer and soldier of the Revolution, emigrated from the frontier of North Carolina to Kentucky, and thence, in 1793, to the present limits of Monroe County, Ill., erecting a fort between Cahokia and Kaskaskia, which became widely known as "Whiteside Station." He served as a Justice of the Peace, and was active in organizing the militia during the War of 1812-14, dying at the old Station in 1815.—John (Whiteside), a brother of the preceding, and also a Revolutionary soldier, came to Illinois at the same time, as also did William B. and Samuel, sons of the two brothers, respectively. All of them became famous as Indian fighters. The two latter served as Captains of companies of "Rangers" in the War of 1812, Samuel taking part in the battle of Rock Island in 1814, and contributing greatly to the success of the day. During the Black Hawk War (1832) he attained the rank of Brigadier-General. Whiteside County was named in his honor. He made one of the earliest improvements in Ridge Prairie, a rich section of Madison County, and represented that county in the First General Assembly. William B. served as Sheriff of Madison County for a number of years.—John D. (Whiteside), another member of this historic family, became very prominent, serving in the lower House of the Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Fourteenth General Assemblies, and in the Senate of the Tenth, from Monroe County; was a Presidential Elector in 1836, State Treasurer (1837-41) and a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1847. General Whiteside, as he was known, was the second of James Shields in the famous Shields and Lincoln duel (so-called) in 1842, and, as such, carried the challenge of the former to Mr. Lincoln. (See Duels.)

WHITING, Lorenzo D., legislator, was born in Wayne County, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1819; came to Illinois in 1838, but did not settle there permanently until 1849, when he located in Bureau County. He was a Representative from that county in the Twenty-sixth General Assembly (1869), and a member of the Senate continuously from 1871 to 1887, serving in the latter through eight General Assemblies. Died at his home near Tiskilwa, Bureau County, Ill., Oct. 10, 1889.

WHITING, Richard H., Congressman, was born at West Hartford, Conn., June 17, 1826, and received a common school education. In 1862 he was commissioned Paymaster in the Volunteer Army of the Union, and resigned in 1866. Having removed to Illinois, he was appointed Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue for the Fifth Illinois District, in February, 1870, and so continued until the abolition of the office in 1873. On retiring from the Assessorship he was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue, and served until March 4, 1875, when he resigned to take his seat as Republican Representative in Congress from the Peoria District, to which he had been elected in November, 1874. After the expiration of his term he held no public office, but was a member of the Republican National Convention of 1884. Died, at the Continental Hotel, in New York City, May 24, 1888.

WHITNEY, James W., pioneer lawyer and early teacher, known by the nickname of "Lord Coke"; came to Illinois in Territorial days (believed to have been about 1800); resided for some time at or near Edwardsville, then became a teacher at Atlas, Pike County, and, still later, the first Circuit and County Clerk of that county. Though nominally a lawyer, he had little if any practice. He acquired the title, by which he was popularly known for a quarter of a century, by his custom of visiting the State Capital, during the sessions of the General Assembly, when he would organize the lobbyists and visitors about the capital—of which there were an unusual number in those days—into what was called the "Third House." Having been regularly chosen to preside under the name of "Speaker of the Lobby," he would deliver a message full of practical hits and jokes, aimed at members of the two houses and others, which would be received with cheers and laughter. The meetings of the "Third House," being held in the evening, were attended by many members and visitors in lieu of other forms of entertainment. Mr. Whitney's home, in his latter years, was at Pittsfield. He resided for a time at Quincy. Died, Dec. 13, 1860, aged over 80 years.

WHITEMORE, Floyd K., State Treasurer, is a native of New York, came at an early age, with his parents, to Sycamore, Ill., where he was educated in the high school there. He purposed becoming a lawyer, but, on the election of the late James H. Beveridge State Treasurer, in 1864, accepted the position of clerk in the office. Later, he was employed as a clerk in the banking house of Jacob Bunn in Springfield, and, on the organization of the State National Bank, was chosen cashier of that Institution, retaining the position some twenty years. After the appointment of Hon. John R. Tanner to the position of Assistant Treasurer of the United States, at Chicago, in 1892, Mr. Whittemore became cashier in that office, and, in 1865, Assistant State Treasurer under the administration of State Treasurer Henry Wulff. In 1898 he was elected State Treasurer, receiving a plurality of 43,450 over his Democratic opponent.

WICKERSHAM, (Col.) Dudley, soldier and merchant, was born in Woodford County, Ky., Nov. 22, 1819; came to Springfield, Ill., in 1843, and served as a member of the Fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteers (Col. E. D. Baker's) through the Mexican War. On the return of peace he engaged in the dry-goods trade in Springfield, until 1861, when he enlisted in the Tenth Regiment Illinois Cavalry, serving, first as Lieutenant-Colonel and then as Colonel, until May, 1864, when, his regiment having been consolidated with the Fifteenth Cavalry, he resigned. After the war, he held the office of Assessor of Internal Revenue for several years, after which he engaged in the grocery trade. Died, in Springfield, August 8, 1898.

WIDEN, Raphael, pioneer and early legislator, was a native of Sweden, who, having been taken to France at eight years of age, was educated for a Catholic priest. Coming to the United States in 1815, he was at Cahokia, Ill., in 1818, where, during the same year, he married into a French family of that place. He served in the House of Representatives from Randolph County, in the Second and Third General Assemblies (1820-24), and as Senator in the Fourth and Fifth (1824-28). During his last term in the House, he was one of those who voted against the pro-slavery Convention resolution. He died of cholera, at Kaskaskia, in 1833.

WIKER, Scott, lawyer and ex-Congressman, was born at Meadville, Pa., April 6, 1834; at 4 years of age removed with his parents to Quincy, Ill., and, in 1844, to Pike County. Having graduated from Lombard University, Galesburg, in 1857, he began reading law with Judge O. C. Skinner of Quincy. He was admitted to the bar in 1858, but, before commencing practice, spent a year at Harvard Law School, graduating there in 1859. Immediately thereafter he opened an office at Pittsfield, Ill., and has resided there ever since. In politics he has always been a strong Democrat. He served two terms in the Legislature (1863-67) and, in 1874, was chosen Representative from his District in Congress, being re-elected in 1888 and, again, in 1890. In 1893 he was appointed by President Cleveland Third Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, which position he continued to fill until March, 1897, when he resumed the practice of law at Pittsfield. Died Jan. 15, 1901.

WILEY, (Col.) Benjamin Ladd, soldier, was born in Smithfield, Jefferson County, Ohio, March 25, 1821, came to Illinois in 1845 and began life at Vienna, Johnson County, as a teacher. In 1846 he enlisted for the Mexican War, as a member of the Fifth (Colonel Newby's) Regiment Illinois Volunteers, serving chiefly in New Mexico until mustered out in 1848. A year later he moved to Jonesboro, where he spent some time at the carpenter's trade, after which he became clerk in a store, meanwhile assisting to edit "The Jonesboro Gazette" until 1853; then became traveling salesman for a St. Louis firm, but later engaged in the hardware trade at Jonesboro, in which he continued for several years. In 1856 he was the Republican candidate for Congress for the Ninth District, receiving 4,000 votes, while Fremont, the Republican candidate for President, received only 825 in the same district. In 1857 he opened a real estate office in Jonesboro in conjunction with David L. Phillips and Col. J. W. Ashley, with which he was connected until 1860, when he moved to Makanda, Jackson County. In September, 1861, he was mustered in as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry, later serving in Missouri and Arkansas under Generals Steele and Curtiss, being, a part of the time, in command of the First Brigade of Cavalry, and, in the advance on Vicksburg, having command of the right wing of General Grant's cavalry. Being disabled by rheumatism at the end of the siege, he tendered his resignation, and was immediately appointed Enrolling Officer at Cairo, serving in this capacity until May, 1865, when he was mustered out. In 1869 he was appointed by Governor Palmer one of the Commissioners to locate the Southern Illinois Hospital for the Insane, and served as Secretary of the Board until the institution was opened at Anna, in May, 1871. In 1869 he was defeated as a candidate for County Judge of Jackson County, and, in 1872, for the State Senate, by a small majority in a strongly Democratic District; in 1876 was the Republican candidate for Congress, in the Eighteenth District, against William Hartzell, but was defeated by only twenty votes, while carrying six out of the ten counties comprising the District. In the latter years of his life, Colonel Wiley was engaged quite extensively in fruit-growing at Makanda, Jackson County, where he died, March 22, 1890.

WILKIE, Frauc Bangs, journalist, was born in Saratoga County, N. Y., July 2, 1830; took a partial course at Union College, after which he edited papers at Schenectady, N. Y., Elgin, Ill., and Davenport and Dubuque, Iowa; also serving, during a part of the Civil War, as the western war correspondent of "The New York Times." In 1863 he became an editorial writer on "The Chicago Times," remaining with that paper, with the exception of a brief interval, until 1888—a part of the time as its European correspondent. He was the author of a series of sketches over the nom de plume of "Polinto," and of a volume of reminiscences under the title, "Thirty-five Years of Journalism," published shortly before his death, which took place, April 12, 1892.

WILKIN, Jacob W., Justice of the Supreme Court, was born in Licking County, Ohio, June 7, 1837; removed with his parents to Illinois, at 12 years of age, and was educated at McKendree College; served three years in the War for the Union, studied law with Judge Scholfield and was admitted to the bar in 1866. In 1872, he was chosen Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket, and, in 1879, elected Judge of the Circuit Court and re-elected in 1885—the latter year being assigned to the Appellate bench for the Fourth District, where he remained until his election to the Supreme bench in 1888, being re-elected to the latter office in 1897. His home is at Danville.

WILKINSON, Ira O., lawyer and Judge, was born in Virginia in 1822, and accompanied his father to Jacksonville (1835), where he was educated. During a short service as Deputy Clerk of Morgan County, he conceived a fondness for the profession of the law, and, after a course of study under Judge William Thomas, was admitted to practice in 1847. Richard Yates (afterwards Governor and Senator) was his first partner. In 1845 he removed to Rock Island, and, six years later, was elected a Circuit Judge, being again chosen to the same position in 1861. At the expiration of his second term he removed to Chicago. Died, at Jacksonville, August 24, 1894.

WILKINSON, John P., early merchant, was born, Dec. 14, 1790, in New Kent County, Va., emigrated first to Kentucky, and, in 1828, settled in Jacksonville, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile business. Mr. Wilkinson was a liberal friend of Illinois College and Jacksonville Female Academy, of each of which he was a Trustee from their origin until his death, which occurred, during a business visit to St. Louis, in December, 1841.

WILL, Conrad, pioneer physician and early legislator, was born in Philadelphia, June 4, 1778; about 1804 removed to Somerset County Pa., and, in 1813, to Kaskaskia, Ill. He was a physician by profession, but having leased the saline lands on the Big Muddy, in the vicinity of what afterwards became the town of Brownsville, he engaged in the manufacture of salt, removing thither in 1815, and becoming one of the founders of Brownsville, afterwards the first county-seat of Jackson County. On the organization of Jackson County, in 1816, he became a member of the first Board of County Commissioners, and, in 1818, served as Delegate from that county in the Convention which framed the first State Constitution. Thereafter he served continuously as a member of the Legislature from 1818 to '34—first as Senator in the First General Assembly, then as Representative in the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth, and again as Senator in the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth—his career being conspicuous for long service. He died in office, June 11, 1834. Dr. Will was short of stature, fleshy, of jovial disposition and fond of playing practical jokes upon his associates, but very popular, as shown by his successive elections to the Legislature. He has been called "The Father of Jackson County." Will County, organized by act of the Legislature two years after his death, was named in his honor.

WILL COUNTY, a northeastern county, embracing 850 square miles, named in honor of Dr. Conrad Will, an early politician and legislator. Early explorations of the territory were made in 1829, when white settlers were few. The bluff west of Joliet is said to have been first occupied by David and Benjamin Maggard. Joseph Smith, the Mormon "apostle," expounded his peculiar doctrines at "the Point" in 1831. Several of the early settlers fled from the country during (or after) a raid by the Sac Indians.

There is a legend, seemingly well supported, to the effect that the first lumber sawed to build the first frame house in Chicago (that of P. F. W. Peck), was sawed at Plainfield. Will County, originally a part of Cook, was separately erected in 1836, Joliet being made the county-seat. Agriculture, quarrying and manufacturing are the chief industries. Joliet, Lockport and Wilmington are the principal towns. Population (1880), 53,422; (1890), 62,007; (1900), 74,764.

WILLARD, Frances Elizabeth, teacher and reformer, was born at Churchville, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1839, graduated from the Northwestern Female College at Evanston, Ill., in 1859, and, in 1862, accepted the Professorship of Natural Sciences in that institution. During 1866-67 she was the Principal of the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary. The next two years she devoted to travel and study abroad, meanwhile contributing to various periodicals. From 1871 to 1874 she was Professor of Æsthetics in the Northwestern University and dean of the Woman's College. She was always an enthusiastic champion of temperance, and, in 1874, abandoned her profession to identify herself with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. For five years she was Corresponding Secretary of the national body, and, from 1879, its President. While Secretary she organized the Home Protective Association, and prepared a petition to the Illinois Legislature, to which nearly 200,000 names were attached, asking for the granting to women of the right to vote on the license question. In 1878 she succeeded her brother, Oliver A. Willard (who had died), as editor of "The Chicago Evening Post," but, a few months later, withdrew, and, in 1882, was elected as a member of the executive committee of the National Prohibition party. In 1886 she became leader of the White Cross Movement for the protection of women, and succeeded in securing favorable legislation, in this direction, in twelve States. In 1883 she founded the World's Christian Temperance Union, and, in 1888, was chosen its President, as also President of the International Council of Women. The latter years of her life were spent chiefly abroad, much of the time as the guest and co-worker of Lady Henry Somerset, of England, during which she devoted much attention to investigating the condition of women in the Orient. Miss Willard was a prolific and highly valued contributor to the magazines, and (besides numerous pamphlets) published several volumes, including "Nineteen Beautiful Years" (a tribute to her sister), "Woman in Temperance"; "How to Win," and "Woman in the Pulpit." Died, in New York, Feb. 18, 1898.

WILLARD, Samuel, A.M., M.D., LL.D., physician and educator, was born in Lumenberg, Vt., Dec. 30, 1821—the lineal descendant of Maj. Simon Willard, one of the founders of Concord, Mass., and prominent in "King Philip's War," and of his son, Rev. Dr. Samuel Willard, of the Old South Church, Boston, and seventh President of Harvard College. The subject of this sketch was taken in his infancy to Boston, and, in 1831, to Carrollton, Ill., where his father pursued the avocation of a druggist. After a preparatory course at Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, in 1836 he entered the freshman class in Illinois College at Jacksonville, but withdrew the following year, re-entering college in 1840 and graduating in the class of 1843, as a classmate of Dr. Newton Bateman, afterwards State Superintendent of Public Instruction and President of Knox College, and Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, now of Elmira, N. Y. The next year he spent as Tutor in Illinois College, when he began the study of medicine at Quincy, graduating from the Medical Department of Illinois College in 1848. During a part of the latter year he edited a Free-Soil campaign paper ("The Tribune") at Quincy, and, later, "The Western Temperance Magazine" at the same place. In 1849 he began the practice of his profession at St. Louis, but the next year removed to Collinsville, Ill., remaining until 1857, when he took charge of the Department of Languages in the newly organized State Normal University at Normal. The second year of the Civil War (1862) he enlisted as a private in the Ninety-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was soon after commissioned as Surgeon with the rank of Major, participating in the campaigns in Tennessee and in the first attack upon Vicksburg. Being disabled by an attack of paralysis, in February, 1863, he was compelled to resign, when he had sufficiently recovered accepting a position in the office of Provost Marshal General Oakes, at Springfield, where he remained until the close of the war. He then became Grand Secretary of the Independent Order of Odd-Fellows for the State of Illinois—a position which he had held from 1856 to 1862—remaining under his second appointment from 1865 to '69. The next year he served as Superintendent of Schools at Springfield, meanwhile assisting in founding the Springfield public library, and serving as its first librarian. In 1870 he accepted the professorship of History in the West Side High School of Chicago, which, with the exception of two years (1884-86), he continued to occupy for more than twenty-five years, retiring in 1898. In the meantime, Dr. Willard has been a laborious literary worker, having been, for a considerable period, editor, or assistant-editor, of "The Illinois Teacher," a contributor to "The Century Magazine" and "The Dial" of Chicago, besides having published a "Digest of the Laws of Odd Fellowship" in sixteen volumes, begun while he was Grand Secretary of the Order in 1864, and continued in 1872 and '82; a "Synopsis of History and Historical Chart," covering the period from B. C. 800 to A. D. 1876—of which he has had a second edition in course of preparation. Of late years he has been engaged upon a "Historical Dictionary of Names and Places," which will include some 12,000 topics, and which promises to be the most important work of his life. Previous to the war he was an avowed Abolitionist and operator on the "Underground Railroad," who made no concealment of his opinions, and, on one or two occasions, was called to answer for them in prosecutions under the "Fugitive Slave Act." (See "Underground Railroad.") His friend and classmate, the late Dr. Bateman, says of him: "Dr. Willard is a sound thinker; a clear and forcible writer; of broad and accurate scholarship; conscientious, genial and kindly, and a most estimable gentleman."

WILLIAMS, Archibald, lawyer and jurist, was born in Montgomery County, Ky., June 10, 1801; with moderate advantages but natural fondness for study, he chose the profession of law, and was admitted to the bar in Tennessee in 1828, coming to Quincy, Ill., the following year. He was elected to the General Assembly three times—serving in the Senate in 1832-36, and in the House, 1836-40; was United States District Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, by appointment of President Taylor, 1849-53; was twice the candidate of his party (the Whig) for United States Senator, and appointed by President Lincoln, in 1861, United States District Judge for the State of Kansas. His abilities and high character were widely recognized. Died, in Quincy, Sept. 21, 1863—His son, John H., an attorney at Quincy, served as Judge of the Circuit Court 1879-85.—Another son, Abraham Lincoln, was twice elected Attorney-General of Kansas.

WILLIAMS, Erastus Smith, lawyer and jurist, was born at Salem, N. Y., May 22, 1821. In 1842 he removed to Chicago, where, after reading law, he was admitted to the bar in 1844. In 1854 he was appointed Master in Chancery, which office he filled until 1863, when he was elected a Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County. After re-election in 1870 he became Chief Justice, and, at the same time, heard most of the cases on the equity side of the court. In 1879 he was a candidate for re-election as a Republican, but was defeated with the party ticket. After his retirement from the bench he resumed private practice. Died, Feb. 24, 1884.

WILLIAMS, James R., Congressman, was born in White County, Ill., Dec. 27, 1850, at the age of 25 graduated from the Indiana State University, at Bloomington, and, in 1876, from the Union College of Law, Chicago, since then being an active and successful practitioner at Carmi. In 1880 he was appointed Master in Chancery and served two years. From 1882 to 1886 he was County Judge. In 1892 he was a nominee on the Democratic ticket for Presidential Elector. He was elected to represent the Nineteenth Illinois District in the Fifty-first Congress at a special election held to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of R. W. Townshend, was re-elected in 1890 and 1892, but defeated by Orlando Burrell (Republican) for re-election in the newly organized Twentieth District in 1894. In 1898 he was again a candidate and elected to the Fifty-sixth Congress.

WILLIAMS, John, pioneer merchant, was born in Bath County, Ky., Sept. 11, 1808; between 14 and 16 years of age was clerk in a store in his native State; then, joining his parents, who had settled on a tract of land in a part of Sangamon (now Menard) County, Ill., he found employment as clerk in the store of Major Elijah Iles, at Springfield, whom he succeeded in business at the age of 22, continuing it without interruption until 1880. In 1856 Mr. Williams was the Republican candidate for Congress in the Springfield District, and, in 1861, was appointed Commissary-General for the State, rendering valuable service in furnishing supplies for State troops, in camps of instruction and while proceeding to the field, in the first years of the war; was also chief officer of the Illinois Sanitary Commission for two years, and, as one of the intimate personal friends of Mr. Lincoln, was chosen to accompany the remains of the martyred President, from Washington to Springfield, for burial. Liberal, enterprising and public-spirited, his name was associated with nearly every public enterprise of importance in Springfield during his business career—being one of the founders, and, for eleven years President, of the First National Bank; a chief promoter in the construction of what is now the Springfield Division of the Illinois Central Railroad, and the Springfield and Peoria line; a Director of the Springfield Iron Company; one of the Commissioners who constructed the Springfield water-works, and an officer of the Lincoln Monument Association, from 1865 to his death, May 29, 1890.

WILLIAMS, Norman, lawyer, was born at Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 1, 1833, being related, on both the paternal and maternal sides, to some of the most prominent families of New England. He fitted for college at Union Academy, Meriden, and graduated from the University of Vermont in the class of 1855. After taking a course in the Albany Law School and with a law firm in his native town, he was admitted to practice in both New York and Vermont, removed to Chicago in 1858, and, in 1860, became a member of the firm of King, Kales & Williams, still later forming a partnership with Gen. John L. Thompson, which ended with the death of the latter in 1888. In a professional capacity he assisted in the organization of the Pullman Palace Car Company, and was a member of its Board of Directors; also assisted in organizing the Western Electric Company, and was prominently identified with the Chicago Telephone Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company. In 1881 he served as the United States Commissioner to the Electrical Exposition at Paris. In conjunction with his brother (Edward H. Williams) he assisted in founding the public library at Woodstock, Vt., which, in honor of his father, received the name of "The Norman Williams Public Library." With Col. Huntington W. Jackson and J. McGregor Adams, Mr. Williams was named, in the will of the late John Crerar, as an executor of the Crerar estate and one of the Trustees of the Crerar Public Library, and became its first President; was also a Director of the Chicago Public Library, and trustee of a number of large estates. Mr. Williams was a son-in-law of the late Judge John D. Caton, and his oldest daughter became the wife of Major-General Wesley Merritt, a few months before his death, which occurred at Hampton Beach, N. H., June 19, 1899—his remains being interred in his native town of Woodstock, Vt.

WILLIAMS, Robert Ebenezer, lawyer, born Dec. 3, 1825, at Clarksville, Pa., his grandfathers on both sides being soldiers of the Revolutionary War. In 1830 his parents removed to Washington in the same State, where in boyhood he worked as a mechanic in his father's shop, attending a common school in the winter until he reached the age of 17 years, when he entered Washington College, remaining for more than a year. He then began teaching, and, in 1845 went to Kentucky, where he pursued the business of a teacher for four years. Then he entered Bethany College in West Virginia, at the same time prosecuting his law studies, but left at the close of his junior year, when, having been licensed to practice, he removed to Clinton, Texas. Here he accepted, from a retired lawyer, the loan of a law library, which he afterwards purchased; served for two years as State's Attorney, and, in 1856, came to Bloomington, Ill., where he spent the remainder of his life in the practice of his profession. Much of his time was devoted to practice as a railroad attorney, especially in connection with the Chicago & Alton and the Illinois Central Railroads, in which he acquired prominence and wealth. He was a lifelong Democrat and, in 1868, was the unsuccessful candidate of his party for Attorney-General of the State. The last three years of his life he had been in bad health, dying at Bloomington, Feb. 15, 1899.

WILLIAMS, Samuel, Bank President, was born in Adams County, Ohio, July 11, 1820; came to Winnebago County, Ill., in 1835, and, in 1842, removed to Iroquois County, where he held various local offices, including that of County Judge, to which he was elected in 1861. During his later years he had been President of the Watseka Citizens' Bank. Died, June 16, 1896.

WILLIAMSON, Rollin Samuel, legislator and jurist, was born at Cornwall, Vt., May 23, 1839. At the age of 14 he went to Boston where he began life as a telegraph messenger boy. In two years he had become a skillful operator, and, as such, was employed in various offices in New England and New York. In 1857 he came to Chicago seeking employment and, through the fortunate correction of an error on the part of the receiver of a message, secured the position of operator and station agent at Palatine, Cook County. Here he read law during his leisure time without a preceptor, and, in 1870, was admitted to the bar. The same year he was elected to the lower House of the General Assembly and, in 1872, to the Senate. In 1880 he was elected to the bench of the Superior Court of Cook County, and, in 1887, was chosen a Judge of the Cook County Circuit Court. Died, August 10, 1889.

WILLIAMSON COUNTY, in the southern part of the State, originally set off from Franklin and organized in 1839. The county is well watered, the principal streams being the Big Muddy and the South Fork of the Saline. The surface is undulating and the soil fertile. The region was originally well covered with forests. All the cereals (as well as potatoes) are cultivated, and rich meadows encourage stock-raising. Coal and sandstone underlie the entire county. Area, 410 square miles; population (1880), 19,324 (1890), 22,226; (1900), 27,796.

WILLIAMSVILLE, village of Sangamon County, on Chicago & Alton Railroad, 12 miles north of Springfield; has a bank, elevator, 3 churches, a newspaper and coal-mines. Pop. (1900), 573.

WILLIS, Jonathan Clay, soldier and former Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner, was born in Sumner County, Tenn., June 27, 1826; brought to Gallatin County, Ill., in 1834, and settled at Golconda in 1843; was elected Sheriff of Pope County in 1856, removed to Metropolis in 1859, and engaged in the wharf-boat and commission business. He entered the service as Quartermaster of the Forty-eighth Illinois Volunteers in 1861, but was compelled to resign on account of injuries, in 1863; was elected Representative in the Twenty-sixth General Assembly (1868), appointed Collector of Internal Revenue in 1869, and Railway and Warehouse Commissioner in 1892, as the successor of John R. Tanner, serving until 1893.

WILMETTE, a village in Cook County, 14 miles north of Chicago, on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, a handsome suburb of Chicago on the shore of Lake Michigan; principal streets paved and shaded with fine forest trees; has public library and good schools. Pop. (1900), 2,300.

WILMINGTON, a city of Will County, on the Kankakee River and the Chicago & Alton Railroad, 53 miles from Chicago and 15 south-southwest of Joliet; has considerable manufactures, two National banks, a graded school, churches and one newspaper. Wilmington is the location of the Illinois Soldiers' Widows' Home. Population (1890), 1,576; (1900), 1,420.

WILSON, Charles Lush, journalist, was born in Fairfield County, Conn., Oct. 10, 1818, educated in the common schools and at an academy in his native State, and, in 1835, removed to Chicago, entering the employment of his older brothers, who were connected with the construction of the Illinois & Michigan Canal at Joliet. His brother, Richard L., having assumed charge of "The Chicago Daily Journal" (the successor of "The Chicago American"), in 1844, Charles L. took a position in the office, ultimately securing a partnership, which continued until the death of his brother in 1856, when he succeeded to the ownership of the paper. Mr. Wilson was an ardent friend and supporter of Abraham Lincoln for the United States Senate in 1858, but, in 1860, favored the nomination of Mr. Seward for the Presidency, though earnestly supporting Mr. Lincoln after his nomination. In 1861 he was appointed Secretary of the American Legation at London, serving with the late Minister Charles Francis Adams, until 1864, when he resigned and resumed his connection with "The Journal." In 1875 his health began to fail, and three years later, having gone to San Antonio, Tex., in the hope of receiving benefit from a change of climate, he died in that city, March 9, 1878.—

Richard Lush (Wilson), an older brother of the preceding, the first editor and publisher of "The Chicago Evening Journal," the oldest paper of consecutive publication in Chicago, was a native of New York. Coming to Chicago with his brother John L., in 1834, they soon after established themselves in business on the Illinois & Michigan Canal, then in course of construction. In 1844 he took charge of "The Chicago Daily Journal" for a publishing committee which had purchased the material of "The Chicago American," but soon after became principal proprietor. In April, 1847, while firing a salute in honor of the victory of Buena Vista, he lost an arm and was otherwise injured by the explosion of the cannon. Early in 1849, he was appointed, by President Taylor, Postmaster of the city of Chicago, but, having failed of confirmation, was compelled to retire in favor of a successor appointed by Millard Fillmore, eleven months later. Mr. Wilson published a little volume in 1842 entitled "A Trip to Santa Fe," and, a few years later, a story of travel under the title, "Short Ravelings from a Long Yarn." Died, December, 1856.

—John Lush (Wilson), another brother, also a native of New York, came to Illinois in 1834, was afterwards associated with his brothers in business, being for a time business manager of "The Chicago Journal;" also served one term as Sheriff of Cook County. Died, in Chicago, April 13, 1888.

WILSON, Isaac Grant, jurist, was born at Middlebury, N. Y., April 26, 1817, graduated from Brown University in 1838, and the same year came to Chicago, whither his father's family had preceded him in 1835. After reading law for two years, he entered the senior class at Cambridge (Mass.) Law School, graduating in 1841. In August of that year he opened an office at Elgin, and, for ten years "rode the circuit." In 1851 he was elected to the bench of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit to fill a vacancy, and re-elected for a full term in 1855, and again in '61. In November of the latter year he was commissioned the first Colonel of the Fifty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but resigned, a few weeks later, and resumed his place upon the bench. From 1867 to 1879 he devoted himself to private practice, which was largely in the Federal Courts. In 1879 he resumed his seat upon the bench (this time for the Twelfth Circuit), and was at once designated as one of the Judges of the Appellate Court at Chicago, of which tribunal he became Chief Justice in 1881. In 1885 he was re-elected Circuit Judge, but died, about the close of his term, at Geneva, June 8, 1891.

WILSON, James Grant, soldier and author, was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, April 28, 1832, and, when only a year old, was brought by his father, William Wilson, to America. The family settled at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where James Grant was educated at College Hill and under private teachers. After finishing his studies he became his father's partner in business, but, in 1855, went abroad, and, shortly after his return, removed to Chicago, where he founded the first literary paper established in the Northwest. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he disposed of his journal to enlist in the Fifteenth Illinois Cavalry, of which he was commissioned Major and afterwards promoted to the colonelcy. In August, 1863, while at New Orleans, by advice of General Grant, he accepted a commission as Colonel of the Fourth Regiment United States Colored Cavalry, and was assigned, as Aid-de-camp, to the staff of the Commander of the Department of the Gulf, filling this post until April, 1865. When General Banks was relieved, Colonel Wilson was brevetted Brigadier-General and placed in command at Port Hudson, resigning in July, 1865, since which time his home has been in New York. He is best known as an author, having published numerous addresses, and being a frequent contributor to American and European magazines. Among larger works which he has written or edited are "Biographical Sketches of Illinois Officers"; "Love in Letters"; "Life of General U. S. Grant"; "Life and Letters of Fitz Greene Halleck"; "Poets and Poetry of Scotland"; "Bryant and His Friends" and "Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography."

WILSON, James Harrison, soldier and military engineer, was born near Shawneetown, Ill., Sept. 2, 1837. His grandfather, Alexander Wilson, was one of the pioneers of Illinois, and his father (Harrison Wilson) was an ensign during the War of 1812 and a Captain in the Black Hawk War. His brother (Bluford Wilson) served as Assistant Adjutant-General of Volunteers during the Civil War, and as Solicitor of the United States Treasury during the "whisky ring" prosecutions. James H. was educated in the common schools, at McKendree College, and the United States Military Academy at West Point, graduating from the latter in 1860, and being assigned to the Topographical Engineer Corps. In September, 1861, he was promoted to a First Lieutenant, then served as Chief Topographical Engineer of the Port Royal expedition until March, 1862; was afterwards attached to the Department of the South, being present at the bombardment of Fort Pulaski; was Aid-camp to McClellan, and participated in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam; was made Lieutenant-Colonel of Volunteers in November, 1862; was Chief Topographical Engineer and Inspector-General of the Army of the Tennessee until October, 1863, being actively engaged in the operations around Vicksburg; was made Captain of Engineers in May, 1863, and Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Oct. 31, following. He also conducted operations preliminary to the battle of Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge, and for the relief of Knoxville. Later, he was placed in command of the Third Division of the cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac, serving from May to August, 1864, under General Sheridan. Subsequently he was transferred to the Department of the Mississippi, where he so distinguished himself that, on April 20, 1865, he was made Major-General of Volunteers. In twenty-eight days he captured five fortified cities, twenty-three stands of colors, 288 guns and 6,820 prisoners—among the latter being Jefferson Davis. He was mustered out of the volunteer service in January, 1866, and, on July 28, following, was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of the Thirty-fifth United States Infantry, being also brevetted Major-General in the regular army. On Dec. 31, 1870, he returned to civil life, and was afterwards largely engaged in railroad and engineering operations, especially in West Virginia. Promptly after the declaration of war with Spain (1898) General Wilson was appointed, by the President, Major-General of Volunteers, serving until its close. He is the author of "China: Travels and Investigations in the Middle Kingdom", "Life of Andrew J. Alexander"; and the "Life of Gen. U. S. Grant," in conjunction with Charles A.

Dana. His home, in recent years, has been in New York.

WILSON, John M., lawyer and jurist, was born in New Hampshire in 1802, graduated at Bowdoin College in 1824—the classmate of Franklin Pierce and Nathaniel Hawthorne; studied law in New Hampshire and came to Illinois in 1835, locating at Joliet; removed to Chicago in 1841, where he was the partner of Norman B. Judd, serving, at different periods, as attorney of the Chicago & Rock Island, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the Chicago & Northwestern Railways; was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Cook County, 1853-59, when he became Presiding Judge of the Superior Court of Chicago, serving until 1868. Died, Dec. 7, 1883.

WILSON, John P., lawyer, was born in Whiteside County, Ill., July 3, 1844; educated in the common schools and at Knox College, Galesburg, graduating from the latter in 1865; two years later was admitted to the bar in Chicago, and speedily attained prominence in his profession. During the World's Fair period he was retained as counsel by the Committee on Grounds and Buildings, and was prominently connected, as counsel for the city, with the Lake Front litigation.

WILSON, Robert L., early legislator, was born in Washington County, Pa., Sept. 11, 1805, taken to Zanesville, Ohio, in 1810, graduated at Franklin College in 1831, studied law and, in 1833, removed to Athens (now in Menard County), Ill.; was elected Representative in 1836, and was one of the members from Sangamon County, known as the "Long Nine," who assisted in securing the removal of the State Capital to Springfield. Mr. Wilson removed to Sterling, Whiteside County, in 1840, was elected five times Circuit Clerk and served eight years as Probate Judge. Immediately after the fall of Fort Sumter, he enlisted as private in a battalion in Washington City under command of Cassin M. Clay, for guard duty until the arrival of the Seventh New York Regiment. He subsequently assisted in raising troops in Illinois, was appointed Paymaster by Lincoln, serving at Washington, St. Louis, and, after the fall of Vicksburg, at Springfield—being mustered out in November, 1865. Died, in Whiteside County, 1880.

WILSON, Robert S., lawyer and jurist, was born at Montrose, Susquehanna County, Pa., Nov. 6, 1812, learned the printer's art, then studied law and was admitted to the bar in Allegheny County, about 1833; in 1836 removed to Ann Arbor, Mich., where he served as Probate Judge and State Senator; in 1850 came to Chicago, was elected Judge of the Recorder's Court in 1853, and re-elected in 1858, serving ten years, and proving "a terror to evil-doers." Died, at Lawrence, Mich., Dec. 23, 1882.

WILSON, William, early jurist, was born in Loudoun County, Va., April 27, 1794; studied law with Hon. John Cook, a distinguished lawyer, and minister to France in the early part of the century; in 1817 removed to Kentucky, soon after came to Illinois, two years later locating in White County, near Carmi, which continued to be his home during the remainder of his life. In 1819 he was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court as successor to William P. Foster, who is described by Governor Ford as "a great rascal and no lawyer," and who held office only about nine months. Judge Wilson was re-elected to the Supreme bench, as Chief Justice, in 1825, being then only a little over 30 years old, and held office until the reorganization of the Supreme Court under the Constitution of 1848—a period of over twenty-nine years, and, with the exception of Judge Browne's, the longest term of service in the history of the court. He died at his home in White County, April 29, 1857. A Whig in early life, he allied himself with the Democratic party on the dissolution of the former. Hon. James C. Conkling, of Springfield, says of him, "as a writer, his style was clear and distinct; as a lawyer, his judgment was sound and discriminating."

WINCHESTER, a city and county-seat of Scott County, founded in 1839, situated on Big Sandy Creek and on the line of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 29 miles south of Beardstown and 84 miles north by west of St. Louis. While the surrounding region is agricultural and largely devoted to wheat growing, there is some coal mining. Winchester is an important shipping-point, having three grain elevators, two flouring mills, and a coal mine employing fifty miners. There are four Protestant and one Catholic church, a court house, a high school, a graded school building, two banks and two weekly newspapers. Population (1880), 1,626; (1890), 1,542; (1900), 1,711.

WINDSOR, a city of Shelby County at the crossing of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis and the Wabash Railways, 11 miles north-east of Shelbyville. Population (1880), 768; (1890), 888; (1900), 866.

WINES, Frederick Howard, clergyman and sociologist, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 9, 1838, graduated at Washington (Pa.) College in 1857, and, after serving as tutor there for a short time, entered Princeton Theological Seminary, but was compelled temporarily to discontinue his studies on account of a weakness of the eyes. The Presbytery of St. Louis licensed him to preach in 1860, and, in 1862, he was commissioned Hospital Chaplain in the Union army. During 1862-64 he was stationed at Springfield, Mo., participating in the battle of Springfield on Jan. 8, 1863, and being personally mentioned for bravery on the field in the official report. Re-entering the seminary at Princeton in 1864, he graduated in 1865, and at once accepted a call to the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, Ill., which he filled for four years. In 1869 he was appointed Secretary of the newly created Board of Commissioners of Public Charities of Illinois, in which capacity he continued until 1893, when he resigned. For the next four years he was chiefly engaged in literary work, in lecturing before universities on topics connected with social science, in aiding in the organization of charitable work, and in the conduct of a thorough investigation into the relations between liquor legislation and crime. At an early period he took a prominent part in organizing the various Boards of Public Charities of the United States into an organization known as the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, and, at the Louisville meeting (1883), was elected its President. At the International Penitentiary Congress at Stockholm (1878) he was the official delegate from Illinois. On his return, as a result of his observations while abroad, he submitted to the Legislature a report strongly advocating the construction of the Kankakee Hospital for the Insane, then about to be built, upon the "detached ward" or "village" plan, a departure from then existing methods, which marks an era in the treatment of insane in the United States. Mr. Wines conducted the investigation into the condition and number of the defective, dependent and delinquent classes throughout the country, his report constituting a separate volume under the "Tenth Census," and rendered a similar service in connection with the eleventh census (1890). In 1887 he was elected Secretary of the National Prison Association, succeeding to the post formerly held by his father, Enoch Cobb Wines, D.D., LL.D. After the inauguration of Governor Tanner in 1897, he resumed his former position of Secretary of the Board of Public Charities, remaining until 1899, when he again tendered his resignation, having received the appointment to the position of Assistant Director of the Twelfth Census, which he now holds. He is the author of "Crime and Reformation" (1895); of a voluminous series of reports; also of numerous pamphlets and brochures, among which may be mentioned "The County Jail System: An Argument for its Abolition" (1878); "The Kaika-kee Hospital" (1882); "Provision for the Insane in the United States" (1885); "Conditional Liberation, or the Paroling of Prisoners" (1886), and "American Prisons in the Tenth Census" (1888).

WINES, Walter B., lawyer (brother of Frederick H. Wines), was born in Boston, Mass., Oct. 10, 1848, received his primary education at Williston Academy, East Hampton, Mass., after which he entered Middlebury College, Vt., taking a classical course and graduating there. He afterwards became a student in the law department of Columbia College, N. Y., graduating in 1871, being admitted to the bar the same year and commencing practice in New York City. In 1879 he came to Springfield, Ill., and was, for a time, identified with the bar of that city. Later, he removed to Chicago, where he has been engaged in literary and journalistic work.

WINNEBAGO COUNTY, situated in the "northern tier," bordering on the Wisconsin State line; was organized, under an act passed in 1836, from La Salle and Jo Daviess Counties, and has an area of 552 square miles. The county is drained by the Rock and Pecatonica Rivers. The surface is rolling prairie and the soil fertile. The geology is simple, the quaternary deposits being underlain by the Galena blue and buff limestone, adapted for building purposes. All the cereals are raised in abundance, the chief product being corn. The Winnebago Indians (who gave name to the county) formerly lived on the west side of the Rock River, and the Pottawatomies on the east, but both tribes removed westward in 1835. (As to manufacturing interests see Rockford.) Population (1880), 30,505; (1890), 39,938; (1900), 47,845.

WINNEBAGO WAR. The name given to an Indian disturbance which had its origin in 1827, during the administration of Gov. Ninian Edwards. The Indians had been quiet since the conclusion of the War of 1812, but a few isolated outrages were sufficient to start terrified "runners" in all directions. In the northern portion of the State, from Galena to Chicago (then Fort Dearborn) the alarm was intense. The meagre militia force of the State was summoned and volunteers were called for. Meanwhile, 600 United States Regular Infantry, under command of Gen. Henry Atkinson, put in an appearance. Besides the infantry, Atkinson had at his disposal some 130 mounted sharpshooters. The origin of the disturbance was as follows: The Winnebagos attacked a band of Chippewas, who were (by treaty) under Government protection, several of the latter being killed. For participation in this offense, four Winnebago Indians were summarily apprehended, surrendered to the Chippewas and shot. Meanwhile, some dispute had arisen as to the title of the lands, claimed by the Winnebagos in the vicinity of Galena, which had been occupied by white miners. Repeated acts of hostility and of reprisal, along the Upper Mississippi, intensified mutual distrust. A gathering of the Indians around two keel-boats, laden with supplies for Fort Snelling, which had anchored near Prairie du Chien and opposite a Winnebago camp, was regarded by the whites as a hostile act. Liquor was freely distributed, and there is historical evidence that a half-dozen drunken squaws were carried off and shamefully maltreated. Several hundred warriors assembled to avenge the deception which had been practiced upon them. They laid in ambush for the boats on their return trip. The first passed too rapidly to be successfully assailed, but the second grounded and was savagely, yet unsuccessfully, attacked. The presence of General Atkinson's forces prevented an actual outbreak, and, on his demand, the great Winnebago Chief, Red Bird, with six other leading men of the tribe, surrendered themselves as hostages to save their nation from extermination. A majority of these were, after trial, acquitted. Red Bird, however, unable to endure confinement, literally pined to death in prison, dying on Feb. 16, 1828. He is described as having been a savage of superior intelligence and noble character. A treaty of peace was concluded with the Winnebagos in a council held at Prairie du Chien, a few months later, but the affair seems to have produced as much alarm among the Indians as it did among the whites. (For Winnebago Indians see page 576.)

WINNETKA, a village of Cook County, on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, 16½ miles north of Chicago. It stands eighty feet above the level of Lake Michigan, has good schools (being the seat of the Winnetka Institute), several churches, and is a popular residence town. Population (1880), 584; (1890), 1,079; (1900), 1,833.

WINSTON, Frederick Hampton, lawyer, was born in Liberty County, Ga., Nov. 20, 1830, was brought to Woodford County, Ky., in 1855, left an orphan at 12, and attended the common schools until 18, when, returning to Georgia, he engaged in cotton manufacture. He finally began the study of law with United States Senator W. C. Dawson, and graduated from Harvard Law School in 1832, spent some time in the office of W. M. Everts in New York, was admitted to the bar and came to Chicago in 1833, where he formed a partnership with Norman B. Judd, afterwards being associated with Judge Henry W. Blodgett; served as general solicitor of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railways—remaining with the latter twenty years. In 1885 he was appointed, by President Cleveland, Minister to Persia, but resigned the following year, and traveled extensively in Russia, Scandinavia and other foreign countries. Mr. Winston was a delegate to the Democratic National Conventions of 1868, '76 and '84; first President of the Stock Yards at Jersey City, for twelve years President of the Lincoln Park Commission, and a Director of the Lincoln National Bank.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINES. The Wisconsin Central Company was organized, June 17, 1887, and subsequently acquired the Minnesota, St. Croix & Wisconsin, the Wisconsin & Minnesota, the Chippewa Falls & Western, the St. Paul & St. Croix Falls, the Wisconsin Central, the Penokee, and the Packwaukee & Montebello Railroads, and assumed the leases of the Milwaukee & Lake Winnebago and the Wisconsin & Minnesota Roads. On July 1, 1888, the company began to operate the entire Wisconsin Central system, with the exception of the Wisconsin Central Railroad and the leased Milwaukee & Lake Winnebago, which remained in charge of the Wisconsin Central Railroad mortgage trustees until Nov. 1, 1889, when these, too, passed under the control of the Wisconsin Central Company. The Wisconsin Central Railroad Company is a reorganization (Oct. 1, 1879) of a company formed Jan. 1, 1871. The Wisconsin Central and the Wisconsin Central Railroad Companies, though differing in name, are a financial unit; the former holding most of the first mortgage bonds of the latter, and substantially all its notes, stocks and income bonds, but, for legal reasons (such as the protection of land titles), it is necessary that separate corporations be maintained. On April 1, 1890, the Wisconsin Central Company executed a lease to the Northern Pacific Railroad, but this was set aside by the courts, on Sept. 27, 1893, for non-payment of rent, and was finally canceled. On the same day receivers were appointed to insure the protection of all interests. The total mileage is 415.46 miles, of which the Company owns 258.90—only .10 of a mile in Illinois. A line, 58.10 miles in length, with 8.44 miles of side-track (total, 66.54 miles), lying wholly within the State of Illinois, is operated by the Chicago & Wisconsin and furnishes the allied line an entrance into Chicago.

WITHEROW, Thomas F., lawyer, was born in Virginia in March, 1833, removed with his parents to Ohio in childhood, attended the Western Reserve College, and, after the death of his father, taught school and worked as a printer, later, editing a paper at Mount Vernon. In 1855 he removed to Janesville, Wis., where he again engaged in journalistic work studied law, was admitted to the bar in Iowa in 1857, settled at Des Moines and served as private secretary of Governors Lowe and Kirkwood. In 1860 he became Supreme Court Reporter; served as Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in 1863 and, in 1866, became associated with the Rock Island Railroad in the capacity of local attorney, was made chief law officer of the Company in 1873, and removed to Chicago, and, in 1890, was promoted to the position of General Counsel. Died, in Chicago, Feb. 3, 1893.

WOLCOTT, (Dr.) Alexander, early Indian Agent, was born at East Windsor, Conn., Feb. 14, 1790; graduated from Yale College in 1809, and, after a course in medicine, was commissioned, in 1812, Surgeon's Mate in the United States Army. In 1820 he was appointed Indian Agent at Fort Dearborn (now Chicago), as successor to Charles Jouett—the first Agent—who had been appointed a United States Judge in Arkansas. The same year he accompanied General Lewis Cass and Henry Schoolcraft on their tour among the Indians of the Northwest; was married in 1823 to Ellen Marion Kinzie, a daughter of Col. John Kinzie, the first permanent settler of Chicago; in 1825 was appointed a Justice of the Peace for Peoria County, which then included Cook County; was a Judge of Election in 1830, and one of the purchasers of a block of ground in the heart of the present city of Chicago, at the first sale of lots, held Sept. 27, 1830, but died before the close of the year. Dr. Wolcott appears to have been a high-minded and honorable man, as well as far in advance of the mass of pioneers in point of education and intelligence.

WOMAN'S MEDICAL COLLEGE OF CHICAGO. (See Northwestern University Woman's Medical School.)

WOMAN SUFFRAGE. (See Suffrage.)

WOOD, Benson, lawyer and Congressman, was born in Susquehanna County, Pa., in 1839; received a common school and academic education; at the age of 20 came to Illinois, and, for two years, taught school in Lee County. He then enlisted as a soldier in an Illinois regiment, attaining the rank of Captain of Infantry, after the war, graduated from the Law Department of the old Chicago University, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. He was elected a member of the Twenty-eighth General Assembly (1872) and was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions of 1876 and 1888; also served as Mayor of the city of Effingham, where he now resides. In 1894 he was elected to the Fifty-fourth Congress by the Republicans of the Nineteenth District, which has uniformly returned a Democrat, and, in office, proved himself a most industrious and efficient member. Mr. Wood was defeated as a candidate for re-election in 1896.

WOOD, John, pioneer, Lieutenant Governor and Governor, was born at Moravia, N. Y., Dec. 20, 1798—his father being a Revolutionary soldier who had served as Surgeon and Captain in the army. At the age of 21 years young Wood removed to Illinois, settling in what is now Adams County, and building the first log-cabin on the site of the present city of Quincy. He was a member of the upper house of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth General Assemblies, and was elected Lieutenant-Governor in 1859 on the same ticket with Governor Bissell, and served out the unexpired term of the latter, who died in office. (See Bissell, William H.) He was succeeded by Richard Yates in 1861. In February of that year he was appointed one of the five Commissioners from Illinois to the "Peace Conference" at Washington, to consider methods for averting civil war. The following May he was appointed Quartermaster-General for the State by Governor Yates, and assisted most efficiently in fitting out the troops for the field. In June, 1864, he was commissioned Colonel of the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteers (100-days' men) and mustered out of service the following September. Died, at Quincy, June 11, 1880. He was liberal, patriotic and public-spirited. His fellow-citizens of Quincy erected a monument to his memory, which was appropriately dedicated, July 4, 1883.

WOODFORD COUNTY, situated a little north of the center of the State, bounded on the west by the Illinois River, organized in 1811; area, 540 square miles. The surface is generally level, except along the Illinois River, the soil fertile and well watered. The county lies in the northern section of the great coal field of the State. Eureka is the county-seat. Other thriving cities and towns are Metamora, Minonk, El Paso and Roanoke. Corn, oats, wheat, potatoes and barley are the principal crops. The chief mechanical industries are flour manufacture, carriage and wagon-making, and saddlery and harness work. Population (1890), 21,429; (1900), 21,822.

WOODHULL, a village of Henry County, on Keittsburg branch Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 15 miles west of Galva; has a bank, electric lights, water works, brick and tile works, six churches and weekly paper. Pop. (1900), 774.

WOODMAN, Charles W., lawyer and Congressman, was born in Aalborg, Denmark, March 11, 1844; received his early education in the schools of his native country, but took to the sea in 1860, following the life of a sailor until 1863, when, coming to Philadelphia, he enlisted in the Gulf Squadron of the United States. After the war, he came to Chicago, and, after reading law for some time in the office of James L. High, graduated from the Law Department of the Chicago University in 1871. Some years later he was appointed Prosecuting Attorney for some of the lower courts, and, in 1881, was nominated by the Judges of Cook County as one of the Justices of the Peace for the city of Chicago. In 1894 he became the Republican candidate for Congress from the Fourth District and was elected, but failed to secure a renomination in 1896. Died, in Elgin Asylum for the Insane, March 18, 1898.

WOODS, Robert Mann, was born at Greenville, Pa., April 17, 1840; came with his parents to Illinois in 1842, the family settling at Barry, Pike County, but subsequently residing at Pittsfield, Canton and Galesburg. He was educated at Knox College in the latter place, which was his home from 1849 to '58; later, taught school in Iowa and Missouri until 1861, when he went to Springfield and began the study of law with Milton Hay and Shelby M. Cullom. His law studies having been interrupted by the Civil War, after spending some time in the mustering and disbursing office, he was promoted by Governor Yates to a place in the executive office, from which he went to the field as Adjutant of the Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry, known as the "Yates Sharpshooters." After participating, with the Army of the Tennessee, in the Atlanta campaign, he took part in the "March to the Sea," and the campaign in the Carolinas, including the siege of Savannah and the forcing of the Salkahatchie, where he distinguished himself, as also in the taking of Columbia, Fayetteville, Cheraw, Raleigh and Bentonville. At the latter place he had a horse shot under him and won the brevet rank of Major for gallantry in the field, having previously been commissioned Captain of Company A of his regiment. He also served on the staffs of Gens. Giles A. Smith, Benjamin F. Potts, and William W. Belknap, and was the last mustering officer in General Sherman's army. In 1867 Major Woods removed to Chicago, where he was in business for a number of years, serving as chief clerk of Custom House construction from 1872 to 1877. In 1879 he purchased "The Daily Republican" at Joliet, which he conducted successfully for fifteen years. While connected with "The Republican," he served as Secretary of the Illinois Republican Press Association and in various other positions.

Major Woods was one of the founders of the Grand Army of the Republic, whose birth-place was in Illinois. (See Grand Army of the Republic; also Stephenson, Dr. B. F.) When Dr. Stephenson (who had been Surgeon of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry), conceived the idea of founding such an order, he called to his assistance Major Woods, who was then engaged in writing the histories of Illinois regiments for the Adjutant-General's Report. The Major wrote the Constitution and By-laws of the Order, the charter blanks for all the reports, etc. The first official order bears his name as the first Adjutant-General of the Order, as follows:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ILLINOIS
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
SPRINGFIELD, ILL., APRIL 1, 1866.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 1. The following named officers are hereby appointed and assigned to duty at these headquarters. They will be obeyed and respected accordingly:

Colonel Jules C. Webber, A. D. C. and Chief of Staff.
Colonel John M. Snyder, Quartermaster-General.
Major Robert M. Woods, Adjutant-General.
Captain John A. Lightfoot, Assistant Adjutant-General.
Captain John S. Phelps, Aid-de-Camp.
By order of B. F. Stephenson, Department Commander.

ROBERT M. WOODS,
Adjutant-General.

Major Woods afterwards organized the various Departments in the West, and it has been conceded that he furnished the money necessary to carry on the work during the first six months of the existence of the Order. He has never accepted a nomination or run for any political office, but is now engaged in financial business in Joliet and Chicago, with his residence in the former place.

WOODSON, David Meade, lawyer and jurist, was born in Jessamine County, Ky., May 18, 1806; was educated in private schools and at Transylvania University, and read law with his father. He served a term in the Kentucky Legislature in 1832, and, in 1834, removed to Illinois, settling at Carrollton, Greene County. In 1839 he was elected State's Attorney and, in 1840, a member of the lower house of the Legislature, being elected a second time in 1868. In 1843 he was the Whig candidate for Congress in the Fifth District, but was defeated by Stephen A. Douglas. He was a member of the Constitutional Conventions of 1847 and 1869-70. In 1848 he was elected a Judge of the First Judicial Circuit, remaining in office until 1867. Died, in 1877.

WOODSTOCK, the county-seat of McHenry County, situated on the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, about 51 miles northwest of Chicago and 32 miles east of Rockford. It contains a court house, eight churches, four banks, three newspaper offices, foundry and machine shops, planing mills, canning works, pickle, cheese and butter factories. The Oliver Typewriter Factory is located here; the town is also the seat of the Todd Seminary for boys. Population (1890), 1,683; (1900), 2,502.

WORCESTER, Linus E., State Senator, was born in Windsor, Vt., Dec. 5, 1811, was educated in the common schools of his native State and at Chester Academy, came to Illinois in 1836, and, after teaching three years, entered a dry-goods store at Whitehall as clerk, later becoming a partner. He was also engaged in various other branches of business at different times, including the drug, hardware, grocery, agricultural implement and lumber business. In 1843 he was appointed Postmaster at Whitehall, serving twelve years; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1847, served as County Judge for six years from 1853, and as Trustee of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, at Jacksonville, from 1859, by successive reappointments, for twelve years. In 1856 he was elected, as a Democrat, to the State Senate, to succeed John M. Palmer, resigned; was re-elected in 1860, and, at the session of 1865, was one of the five Democratic members of that body who voted for the ratification of the Emancipation Amendment of the National Constitution. He was elected County Judge a second time, in 1863, and re-elected in 1867, served as delegate to the Democratic National Convention of 1876, and, for more than thirty years, was one of the Directors of the Jacksonville branch of the Chicago & Alton Railroad, serving from the organization of the corporation until his death, which occurred Oct. 19, 1891.

WORDEN, a village of Madison County, on the Wabash and the Jacksonville, Louisville & St. Louis Railways, 32 miles northeast of St. Louis. Population (1890), 522; (1900), 541.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION. An exhibition of the scientific, liberal and mechanical arts of all nations, held at Chicago, between May 1 and Oct. 31, 1893. The project had its inception in November, 1885, in a resolution adopted by the directorate of the Chicago Interstate Exposition Company. On July 6, 1888, the first well defined action was taken, the Iroquois Club, of Chicago, inviting the co-operation of six other leading clubs of that city in "securing the location of an international celebration at Chicago of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus." In July, 1889, a decisive step was taken in the appointment by Mayor Cregier, under resolution of the City Council, of a committee of 100 (afterwards increased to 256) citizens, who were charged with the duty of promoting the selection of Chicago as the site for the Exposition. New York, Washington and St. Louis were competing points, but the choice of Congress fell upon Chicago, and the act establishing the World's Fair at that city was signed by President Harrison on April 25, 1890. Under the requirements of the law, the President appointed eight Commissioners-at-large, with two Commissioners and two alternates from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia. Col. George R. Davis, of Chicago, was elected Director-General by the body thus constituted. Ex-Senator Thomas M. Palmer, of Michigan, was chosen President of the Commission and John T. Dickinson, of Texas, Secretary. This Commission delegated much of its power to a Board of Reference and Control, who were instructed to act with a similar number appointed by the World's Columbian Exposition. The latter organization was an incorporation, with a directorate of forty-five members, elected annually by the stockholders. Lyman J. Gage, of Chicago, was the first President of the corporation, and was succeeded by W. T. Baker and Harlow N. Higginbotham.

In addition to these bodies, certain powers were vested in a Board of Lady Managers, composed of two members, with alternates, from each State and Territory, besides nine from the city of Chicago. Mrs. Potter Palmer was chosen President of the latter. This Board was particularly charged with supervision of women's participation in the Exposition, and of the exhibits of women's work.

The supreme executive power was vested in the Joint Board of Control. The site selected was Jackson Park, in the South Division of Chicago, with a strip connecting Jackson and Washington Parks, known as the "Midway Plaisance," which was surrendered to "concessionaires" who purchased the privilege of giving exhibitions, or conducting restaurants or selling-booths thereon. The total area of the site was 633 acres, and that of the buildings—not reckoning those erected by States other than Illinois, and by foreign governments—was about 200 acres. When to this is added the acreage of the foreign and State buildings, the total space under roof approximated 250 acres. These figures do not include the buildings erected by private exhibitors, caterers and vendors, which would add a small percentage to the grand total. Forty-seven foreign Governments made appropriations for the erection of their own buildings and other expenses connected with official representation, and there were exhibitors from eighty-six nations. The United States Government erected its own building, and appropriated $500,000 to defray the expenses of a national exhibit, besides $2,500,000 toward the general cost of the Exposition. The appropriations by foreign Governments aggregated about $6,500,000, and those by the States and Territories, $6,120,000—that of Illinois being $800,000. The entire outlay of the World's Columbian Exposition Company, up to March 31, 1894, including the cost of preliminary organization, construction, operating and post-Exposition expenses, was $27,151,800. This is, of course, exclusive of foreign and State expenditures, which would swell the aggregate cost to nearly $45,000,000. Citizens of Chicago subscribed $5,608,206 toward the capital stock of the Exposition Company, and the municipality, $5,000,000, which was raised by the sale of bonds. (See Thirty-sixth General Assembly.)

The site, while admirably adapted to the purpose, was, when chosen, a marshy flat, crossed by low sand ridges, upon which stood occasional clumps of stunted scrub oaks. Before the gates of the great fair were opened to the public, the entire area had been transformed into a dream of beauty. Marshes had been drained, filled in and sodded, driveways and broad walks constructed; artificial ponds and lagoons dug and embanked, and all the highest skill of the landscape gardener's art had been called into play to produce varied and striking effects. But the task had been a Herculean one. There were seventeen principal (or, as they may be called, departmental) buildings, all of beautiful and ornate design, and all of vast size. They were known as the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts, the Machinery, Electrical, Transportation, Woman's, Horticultural, Mines and Mining, Anthropological, Administration, Art Galleries, Agricultural, Art Institute, Fisheries, Live Stock, Dairy and Forestry buildings, and the Music Hall and Casino. Several of these had large annexes. The Manufacturers' Building was the largest. It was rectangular (1687x787 feet), having a ground area of 31 acres and a floor and gallery area of 44 acres. Its central chamber was 1280x380 feet, with a nave 107 feet wide, both hall and nave being surrounded by a gallery 50 feet wide. It was four times as large as the Roman Coliseum and three times as large as St. Peter's at Rome; 17,000,000 feet of lumber, 13,000,000 pounds of steel, and 2,000,000 pounds of iron had been used in its construction, involving a cost of $1,800,000.

It was originally intended to open the Exposition, formally, on Oct. 21, 1892, the quadri-centennial of Columbus' discovery of land on the Western Hemisphere, but the magnitude of the undertaking rendered this impracticable. Consequently, while dedicatory ceremonies were held on that day, preceded by a monster procession and followed by elaborate pyrotechnic displays at night, May 1, 1893, was fixed as the opening day—the machinery and fountains being put in operation, at the touch of an electric button by President Cleveland, at the close of a short address. The total number of admissions from that date to Oct. 31, was 27,530,460—the largest for any single day being on Oct. 9 (Chicago Day) amounting to 761,944. The total receipts from all sources (including National and State appropriations, subscriptions, etc.), amounted to $28,151,168.75, of which $19,626,330.76 was from the sale of tickets, and $8,699,581.43 from concessions. The aggregate attendance fell short of that at the Paris Exposition of 1889 by about 500,000, while the receipts from the sale of tickets and concessions exceeded the latter by nearly $5,800,000. Subscribers to the Exposition stock received a return of ten per cent on the same.

The Illinois building was the first of the State buildings to be completed. It was also the largest and most costly, but was severely criticised from an architectural standpoint. The exhibits showed the internal resources of the State, as well as the development of its governmental system, and its progress in civilization from the days of the first pioneers. The entire Illinois exhibit in the State building was under charge of the State Board of Agriculture, who devoted one-tenth of the appropriation, and a like proportion of floor space, to the exhibition of the work of Illinois women as scientists, authors, artists, decorators, etc. Among special features of the Illinois exhibit were: State trophies and relics, kept in a fire-proof memorial hall; the display of grains and minerals, and an immense topographical map (prepared at a cost of $15,000), drafted on a scale of two miles to the inch, showing the character and resources of the State, and correcting many serious cartographical errors previously undiscovered.

WORTHEN, Amos Henry, scientist and State Geologist, was born at Bradford, Vt., Oct. 31, 1813, emigrated to Kentucky in 1834, and, in 1836, removed to Illinois, locating at Warsaw. Teaching, surveying and mercantile business were his pursuits until 1842, when he returned to the East, spending two years in Boston, but returning to Warsaw in 1844. His natural predilections were toward the natural sciences, and, after coming west, he devoted most of his leisure time to the collection and study of specimens of mineralogy, geology and conchology. On the organization of the geological survey of Illinois in 1851, he was appointed assistant to Dr. J. G. Norwood, then State Geologist, and, in 1858, succeeded to the office, having meanwhile spent three years as Assistant Geologist in the first Iowa survey. As State Geologist he published seven volumes of reports, and was engaged upon the eighth when overtaken by death, May 6, 1888. These reports, which are as comprehensive as they are voluminous, have been reviewed and warmly commended by the leading scientific periodicals of this country and Europe. In 1877 field work was discontinued, and the State Historical Library and Natural History Museum were established, Professor Worthen being placed in charge as curator. He was the author of various valuable scientific papers and member of numerous scientific societies in this country and in Europe.

WORTHINGTON, Nicholas Ellsworth, ex-Congressman, was born in Brooke County, W. Va., March 30, 1836, and completed his education at Allegheny College, Pa., studied Law at Morgantown, Va., and was admitted to the bar in 1860. He is a resident of Peoria, and, by profession, a lawyer; was County Superintendent of Schools of Peoria County from 1868 to 1872, and a member of the State Board of Education from 1869 to 1872. In 1882 he was elected to Congress, as a Democrat, from the Tenth Congressional District, and re-elected in 1884. In 1886 he was again a candidate, but was defeated by his Republican opponent, Philip Sidney Post. He was elected Circuit Judge of the Tenth Judicial District in 1891, and re-elected in 1897. In 1894 he served upon a commission appointed by President Cleveland, to investigate the labor strikes of that year at Chicago.

WRIGHT, John Stephen, manufacturer, was born at Sheffield, Mass., July 16, 1815; came to Chicago in 1832, with his father, who opened a store in that city; in 1837, at his own expense, built the first school building in Chicago; in 1840 established "The Prairie Farmer," which he conducted for many years in the interest of popular education and progressive agriculture. In 1852 he engaged in the manufacture of Atkins' self-raking reaper and mower, was one of the promoters of the Galena & Chicago Union and the Illinois Central Railways, and wrote a volume entitled, "Chicago: Past, Present and Future," published in 1870. Died, in Chicago, Sept. 26, 1874.

WULFF, Henry, ex-State Treasurer, was born in Meldorf, Germany, August 24, 1854; came to Chicago in 1863, and began his political career as a Trustee of the town of Jefferson. In 1866 he was elected County Clerk of Cook County, and re-elected in 1890; in 1894 became the Republican nominee for State Treasurer, receiving, at the November election of that year, the unprecedented plurality of 133,427 votes over his Democratic opponent.

WYANET, a town of Bureau County, at the intersection of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railways, 7 miles southwest of Princeton. Population (1890), 670; (1900), 902.

WYLIE, (Rev.) Samuel, domestic missionary, born in Ireland and came to America in boyhood; was educated at the University of Pennsylvania and the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and ordained in 1818. Soon after this he came west as a domestic missionary and, in 1820, became pastor of a church at Sparta, Ill., where he remained until his death, March 20, 1872, after a pastorate of 52 years. During his pastorate the church sent out a dozen colonies to form new church organizations elsewhere. He is described as able, eloquent and scholarly.

WYMAN, (Col.) John B., soldier, was born in Massachusetts, July 12, 1817, and educated in the schools of that State until 14 years of age, when he became a clerk in a clothing store in his native town of Shrewsbury, later being associated with mercantile establishments in Cincinnati, and again in his native State. From 1846 to 1850 he was employed successively as a clerk in the car and machine shops at Springfield, Mass., then as Superintendent of Construction, and, later, as conductor on the New York & New Haven Railroad, finally, in 1850, becoming Superintendent of the Connecticut River Railroad. In 1852 he entered the service of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, assisting in the survey and construction of the line under Col. R. B. Mason, the Chief Engineer, and finally becoming Assistant Superintendent of the Northern Division. He was one of the original proprietors of the town of Amboy, in Lee County, and its first Mayor, also serving a second term. Having a fondness for military affairs, he was usually connected with some military organization—while in Cincinnati being attached to a company, of which Prof. O. M. Mitchell, the celebrated astronomer (afterwards Major-General Mitchell), was Captain. After coming to Illinois he became Captain of the Chicago Light Guards. Having left the employ of the Railroad in 1858, he was in private business at Amboy at the beginning of the Civil War in 1861. As Assistant-Adjutant General, by appointment of Governor Yates, he rendered valuable service in the early weeks of the war in securing arms from Jefferson Barracks and in the organization of the three-months' regiments. Then, having organized the Thirteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry—the first organized in the State for the three years' service—he was commissioned its Colonel, and, in July following, entered upon the duty of guarding the railroad lines in Southwest Missouri and Arkansas. The following year his regiment was attached to General Sherman's command in the first campaign against Vicksburg. On the second day of the Battle of Chickasaw Bayou, he fell mortally wounded, dying on the field, Dec. 28, 1862. Colonel Wyman was one of the most accomplished and promising of the volunteer soldiers sent to the field from Illinois, of whom so many were former employes of the Illinois Central Railroad.

WYOMING, a town of Stark County, 31 miles north-northwest from Peoria, at the junction of the Peoria branch Rock Island & Pacific and the Rushville branch of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway; has two high schools, churches, two banks, flour mills, water-works, machine shop, and two weekly newspapers. Coal is mined here. Pop. (1890), 1,116; (1900), 1,277.

XENIA, a village of Clay County, on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad, 87 miles east of St. Louis. Population (1900), 800.

YATES CITY, a village of Knox County, at the junction of the Peoria Division of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, with the Rushville branch, 23 miles southeast of Galesburg. The town has banks, a coal mine, telephone exchange, school, churches and a newspaper. Pop. (1890), 687; (1900), 650.

YATES, Henry, pioneer, was born in Caroline County, Va., Oct. 29, 1786—being a grand-nephew of Chief Justice John Marshall; removed to Fayette County, Ky., where he located and laid out the town of Warsaw, which afterwards became the county-seat of Gallatin County. In 1831 he removed to Sangamon County, Ill., and, in 1832, settled at the site of the present town of Berlin, which he laid out the following year, also laying out the town of New Berlin, a few years later, on the line of the Wabash Railway. He was father of Gov. Richard Yates. Died, Sept. 13, 1865.—Henry (Yates), Jr., son of the preceding, was born at Berlin, Ill., March 7, 1835; engaged in merchandising at New Berlin; in 1862, raised a company of volunteers for the One Hundred and Sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry, was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel and brevetted Colonel and Brigadier-General. He was accidentally shot in 1863, and suffered sun-stroke at Little Rock, from which he never fully recovered. Died, August 3, 1871.

YATES, Richard, former Governor and United States Senator, was born at Warsaw, Ky., Jan. 18, 1815, of English descent. In 1831 he accompanied his father to Illinois, the family settling first at Springfield and later at Berlin, Sangamon County. He soon after entered Illinois College, from which he graduated in 1835, and subsequently read law with Col. John J. Hardin, at Jacksonville, which thereafter became his home. In 1842 he was elected Representative in the General Assembly from Morgan County, and was re-elected in 1844, and again in 1848. In 1850 he was a candidate for Congress from the Seventh District and elected over Maj. Thomas L. Harris, the previous incumbent, being the only Whig Representative in the Thirty-second Congress from Illinois. Two years later he was re-elected over John Calhoun, but was defeated, in 1854, by his old opponent, Harris. He was one of the most vigorous opponents of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill in the Thirty-third Congress, and an early participant in the movement for the organization of the Republican party to resist the further extension of slavery, being a prominent speaker, on the same platform with Lincoln, before the first Republican State Convention held at Bloomington, in May, 1856, and serving as one of the Vice-Presidents of that body. In 1860 he was elected to the executive chair on the ticket headed by Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency, and, by his energetic support of the National administration in its measures for the suppression of the Rebellion, won the sobriquet of "the Illinois War-Governor." In 1865 he was elected United States Senator, serving until 1871. He died suddenly, at St. Louis, Nov. 27, 1873, while returning from Arkansas, whither he had gone, as a United States Commissioner, by appointment of President Grant, to inspect a land-subsidy railroad. He was a man of rare ability, earnestness of purpose and extraordinary personal magnetism, as well as of a lofty order of patriotism. His faults were those of a nature generous, impulsive and warm-hearted.

YORKVILLE, the county-seat of Kendall County, on Fox River and Streator Division of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 12 miles southwest of Aurora; on interurban electric line; has water-power, electric lights, a bank, churches and weekly newspaper. Pop. (1890) 375; (1900), 413.

YOUNG, Brigham, Mormon leader, was born at Whittingham, Vt., June 1, 1801, joined the Mormons in 1831 and, the next year, became associated with Joseph Smith, at Kirtland, Ohio, and, in 1835, an "apostle." He accompanied a considerable body of that sect to Independence, Mo., but was driven out with them in 1837, settling for a short time at Quincy, Ill., but later removing to Nauvoo, of which he was one of the founders. On the assassination of Smith, in 1844, he became the successor of the latter, as head of the Mormon Church, and, the following year, headed the exodus from Illinois, which finally resulted in the Mormon settlement in Utah. His subsequent career there, where he was appointed Governor by President Fillmore, and, for a time, successfully defied national authority, is a matter of national rather than State history. He remained at the head of the Mormon Church until his death at Salt Lake City, August 29, 1877.

YOUNG, Richard Montgomery, United States Senator, was born in Kentucky in 1796, studied law and removed to Jonesboro, Ill., where he was admitted to the bar in 1817; served in the Second

General Assembly (1820-22) as Representative from Union County; was a Circuit Judge, 1825-27; Presidential Elector in 1828; Circuit Judge again, 1829-37; elected United States Senator in 1837 as successor to W. L. D. Ewing, serving until 1843, when he was commissioned Justice of the Supreme Court, but resigned in 1847 to become Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington. During the session of 1850-51, he served as Clerk of the National House of Representatives. Died, in an insane asylum, in Washington, in 1853.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, first permanently organized at Chicago, in 1858, although desultory movements of a kindred character had previously been started at Peoria, Quincy, Chicago and Springfield, some as early as 1854. From 1858 to 1872, various associations were formed at different points throughout the State, which were entirely independent of each other. The first effort looking to union and mutual aid, was made in 1872, when Robert Weidensall, on behalf of the International Committee, called a convention, to meet at Bloomington, November 6-9. State conventions have been held annually since 1872. In that of 1875, steps were taken looking to the appointment of a State Secretary, and, in 1876, Charles M. Morton assumed the office. Much evangelistic work was done, and new associations formed, the total number reported at the Champaign Convention, in 1877, being sixty-two. After one year's work Mr. Morton resigned the secretaryship, the office remaining vacant for three years. The question of the appointment of a successor was discussed at the Decatur Convention in 1879, and, in April, 1880, I. B. Brown was made State Secretary, and has occupied the position to the present time (1899). At the date of his appointment the official figures showed sixteen associations in Illinois, with a total membership of 2,443, and property valued at $126,500, including building funds, the associations at Chicago and Aurora owning buildings. Thirteen officers were employed, none of them being in Chicago. Since 1880 the work has steadily grown, so that five Assistant State Secretaries are now employed. In 1886, a plan for arranging the State work under departmental administration was devised, but not put in operation until 1890. The present six departments of supervision are: General Supervision, in charge of the State Secretary and his Assistants; railroad and city work; counties and towns; work among students, corresponding membership department, and office work. The two last named are under one executive head, but each of the others in charge of an Assistant Secretary, who is responsible for its development. The entire work is under the supervision of a State Executive Committee of twenty-seven members, one third of whom are elected annually. Willis H. Herrick of Chicago has been its chairman for several years. This body is appointed by a State convention composed of delegates from the local Associations. Of these there were, in October, 1898, 116, with a membership of 15,888. The value of the property owned was $2,500,000. Twenty-two occupy their own buildings, of which five are for railroad men and one for students. Weekly gatherings for young men numbered 248, and there are now representatives or correspondents in 665 communities where no organization has been effected. Scientific physical culture is made a feature by 40 associations, and educational work has been largely developed. The enrollment in evening classes, during 1898-99, was 978. The building of the Chicago branch (erected in 1893) is the finest of its class in the world. Recently a successful association has been formed among coal miners, and another among the first grade boys of the Illinois State Reformatory, while an extensive work has been conducted at the camps of the Illinois National Guard.

ZANE, Charles S., lawyer and jurist, was born in Cumberland County, N. J., March 2, 1831, of English and New England stock. At the age of 19 he emigrated to Sangamon County, Ill., for a time working on a farm and at brick-making. From 1852 to '55 he attended McKendree College, but did not graduate, and, on leaving college, engaged in teaching, at the same time reading law. In 1857 he was admitted to the bar and commenced practice at Springfield. The following year he was elected City Attorney. He had for partners, at different times, William H. Herndon (once a partner of Abraham Lincoln) and Senator Shelby M. Cullom. In 1873 he was elected a Judge of the Circuit Court for the Fifth Judicial Circuit, and was re-elected in 1879. In 1883 President Arthur appointed him Chief Justice of Utah, where he has since resided, though superseded by the appointment of a successor by President Cleveland. At the first State election in Utah, held in November, 1895, he was chosen one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the new Commonwealth, but was defeated for re-election, by his Democratic opponent, in 1898.

SUPPLEMENT.

The following matter, received too late for insertion in the body of this work, is added in the form of a supplement.

COGHLAN, (Capt.) Joseph Bullock, naval officer, was born in Kentucky, and, at the age of 15 years, came to Illinois, living on a farm for a time near Carlyle, in Clinton County. In 1860 he was appointed by his uncle, Hon. Philip B. Fouke—then a Representative in Congress from the Belleville District—to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, graduating in 1863, and being promoted through the successive grades of Ensign, Master, Lieutenant, Lieutenant-Commander, and Commander, and serving upon various vessels until Nov. 18, 1893, when he was commissioned Captain and, in 1897, assigned to the command of the battleship Raleigh, on the Asiatic Station. He was thus connected with Admiral Dewey's squadron at the beginning of the Spanish-American War, and took a conspicuous and brilliant part in the affair in Manila Bay, on May 1, 1898, which resulted in the destruction of the Spanish fleet. Captain Coghlan's connection with subsequent events in the Philippines was in the highest degree creditable to himself and the country. His vessel (the Raleigh) was the first of Admiral Dewey's squadron to return home, coming by way of the Suez Canal, in the summer of 1899, he and his crew receiving an immense ovation on their arrival in New York harbor.

CRANE, (Rev.) James Lyons, clergyman, army chaplain, was born at Mt. Eaton, Wayne County, Ohio, August 30, 1823, united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Cincinnati in 1841, and, coming to Edgar County, Illinois, in 1842, attended a seminary at Paris some three years. He joined the Illinois Conference in 1846, and was assigned to the Danville circuit, afterwards presiding over charges at Grandview, Hillsboro, Alton, Jacksonville, and Springfield—at the last two points being stationed two or more times, besides serving as Presiding Elder of the Paris, Danville, and Springfield Districts. The importance of the stations which he filled during his itinerant career served as evidence of his recognized ability and popularity as a preacher.

In July, 1861, he was appointed Chaplain of the Twenty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers, at that time commanded by Ulysses S. Grant as Colonel, and, although he remained with the regiment only a few months, the friendship then established between him and the future commander of the armies of the Union lasted through their lives. This was shown by his appointment by President Grant in 1869, to the position of Postmaster of the city of Springfield, which came to him as a personal compliment, being reappointed four years afterwards and continuing in office eight years. After retiring from the Springfield postoffice, he occupied charges at Island Grove and Shelbyville, his death occurring at the latter place, July 29, 1879, as the result of an attack of paralysis some two weeks previous. Mr. Crane was married in 1847 to Miss Elizabeth Mayo, daughter of Col. J. Mayo—a prominent citizen of Edgar County, at an early day—his wife surviving him some twenty years. Rev. Charles A. Crane and Rev. Frank Crane, pastors of prominent Methodist churches in Boston and Chicago, are sons of the subject of this sketch.

DAWES, Charles Gates, Comptroller of the Treasury, was born at Marietta, Ohio, August 27, 1865; graduated from Marietta College in 1884, and from the Cincinnati Law School in 1886; worked at civil engineering during his vacations, finally becoming Chief Engineer of the Toledo & Ohio Railroad. Between 1887 and 1894 he was engaged in the practice of law at Lincoln, Neb., but afterwards became interested in the gas business in various cities, including Evanston, Ill., which became his home. In 1896 he took a leading part in securing instructions by the Republican State Convention at Springfield in favor of the nomination of Mr. McKinley for the Presidency, and during the succeeding campaign served as a member of the National Republican Committee for the State of Illinois. Soon after the accession of President McKinley, he was appointed Comptroller of the Treasury, a position which he now holds. Mr. Dawes is the son of R. B. Dawes, a former Congressman from Ohio, and the great-grandson of Manassah Cutler, who was an influential factor in the early history of the Northwest Territory, and has been credited with exerting a strong influence in shaping and securing the adoption of the Ordinance of 1787.

DISTIN, (Col.) William L., former Department Commander of Grand Army of the Republic for the State of Illinois, was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 9, 1843, his father being of English descent, while his maternal grandfather was a Colonel of the Polish Lancers in the army of the first Napoleon, who, after the exile of his leader, came to America, settling in Indiana. The father of the subject of this sketch settled at Keokuk, Iowa, where the son grew to manhood and in February, 1863, enlisted as a private in the Seventeenth Iowa Infantry, having been twice rejected previously on account of physical ailment. Soon after enlistment he was detailed for provost-marshal duty, but later took part with his regiment in the campaign in Alabama. He served for a time in the Fifteenth Army Corps, under Gen. John A. Logan, was subsequently detailed for duty on the Staff of General Raum, and participated in the battles of Resaca and Tilton, Ga. Having been captured in the latter, he was imprisoned successively at Jacksonville (Ga.), Montgomery, Savannah, and finally at Andersonville. From the latter he succeeded in effecting his escape, but was recaptured and returned to that famous prison-pen. Having escaped a second time by assuming the name of a dead man and bribing the guard, he was again captured and imprisoned at various points in Mississippi until exchanged about the time of the assassination of President Lincoln. He was then so weakened by his long confinement and scanty fare that he had to be carried on board the steamer on a stretcher. At this time he narrowly escaped being on board the steamer Sultana, which was blown up below Cairo, with 2,100 soldiers on board, a large proportion of whom lost their lives. After being mustered out at Davenport, Iowa, June 28, 1865, he was employed for a time on the Des Moines Valley Railroad, and as a messenger and route agent of the United States Express Company. In 1872 he established himself in business in Quincy, Ill., in which he proved very successful. Here he became prominent in local Grand Army circles, and, in 1890, was unanimously elected Commander of the Department of Illinois. Previous to this he had been an officer of the Illinois National Guard, and served as Aid-de-Camp, with the rank of Colonel, on the staff of Governors Hamilton, Oglesby and Fifer. In 1897 Colonel Distin was appointed by President McKinley Surveyor-General for the Territory of Alaska, a position which (1899) he still holds.

DUMMER, Henry E., lawyer, was born at Hallowell, Maine, April 9, 1808, was educated in Bowdoin College, graduating there in the class of 1827, after which he took a course in law at Cambridge Law School, and was soon after admitted to the bar. Then, having spent some two years in his native State, in 1832 he removed to Illinois, settling first in Springfield, where he remained six years, being for a part of the time a partner of John T. Stuart, who afterwards became the first partner in law of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Dummer had a brother, Richard William Dummer, who had preceded him to Illinois, living for a time in Jacksonville. In 1838 he removed to Beardstown, Cass County, which continued to be his home for more than a quarter of a century. During his residence there he served as Alderman, City Attorney and Judge of Probate for Cass County; also represented Cass County in the Constitutional Convention of 1847, and, in 1860, was elected State Senator in the Twenty-second General Assembly, serving four years. Mr. Dummer was an earnest Republican, and served that party as a delegate for the State-at-large to the Convention of 1864, at Baltimore, which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency a second time. In 1864 he removed to Jacksonville, and for the next year was the law partner of David A. Smith, until the death of the latter in 1865. In the summer of 1878 Mr. Dummer went to Mackinac, Mich., in search of health, but died there August 12 of that year.

ECKELS, James H., ex-Comptroller of the Currency, was born of Scotch-Irish parentage at Princeton, Ill., Nov. 23, 1858, was educated in the common schools and the high school of his native town, graduated from the Law School at Albany, N. Y., in 1881, and the following year began practice at Ottawa, Ill. Here he continued in active practice until 1893, when he was appointed by President Cleveland Comptroller of the Currency, serving until May 1, 1898, when he resigned to accept the presidency of the Commercial National Bank of Chicago. Mr. Eckels manifested such distinguished ability in the discharge of his duties as Comptroller that he received the notable compliment of being retained in office by a Republican administration more than a year after the retirement of President Cleveland, while his selection for a place at the head of one of the leading banking institutions of Chicago was a no less marked recognition of his abilities as a financier. He was a Delegate from the Eleventh District to the National Democratic Convention at Chicago in 1892, and represented the same district in the Gold Democratic Convention at Indianapolis in 1896, and assisted in framing the platform there adopted—which indicated his views on the financial questions involved in the campaign of that year.

FIELD, Daniel, early merchant, was born in Jefferson County, Kentucky, Nov. 30, 1790, and settled at Golconda, Ill., in 1818, dying there in 1855. He was a man of great enterprise, engaged in merchandising, and became a large landholder, farmer and stock-grower, and an extensive shipper of stock and produce to lower Mississippi markets. He married Elizabeth Dailey of Charleston, Ind., and raised a large family of children, one of whom, Philip D., became Sheriff, while another, John, was County Judge of Pope County. His daughter, Maria, married Gen. Green B. Raum, who became prominent as a soldier during the Civil War and, later, as a member of Congress and Commissioner of Internal Revenue and Pension Commissioner in Washington.

FIELD, Green B., member of a pioneer family, was born within the present limits of the State of Indiana in 1787, served as a Lieutenant in the War of 1812, was married in Bourbon County, Kentucky, to Miss Mary E. Cogswell, the daughter of Dr. Joseph Cogswell, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, and, in 1817, removed to Pope County, Illinois, where he laid off the town of Golconda, which became the county-seat. He served as a Representative from Pope County in the First General Assembly (1818-20), and was the father of Juliet C. Field, who became the wife of John Raum; of Edna Field, the wife of Dr. Tarlton Dunn, and of Green B. Field, who was a Lieutenant in Third Regiment Illinois Volunteers during the Mexican War. Mr. Field was the grandfather of Gen. Green B. Raum, mentioned in the preceding paragraph. He died of yellow fever in Louisiana in 1823.

GALE, Stephen Francis, first Chicago bookseller and a railway promoter, was born at Exeter, N. H., March 8, 1812; at 15 years of age became clerk in a leading book-store in Boston; came to Chicago in 1835, and soon afterwards opened the first book and stationery establishment in that city, which, in after years, gained an extensive trade. In 1842 the firm of S. F.

Gale & Co. was organized, but Mr. Gale, having become head of the Chicago Fire Department, retired from business in 1845. As early as 1846 he was associated with Wm. B. Ogden and John B. Turner in the steps then being taken to revive the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad (now a part of the Chicago & Northwestern), and, in conjunction with these gentlemen, became responsible for the means to purchase the charter and assets of the road from the Eastern bondholders. Later, he engaged in the construction of the branch road from Turner Junction to Aurora, became President of the line and extended it to Mendota to connect with the Illinois Central at that Point. These roads afterwards became a part of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy line. A number of years ago Mr. Gale returned to his old home in New Hampshire, where he has since resided.

HAY, John, early settler, came to the region of Kaskaskia between 1790 and 1800, and became a prominent citizen of St. Clair County. He was selected as a member of the First Legislative Council of Indiana Territory for St. Clair County in 1805. In 1809 he was appointed Clerk of the Common Pleas Court of St. Clair County, and was continued in office after the organization of the State Government, serving until his death at Belleville in 1845.

HAYS, John, pioneer settler of Northwest Territory, was a native of New York, who came to Cahokia, in the "Illinois Country," in 1793, and lived there the remainder of his life. His early life had been spent in the fur-trade about Mackinac, in the Lake of the Woods region and about the sources of the Mississippi. During the War of 1812 he was able to furnish Governor Edwards valuable information in reference to the Indians in the Northwest. He filled the office of Postmaster at Cahokia for a number of years, and was Sheriff of St. Clair County from 1798 to 1818.

MOULTON, (Col.) George M., soldier and building contractor, was born at Readsburg, Vt., March 15, 1851, came early in life to Chicago, and was educated in the schools of that city. By profession he is a contractor and builder, the firm of which he is a member having been connected with the construction of a number of large buildings, including some extensive grain elevators. Colonel Moulton became a member of the Second Regiment Illinois National Guard in June, 1884, being elected to the office of Major, which he retained until January, 1893, when he was appointed Inspector of Rifle Practice on the staff of General Wheeler. A year later he was commissioned Colonel of the regiment, a position which he occupied at the time of the call by the President for troops to serve in the Spanish-American War in April, 1898. He promptly answered the call, and was sworn into the United States service at the head of his regiment early in May. The regiment was almost immediately ordered to Jacksonville, Fla., remaining there and at Savannah, Ga., until early in December, when it was transferred to Havana, Cuba. Here he was soon after appointed Chief of Police for the city of Havana, remaining in office until the middle of January, 1899, when he returned to his regiment, then stationed at Camp Columbia, near the city of Havana. In the latter part of March he returned with his regiment to Augusta, Ga., where it was mustered out, April 26, 1899, one year from the date of its arrival at Springfield. After leaving the service Colonel Moulton resumed his business as a contractor.

SHERMAN, Lawrence Y., legislator and Speaker of the Forty-first General Assembly, was born in Miami County, Ohio, Nov. 6, 1858; at 3 years of age came to Illinois, his parents settling at Industry, McDonough County. When he had reached the age of 19 years he went to Jasper County, where he grew to manhood, received his education in the common schools and in the law department of McKendree College, graduating from the latter, and, in 1881, located at Macomb, McDonough County. Here he began his career by driving a team upon the street in order to accumulate means enabling him to devote his entire attention to his chosen profession of law. He soon took an active interest in politics, was elected County Judge in 1886, and, at the expiration of his term, formed a partnership with George D. Tunncliffe and D. G. Tunncliffe, ex-Justice of the Supreme Court. In 1891 he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative in the General Assembly, but withdrew to prevent a split in the party; was nominated and elected in 1896, and re-elected in 1898, and, at the succeeding session of the Forty-first General Assembly, was nominated by the Republican caucus and elected Speaker, as he was again of the Forty-second in 1901.

VINYARD, Phillip, early legislator, was born in Pennsylvania in 1800, came to Illinois at an early day, and settled in Pope County, which he represented in the lower branch of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth General Assemblies. He married Miss Matilda McCoy, the daughter of a prominent Illinois pioneer, and served as Sheriff of Pope County for a number of years. Died, at Golconda, in 1863.

SUPPLEMENT NO. II.

BLACK HAWK WAR, THE. The episode known in history under the name of "The Black Hawk War," was the most formidable conflict between the whites and Indians, as well as the most far-reaching in its results, that ever occurred upon the soil of Illinois. It takes its name from the Indian Chief, of the Sac tribe, Black Hawk (Indian name, Makatai Meshekiakiak, meaning "Black Sparrow Hawk"), who was the leader of the hostile Indian band and a principal factor in the struggle. Black Hawk had been an ally of the British during the War of 1812-15, served with Tecumseh when the latter fell at the battle of the Thames in 1813, and, after the war, continued to maintain friendly relations with his "British father." The outbreak in Illinois had its origin in the construction put upon the treaty negotiated by Gen. William Henry Harrison with the Sac and Fox Indians on behalf of the United States Government, November 3, 1804, under which the Indians transferred to the Government nearly 15,000,000 acres of land comprising the region lying between the Wisconsin River on the north, Fox River of Illinois on the east and southeast, and the Mississippi on the west, for which the Government agreed to pay to the confederated tribes less than $2,500 in goods and the insignificant sum of $1,000 per annum in perpetuity. While the validity of the treaty was denied on the part of the Indians on the ground that it had originally been entered into by their chiefs under duress, while held as prisoners under a charge of murder at Jefferson Barracks, during which they had been kept in a state of constant intoxication, it had been repeatedly reaffirmed by parts or all of the tribe, especially in 1815, in 1816, in 1822 and in 1823, and finally recognized by Black Hawk himself in 1831. The part of the treaty of 1804 which was the immediate cause of the disagreement was that which stipulated that, so long as the lands ceded under it remained the property of the United States (that is, should not be transferred to private owners), "the Indians belonging to the said tribes shall enjoy the privilege of living or hunting upon them." Although these lands had not been put upon the market, or even surveyed, as "squatters" multiplied in this region little respect was paid to the treaty rights of the Indians, particularly with reference to those localities where, by reason of fertility of the soil or some other natural advantage, the Indians had established something like permanent homes and introduced a sort of crude cultivation. This was especially the case with reference to the Sac village of "Saukenuk" on the north bank of Rock River near its mouth, where the Indians, when not absent on the chase, had lived for over a century, had cultivated fields of corn and vegetables and had buried their dead. In the early part of the last century, it is estimated that some five hundred families had been accustomed to congregate here, making it the largest Indian village in the West. As early as 1823 the encroachments of squatters on the rights claimed by the Indians under the treaty of 1804 began; their fields were taken possession of by the intruders, their lodges burned and their women and children whipped and driven away during the absence of the men on their annual hunts. The dangers resulting from these conflicts led Governor Edwards, as early as 1828, to demand of the General Government the expulsion of the Indians from Illinois, which resulted in an order from President Jackson in 1829 for their removal west of the Mississippi. On application of Col. George Davenport, a trader of much influence with the Indians, the time was extended to April 1, 1830. During the preceding year Colonel Davenport and the firm of Davenport and Farnham bought from the United States Government most of the lands on Rock River occupied by Black Hawk's band, with the intention, as has been claimed, of permitting the Indians to remain. This was not so understood by Black Hawk, who was greatly incensed, although Davenport offered to take other lands from the Government in exchange or cancel the sale—an arrangement to which President Jackson would not consent. On their return in the spring of 1830, the Indians found whites in possession of their village. Prevented from cultivating their fields, and their annual hunt proving unsuccessful, the following winter proved for them one of great hardship. Black Hawk, having made a visit to his "British father" (the British Agent) at Malden, Canada, claimed to have received words of sympathy and encouragement, which induced him to determine to regain possession of their fields. In this he was encouraged by Neapope, his second in command, and by assurance of support from White Cloud, a half Sac and half Winnebago—known also as "The Prophet"—whose village (Prophet's Town) was some forty miles from the mouth of Rock River, and through whom Black Hawk claimed to have received promises of aid in guns, ammunition and provisions from the British. The reappearance of Black Hawk's band in the vicinity of his old haunts, in the spring of 1831, produced a wild panic among the frontier settlers. Messages were hurried to Governor Reynolds, who had succeeded Governor Edwards in December previous, appealing for protection against the savages. The Governor issued a call for 706 volunteers "to remove the band of Sac Indians" at Rock Island beyond the Mississippi. Although Gen. E. P. Gaines of the regular army, commanding the military district, thought the regulars sufficiently strong to cope with the situation, the Governor's proclamation was responded to by more than twice the number called for. The volunteers assembled early in June, 1831, at Beardstown, the place of rendezvous named in the call, and having been organized into two regiments under command of Col. James D. Henry and Col. Daniel Lieb, with a spy battalion under Gen. Joseph Duncan, marched across the country and, after effecting a junction with General Gaines' regulars, appeared before Black Hawk's village on the 25th of June. In the meantime General Gaines, having learned that the Pottawatomies, Winnebagos and Kickapoos had promised to join the Sacs in their uprising, asked the assistance of the battalion of mounted men previously offered by Governor Reynolds. The combined armies amounted to 2,500 men, while the fighting force of the Indians was 300. Finding himself overwhelmingly outnumbered, Black Hawk withdrew under cover of night to the west side of the Mississippi. After burning the village, General Gaines notified Black Hawk of his intention to pursue and attack his band, which had the effect to bring the fugitive chief to the General's headquarters, where, on June 30, a new treaty was entered into by which he bound himself and his people to remain west of the Mississippi unless permitted to return by the United States. This ended the campaign, and the volunteers returned to their homes, although the affair had produced an intense excitement along the whole frontier, and involved a heavy expense.

The next winter was spent by Black Hawk and his band on the site of old Fort Madison, in the present State of Iowa. Dissatisfied and humiliated by his repulse of the previous year, in disregard of his pledge to General Gaines, on April 6, 1832, at the head of 500 warriors and their families, he again crossed the Mississippi at Yellow Banks about the site of the present city of Oquawka, fifty miles below Rock Island, with the intention, as claimed, if not permitted to stop at his old village, to proceed to the Prophet's Town and raise a crop with the Winnebagoes. Here he was met by The Prophet with renewed assurances of aid from the Winnebagoes, which was still further strengthened by promises from the British Agent received through a visit by Neapope to Malden the previous autumn. An incident of this invasion was the effective warning given to the white settlers by Shabona, a friendly Ottawa chief, which probably had the effect to prevent a widespread massacre. Besides the towns of Galena and Chicago, the settlements in Illinois north of Fort Clark (Peoria) were limited to some thirty families on Bureau Creek with a few cabins at Hennepin, Peru, LaSalle, Ottawa, Indian Creek, Dixon, Kellogg's Grove, Apple Creek, and a few other points. Gen. Henry Atkinson, commanding the regulars at Fort Armstrong (Rock Island), having learned of the arrival of Black Hawk a week after he crossed the Mississippi, at once took steps to notify Governor Reynolds of the situation with a requisition for an adequate force of militia to cooperate with the regulars. Under date of April 16, 1832, the Governor issued his call for "a strong detachment of militia" to meet by April 22, Beardstown again being named as a place of rendezvous. The call resulted in the assembling of a force which was organized into four regiments under command of Cols. John DeWitt, Jacob Fry, John Thomas and Samuel M. Thompson, together with a spy battalion under Maj. James D. Henry, an old battalion under Maj. Thomas James and a foot battalion under Maj. Thomas Long. To these were subsequently added two independent battalions of mounted men, under command of Majors Isaiah Stillman and David Bailey, which were finally consolidated as the Fifth Regiment under command of Col. James Johnson. The organization of the first four regiments at Beardstown was completed by April 27, and the force under command of Brigadier-General Whiteside (but accompanied by Governor Reynolds, who was allowed pay as Major General by the General Government) began its march to Fort Armstrong, arriving there May 7 and being mustered into the United States service. Among others accompanying the expedition who were then, or afterwards became, noted citizens of the State, were Vital Jarrot, Adjutant-General; Cyrus Edwards, Ordnance Officer; Murray McConnel, Staff Officer, and Abraham Lincoln, Captain of a company of volunteers from Sangamon County in the Fourth Regiment. Col. Zachary Taylor, then commander of a regiment of regulars, arrived at Fort Armstrong about the same time with reinforcements from Fort Leavenworth and Fort Crawford. The total force of militia amounted to 1,935 men, and of regulars about 1,000. An interesting story is told concerning a speech delivered to the volunteers by Colonel Taylor about this time. After reminding them of their duty to obey an order promptly, the future hero of the Mexican War added: "The safety of all depends upon the obedience and courage of all. You are citizen soldiers; some of you may fill high offices, or even be Presidents some day—but not if you refuse to do your duty. Forward, march!" A curious commentary upon this speech is furnished in the fact that, while Taylor himself afterwards became President, at least one of his hearers—a volunteer who probably then had no aspiration to that distinction (Abraham Lincoln)—reached the same position during the most dramatic period in the nation's history.

Two days after the arrival at Fort Armstrong, the advance up Rock River began, the main force of the volunteers proceeding by land under General Whiteside, while General Atkinson, with 400 regular and 300 volunteer foot soldiers, proceeded by boat, carrying with him the artillery, provisions and bulk of the baggage. Whiteside, advancing by the east bank of the river, was the first to arrive at the Prophet's Town, which, finding deserted, he pushed on to Dixon's Ferry (now Dixon), where he arrived May 12. Here he found the independent battalions of Stillman and Bailey with ammunition and supplies of which Whiteside stood in need. The mounted battalions under command of Major Stillman, having been sent forward by Whiteside as a scouting party, left Dixon on the 13th and, on the afternoon of the next day, went into camp in a strong position near the mouth of Sycamore Creek. As soon discovered, Black Hawk was in camp at the same time, as he afterwards claimed, with about forty of his braves, on Sycamore Creek, three miles distant, while the greater part of his band were encamped with the more war-like faction of the Pottawatomies some seven miles farther north on the Kishwaukee River. As claimed by Black Hawk in his autobiography, having been disappointed in his expectation of forming an alliance with the Winnebagoes and the Pottawatomies, he had at this juncture determined to return to the west side of the Mississippi. Hearing of the arrival of Stillman's command in the vicinity, and taking it for granted that this was the whole of Atkinson's command, he sent out three of his young men with a white flag, to arrange a parley and convey to Atkinson his offer to meet the latter in council. These were captured by some of Stillman's band regardless of their flag of truce, while a party of five other braves who followed to observe the treatment received by the flagbearers, were attacked and two of their number killed, the other three escaping to their camp. Black Hawk learning the fate of his truce party was aroused to the fiercest indignation. Tearing the flag to pieces with which he had intended to go into council with the whites, and appealing to his followers to avenge the murder of their comrades, he prepared for the attack. The rangers numbered 275 men, while Black Hawk's band has been estimated at less than forty. As the rangers caught sight of the Indians, they rushed forward in pell-mell fashion. Retiring behind a fringe of bushes, the Indians awaited the attack. As the rangers approached, Black Hawk and his party rose up with a war whoop, at the same time opening fire on their assailants. The further history of the affair was as much of a disgrace to Stillman's command as had been their desecration of the flag of truce. Thrown into panic by their reception by Black Hawk's little band, the rangers turned and, without firing a shot, began the retreat, dashing through their own camp and abandoning everything, which fell into the hands of the Indians. An attempt was made by one or two officers and a few of their men to check the retreat, but without success, the bulk of the fugitives continuing their mad rush for safety through the night until they reached Dixon, twenty-five miles distant, while many never stopped until they reached their homes, forty or fifty miles distant. The casualties to the rangers amounted to eleven killed and two wounded, while the Indian loss consisted of two spies and one of the flag-bearers, treacherously killed near Stillman's camp. This ill-starred affair, which has passed into history as "Stillman's defeat," produced a general panic along the frontier by inducing an exaggerated estimate of the strength of the Indian force, while it led Black Hawk to form a poor opinion of the courage of the white troops at the same time that it led to an exalted estimate of the prowess of his own little band—thus becoming an important factor in prolonging the war and in the bloody massacres which followed. Whiteside, with his force of 1,400 men, advanced to the scene of the defeat the next day and buried the dead, while on the 19th, Atkinson, with his force of regulars, proceeded up Rock River, leaving the remnant of Stillman's force to guard the wounded and supplies at Dixon. No sooner had he left than the demoralized fugitives of a few days before deserted their post for their homes, compelling Atkinson to return for the protection of his base of supplies, while Whiteside was ordered to follow the trail of Black Hawk who had started up the Kishwaukee for the swamps about Lake Koshkonong, nearly west of Milwaukee within the present State of Wisconsin.

At this point the really active stage of the campaign began. Black Hawk, leaving the women and children of his band in the fastnesses of the swamps, divided his followers into two bands, retaining about 200 under his own command, while the notorious half-breed, Mike Girty, led a band of one hundred renegade Pottawatomies. Returning to the vicinity of Rock Island, he gathered some recruits from the Pottawatomies and Winnebagoes, and the work of rapine and massacre among the frontier settlers began. One of the most notable of these was the Indian Creek Massacre in LaSalle County, about twelve miles north of Ottawa, on May 21, when sixteen persons were killed at the home of William Davis, and two young girls—Sylvia and Rachel Hall, aged, respectively, 17 and 15 years—were carried away captives. The girls were subsequently released, having been ransomed for $2,000 in horses and trinkets through a Winnebago Chief and surrendered to sub-agent Henry Gratiot. Great as was the emergency at this juncture, the volunteers began to manifest evidence of dissatisfaction and, claiming that they had served out their term of enlistment, refused to follow the Indians into the swamps of Wisconsin. As the result of a council of war, the volunteers were ordered to Ottawa, where they were mustered out on May 28, by Lieut. Robt. Anderson, afterwards General Anderson of Fort Sumter fame. Meanwhile Governor Reynolds had issued his call (with that of 1831 the third,) for 2,000 men to serve during the war. Gen. Winfield Scott was also ordered from the East with 1,000 regulars although, owing to cholera breaking out among the troops, they did not arrive in time to take part in the campaign. The rank and file of volunteers responding under the new call was 3,148, with recruits and regulars then in Illinois making an army of 4,000. Pending the arrival of the troops under the new call, and to meet an immediate emergency, 300 men were enlisted from the disbanded rangers for a period of twenty days, and organized into a regiment under command of Col. Jacob Fry, with James D. Henry as Lieutenant Colonel and John Thomas as Major. Among those who enlisted as privates in this regiment were Brig.-Gen. Whiteside and Capt. Abraham Lincoln. A regiment of five companies, numbering 195 men, from Putnam County under command of Col. John Strawn, and another of eight companies from Vermilion County under Col. Isaac R. Moore, were organized and assigned to guard duty for a period of twenty days.

The new volunteers were rendezvoused at Fort Wilbourn, nearly opposite Peru, June 15, and organized into three brigades, each consisting of three regiments and a spy battalion. The First Brigade (915 strong) was placed under command of Brig.-Gen. Alexander Posey, the Second under Gen. Milton K. Alexander, and the third under Gen. James D. Henry. Others who served as officers in some of these several organizations, and afterwards became prominent in State history, were Lieut.-Col. Gurdon S. Hubbard of the Vermilion County regiment; John A. McClelland, on the staff of General Posey; Maj. John Dement; then State Treasurer; Stinson H. Anderson, afterwards Lieutenant-Governor; Lieut.-Gov. Zadoc Casey, Maj. William McHenry; Sidney Breese (afterwards Judge of the State Supreme Court and United States Senator); W. L. D. Ewing (as Major of a spy battalion, afterwards United States Senator and State Auditor); Alexander W. Jenkins (afterwards Lieutenant-Governor); James W. Semple (afterwards United States Senator); and William Weatherford (afterwards a Colonel in the Mexican War), and many more. Of the Illinois troops, Posey's brigade was assigned to the duty of dispersing the Indians between Galena and Rock River. Alexander's sent to intercept Black Hawk up the Rock River, while Henry's remained with Gen. Atkinson at Dixon. During the next two weeks engagements of a more or less serious character were had on the Pecatonica on the southern border of the present State of Wisconsin; at Apple River Fort fourteen miles east of Galena, which was successfully defended against a force under Black Hawk himself, and at Kellogg's Grove the next day (June 25), when the same band ambushed Maj. Dement's spy battalion, and came near inflicting a defeat, which was prevented by Dement's coolness and the timely arrival of reinforcements. In the latter engagement the whites lost five killed besides 47 horses which had been tethered outside their lines, the loss of the Indians being sixteen killed. Skirmishes also occurred with varying results, at Plum River Fort, Burr Oak Grove, Sinsiniwa and Blue Mounds—the last two within the present State of Wisconsin.

Believing the bulk of the Indians to be camped in the vicinity of Lake Koshkonong, General Atkinson left Dixon June 27 with a combined force of regulars and volunteers numbering 2,600 men—the volunteers being under the command of General Henry. They reached the outlet of the Lake July 2, but found no Indians, being joined two days later by General Alexander's brigade, and on the 6th by Gen. Posey's. From here the commands of Generals Henry and Alexander were sent for supplies to Fort Winnebago, at the Portage of the Wisconsin; Colonel Ewing, with the Second Regiment of Posey's brigade descending Rock River to Dixon, Posey with the remainder, going to Fort Hamilton for the protection of settlers in the lead-mining region, while Atkinson, advancing with the regulars up Lake Koshkonong, began the erection of temporary fortifications on Bark River near the site of the present village of Fort Atkinson. At Fort Winnebago Alexander and Henry obtained evidence of the actual location of Black Hawk's camp through Pierre Poquette, a half-breed scout and trader in the employ of the American Fur Company, whom they employed with a number of Winnebagos to act as guides. From this point Alexander's command returned to General Atkinson's headquarters, carrying with them twelve days' provisions for the main army, while General Henry's (600 strong), with Major Dodge's battalion numbering 150, with an equal quantity of supplies for themselves, started under the guidance of Poquette and his Winnebago aids to find Black Hawk's camp. Arriving on the 18th at the Winnebago village on Rock River where Black Hawk and his band had been located, their camp was found deserted, the Winnebagoes insisting that they had gone to Cranberry (now Horicon) Lake, a half-day's march up the river. Messengers were immediately dispatched to Atkinson's headquarters, thirty-five miles distant, to apprise him of this fact. When they had proceeded about half the distance, they struck a broad, fresh trail, which proved to be that of Black Hawk's band headed westward toward the Mississippi. The guide having deserted them in order to warn his tribesmen that further dissembling to deceive the whites as to the whereabouts of the Sacs was useless, the messengers were compelled to follow him to General Henry's camp. The discovery produced the wildest enthusiasm among the volunteers, and from this time-events followed in rapid succession. Leaving as far as possible all incumbrances behind, the pursuit of the fugitives was begun without delay, the troops wading through swamps sometimes in water to their armpits. Soon evidence of the character of the flight the Indians were making, in the shape of exhausted horses, blankets, and camp equipage cast aside along the trail, began to appear, and straggling bands of Winnebagoes, who had now begun to desert Black Hawk, gave information that the Indians were only a few miles in advance. On the evening of the 20th of July Henry's forces encamped at "The Four Lakes," the present site of the city of Madison, Wis., Black Hawk's force lying in ambush the same night seven or eight miles distant. During the next afternoon the rear-guard of the Indians under Neapope was overtaken and skirmishing continued until the bluffs of the Wisconsin were reached. Black Hawk's avowed object was to protect the passage of the main body of his people across the stream. The loss of the Indians in these skirmishes has been estimated at 40 to 68, while Black Hawk claimed that it was only six killed, the loss of the whites being one killed and eight wounded. During the night Black Hawk succeeded in placing a considerable number of the women and children and old men on a raft and in canoes obtained from the Winnebagoes, and sent them down the river, believing that, as non-combatants, they would be permitted by the regulars to pass Fort Crawford, at the mouth of the Wisconsin, undisturbed. In this he was mistaken. A force sent from the fort under Colonel Ritner to intercept them, fired mercilessly upon the helpless fugitives, killing fifteen of their number, while about fifty were drowned and thirty-two women and children made prisoners. The remainder, escaping into the woods, with few exceptions died from starvation and exposure, or were massacred by their enemies, the Menominees, acting under white officers. During the night after the battle of Wisconsin Heights, a loud, shrill voice of some one speaking in an unknown tongue was heard in the direction where Black Hawk's band was supposed to be. This caused something of a panic in Henry's camp, as it was supposed to come from some one giving orders for an attack. It was afterwards learned that the speaker was Neapope speaking in the Winnebago language in the hope that he might be heard by Poquette and the Winnebago guides. He was describing the helpless condition of his people, claiming that the war had been forced upon them, that their women and children were starving, and that, if permitted peacefully to recross the Mississippi, they would give no further trouble. Unfortunately Poquette and the other guides had left for Fort Winnebago, so that no one was there to translate Neapope's appeal and it failed of its object.

General Henry's force having discovered that the Indians had escaped—Black Hawk heading with the bulk of his warriors towards the Mississippi—spent the next and day night on the field, but on the following day (July 23) started to meet General Atkinson, who had, in the meantime, been notified of the pursuit. The head of their columns met at Blue Mounds, the same evening, a complete junction between the regulars and the volunteers being effected at Helena, a deserted village on the Wisconsin. Here by using the logs of the deserted cabins for rafts, the army crossed the river on the 27th and the 28th and the pursuit of black Hawk's fugitive band was renewed. Evidence of their famishing condition was found in the trees stripped of bark for food, the carcasses of dead ponies, with here and there the dead body of an Indian.

On August 1 Black Hawk's depleted and famishing band reached the Mississippi two miles below the mouth of the Bad Ax, an insignificant stream, and immediately began trying to cross the river; but having only two or three canoes, the work was slow. About the middle of the afternoon the steam transport, "Warrior," appeared on the scene, having on board a score of regulars and volunteers, returning from a visit to the village of the Sioux Chief, Wabasha, to notify him that his old enemies, the Sacs, were headed in that direction. Black Hawk raised the white flag in token of surrender but the officer in command claiming that he feared treachery or an ambush, demanded that Black Hawk should come on board. This he was unable to do, as he had no canoe. After waiting a few minutes a murderous fire of canister and musketry was opened from the steamer on the few Indians on shore, who made such feeble resistance as they were able. The result was the killing of one white man and twenty-three Indians. After this exploit the "Warrior" proceeded to Prairie du Chien, twelve or fifteen miles distant, for fuel. During the night a few more of the Indians crossed the river, but Black Hawk, seeing the hopelessness of further resistance, accompanied by the Prophet, and taking with him a party of ten warriors and thirty-five squaws and children, fled in the direction of "the dells" of the Wisconsin. On the morning of the 2d General Atkinson arrived within four or five miles of the Sac position. Disposing his forces with the regulars and Colonel Dodge's rangers in the center, the brigades of Posey and Alexander on the right and Henry's on the left, he began the pursuit, but was drawn by the Indian decoys up the river from the place where the main body of the Indians were trying to cross the stream. This had the effect of leaving General Henry in the rear practically without orders, but it became the means of making his command the prime factors in the climax which followed. Some of the spies attached to Henry's command having accidentally discovered the trail of the main body of the fugitives, he began the pursuit without waiting for orders and soon found himself engaged with some 300 savages, a force nearly equal to his own. It was here that the only thing like a regular battle occurred. The savages fought with the fury of despair, while Henry's force was no doubt nerved to greater deeds of courage by the insult which they conceived had been put upon them by General Atkinson. Atkinson, hearing the battle in progress and discovering that he was being led off on a false scent, soon joined Henry's force with his main army, and the steamer "Warrior," arriving from Prairie du Chien, opened a fire of canister upon the pent-up Indians. The battle soon degenerated into a massacre. In the course of the three hours through which it lasted, it is estimated that 150 Indians were killed by fire from the troops, an equal number of both sexes and all ages drowned while attempting to cross the river or by being driven into it, while about 50 (chiefly women and children) were made prisoners. The loss of the whites was 20 killed and 13 wounded. When the "battle" was nearing its close it is said that Black Hawk, having repented the abandonment of his people, returned within sight of the battle-ground, but seeing the slaughter in progress which he was powerless to avert, he turned and, with a howl of rage and horror, fled into the forest. About 300 Indians (mostly non-combatants) succeeded in crossing the river in a condition of exhaustion from hunger and fatigue, but these were set upon by the Sioux under Chief Wabasha, through the suggestion and agency of General Atkinson, and nearly one-half their number exterminated. Of the remainder many died from wounds and exhaustion, while still others perished while attempting to reach Keokuk's band who had refused to join in Black Hawk's desperate venture. Of one thousand who crossed to the east side of the river with Black Hawk in April, it is estimated that not more than 150 survived the tragic events of the next four months.

General Scott, having arrived at Prairie du Chien early in August, assumed command and, on August 15, mustered out the volunteers at Dixon, Ill. After witnessing the bloody climax at the Bad Axe of his ill-starred invasion, Black Hawk fled to the dells of the Wisconsin, where he and the Prophet surrendered themselves to the Winnebagoes, by whom they were delivered to the Indian Agent at Prairie du Chien. Having been taken to Fort Armstrong on September 21, he there signed a treaty of peace. Later he was taken to Jefferson Barracks (near St. Louis) in the custody of Jefferson Davis, then a Lieutenant in the regular army, where he was held a captive during the following winter. The connection of Davis with the Black Hawk War, mentioned by many historians, seems to have been confined to this act. In April, 1833, with the Prophet and Neapope, he was taken to Washington and then to Fortress Monroe, where they were detained as prisoners of war until June 4, when they were released. Black Hawk, after being taken to many principal cities in order to impress him with the strength of the American nation, was brought to Fort Armstrong, and there committed to the guardianship of his rival, Keokuk, but survived this humiliation only a few years, dying on a small reservation set apart for him in Davis County, Iowa, October 3, 1838.

Such is the story of the Black Hawk War, the most notable struggle with the aborigines in Illinois history. At its beginning both the State and national authorities were grossly misled by an exaggerated estimate of the strength of Black Hawk's force as to numbers and his plans for recovering the site of his old village, while

Black Hawk had conceived a low estimate of the numbers and courage of his white enemies, especially after the Stillman defeat. The cost of the war to the State and nation in money has been estimated at $2,000,000, and in sacrifice of life on both sides at not less than 1,200. The loss of life by the troops in irregular skirmishes, and in massacres of settlers by the Indians, aggregated about 250, while an equal number of regulars perished from a visitation of cholera at the various stations within the district affected by the war, especially at Detroit, Chicago, Fort Armstrong and Galena. Yet it is the judgment of later historians that nearly all this sacrifice of life and treasure might have been avoided, but for a series of blunders due to the blind or unscrupulous policy of officials or interloping squatters upon lands which the Indians had occupied under the treaty of 1804. A conspicuous blunder—to call it by no harsher name—was the violation by Stillman's command of the rules of civilized warfare in the attack made upon Black Hawk's messengers, sent under flag of truce to request a conference to settle terms under which he might return to the west side of the Mississippi—an act which resulted in a humiliating and disgraceful defeat for its authors and proved the first step in actual war. Another misfortune was the failure to understand Neapope's appeal for peace and permission for his people to pass beyond the Mississippi the night after the battle of Wisconsin Heights; and the third and most inexcusable blunder of all, was the refusal of the officer in command of the "Warrior" to respect Black Hawk's flag of truce and request for a conference just before the bloody massacre which has gone into history under the name of the "battle of the Bad Axe." Either of these events, properly availed of, would have prevented much of the butchery of that bloody episode which has left a stain upon the page of history, although this statement implies no disposition to detract from the patriotism and courage of some of the leading actors upon whom the responsibility was placed of protecting the frontier settler from outrage and massacre. One of the features of the war was the bitter jealousy engendered by the unwise policy pursued by General Atkinson towards some of the volunteers—especially the treatment of General James D. Henry, who, although subjected to repeated slights and insults, is regarded by Governor Ford and others as the real hero of the war. Too brave a soldier to shirk any responsibility and too modest to exploit his own deeds, he felt deeply the studied purpose of his superior to ignore him in the conduct of the campaign—a purpose which, as in the affair at the Bad Axe, was defeated by accident or by General Henry's soldierly sagacity and attention to duty, although he gave out to the public no utterance of complaint. Broken in health by the hardships and exposures of the campaign, he went South soon after the war and died of consumption, unknown and almost alone, in the city of New Orleans, less two years later.

Aside from contemporaneous newspaper accounts, monographs, and manuscripts on file in public libraries relating to this epoch in State history, the most comprehensive records of the Black Hawk War are to be found in the "Life of Black Hawk," dictated by himself (1834); Wakefield's "History of the War between the United States and the Sac and Fox Nations" (1834); Drake's "Life of Black Hawk" (1854); Ford's "History of Illinois" (1854); Reynolds' "Pioneer History of Illinois; and "My Own Times"; Davidson & Stuve's and Moses' "Histories of Illinois; Blanchard's "The Northwest and Chicago"; Armstrong's "The Sauks and the Black Hawk War," and Reuben G. Thwaite's "Story of the Black Hawk War" (1892.)

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, a village in the southern part of Cook County, twenty-eight miles south of the central part of Chicago, on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern and the Michigan Central Railroads; is located in an agricultural region, but has some manufactures as well as good schools—also has one newspaper. Population (1900), 5,100.

GRANITE, a city of Madison County, located five miles north of St. Louis on the lines of the Burlington; the Chicago & Alton; Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis; Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis (Illinois), and the Wabash Railways. It is adjacent to the Merchants' Terminal Bridge across the Mississippi and has considerable manufacturing and grain-storage business; has two newspapers. Population (1900), 3,122.

HARLEM, a village of Proviso Township, Cook County, and suburb of Chicago, on the line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, nine miles west of the terminal station at Chicago. Harlem originally embraced the village of Oak Park, now a part of the city of Chicago, but, in 1884, was set off and incorporated as a village. Considerable manufacturing is done here. Population (1900), 4,085.

HARVEY, a city of Cook County, and an important manufacturing suburb of the city of Chicago, three miles southwest of the southern city limits. It is on the line of the Illinois Central and the Chicago & Grand Trunk Railways, and has extensive manufactures of harvesting, street and steam railway machinery, gasoline stoves, enameled ware, etc.; also has one newspaper and ample school facilities. Population (1900), 5,395.

IOWA CENTRAL RAILWAY, a railway line having its principal termini at Peoria, Ill., and Manly Junction, nine miles north of Mason City, Iowa, with several lateral branches making connections with Centerville, Newton, State Center, Story City, Algona and Northwood in the latter State. The total length of line owned, leased and operated by the Company, officially reported in 1899, was 508.98 miles, of which 89.76 miles—including 3.5 miles trackage facilities on the Peoria & Pekin Union between Iowa Junction and Peoria—were in Illinois. The Illinois division extends from Keithsburg—where it enters the State at the crossing of the Mississippi—to Peoria.—(HISTORY.) The Iowa Central Railway Company was originally chartered as the Central Railroad Company of Iowa and the road completed in October, 1871. In 1873 it passed into the hands of a receiver and, on June 4, 1879, was reorganized under the name of the Central Iowa Railway Company. In May, 1883, this company purchased the Peoria & Farmington Railroad, which was incorporated into the main line, but defaulted and passed into the hands of a receiver December 1, 1886; the line was sold under foreclosure in 1887 and 1888, to the Iowa Central Railway Company, which had effected a new organization on the basis of $11,000,000 common stock, $6,000,000 preferred stock and $1,379,625 temporary debt certificates convertible into preferred stock, and $7,500,000 first mortgage bonds. The transaction was completed, the receiver discharged and the road turned over to the new company, May 15, 1889.—(FINANCIAL.) The total capitalization of the road in 1899 was $21,337,558, of which $14,159,180 was in stock, $6,650,095 in bonds and $528,283 in other forms of indebtedness. The total earnings and income of the line in Illinois for the same year were $532,568, and the expenditures $566,333.

SPARTA, a city of Randolph County, situated on the Centralia & Chester and the Mobile & Ohio Railroads, twenty miles northwest of Chester and fifty miles southeast of St. Louis. It has a number of manufacturing establishments, including plow factories, a woolen mill, a cannery and creameries; also has natural gas. The first settler was James McClurken, from South Carolina, who settled here in 1818. He was joined by James Armour a few years later, who bought land of McClurken, and together they laid out a village, which first received the name of Columbus. About the same time Robert G. Shannon, who had been conducting a mercantile business in the vicinity, located in the town and became the first Postmaster. In 1839 the name of the town was changed to Sparta. Mr. McClurken, its earliest settler, appears to have been a man of considerable enterprise, as he is credited with having built the first cotton gin in this vicinity, besides still later, erecting saw and flour mills and a woolen mill. Sparta was incorporated as a village in 1837 and in 1859 as a city. A colony of members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church (Covenanters or "Seceders") established at Eden, a beautiful site about a mile from Sparta, about 1822, cut an important figure in the history of the latter place, as it became the means of attracting here an industrious and thriving population. At a later period it became one of the most important stations of the "Underground Railroad" (so called) in Illinois (which see). The population of Sparta (1890) was 1,979; (1900), 2,041.

TOLUCA, a city of Marshall County situated on the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, 18 miles southwest of Streator. It is in the center of a rich agricultural district; has the usual church and educational facilities of cities of its rank, and two newspapers. Population (1900), 2,629.

WEST HAMMOND, a village situated in the northeast corner of Thornton Township, Cook County, adjacent to Hammond, Ind., from which it is separated by the Indiana State line. It is on the Michigan Central Railroad, one mile south of the Chicago City limits, and has convenient access to several other lines, including the Chicago & Erie; New York, Chicago & St. Louis, and Western Indiana Railroads. Like its Indiana neighbor, it is a manufacturing center of much importance, was incorporated as a village in 1892, and has grown rapidly within the last few years, having a population, according to the census of 1900, of 2,935.

HISTORY OF BOONE COUNTY

CHAPTER I.

BEFORE WHITE SETTLEMENT.

NATURAL SURFACE CONDITIONS—WOODS AND PRAIRIES—PRINCIPAL PRAIRIES IN BOONE COUNTY—RIVERS AND CREEKS—THE KISHWAUKEE, PISCASAW AND BEAVER CREEK—OTHER SMALLER STREAMS—THE DAYS OF INDIAN OCCUPATION—THE BLACK HAWK WAR—SCOTT'S ARMY TRAIL THROUGH BOONE COUNTY—CHIEF BIG THUNDER—INDIAN RELICS—FIRST WHITE SETTLERS—A VISIT BY GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT.

Boone County, it is unnecessary to state, is part of the great prairie region of Illinois. Most of the early settlers, coming as they did from New York, Pennsylvania, and New England, were accustomed to hilly country and the sight of a farm which was perfectly level, or level enough to cultivate with ease at all parts, was new to them. By the time Boone County commenced to build up, however, descriptions of the Rock River Valley and the Kishwaukee Country had been brought back by General Scott's soldiers and others engaged in the Black Hawk War, as well as the earliest settlers, and the pioneers into this country had a very fair idea of what the land was to be. The very early settlers, however, in the southern part of the state, express in the journals kept by them and afterwards printed, their astonishment at the meaning of the word prairies. They seem to have expected them to be what we now call "plains," a vast, treeless, practically level country. To the contrary, the Illinois prairies are interspersed with beautiful groves and considerable woodland and instead of being entirely level the land is diversified by gentle elevations and valleys in which small creeks run, and slopes in all directions. The principal prairies in Boone County are South Prairie in Flora, Squaw Prairie lying north of Belvidere, Bonus Prairie in Bonus Township, and Round Prairie and Long Prairie in LeRoy, and East Prairie. Generally speaking, the four northern townships are more hilly than the four southern. In the early days, in Caledonia and the adjoining region, there were large tracts covered with scrub oaks and other small timber called "barrens." There were, of course, in the county, many portions covered with trees which have since been put into farm land.

RIVERS AND CREEKS.

The chief river in Boone County is the Kishwaukee, which rises in McHenry County and flows in what is, leaving out its crooks and turns, substantially an easterly and westerly direction across the county, leaving about one-third of the area of the county south of the river. Generally speaking its current is not swift, but in the spring freshets it rises very rapidly and spreads out to a considerable width. The name of the river is claimed to be from an Indian word meaning "place of the sycamores," although some have disputed this derivation and it has never been very positively settled. The Kishwaukee flows into the Rock River near the southern part of Winnebago County and that river in its turn finds its way to the Mississippi near Rock Island. The next most important stream is the Piscasaw, which flows through the southern part of Boone Township and the western part of Bonus and meets the Kishwaukee a little east of Belvidere. The Little Thunder Mill depends on this stream for its water supply and the Big Thunder Mill has one end of its race-way in the Piscasaw. This stream was quite important to the early settlers of Bonus. The third stream in importance is Beaver Creek, which rises in LeRoy Township and flows across that township, Boone, one corner of Caledonia, and Belvidere, and meets the Kishwaukee near the eastern edge of the county. The Beaver, while ordinarily a rather small and placid stream, often rises rapidly after a heavy rain and gives considerable trouble in keeping the roads and bridges in order. The other streams of any importance are Mosquito Creek and Coon Creek, which flow through Spring Township and into the Kishwaukee not far from the Methodist Camp Grounds, also Spring Brook which flows across the north Rockford road and into the Kishwaukee west of Belvidere.

INDIANS.

While Boone County must have been from an early time the home of many Indians, no very important villages appear to have been located here and no massacres are recorded in history as having occurred within its limits. Boone County seems to have been more or less on the boundary line of the territory held by various tribes. In the very early days it was possibly inhabited by the Illinois, which was the tribe that had possession of much of the territory to the south. It may also have been more or less visited by Winnebagos who occupied the territory northwest of the Rock River. The principal tribe, however, connected with the history of Boone County, is the Pottawatomies. This tribe was one of the three subdivisions of the Algonquins. Its general characteristic was that the members were tall, fierce and haughty. They originated in Canada, or the northern part of Michigan and Wisconsin, and in course of time moved southward, finally occupying much of the northern part of Illinois. By a treaty made by the Pottawatomies and the United States Government, the tribe agreed to give up their lands and retire beyond the Mississippi. When the first settlers arrived in Boone County in 1835, the Indians were getting ready, in a leisurely manner, to leave. Most of them disliked very much to go and Indian agents of considerable tact and experience were employed to get them together and see to it that they did move.

When the Towners and Dotys came there was a band of Indians encamped where the fair grounds now are located, on their way to Chicago prior to their removal beyond the Mississippi. Mrs. Towner was of the opinion that the wife of one of the leading Indians was in reality a white woman, as she seemed to speak English quite well, but the squaw herself was very reticent. From the earlier "History of Boone County" we include the following incident concerning Mrs. Towner's bravery:

At one time Mrs. Towner was left alone with her children in their house, which was situated in the midst of the village. One of the Indians had become intoxicated, and in that condition entered the house, and declared he had come to kill her. She replied that she would kill him. One of their little girls, aged about ten years, said to her mother that a gun in the house was loaded. At this the Indian jerked a knife from his belt that looked, as Mrs. Towner expressed it, as long as a sword. By some means, she ejected him from the house, and closed and barred the door with a long, heavy wooden bench, determined to "hold the fort." The door was made of basswood puncheons, and between the pieces there were cracks large enough to admit a man's hand. Being ejected by a pale-faced squaw only added fury to the Indian's rage, and he made thrust after thrust through cracks of the door with his knife. Finding he could effect nothing that way, he next tried to gain admission by climbing upon the roof and descending through the mud and stick chimney. But here again he was foiled by the brave woman within, who ripped open a straw bed, and threw part of the contents on the smouldering embers on the hearth. This raised a smoke that drove the Indian to the ground. By this time the white men belonging to the house had been alarmed, and came to her rescue. The Indian was taken away, and soon after the whole tribe removed west of the "Mississippi." It is but due to the memory of the Pottawatomes then encamped here to say that they repudiated Mrs. Towner's drunken and savage visitor as a "bad Indian," and one who did not belong to their band—an interloper who had fastened himself to them.

BLACK HAWK WAR.

Near the point where the Rock River empties into the Mississippi was an Indian village, the principal seat of the Sac tribe, and here in 1767, was born a child who was called Black Hawk. Although not a chief by birth, he soon became the natural leader of his red skinned associates. He was a natural politician and demagogue, and soon became the recognized chief of his tribe. In the War of 1812 he and his followers sided with England, but afterward settled down to a life of comparative ease, for an Indian, lasting until about 1830. At this time the white settlers in the vicinity of Rock Island began to encroach upon the lands occupied by Black Hawk's people. There was some question as to the ownership, both whites and Indians claiming title, and as the benign remedy of a court of chancery was not appreciated, the belligerents proceeded to fight it out in their own primitive way, without giving the lawyers a chance. Returning from an extended hunting expedition, Black Hawk found his town in possession of white squatters. After some preliminary skirmishing, on April 6, 1832, Black Hawk and about five hundred warriors, with their squaws and children, crossed the Mississippi from the place where they had temporarily camped, and invaded Illinois. The Pottawatomes, restrained by Shaulbena, remained neutral, but the Sacs and Foxes cast their lot with the leaders, aided secretly by the Winnebagos. Then followed a scattering but bloody warfare, extending through all the region of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin. General Henry Atkinson was placed in command of the white forces, and sixteen hundred soldiers gathered, upon Governor Reynold's proclamation, at Beardstown, and from there proceeded to the seat of hostilities.

Bloody engagements, or massacres, took place at Stillman's Grove; at Indian Creek, near Ottawa; at Apple River and Kellogg's Grove, near Galena, and several other places. So far as is known, no important engagement took place in this county. As the fighting became more fierce and bloody, the authorities resolved upon more vigorous action. A new levy was made, consisting of about four thousand men, mostly volunteers, and General Winfield Scott was ordered by the federal government to proceed from the East, via the Great Lakes, with a regiment of regulars. Pending his arrival, however, General Atkinson—an excellent soldier—retained command, and was able to practically end the war before the arrival of the regulars. After a pursuit entailing terrible hardship, Black Hawk and his warriors were brought to bay near Madison, Wis., and defeated with great loss to them. Afterward, at Bad Axe River, near Prairie du Chien, Wis., the remnant of the Indian forces was almost exterminated, their chief and about one hundred and fifty of his followers alone remaining.

During these operations General Scott and his men had been sailing down the lakes toward Chicago, arriving July 10, 1832. But a foe more deadly and appalling than the red men had appeared. The dreaded cholera was then raging through the lake region, and many of the soldiers, like so many of Chicago's settlers, fell its victims. General Scott himself, with great bravery and skill, attended the sick and encouraged the survivors. It was thought wise to get into the higher and less infected district inland, and the army began its march by slow stages across the state.

SCOTT'S ARMY TRAIL.

The route taken by Scott's Army is a point about which there is considerable diversity of opinion. Authorities differ as to whether the soldiers marched through Boone County, and if so what route they took, where they crossed the river and where they went after they crossed. The records in the war department show that on July 29, 1833, General Scott's headquarters were at Chicago, on August 1st and 2nd they were at Dixon's Ferry and on August 23d they were at Fort Armstrong near Rock Island. The army trail is reported in so many sections and in such diverse directions that it is probable either that some of the traditions are wrong, or that there were two or more different divisions of Scott's Army which followed different routes, or that one trail was the route of the volunteers. The writer was informed by an early settler of Du Page County that the army passed through that county in the vicinity of Wayne and crossed the Fox River near South Elgin. Mr. Jenner, who was a perfect storehouse of early history, stated that General Scott came through Belvidere on the stage in the fall of 1838 and stopped at Towner's Hotel, on the site of which now stands D. Derthick's house. In the evening Mr. Jenner, who played the clarinet, Henry Green, who played the flute, Lovejoy, who played the fiddle, and John Sheldon, the drummer, went up to serenade the General. General Scott came out in front and, in talking about the war, he stated that when he crossed the bridge he could see the place where they forded the Kishwaukee with the army. He stated that the banks were still broken down where they took their artillery across. Other old settlers claim that the crossing must have been near the condensing factory, where the water is more shallow and the banks less steep. There is a street up in Fairview called Scott's Army, but the writer had understood that this name was given more to commemorate the event than to locate the exact place where the army marched. Some of the early Scotch settlers in Caledonia claim that the Army marched north through that township, and that the marks made by the wheels of the wagons and artillery were visible for a long time in that vicinity. Mr. Thurston, in his book about early Rockford, gives a line of march across a part of Winnebago County. Another early writer of Bureau County tells where the army trail crossed that county. If the reader will take the map of Northern Illinois he will see how difficult it is to connect these different traditions, and the writer will not attempt to state definitely where Scott's Army did go, but merely to suggest that it is possible that one part of it went across Cook, Du Page, Kane, DeKalb, Lee, Bureau, Henry, and Rock Island Counties to Fort Armstrong on the Mississippi, while another detachment or another army went a more northerly route through Belvidere to Prairie du Chien, or somewhere in that part of Wisconsin.

Capt. Humphrey, who has given the subject a great deal of study, is of the opinion that the trail through Belvidere was made by the volunteer army on its way to Wisconsin, and not by the regulars.

BIG THUNDER.

So much has been written about Big Thunder and his grave on the mound that the writer hesitates to record here any facts concerning the same, for fear they will be the mere repetition of an old story. However, in order to preserve them in print for the people who come after us, the facts will be briefly related. As to who Big Thunder was, or what he did in his life time, no one seems to know very much about. He was an Indian chief who must have lived in this region about the time of the Black Hawk War. The fact that most of the Indians here at that time were Pottawatomies would indicate that he belonged to that tribe, but a very early resident of Chicago told the author that he did not think that was the case. He may have been a Winnebago. Big Thunder's grave was on the Mound near the court house, when the first settlers came here. The location was somewhere between where the present flag staff now stands and the court house steps. It consisted of a sort of pen or coop built of puncheon or split logs, and was, perhaps, some six or seven feet wide and about as long as an ordinary grave. Inside the enclosure Big Thunder was seated on a sort of a chair cut from a log or otherwise constructed of wood. He was wrapped in his blanket and had about him various weapons. Devillo Hale had a knife which he stated was Big Thunder's scalping knife, which Hale had taken when a small boy from the coop. The stage coach between Chicago and Galena used to stop at Doty's to change horses and mail, and often there was a delay of half an hour or more. The coop on the mound, with its bleached white sides, was very noticeable, as practically no house came between, and the passengers often strolled up there to visit this curiosity. One by one they carried the bones away for souvenirs and, according to Mr. Jenner, the young men of the town used to carry up loads of sheep and other bones to keep the travelers provided with souvenirs. It is also claimed, as a joke on Mr. Doty, that in times when chewing tobacco was scarce, he was accustomed to go up and borrow some from Big Thunder, which the chief's friends had placed there for his spirit to chew during the seven years which must elapse before it entered the Happy Hunting Grounds. Mr. Jenner stated to the writer that Pearson B. Crosby had taken Big Thunder's head before Jenner came to Belvidere in 1838, and that Mr. Crosby gave it to Dr. Goodhue, a physician of great ability who never lived here permanently, but was prominently identified in the early history of Chicago, Belvidere, and Rockford. Afterwards the skull came into the possession of a phrenologist, Tew.

Deville Hale stated to the writer that he came to Belvidere in 1836 and that there were only three buildings there at that time: Doty's tavern, Towner's tavern, and Alexander Neely's store where Dempsey's Grocery now is. Mr. Hale stated that Big Thunder's coop was made of split trees about six or eight inches in diameter, driven into the ground; that it was about six feet high with no top, of circular shape and about six feet in diameter. Inside was a chair made of split ash splinters, with a back. In the chair was Big Thunder, looking somewhat like an Egyptian mummy. He was facing Squaw Prairie and a hole was cut in the coop on a level with his head, so that he could see when his tribe had a great battle which was expected, when Big Thunder would come to life and take command again. Mr. Hale stated that the flag pole is now on the exact site of where Big Thunder sat. He said that the old chief had whiskey and tobacco in his lap and a bow and arrow near by: that Big Thunder was a Winnebago chief and died before 1836, and nobody seemed to know anything about what he was in his life time.

Mr. Thurston, of Rockford, in his recollections, states that he saw Big Thunder's coop in the summer of 1838: that the body sat on the ground facing south and was surrounded by palisades about six feet high. He also stated that the head had been carried off by Dr. Goodhue, but the ribs, legs and arms were in position and portions of the flesh had dried and were of the color of jerked meat.

A considerable number of arrow heads are found in the county while plowing. The writer has before him several donated to the Historical Society by Gus Peterson, who found them on the Scougall farm and the John Stapleton farm. They are of several different colors of flint, whitish, reddish, brownish, and gray. One of the prominent farmers west of town found a curious silver cross on the banks of the Kishwaukee, which may have been of Indian manufacture. A number of stone axes are also turned up in the fields. Mr. Jenner stated that when he came to Belvidere there were the remains of an old cemetery on the river bank, back of where the Opera House now stands. By digging there, they found a number of solid silver beads which had on them the maker's name, being made in New York, and traded to the Indians.

CHAPTER II.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

FORMER GEOGRAPHICAL RELATIONS OF BOONE COUNTY

—IT SUCCESSIVELY CONSTITUTES A PART OF ST. CLAIR, MADISON, CRAWFORD, CLARK, PIKE, FULTON, PUTNAM, LA SALLE AND WINNEBAGO COUNTIES—BOONE COUNTY ORGANIZED BY ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE, MARCH 4, 1837—A SECOND DEFINITION OF BOUNDARY LINES IN 1839—FIRST ELECTION IN BOONE COUNTY TERRITORY—SOME EARLY SETTLERS—FIRST BOONE COUNTY ELECTION AND OFFICERS CHOSEN—EARLY TAVERNS AND LEGAL RATES OF FARE—PRECINCT ORGANIZATIONS—ORIGIN OF COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP NAMES.

The early history of Boone County as a part of the State of Illinois, and previous to the formation of the state, is fully treated of in the foregoing volume and we will only touch briefly on those matters. The territory now forming our county was first included in an organized county in 1801, when practically all the northern three-fourths, or so, of the state was included in St. Clair County, as a part of the territory of Indiana. In 1813 the northern part of the state nearly as far south as the base line, was named Madison County, being a part of Illinois territory. In 1814 Madison County was divided by a line running north and south about the center and this part of the state was included in Edwards County. In 1816 all the northern part of Edwards County was named Crawford County. In 1819 the northern part of Crawford County was called Clark County. In 1821 that part of the state north of the Illinois and Kankakee rivers was formed into Pike County. In 1823 the limits of Pike County were greatly reduced and what is now Boone County was attached to Fulton County for legal purposes but did not form the part of any county. In 1825 all of the northeast part of the state, including Boone, was formed into Putnam County. In 1831, this territory became again attached to another county for legal purposes, that county being LaSalle. On January 16, 1836, Winnebago County was formed, including all of what is now Boone and Winnebago Counties and part of Stephenson County, and bounded as follows:

"Commencing at the southeast corner of township number 43, range number 4, east of the third principal meridian, and running thence west to the said meridian; thence north along the line of said meridian to the southeast corner of township number 46, in range number 11, east of the fourth principal meridian; thence north along said dividing line to the northern boundary line of the state; thence east along said boundary line to the northeast corner of range number 4, east of the third principal meridian; thence south to the place of beginning."

On March 4, 1837, an act was passed cutting off the county of Boone and making its boundaries as follows: "Be it enacted by the people of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That all that tract of country beginning at the northeast corner of township 46 north, range 4 east; thence south with the line dividing ranges 4 and 5 east, to the southwest corner of township 43 north; thence west on said line to the southeast corner of Winnebago County; thence north to the place of beginning on the north boundary of the state, shall form a county to be called Boone, in honor of Col. Daniel Boone, the first settler of the State of Kentucky." By following these boundaries on a map it will be seen that there is a mistake in the description, whereby only a right angled triangle composed of the southeasterly half of the present county, was included. The next winter another act was passed defining the boundaries of the county as follows:

"That the boundary lines of Boone County shall be as follows, to-wit: Beginning at the north-east corner of Winnebago County, and running thence east on the state line to the northeast corner of township 46 north, range 5, east of the third principal meridian; thence south on the range line to line dividing townships 42 and 43 north; thence west on said line of Winnebago to the place of beginning; Provided, however, that if a majority of the legal voters residing within the limits of townships 43, 44, 45, and 46, north, of range 5 east of the third principal meridian, shall on the first Monday in August next, vote against the above named townships forming a part of the County of Boone, then the line dividing ranges 4 and 5 east shall continue to form the eastern boundary of Boone County. Approved March 2, 1839." The voters in that part of the territory comprised in range 5, preferred to remain in McHenry County. Afterward the mile strip was taken from Winnebago and added to Boone, and our county then assumed the form it now bears. It consists of eight townships, being arranged in four tiers of two townships each. The county is twenty-four miles from north to south and twelve miles from east to west. On the north the boundary is the state line between Illinois and Wisconsin, and the sections in that vicinity are fractional and quite irregular in shape.

During the first part of our history the territory now composing Boone County was a part of Winnebago County. The law creating Winnebago County required that in order to create a county under it and hold an election for county officials, a majority of the voters must petition the circuit judge, and the proposed county must have in it not less than 350 white inhabitants. Dr. Daniel H. Whitney, of Belvidere, prepared the necessary papers and Judge Thomas H. Ford thereupon issued an order, dated July 15, 1836, for an election to be held at the house of Daniel S. Haight, at Rockford, on the first Monday of August, 1836. At this election two of the officers elected came from what is now Boone County, Simon P. Doty being elected one of the three county commissioners, and Daniel H. Whitney, recorder. One hundred and twenty votes were cast at the election and among the Boone County names are the following: David Caswell, Geo. Caswell, Livingston Robins, Alfred Shattuck, Ira Haskins, Simon P. Doty, Milton S. Mason, Timothy Caswell, Chas. H. Payne, Mason Sherburne, John K. Townner, Oliver Robins, Jacob Keyt, Harlyn Shattuck, Daniel H. Whitney, E. A. Nixon, A. C. Gleason, and Chas. Sayres.

At the first session of this court held August 3, 1836, all of the present Boone County except Manchester Township, was formed into a precinct called Belvidere and Manchester was made a part of the Rock River precinct, most of which was composed of land now in Winnebago County. At the first presidential election, 1836, Belvidere Township only polled 23 votes.

THE MILE STRIP.

As Boone County was first formed, all the sections forming a strip one mile in width running up the western edge of the present county were a part of Winnebago County. On February 28, 1843, an act was passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor, providing that said mile strip should thereafter form a part of Boone County, providing that a majority of the legal voters residing in said strip were in favor of such annexation. On the fourth Monday of May, 1843, an election was held in the house of Samuel Keith in Newburgh. The judges were Benj. F. Hoyt and Samuel Keith and the clerk was A. W. Canfield. Great excitement was caused over the election. Naturally the people on the west side of Rockford, and the people of Boone County were in favor of the annexation. The people on the east side of Rockford wished the strip to continue in Winnebago County. When the vote was taken it was found that 51 votes were for annexation, and 44 against, a majority of seven in favor of an annexation. Some time afterward the legislature authorized the deeds and mortgages relating to the mile strip that had been recorded in Winnebago County to be transcribed into a book for the use of Boone County. This was done, and the book now is called Book "AA" of Deeds in our county records.

BOONE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS' COURT RECORDS.

After Boone County had been separated from Winnebago, an election was held for county officers, and Simon P. Doty was elected sheriff, John Handy, coroner; Seth S. Whitman, recorder; Milton S. Mason, Cornelius Cline, and John Q. A. Rollins, county commissioners; S. P. Hyde, county surveyor. The court organized May 3, 1837 and consisted of Milton S. Mason, Cornelius Cline, and John Q. A. Rollins. The commissioners administered the oath to each other. Daniel H. Whitney was then appointed clerk. The commissioners divided the county into precincts. All of what are now the towns of Belvidere, Bonus, Flora, and Spring, and that part of the town of Boone south of the Piscasaw, constituted Belvidere precinct, and the remainder of the county constituted Lambertsburg precinct.

John K. Towner was appointed county treasurer; Benj Sweet, school commissioner; William Dresser, John K. Towner, and Milton S. Mason were appointed judges of election for Belvidere precinct. Road commissioners were appointed for the four road districts into which the county was divided.

The August election, 1837, in Belvidere precinct was held at Simon P. Doty's house, and in Lambertsburg precinct at John Wright's house. James Lambert, John Wright, and Allen Carpenter were appointed judges of elections in Lambertsburg precinct.

Chas. F. H. Goodhugh presented a permit from the Winnebago County court authorizing him to sell goods at Belvidere one year from September 20, 1836. Oliver Hale was appointed trustee for school lands in Belvidere Township at the June term, 1837.

Considerable trouble was caused by various persons cutting timber on the school sections and the school commissioner was authorized to prosecute them. License was granted June 26, 1837, to Chas. F. H. Goodhugh and Simon P. Doty to retail "ardent spirits" by small measure. Alfred Shattuck, John Wright, and James B. Lambert were qualified as justices of the peace, September, 1837.

At the September term, 1837, the various county officers presented their bonds and took the oath of office. The clerk of the court was allowed $8.00 for books, purchased for himself and the recorder, and stationery. Orris Crosby, Stephen Blatchford, and Scofield Shattuck were appointed trustees of school lands in Township 43, range 4. Tavern rates were fixed as follows: Per meal, 37½¢; for horse to hay, 18¾¢; oats, per peck, 50¢; all kinds of liquors, per drink, 6¢.

Amount of money in treasury, September 4, 1837: Collected on fines and licenses, $40.00, which constituted the county's available means. Liability, $41.84. The county treasurer's duties must have consisted chiefly in "standing off" creditors.

James B. Lambert and John Wright were qualified as justices of the peace, and Milton S. Mason probate judge, in October, 1837.

The location of the court house was decided upon by James H. Woodworth, and John M. Wilson, commissioners appointed for that purpose under the act creating Boone County, approved March, 1837. After taking an oath as required by law, they proceeded on October 31, 1837, to locate it on the northeast quarter of Section 26, 44, 3, where it still remains. Mr. Gardner advanced $40.00 to pay expenses, and the commissioners stopped at Simon P. Doty's. The bill at Doty's amounted to $8.00, and the county assumed the same and issued a draft, but apparently had no money to pay it with.

The county commissioners met October 13th, at Doty's Tavern, and took steps for the survey of the county quarter section. Daniel H. Whitney was appointed commissioner to sell the lots and blocks in the original town thus surveyed, and requested to attend during the whole survey.

Alexander Neely was given a permit to retail merchandise at Belvidere for one year from November 8, 1837. Alfred Shattuek was qualified as justice of the peace. November 19, 1837, Seth S. Whitman was allowed $75.00 for a building on the county property.

The clerk was authorized to procure a copy of the records of Winnebago County, relating to that part of that county which now constitutes Boone County. Mr. Whitney appointed Joseph Briggs to procure these records and from his report was gathered the following: The part of the State Road which runs through Boone County was laid out by J. Gifford, Josiah C. Goodhugh and Daniel Haight in September, 1836. In the report of the courses made by the road, "Belvidere Avenue" is mentioned. Just where that was located is not known, although it was somewhere on the south side of the river, not far from the Genoa Road. Milton S. Mason and Cornelius Cline reported that as commissioners they had laid out a road commencing at Crosby's store and running around the big bend of the Kishwaukee by the houses of Seth S. Whitman, Chas. H. Payne, and Timothy Caswell, across the Piscasaw, then running about two miles, turning southerly to cross the Kishwaukee near the fording place, and joining the state road. December, 1836, E. Gregory and Joseph Briggs reported having laid out a road commencing at the angle of the state road a little east of the bridge at Belvidere, and running thence westerly near the Kishwaukee to the southwest corner of the company's field, thence on a line to correspond with the Kelso survey southwest of Milton S. Mason's house, then westerly near the Kishwaukee to the bridge and crossing to Kishwaukee near Col. James Sayres'. This was evidently a road toward Newburg.

December term, 1837. The Genoa Road was petitioned for November 29, 1837, and Wm. Dresser, Jacob Fish and John Handy were appointed to locate it. The Blood's Point Road was located in November, 1837. Cornelius Cline and Simon P. Doty were the viewers. It was so called because it ran south from Belvidere to the claim

Alfred E. Ames and Austin Wilder were allowed pay for work done in laying out the county property. Pearson B. Crosby was paid $40.00 for the Kishwaukee bridge on the state road. The range line road between ranges 3 and 4 was petitioned for November 23, 1837, by a large number of petitioners, and John Wright, Oliver Hale, and L. A. Doolittle were appointed viewers. The Caledonia road was petitioned for at this term and J. Q. A. Rollins, Wm. T. Bulkey and Oliver Hale were appointed viewers. The petition mentions Gardner's plowing, which was probably in the northwest quarter of Section 25, of Belvidere Township, at the north end of the Cephas Gardner property.

S. P. Hyde was the surveyor of the original town of Belvidere, and was paid $93.37 for the work, December 11, 1837. John Q. A. Rollins was allowed payment for work in surveying the county property and also for stakes. S. B. Ames was allowed for eleven days' work carrying chain. Allen Blood was allowed for stakes and for carrying chain on the state road and surveying county property.

The county property was advertised for sale in "Long John" Wentworth's paper, the Chicago Democrat, and the Chicago American. Aaron Whitney was allowed for hauling a load of stones for the county and Thos. O. Davis acted as clerk for the commissioner of sales. The sale of lots in the county quarter section, or what is now known as the original town of Belvidere, was held November 27 to 30 (inclusive), 1837. On the first day only eleven lots were sold, all being in the blocks facing State street, immediately west of the public square. The amount received per lot ranged from $17.00 to $55.50, and averaged about $34.00. The commissioner recommended on the second day of the sale that it be adjourned without day, as the sales did not meet his expectation. He sold a few more lots at private sale and added in his report "this is the best I could do, and the state of the funds of the county rendered this course expedient, if not absolutely necessary." Daniel Hilton Whitney was commissioner of sales and had charge of the survey.

Matthew Molony was granted a merchant's license, January 1, 1838. Timothy Caswell was granted a permit to keep tavern on the same date. Caswell's tavern was near Big Thunder Mill. William Ames was also granted a permit to keep tavern in Amersville (now Garden Prairie). The county road running from Mechanics street to Cline's Ford was petitioned for at the March term, 1838, and John Q. A. Rollins, Abel Thurston, and John S. King were appointed viewers. The road from Belvidere running up along the Piscasaw toward Russelville and Capron, was located by Joseph Briggs, James Shinn and John H. Herbert.

March term, 1838. Belvidere Precinct was divided into three precincts. Belvidere precinct was formed of what is now Belvidere and Flora townships and that part of Bonus west of the Piscasaw, and southwesterly of the Kishwankee River and Coon Creek. Ohio precinct was formed of all that part of what is now Spring Township south of Coon Creek. Deerfield precinct was composed of that part of Bonus and Spring not included in the other precincts and that part of Boone Township south of the Piscasaw.

The elections in the Ohio precinct were held in Alfred Shattuck's house, and John Handy, William Dresser, and Z. C. Sawtell were appointed judges. The elections in Deerfield were held at Ames' Tavern and James Shinn, John Lawrence and S. P. Hyde were appointed judges. The petit jurors for the first term of the circuit court were selected by the county commissioners court at the March term, 1838. Hiram Waterman was appointed commissioner of sales, Mr. Whitney having resigned. J. D. Coles & Co. were given a tavern and merchant's license.

Ordered that the court "have a recess until candle-light." The court reconvened at 6:30, S. S. Whitman was the first recorder, and among his early charges appear index book 25c, transcript book 37½c, chattel mortgage book, 50c,

April, 1838, it was ordered that sealed proposals should be received for the erection of a court house 40 by 30 feet. The basement story was to be stone and finished half for a jail, the other half into a room for a family. The first story was to be finished with three offices and a hall and one room for a family. The second story to be finished with a court room and two jury rooms and hall, the whole to cost from $5,000 to $6,000.

June term, 1838. In April, 1838, a road was laid out in Spring, commencing near Mr. Blachford's house and running southerly through the grove near Mr. Baxter's, thence to Mr. De Wolfe's to the edge of the grove, thence to Mr. Farr's in Section 22, thence southeasterly to the county line.

Timothy Caswell was allowed $73.75 for work on the Piscasaw Bridge. Ordered that the north room of S. P. Doty's Tavern should be used for county jail until otherwise ordered. Daniel H. Whitney was appointed agent for the county to negotiate a loan of $1,000.00, on the faith and credit of the county, at such rate of interest as it can be had for. At an election held August 6, 1838, Houghton C. Walker was elected sheriff, John Handy, coroner, and Moses Blood, Orris Crosby, and John K. Towner were elected commissioners.

September term, 1838. Tavern rates were fixed as follows: Per meal, 37½c; night's lodging, 12½c; oats, per peck, 25c; span of horses to hay over night, 37½c; good brandy, rum, gin, and wine, 12½c; poor ditto and whiskey, 6¼c; per meal for stage passengers, 50c. The polls of the August election were apparently taken to Galena, as required by law, and bill for stage fare was allowed each way, $9.00 and expenses and time, making in all $37.25. The order authorizing the clerk to loan money on the faith of the county was rescinded, probably because he could not find anyone ready to make the loan, money being scarce. Among the charges of the court are for a bunch of quills, 37½c. At this term, the court commissioners entered into a contract with John K. Towner to do repairs on the Belvidere bridge, including planking and railings on each side, for $100.00. Tavern permits were issued to John K. Towner in Belvidere, Z. C. Sawtell in Ohio precinct, Cyrus Avery in Deerfield precinct, and Alexander Neely in Belvidere. S. P. Hyde was allowed $8.00 for a town plat.

At the December term, 1838, the commissioners discovered that Mr. Whitney's office was more than a quarter of a mile from the place of holding court and they declared the office vacant. Apparently, Mr. Whitney was not present at the meeting when this was done, but his deputy, Joseph Briggs, was, and proceeded to protest very vigorously. After declaring Mr. Whitney's office vacated, the commissioners proceeded to elect James Loop to fill the place. Mr. Loop was a relative of one of the commissioners and they probably thought a little politics would liven things up. Mr. Briggs, thereupon, according to the record, did "contemptuously" take from the table the record and refused to deliver it to Mr. Loop, together with the other papers of the county. Mr. Briggs evidently proceeded to take the book off with him and vented his wrath by writing at the bottom of the order creating the vacancy in the office the following: "The clerk believing the above not true, and if true not sufficient for the removal of the clerk, demands an appeal to the circuit court of Boone County." When the commissioners secured the book back this part was ordered stricken out, as made without authority, and it is stricken out in the little book now before the writer, with bold strokes of the pen, a mute witness of a small squabble which doubtless seemed quite serious then, but is only amusing now. The commissioners proceeded to find Mr. Briggs guilty of flagrant contempt of the court and that he pay a fine of $25.00. A warrant and replevin writ were given to Mr. Doty, the sheriff. In the meanwhile, Mr. Loop, according to the entry made, was keeping the minutes on loose papers. The next morning the sheriff turned over to the commissioners a large number of books, documents, and notes belonging to the county, which he had secured by the replevin writ. The following day, Mr. Briggs' temper having apparently subsided, Mr. Doty appeared before the court and stated that Mr. Briggs confessed that he was too hasty in his action. The fine he was to pay was cut in half and paid, and the incident was closed.

March 5, 1839, on the petition of a number of inhabitants, the name of Lambertsburg precinct was changed to Beaver precinct, and the place of election to Robert Hurd's. March 6, 1839, Simon P. Doty was allowed 50c per day for room rent for holding commissioners' court from the organization thereof to the end of December, 1838, 23 days. This would indicate that the county commissioners' court sessions were all held in Doty's Tavern. March 7, 1839, Hiram Waterman was appointed commissioner to build the court house, and it was ordered that it should be 30 feet wide, 40 feet long. Posts 25 feet long, with entry for stairs on each side of front door. Hall 5 feet wide through lower story with back door and two rooms on either side of said hall. Upper room to be arched overhead for a court room.

March term, 1839. Ordered that should a circuit court be appointed in this county the clerk of this court is authorized to procure some convenient room for holding same.

April term, 1839. The jail was built by Simon P. Doty under a contract of June 5, 1838, and was accepted and the keys delivered to the sheriff, H. C. Walker. The sheriff was authorized to procure a set of shackles for hands and feet, and a ring, bolt and chain.

June term, 1839. Met at John K. Towner's house. Township 43-4 was constituted as Ohio precinct, and the house of Z. C. Sawtell designated for holding elections; Township 45-3, Caladonia precinct and the house of David Drake designated for holding elections. The name of the precinct was then spelled "Caladonia." Abraham Drake, Michael Taplin, and Allen Carpenter were appointed judges. Jacob Fisk was allowed $1.00 for fixing the "meeting house" for holding courts. The contract for building the Belvidere Bridge was let to J. Q. A. Rollins, August 3, 1839, for $84,50.

September term, 1839. James L. Loop was authorized to borrow money not to exceed $200,00 to pay for the quarter-section bought by the county and he was also authorized to go to Galena and make the necessary entry and attend to the papers. The state road from Crystalville, in McHenry County, to Mineral Point, Wisconsin, of which a portion is in this county, was located under Act of the Legislature in July, 1839.

William B. Page made a contract for the brick for the court house at $1.00 per thousand. Mr. Page made the brick for the court house on Dr. Stone's farm. By collecting all they could from various parties, Mr. Loop managed to get the $229,000 necessary to pay the land office expenses. Of this, $155,00 was borrowed from Alexander Neely.

December 2, 1839, an election was held at which Benjamin F. Lawrence was elected sheriff and Staunton H. Loing, justice of the peace, in Deerfield precinct. Manchester Township did not appear to have returned its poll books in time to be counted, a week afterwards. A contract was made with Robert B. Hurd for furnishing all materials, except the brick, and for laying the walls of the new court house. Simon P. Doty was authorized to keep a ferry across the Kishwaukee at Belvidere. He was to give free passage to all residents and their teams and he paid $50,00 per year. The ferry rates for non-residents of the county were as follows: For each vehicle drawn by two horses or oxen, 25 cents; vehicle with one horse, 18½ cents; man on horseback, 12½ cents; person on foot, 6¼ cents; cattle, per head, 3 cents; and hogs and sheep, 1 cent. This was when the bridge had been carried away by freshets.

June term, 1840. Township 43:3 was formed into a precinct called Fairfield. The school house was designated as the election place. Daniel Bliss, James Shinn, and Abel R. Blood were appointed judges.

Rosiel D. Campbell was appointed commissioner to take census for 1840. The county contracted with John Bruce for stone for the foundation for the court house. The jail in Belvidere standing upon the grounds selected for the court house, it was ordered that the jail be removed to another site.

August 3, 1840, Albert Stone was elected sheriff and Edward Hawley, coroner.

September term, 1840. F. W. Crosby making preparation to build a dam across the Kishwaukee. John K. Towner was appointed superintendent the building of the court house. At the November election, 1840, the presidential electors, headed by Adam W. Snyder of St. Clair County, received 15 votes in Beaver precinct, 14 in Deerfield, 23 in Caledonia, 123 in Belvidere, 13 in Manchester, and 34 in Ohio. The ticket on which Abraham Lincoln was one of the electors, received 36 in Beaver, 28 in Deerfield, 15 in Caledonia, 110 in Belvidere, 15 in Manchester, and 16 in Ohio. Mr. Lincoln's ticket was defeated by two votes in the county. December, 1840, F. W. Crosby was allowed to build a dam, evidently about where the present dam is, and the record states that it was to be on or near the "site occupied by the present dam of Belvidere Mill." For the new court house contracts were made for lumber with P. B. Crosby, and for carpenter work with James Johnson. In March, 1841, a road was located, which commenced at the southeast quarter of Belvidere Township and ran diagonally across what is now Jefferson Conger's farm and the northwest quarter of Section 36, striking the state road somewhere up near Balliet's corner. This road, as located, does not exist at present. The state road north of Belvidere was re-located between the line of county property and Spring Brook, in April, 1841, by S. P. Doty and David Caswell. Previous to that time the bend, which is now about opposite General Fuller's house, appears to have been several blocks further south. The bridge over Spring Brook was just a little west of the center of Section 22, near the present Tobyne farm. What is known as the middle Caledonia road, now running past the Scott and Greenlee farms, was located by Elias Congdon and W. S. Stewart, September, 1841, and was on or near the line of an old Indian trail.

In the back of the county commissioners' record, appears a list of certificates for wolf scalps given out by Deputy Clerk Saxton, which contains the following:

November, 1840.

John Lawrence, 1 wolf.

Bradford Cunningham, 5 wolves.

Heaton, 2 wolves.

Milo Smith, 1 wolf.

Simeon Covey, 1 wolf.

Strong, 5 wolves.

In 1841, January, Cyrus H. Avery, 8 prairie wolves. During the remainder of that year certificates were also issued to N. K. Avery, C. H. Payne, Chas. Johnson, S. E. Ames, G. T. Sasson, Alfred Strong, Chas. S. Whitman; also to John Barrett for 17 wolves. The bounty was $1.00 per wolf.

COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP NAMES.

Boone County was named after Daniel Boone, a noted pioneer of Kentucky and Southern Illinois. He was a contemporary with George Rogers Clark, Simon Kenton, and the fearless backwoodsmen of the early days. Belvidere is said by some to have been named by Ebenezer Peck from a town in Canada from which he came. Mr. Peck had considerable financial interest here, but resided in Chicago. Another account says that Belvidere was named by Simon P. Doty, who claimed that he received the suggestion from Mark Beaubien, an early French settler of Chicago, on account of its resemblance to Belvidere near Weimar, in Germany. The word means "beautiful to see." The derivation of the word "Kishwaukee" has been explained in several different ways. The first is that it means "Place of the Sycamores." Another has it as meaning "Free from Storms," and still another makes it mean "Arrow Water" or "Rushing Water." The name is undoubtedly Indian, but just what it means the writer has been unable to determine from any Indian vocabulary he has been privileged to consult.

Bonns Township was formerly called Deerfield precinct, probably on account of some place in the east from which one or more prominent early settlers came. The present name is the Latin word for "good." Spring was formerly called Ohio Grove on account of the Shattucks and other prominent early settlers, who came from that state. Flora was possibly so named from the number of flowers that dotted its prairies. One of the most pleasing and noticeable things to the early settlers in this region was the number of wild flowers, and they spoke of them very often in the letters and journals written at that time. Boone Township was formerly included in Beaver Precinct, which was doubtless named from that industrious animal. Le Roy was first called Lambertson Precinct from the early settlers. One who was present at the meeting when it received the name it now bears could not recollect the cause for so calling it, except that everyone present was trying to have it named after his town in the east and this name finally prevailed.

The majority of the early settlers of Boone County came from New York State, or at least many more came from that state than from any other one location. The New Yorker of that time was a sort of westernized New Englander. Their ancestors in the very early days of the history of the country had emigrated, usually from England, and had located themselves upon the rocky hills of Massachusetts, Vermont, or New Hampshire, the rugged coast of Maine or among the valleys of Connecticut. By the time the Revolutionary War had been fought and the colonies had gained their freedom from the mother country, the rising generation found the old farm homes too crowded, and the fields too stony to raise good crops of grain, although it is admitted that they have never been excelled in raising first class men and women. Therefore, shortly after the Revolution, the New Englanders pushed westward, into the fertile valleys of the Mohawk, the Hudson, the Genesee, and with the help of the sturdy Dutch settlers whom they found already there, they made the great state of New York. In the meantime Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware had filled up with settlers of equal ability and energy, and by 1836 the same crowding and longing for a chance to expand was manifested among the settlers in these states as had been the case a few generations before in the places from whence they came. It is to the younger generation of these states, together with some directly from New England, that Boone County looked for its first settlers. Most of them came by the way of Chicago and many of them had no definite location in mind, except that they expected to settle in Northern Illinois. At that time Chicago was a very uninviting place and many of those who expected to stay there pushed on westward. After the very first settlers, many of those who came were relatives or friends of those who were already here. Often a man would come and locate and then go back after his family in the east. There are not many southern families in Boone County. Among them have been Stephen Hurlbut, one of the most noted of Boone County citizens, who was born in South Carolina, and Joseph Goodrich, who while not originally Southern, lived for a considerable time in the South. One of the most prosperous parts of the county is that known as the "Scotch Settlement," which takes in a large part of the township of Caledonia and extends westward into Winnebago County. The Scotch settled in that region in the first twenty years or so of the county's history. Among the early settlers were the Greenlees, who came in 1836. Some of the other prominent Scotch families are those of Ralston, McEachran, McNair, Armour, Reid, and Kelley. The Scotch Settlement is noted for the neat appearance of its farms and farm buildings and general air of prosperity. In the northern part of the county, particularly Manchester, Boone and LeRoy, are a large number of Norwegian settlers, most of whom have been very successful and own large, well stocked farms. Among the prominent Norwegian families are those of Duxsted, Tillerson and Seaver. In Spring Township, particularly, as well as in other parts of the county, are a number of Englishmen. Among the families which came from England at an early date, in Spring, were the Blachtords, the Curtises, and the Smithsons. At a little later date came the Davises, John Rogers, Joseph Hoover, the Landers, William King, George Peters, and Robert Widin. In Boone Township, and particularly in Capron, are a number of citizens of Canadian descent, including the Cornells and the Jurys, who came in the '40s. Some of the prominent people in Belvidere also came from Canada. In the later years, we have a considerable number from Ireland, most of whom have settled in Belvidere or on farms in the vicinity of that city. An Irishman always possesses great executive ability and a number of important positions have been held by those of that descent.

The history of Boone County, so far as any permanent white settlement is concerned, begins in 1825. It is well known to all who have been interested in the history of the state that the first settlements were made in the southern part, such as Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and other places along the Mississippi River, and at Albion, Shawneetown, and other settlements in the southeastern part of the state, along the Ohio and Wabash Rivers. In 1835 Chicago was but a small town. Galena, in the northwestern part of the state, and some of the settlements in that vicinity had been started, but all the region of Northern Illinois between these places was practically uninhabited by white men, and consisted of beautiful prairie covered with long grass, interspersed with groves of trees and inhabited only by numerous wild game and the wandering tribes of Indians. The land had not yet been surveyed into townships and was not open to government entries, as the Indian title had not yet been extinguished. It is difficult to estimate with certainty the names of the very first settlers. In the earlier county history, we are informed that the first settler was Livingston Robbins, who came from Chautauqua County, N. Y. We have been able, through one of his nephews, to find out more concerning him. He received his first name from Dr. Livingston, the celebrated African explorer, who was his mother's brother. He and a partner took up a claim north of the river, probably somewhere near the present opera house, and stayed there for some time. Becoming lonely from their position, with no one but Indians as neighbors, the partner decided to return to Chicago and did so. Mr. Robbins stood the increased loneliness for a short time and then returned to Chicago himself. After he had been there a day or two, he ran across another young man whom he told about their claim on the Kishwaukee, stating that if a man could go there and stick to it, the place was sure to become a desirable location. So the two finally agreed to return to the claim and after they had been there a short time, back came the first partner. When the three had lived together for some time a little friction arose as to who should include a certain piece of timber in his claim, and the first partner and the new comer took sides against Robbins.

About this time John K. Towner and others came in and bought all three out. Mr. Robbins took up a claim north of Newburgh in Section 19, which he afterwards sold to the Tobynes, and Livingston Robbins and his brother Oliver, who had come from the east by that time, moved over into Winnebago County, where their descendants still live. Livingstou Robbins went to Stevens Point, Wis., where he died about 1880, at an advanced age. He was a large man, very straight in stature, with black hair and beard. Our informant could not recall the name of either of Robbins's partners, but it is possible that they were Archibald Metcalf and David Dunham, who are mentioned in the former history of Boone County as occupying the claim when Mr Towner and others came to Belvidere. As this was before the written records, our accounts of the first few settlers must rest upon tradition.

In June, 1835, John K. Towner, Cornelius Cline, and Erastus A. Nixon arrived at the location which is now Belvidere. Mr. Towner, with his wife and eight children, had started in the early part of June from Steuben County, New York, to locate in Michigan, but not finding a location which suited them, Mr. Towner left his wife and children with relatives near Detroit and came by boat to Chicago. At the Tremont House, where he stopped, he met Cline and Nixon. At that time, as is well known to all who have read Chicago history, that city was very uninviting, many of the business and residence sections of the city at the present time being then a sea of mud. So the three determined to push on to Rockford, where Daniel S. Haight and Germanicus Kent had a small settlement. They traveled on foot and are said to have followed General Scott's army trail, but upon reaching the Kishwaukee they decided to settle there. Mr. Towner purchased part of the Metcalf & Dunham claim and took up some more land near the river. He arranged with Mr. Cline for the erection of a log house and returned on foot and by the lake to Detroit. He bought several yoke of oxen and a prairie schooner at Chicago, and with these and a wagon that he had brought from New York, Mr. Towner and family pushed on to the Kishwaukee. Arriving about midnight, the last of July, 1835, they camped that night about opposite the present Baltic Mills, and next morning moved into the Metcalf and Dunham cabin. Their own house was not completed, but in the meantime Mr. Cline had built his cabin, which was probably located somewhere out near the Bennett Creamery Corner and the O. J. Lincoln farm. Then Towner moved into this cabin while Mr. Cline went east for his own family, and the Towners soon afterwards moved into their own house, which was on the site of the present D. Berthick residence.

Practically all the early settlers of Boone County came by the way of Chicago or from an easterly direction. A description of the many ways in which they traveled, and the route over which they came will be in order. While some of the young men without families or household goods, were able to walk, those who brought their possessions with them found it necessary to come either by ox teams or with horses. The first few miles west of Chicago was low and swampy and made very hard pulling, so that sometimes six or eight yoke of oxen were required to pull the wagons through. When this was done the different travelers would unite and, by hitching their teams together, would pull the wagons through, one by one. Lorenzo McDougal, who came in 1836, used to describe this very interestingly. The wagons were many of them the old fashioned "prairie schooner," but some of them were of the ordinary form of eastern wagons. There were very few houses. John H. Thurston, in his reminiscences of Rockford, states that from Chicago to the Fox River the cabins were about six miles apart, and that there was but one inhabited house between Elgin and Mr. Smith's cabin in Pleasant Grove, (near Marengo). When Mr. Thurston came in 1837, he states they stopped the first night at the Buckhorn Tavern about eighteen miles west of Chicago. The second night they stopped at Mr. Smith's Tavern, and after striking Garden Prairie they found a trail blazed through the timber to the ford of the Kishwaukee River near the present Big Thunder Mill, where the Pottawatomie trail from Chicago to Galena crossed. E. C. Lawrence, who arrived in 1837, states that there were sixteen houses between Chicago and Belvidere, including Belvidere. It took the Lawrences five days to come from Chicago. They found a bridge over the Desplaines River and another at Salt Creek, in the northeasterly part of Du Page County. They found a house in Coral, which is a little south of Union. At Marengo was Spencer's Tavern, and there was no house between Marengo and Garden Prairie.

In the early part of August, 1835, Simon P. Doty and Dr. Daniel Hilton Whitney arrived in Belvidere. They stopped for a short time with the Towners and both became very useful and prominent citizens of the community, and will be referred to many times in this history. Simon P. Doty was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., May 9, 1797. Before coming to Belvidere, he had been a sailor. Mr. Doty became proprietor of a tavern known as the Belvidere House, which stood with the other buildings belonging to it, on the block now occupied by the opera house, Bowley's, Longcor's drug store, and other stores. This was a very important building in the history of the little community. According to Mr. Jenner, it consisted of a one-story kitchen, then a larger portion containing a dining-room and sleeping apartments upstairs, then a one-story bar-room, then a store room which came on the corner where Mr. Bowley's store is. This building was painted. It was not a log cabin, being one of, if not the, first frame buildings made in the county. Mr. Doty was a prominent Whig and held several offices, as will appear elsewhere in our narrative. Many of the public meetings were held in this hotel. Dr. Whitney states in one of his articles that he bought some logs from Messrs.

Payne and Wheeler, who resided on the Fox River, had them hauled to the place intended for the town plot and had them made into a double house and Mr. Doty was made landlord. The previous history of the county states that Mr. Doty continued to manage this hotel until the fall of 1836, when he moved into his own Tavern. As Mr. Jenner came in 1837, the Doty House that he describes must have been the second one that Mr. Doty kept.

Dr. Daniel Hilton Whitney was one of the most able citizens of the early days in Belvidere, and had a great deal to do with shaping the history of the county. He was born in 1807 and died February 17, 1864, aged fifty-seven. He was a man of great energy, a ready talker, an able, although somewhat flowery, writer, and a very enthusiastic Whig in politics. His stature was tall, his complexion dark, and his hair coal black. He married Sarah Caswell, December 10, 1836, this being the first marriage solemnized in what is now Boone County. His first wife, Elizabeth Hazzard, to whom he was married in New York, July 5, 1828, died Sept. 7, 1835. Mrs. W. S. Jones of Belvidere is Dr. Whitney's daughter. Dr. Whitney will be mentioned so often as we progress that further notice here is unnecessary.

THE BELVIDERE COMPANY.

In all the communities which were springing up in Northern Illinois, land claims were the great article of commerce. According to the tales of the early travelers, whenever one stopped he was at once besieged by an eager crowd willing to sell claims. It is natural to suppose that a large number claimed a great deal more than they were entitled to. Usually when a man had decided upon a promising piece of land and commenced to locate there, he was visited by someone very soon, who stated that the tract was already claimed. Mr. Lawrence tells us of a relative of his who thought, after many trials of this kind, he would get into a part where no one had been, and struck up along the Indian trail near the Piscasaw. On the way he came across a bee-tree, and cut off the hollow portion filled with honey and took it with him. He found a suitable location and was preparing to make his claim, when he was visited by a Belvidere resident and informed that the claim was already taken. This was too much and he informed his visitor that, unless he left immediately, the section of the bee-tree and its contents would be gently deposited, upside down, over his head. The gentleman left without much further argument.

There had been no government survey made and it was not possible to tell, with any accuracy, where the lines would run or what would constitute a quarter section. The claims, or at least the more substantial ones, were made by plowing a furrow around the land desired to be included. While there are no definite stories in this county, as in some surrounding counties, of serious fights over claims, claim jumping and the like, yet it is to be presumed that more or less friction of this sort did take place here also.

In order to protect themselves from outsiders the settled citizens of the various communities usually formed what was known as a "company," an association to divide up certain land among themselves by agreement and stand by each other in holding it. Such a company was formed here and called the "Belvidere Company." From an affidavit by Daniel H. Whitney in a law-suit concerning the southwest quarter of Section 26, we are able to judge quite accurately as to who constituted this company and the time the different members entered it. Mr. Whitney states that he held the claim in 1835 in common with J. C. Goodhugh and E. Peck. About 1836 he sold his claim as to said quarter section to Goodhugh, Peck, and Nathan Crosby. He understood that in the spring and summer of 1836, they sold an interest to John S. King, Jacob Whitman, Pearson B. Crosby, and others; that said claimant, were generally known as the "Belvidere Company" and in 1836 they built on said quarter-section a saw mill and did some cultivation, and in the next season J. S. King built a grist mill, and that in the latter part of 1837, Daniel Sheldon leased the mill. These were near the present Baltic Mills.

It was impossible to give with any degree of clearness the location of the various claims prior to the government entries. The Belvidere Company claim evidently took in most of the north side which lies west of a line running north from about where the Presbyterian Church now stands. Seth S. Whitman's claim was in the northwest quarter of Section 25, easterly of the Belvidere Company's claim.

EARLY DAYS AND WAYS.

The method of making a log cabin is described by an early Rockford settler, Mr. Thurston, as follows:

"The body of the house, about eighteen feet square, was of oak logs with the bark on, the corners carried up by notch and saddle, the roof of shakes rived out from oak timber. The logs for the gable ends were fastened together with wooden pins. A pole was then laid lengthways of the structure, two feet from the eaves, the shakes laid in two or more courses, and a pole put on top to hold them down. This process was repeated to the ridge pole. Short sticks were placed between the poles to keep them from sliding down. The cabin had a puncheon floor, two windows, one door of puncheon stuff. Most of them had a fireplace at one end built of wood, and outside; the fireplace of puncheons lined on the inside with clay, and the chimney of split sticks laid up with mud. Such a house may be built with an axe and an auger, and is a warm and comfortable dwelling."

From Mr. Thurston's recollections we also gather the following as to Boone County:

The summer of 1837 was very wet and the crops were good.

In January, 1838, there was a vacant cabin about two miles west of Belvidere, near the river. The Newburgh flats were under water and could not be crossed by teams for several weeks. The water in 1844 was very high all over the Mississippi Valley.

After the conclusion of the presidential campaign in 1840 both Whigs and Democrats gave public balls at Rockford. The Harrison Ball was held February, 1841, at the Washington House. The representatives of Boone County on the Board of Managers were D. M. Bristol of Belvidere and J. C. Waterman of Newburgh. The Van-Buren Ball was held at the Rockford House, March 3, 1841. The representatives of Boone County were R. S. Malony, L. A. Doolittle, H. Waterman, and B. F. Lawrence of Belvidere; George F. Ames and S. P. Hyde of Amesville (now Garden Prairie), Orris Crosby and H. Shattuck of Ohio Grove (now the township of Spring), and B. F. Hoyt and John Steel of Newburgh. Dr. Orris Crosby, the oldest Democrat present, with a handsome young partner, opened the Democratic Ball with the Virginia Reel. Mr. Thurston describes him as being spare in build, six feet or more in height, and clad in a blue broadcloth, swallow tail coat, with brass buttons in the style of the '20s, an immense rolling collar, trousers four inches shorter than now worn, red stockings and calfskin pumps. Mr. Thurston states that General Scott's Army Trail passed through the first ward of Rockford. Stephen Mack, an Indian trader, was the guide. This trail met the river bank above the town at the dry run now in North Second Street, followed the east bank of the river to the first creek above the town, across the bluff and met the Indian Trail near the railroad track at the foot of the Big Bottom.

In order to give some idea of what constituted the household goods in the early days, we give the appraisement in the estate of a lady belonging to one of the prominent families, and who died in 1841. Besides the items mentioned, there was quite a list of books.

One stove and pipe, $10.00; 1 pair of shovel and tongs, 50c; carpet, $5.00; 1 arm chair, 50c; 1 kettle, 50c; 2 quilts, $13.00; 1 feather bed and bedding, $15.00; 2 blankets, $3.00; 9 sheets, $1.50; 1 trundle bedstead, $1.50; 1 pitcher and basin, $1.50; 1 tin pail, 50c; 1 dipper, 13c; 1 white earthen tub, $1.50; 1 soap dish, 25c; 2 wooden tubs, 50c; 2 plated goblets, $1.00; 1 plated sugar dish, $1.00; 2 willow baskets, 75c; 1 band box, 25c; 1 portfolio, $1.00; 1 pair brass candle sticks, 50c; 1 pair of snuffers, 13c; 1 snuffer tray, 25c; 1 gold watch, $25.00; 4 carpet bags, $1.00; 1 cut glass bottle, $1.00; 1 table, $1.50; 1 looking glass, $1.00.

THE FIRST BRIDGES.

The first bridge across the Kishwaukee at State street was built in 1836. It was formed of stringers lying close to the water and covered with logs. In March, 1840, this bridge was carried away by the greatest freshet that ever came down the Kishwaukee, when the water rose to a point three or four rods south of the present pumping station and the bark on the trees on Gooseberry Island was ground away by the ice twenty feet from their bases. Until the completion of the next bridge, the same year, Simon P. Doty ran a ferry across the open space. The second bridge lasted until 1845, when it, too, was carried away by a freshet. This was a low frame structure, fastened by bents. The third bridge was constructed in 1845. It was wide enough for two roadways and was originally covered over, but in a few years the cover was removed. This bridge was shorter and nearer the water than the present one and reached by uncovered approaches. William H. Gilman was contractor for this bridge and Cornelius Cline, constructor. Mr. Cline died on the lakes in the first cholera epidemic that visited this region. In 1867 it was decided to build a new structure. E. L. Truesdell of Massachusetts, a relative of E. E. P. Truesdell, of Belvidere, was then constructing bridges of latticed iron work, after a plan known as the Truesdell patent, and the contract was awarded to him. The bridge was completed in November, 1867, at a cost of $15,115. The present State Street bridge, the fifth, was erected in 1889. The contractors were the Clinton Bridge & Iron Company, of Clinton, Iowa. The contract provided that the structure should carry any load and at any rate of speed that ordinarily travels the streets. Previous to this, teams were obliged to cross at a walk, and Mr. Jenner told of one Presbyterian divine who was seized by minions of the law and fined for racing his buggy across at full speed, in order that a guest might not miss a train. The Main street bridge was a wooden structure of three spans. In the spring of the present year (1908) it had become very insecure and preparations were being made to replace it, but the water in the river rose very rapidly and as the ice went out it carried the two southern spans of the bridge with it.

The State Street bridge is now being repaired (1908), and it is thought it will stand for a number of years to come. It was proposed to put in a new iron or cement bridge, but the proposition was not carried out on account of the expense.

EARLY POSTOFFICES.

The first postmaster was Prof. Seth S. Whitman, who was one of Belvidere's most prominent early citizens and of whom more will be said in other parts of this history. Prof. Whitman lived about where W. S. Brown now lives, on East Lincoln Avenue. The postoffice boxes were the holes between the rafters of his house, the ceiling not being so high but what it could be easily reached. At that time, the postage was something like 25c for a letter and Mr. Jenner averred that about the only letters which were prepaid were love letters and those containing requests to pay bills. In the very early days each piece of paper constituted a letter and postage had to be paid on each piece at the legal rate. In looking over the old legal documents, we often find that when two or more were prepared by outside lawyers and sent here by mail, they would make them one long sheet and then cut them apart, all but one narrow margin and thereby the two or three documents could be mailed for the price of one letter. Mr. Jenner stated that there was considerable controversy as to whether the small diamond sheets of paper called "wafers," which were then used as part of the seal, would be an extra sheet of paper, so as to require extra postage. After a short time the postoffice was moved to Doty's dining room and the letters were kept in a cupboard. Mr. Whitman had been postmaster about six years, when, on account of being a Whig, he was removed and another postmaster was appointed. Mr. Jenner came here in 1828 and about the middle of that year took charge of the postoffice. The mail came three times a week, by the Frink & Walker stage line. The stage arrived in Belvidere at night and the mail came in a big leather bag that held eight or ten bushels.

CEMETERIES.

In the very early days the inhabitants buried their dead in the north edge of the town. The Belvidere Cemetery Association was incorporated in 1847, by John K. Towner, Asher E. Jenner, and William T. Burgess and secured that part of the original town lying between Marshall Street on the south, Webster Street on the west and the north line of the town on the north. Since that time considerable land has been secured from the Dunton estate and additions made. The cemetery is surrounded by an iron fence and laid out with roadways and walks. In 1907, through the generosity of Mrs. Emma Pettit, a very tasty chapel building was erected in the west part of the grounds, in memory of her husband, Dr. Pettit. The two Foote obelisks of gray Barre granite are the largest and most beautiful in the cemetery. There are also a large number of other very fine stones and within the bounds of this quiet spot have been laid most of Belvidere's dead.

The Saint James Catholic Cemetery is on West Lincoln Avenue, near the Fair Grounds and here, under the arms of a great cross, lie those of the Catholic faith, who have passed to the Great Beyond.

CHAPTER IV.

EARLY SURVEYS AND LAND TITLES.

BOONE COUNTY LANDS IN 1837—EXTRACT FROM PECK'S GAZETTEER OF ILLINOIS—GOVERNMENT SURVEYS—SECTION 16 SET APART AS SCHOOL LANDS—SURVEYORS IN BOONE COUNTY—GOVERNMENT SALES AND LAND TITLES—SOME EARLY LAND OWNERS—COUNTY RECORDS OF LAND TITLES—EARLY TRANSFERS.

The following in reference to conditions in Boone County, soon after the date of first settlement, is taken from "Peck's Gazetteer of Illinois," issued in 1837:

"Most of the land in this and adjoining counties is as yet unsurveyed and thus has not been offered for sale by the general government. It is, notwithstanding, rapidly settling up with an enterprising population. The soil is fertile and well adapted to raising all the different kinds of agricultural products common to this part of the state. The surface is mostly rich, undulating prairie, with a considerable quantity of timber scattered over the country, principally in groves and oak openings, of which the chief of the former is Norwegian Grove.

"Boone County is for judicial purposes attached to Jo Daviess County. Its county seat is not yet laid out.

"The only town in the county is Belvidere, a small settlement on the stage road from Chicago to Galena. It is in the western part of the county on Squaw Prairie and has a delightful appearance. Near the town site is a mound 50 rods long and about 30 rods wide, elevated 70 feet above the bottom land of the river. On the top of this mound is the cemetery of an Indian called Big Thunder. He died about the time of the Sauk War in 1831 or '32 and was placed in a sitting posture on a flag mat, wrapped in a blanket, his scalping knife by his side to cut the plugs of tobacco, whiskey, etc.

"The citizens of this region are about to erect a college edifice on this spot, in the vault of which the bones of Big Thunder will repose unmolested. A charter was granted for the purpose in the recent session of the Legislature."

GOVERNMENT SURVEYS.

As can be imagined, it was a very difficult task to make the surveys in order to divide off the land into sections, quarter sections, and 80-acre tracts. The third principal meridian was first run through north and south, and then the townships, six miles square, were put in, being divided into sections one mile square. These sections were then divided into quarter sections and these quarter sections were divided, by running a line north and south, into two 80-acre tracts. When the land was sold by the government, all the farms had their greatest length north and south, but by further dividing and selling, a large proportion of them now run east and west, as can be seen by reference to the map. Some of the sections on the edge of each township contain considerably more or less than 640 acres and were not divided into quarter sections, but into "lots." Section 16 of each township was reserved by law for the school section and sold by the school commissioners. The patents for the school lands are from the governor of the State of Illinois instead of from the president. The school sections were surveyed into small "lots," sometimes only 20 acres, and sold in that manner. The townships in range three in Boone County were surveyed by Don Alonzo Spaulding of Rockford about 1837. Le Roy was surveyed by T. Sprigg in 1839.

LAND TITLES.

Most of the land in Boone County was taken up from the government under an act of Congress, approved April 24, 1820, entitled "An Act making further provision for the sale of the public lands." Under this act the smallest subdivision was a half quarter section, or 80 acres, and the line dividing the quarter section into half ran north and south. The price was $1.25 an acre. Under a former act of Congress any person who had actually inhabited and cultivated a tract of land, not more than a quarter section, was allowed a preference in bidding the same in. For this reason claims were bought and sold by persons who had no actual title to the same, but a mere right derived from pre-emption. The result was that, although the government sales were supposed to be public to the highest bidder, the land generally went to the person who had lived on it and improved it. Although the writer has not been informed that such was the case in connection with the entering of Boone County lands, yet the history of other counties plainly indicates that there generally were enough friends of the actual settler attending the sale to see to it that no outside party bid over him. As is well known to the reader, all the lands in this part of the United States are divided into townships six miles square. The third principal meridian was established by the government surveyors so as to run north from the intersection of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. In the northern part of the state, it runs a little west of Rockford. The base line was established at an early date at what was then the southern limits of the Indian lands. From these two lines other lines six miles apart were drawn. Each strip running up and down the state is a range and each strip running across the state east and west constitutes a line of townships. Boone County includes the four northern townships of Range three and four east of the third principal meridian. Most of the entries in range four were made at the land office at Chicago, while most of those in range three were made at Galena or Dixon. The government authorities decided the boundaries of the land office districts from time to time. The person wishing to enter government land paid his $1.25 an acre at the land office and received what is called a "receiver's certificate." After waiting two years, if no person showed a better right, he would receive his patent, which was made on parchment or sheepskin. Perhaps the majority of the patents in this county were signed for President Polk by his Secretary. Many of the earlier entries were made in October and November, 1839, particularly so far as Belvidere Township was concerned, and there were other entries running as late as 1850 or even later. Belvidere city is situated in Sections 25, 26, 35 and 36 of Belvidere Township. The northeast quarter of Section 26 was entered by the County Commissioners and very soon afterward was platted into lots and blocks, leaving, in about the center, the public square. The southeast quarter of Section 26 was entered, the east half by Joel Walker and the west half by William H. Gilman, his son-in-law. Mr. Walker platted a portion of that part which was easterly of State Street into "Joel Walker's Addition," which includes the easterly side of State Street north of the river, as far as Madison Street and includes Lincoln Avenue as far as Mr. John C. Foote's residence. Mr. Walker also platted part of his land south of the river, including Locust Street around Dr. Swift's present residence, and called it Walker's Second Addition. Mr. Gilman did not plat his 80 acres on the north side of the river, but sold it to Frederick W. Crosby, who also purchased part of Mr. Walker's land. Mr. Crosby put in a number of subdivisions in the vicinity of Lincoln Avenue and Huribut Avenue, at an early date. The Crosby's were prominent among the early settlers. Among the other early additions lying between West Lincoln Avenue and the river and westerly of State Street, was Simon P. Doty's, which took in the whole block fronting on State Street. William B. Ogden, one of the early mayors of Chicago, subdivided the land on both sides of Ogden Street, and William T. Burgess, a very able lawyer of the early times, subdivided the land on both sides of Burgess Street. The southwest quarter of Section 26 was entered by John S. King, who ran the grist mill. The part south of Lincoln Avenue has never been subdivided. The easterly part along Lincoln Avenue, running as far west as the bend in Perry and Boone Streets, was subdivided by Enos Tompkins, while the part west of that was subdivided by Mrs. Matilda Whitman, widow of Rev. S. S. Whitman. The northwest quarter of Section 26 was originally divided into long narrow lots fronting on the north Rockford road out beyond General Fuller's, and much of this is still unsubdivided. Frye's Reserve, Cronk and Frye's Subdivision, some of the Bennett Additions and "Meadow Lawn" are in this quarter section. The northwest quarter of Section 25, which takes in East Lincoln Avenue, from about Deacon Avery's corner to the bend around the river and runs northerly to about where the green houses are, was originally entered by Seth S. Whitman, Cephas Gardner, and Ann Nicholas, who was Seth S. Whitman's mother-in-law. Soon after obtaining their title they deeded about 40 acres, lying just westerly of the present railroad tracks and north yards to Alexander Neely. This tract was afterward held by Slosson & Williams and by Baker Ames, and is now the Mary A. Wheeler property. The long narrow strip lying westerly of Mr. Neely's tract and running as far as Gardner Street, was taken by Mr. Gardner as his share of the quarter section, and afterwards the south half of it was divided by his daughter, Pamela Moulton, while the north part was subdivided by G. W. Campbell, who was an early settler. The part of the quarter section westerly of Gardner Street was taken by Seth S. Whitman and part of it was subdivided by him. The part between Lincoln Avenue and the river contains many fine old residences, with splendid lawns running back a considerable distance to the river, most of which have been in the families of the present owners for many years. All of this quarter section, which lies east of where the railroad now is, was taken by Ann Nicholas. The title has since been in the Bennett and Dunton families, and much of it was subdivided by the Lincoln Avenue Land Association and called "Fairview." Probably the most important quarter section in Belvidere is the southwest quarter of Section 25. This was entered by Joseph Briggs. Mr. Briggs was apparently a young man and a friend of Daniel Hilton Whitney, and does not appear to have remained in Belvidere or to have left descendants here. The part of the quarter which lies southwest of Whitney Street was subdivided by Aaron Whitney, brother of Dauliel H., and takes in most of the business houses on South State Street, between the National Factory and the bend at Logan Avenue. Almost all of the quarter section which lies easterly of Whitney Street, including the railroad depot, part of the National Plant, and part of Borden's plant, was owned and platted by William H. Gilman, who was probably the most extensive land owner in Belvidere, the next three being probably (so far as the number of transactions are concerned), Alexander Neely, F. W. Crosby, and S. S. Whitman and his estate. The northwest quarter of Section 36 was entered, the east half by Otis Caswell and the west half by Horace R. Green. Mr. Caswell subdivided the part lying between Caswell and Prairie Streets and extending from Logan Avenue, south to a little beyond Fourth Street. The rest became the property of the Rowan family and was subdivided into various additions. The west half of the quarter section was sold out in tracts of about twenty acres and subdivided at an early date by Cohoon & Allen, and by Loop, Babcock & Carpenter, and by Bainbridge N. Dean, father of Judge C. B. Dean. This quarter section now constitutes a fine residence portion of the south side. The southwest quarter of Section 36 was mostly purchased by a syndicate composed of Judge Fuller, D. D. Sabin, John C. Foote and John L. Witbeck, and is known as "Highland," and its various additions. It is a fine, high location. The platted portion of Section 35, lying along the westerly side of Pearl Street about as far as south as Sixth Street, was subdivided by Nijah Hotchkiss. Frank W. Starr subdivided most of the southern part of the subdivided portion of this section, at a later date, into Starr's various additions. The northeast quarter of Section 36 was entered by Albert Neely and that north of Logan Avenue, so far as platted, was subdivided by the Gray brothers, John and William. The platted portion, southerly of Logan Avenue, was subdivided by Ambrose B. Turner.

The records of the county are kept in a fire proof record office on Main Street, southerly of the court house. There are about sixty-six books of deeds and forty-five of mortgages, together with a large number of miscellaneous records. A. C. Fassett has been the efficient and popular circuit clerk and recorder for many years, and Mrs. Clara Lampert is deputy. Mrs. Lampert's writing, for neatness and legibility, has never been excelled on the records of the county. Some of the writing in the early records, before the war, is very illegible and would try the patience of a saint,—to say nothing of that of a lawyer or abstractor. Most of the records, however, were very well kept since the very start.

The probate records are kept on the upper floor of the record building under the custody of the county clerk, William Bowley, whose name is a synonym all over the county for courteous treatment. The abstractors of the county are: The Boone Abstract Company, which has a Tract Index made in 1904, and of which Richard V. Carpenter is Secretary, J. R. Jaffray, and the circuit clerk, Mr. Fassett.

EARLY TRANSFERS.

Among the early transfers in Boone County lands were the following. Some of them were made before the land was patented from the government. On August 23, 1837, David Caswell, D. H. Whitney and A. Whitney quitclaimed to Seth S. Whitman all interest in the northwest $\frac{1}{4}$ section 25, acquired by cultivation. Aaron Whitney reserved the right to farm that part of the quarter south of the river (being the land where the Borden factory now stands) until it came into the market. March 14, 1837, Charles H. Payne quitclaimed to Lewis A. Doolittle all interest in the north half of section 25. August 3, 1837, Chas. F. H. Goodhue, Jr., conveyed to Alexander Neely all interest in the store and lot in Belvidere which Goodhue then occupied. Mr. Goodhue also deeded to Mr. Neely the claim purchased from A. Nixon, which, although the boundaries are somewhat hard to locate, was apparently either what afterwards became "Original Belvidere" or somewhat to the east of that. As Mr. Neely afterwards was deeded 40 acres in the northwest $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 25 by Whitman, Gardner and Mrs. Nicholass, it is likely that some agreement was made whereby his claim should be recognized in this way and that Messrs. Nixon and Goodhue both located early on the northwest $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 25. October 24, 1838, Thomas O. Davis quitclaimed to Alexander Neely all interest in the northeast $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 36, on which said Davis then resided. This is the land which includes Turner's Hill and the Roach Stock Farm.

Thomas O. Davis had a log house on Turner's Hill, which was practically the only house in that part of the south side at a very early day. Mr. Davis afterward went to Chicago and started the old "Chicago American."

CHAPTER V.

VILLAGE HISTORY—OLD SETTLERS' REMINISCENCES.

BELVIDERE—PRINCIPAL STREETS AND FOR WHOM THEY WERE NAMED—LORENZO MC DOUGAL'S REC-

OLLECTIONS OF EARLY VILLAGE HISTORY—THE MOSS FAMILY—REMINISCENCES OF SIMON P. DOTY AND M. K. AVERY—VISIT OF MARGARET FULLER—ASHER E. JENNER ON EARLY DAYS IN BELVIDERE—SOME EARLY BUILDINGS—EARLY DAYS IN FLORA—THE EXTINCT VILLAGE OF NEWBURGH.

In the original town of Belvidere, Harrison, Marshall, Jackson, Boone, Perry, Madison, Van Buren, Webster, Hancock, and Wayne Streets were all named after prominent soldiers, jurists, or statesmen in American history. Kishwaukee was named after the river, State Street evidently because it was the State Road, and Main Street because it was intended for a prominence which it was destined never to attain. Main, Boone, and State Streets are each six rods wide, while the other streets in the original town are four rods wide. The vacant space in the central part of the town plat was called the "Public Square." Main Street has been continued across the Square, dividing it into an easterly and westerly half, but in the early days Main Street was not continued as such but ended at the northerly and southerly edges of the Square. On the part of the Public Square easterly of Main Street are the court house, sheriff's residence, and record office, and the part near Perry Street was sold to the North Side School trustees and is used for the Main Street building of their school system. The part of the Public Square westerly of Main has been leased by the county to the City of Belvidere for 50 years for the purpose of a park. West and East Streets derived their names from their relative position on the plat, but it is impossible to imagine why the street at the northwesterly corner of the quarter section was called South Street. East Street is now called Hurlbut Avenue, after General Stephen A. Hurlbut, whose fine residence was on that street. The street now called Baker Street, which has been closed up part of its length, was first called Pearl Street, which name is now given to a street in somewhat the same relative position on the south side. Ogden Street was named after William B. Ogden, an early mayor of Chicago, who made a sub-division in that locality, and Burgess Street was named after William T. Burgess, a prominent lawyer here, who also made a sub-division near the river. Goodrich Street was evidently named from Joseph Goodrich, who owned a great deal of property in that locality. On the south side, Meadow Street was evidently so called because it ran across the meadows on the south bank of the river. Locust and Pleasant Streets have an obvious derivation. Buchanan Street was apparently named from President Buchanan, Julien Street from the Julien House, Church Street evidently from the Catholic Church, and Whitney, Caswell, Gilman, and Coleman Streets from prominent early settlers. Lincoln Avenue, on the north side, was formerly Mechanic's Street. Logan Avenue, was formerly the State Road. Most of the south side streets are numbered from First to Ninth. In Gray's Addition, Gray Street and Nettle Street are from members of the Gray family. In Fuller and Foote's Sub-division, "Howland" evidently marks Mr. Foote's interest in the Mayflower passengers. Trenton Avenue and Parker Avenue in Columbia Sub-division show that Benjamin Fry had something to do with the naming. Columbia Avenue, on which the corset factory is located, took its name from the Columbia Heating Company. West Locust Street was formerly known as the River Road, as it still is further west. Starr Street was named after Frank W. Starr, and Ruby Street, and Dalbigne Street were named after members of the Cronk family. Bennett Street in Fairview was named from the Bennett family, who formerly owned land there, and Gardner Street is named after Cephas Gardner, being on the west line of the part which Mr. Gardner took of the quarter section entered by him in conjunction with Rev. Whitman and Mrs. Nicholass. Scott's Army Trail in Fairview was named more in commemoration of Scott's Army than as the exact place where they marched, because the place where they crossed the river has not yet been definitely located.

EARLY BELVIDERE RECOLLECTIONS.

When Lorenzo McDongal arrived with his father in 1836, he found the little community on the ground now covered by Belvidere, located about as follows: The State Road on the north side of the river was in the location of the present State Street. Crossing this was the County Road now known as Lincoln Avenue. Doty's Tavern stood as has already been stated and down by the river back of Doty's lived Mr. Schenck. Albertus Nixon lived in a cabin between the present Lincoln Avenue, and the river, out near the Moulton house. Chas. Payne lived around the bend and Timothy and David Caswell lived out near the present Big Thunder Mill.

It appears from the early records that Lincoln Avenue, near State Street, was called "Mechanics Street," probably as a compliment to such artisans as might be induced to locate in Belvidere.

West Lincoln Avenue ran out past where the Catholic Cemetery is now located and then turned southerly across the river and, except that part near State Street, was called Cline's Ford Road from Cornelius Cline, who lived in that locality. East Lincoln Avenue was usually called "the country road running along the north side of the Kishwankee past Austin Gardner's residence." It is said that the present corner at Lincoln Avenue and State Street was laid out with a carpenter's square, probably by Simon P. Doty and Frederick W. Crosby, whose land cornered there.

B. C. Meade came from Niagara County, N. Y., in 1844, with three of his brothers, two sisters and his parents. They came in two covered wagons, by way of Canada. Previous to that he had made the trip to this region to look around, coming mostly by foot. When he came, Big

Thunder's mummy was all gone and only one or two of the posts of his pen remained. He says Dr. Malony got the head. The stores were Smith & Walker, where the hardware store stands, and Bristol on the south-east corner of State and Mechanic. The American House was where the stage stopped. Doty's and Towner's were still there. The most traveled road to Rockford was the North Rockford Road, but the stage usually went across at Cline's Ford and out the River Road, which was there even at that time. The State Road came south across the river about where it is now, to the railroad track, and then ran off through where the business blocks are to the easterly. Most of the travel came in on the north side of the river, around the bend to the east of town. At that time Newburgh had three stores and Belvidere only two. Col. Sayre, who ran the mills, was an elderly man and liked to tell of Newburgh's coming greatness. Benjamin Hoyt was a large man with a very strong voice which could be heard at a great distance, particularly when he called his negro servant. At such times the neighbors would say, "There is Hoyt whispering again." He started to California, but died on the way. Benjamin F. Hoyt, his son, was usually called "Frank." He was shot through the neck by a man in Newburgh but, strange to say, was very little injured, while the one who did the shooting, and was otherwise a young man of good reputation, is said to have died from worrying over the occurrence. When Mr. Meade came in '44, it was one of the wettest seasons ever had here. The flats near the river in Belvidere were covered with water up to the wagon boxes. Mr. Meade and his brothers purchased a cabin on the Beaver. About the time they arrived, Mr. Mulford, of Winnebago County, had been robbed and was doing a little detective work on his own hook. As there were five of the robbers and five in Mr. Meade's party, and the latter brought with them a team of good horses, Mr. Mulford came to the cabin, stayed there over night and pretended he wished to buy the horses. After seeing the horses and talking with the members of the party, he became convinced that his suspicions were wholly unfounded and talked with them freely concerning the whole affair. The robbery of Mr. Mulford was a very bold affair and caused much excitement at the time. It has been related very fully in histories of Winnebago County but as it was outside the limits of Boone County it will not be reported here.

M. K. AVERY'S RECOLLECTIONS.

M. K. Avery (now of Portland, Iowa), in a letter to C. E. Sackett, writes as follows:

"My father moved from Auburn, Pa., to Illinois in 1838, and landed at Amesville, July 9, 1838. We stayed that night at George Ames' log tavern, a double log house. If I remember right, we made arrangements to move to your father's house the next day, and stayed with your folks until some time in September. Your folks had a new log house and had lived in it but a short time. In the meantime, my father bought a claim of Loudy Stevenson for, I believe, $250.00. That summer we bought enough poplar trees in Stevenson's woods, north of the river, for a set of house logs and had them hewed both sides, and in September had a 'raising.' When the frame was nearly up, a covered wagon drawn by a couple of black horses and containing a number of small children, with their parents and a niece of Mr. Thomas W. Porter, stopped to talk with the men at work on the house. These men persuaded Mr. Porter to turn around and drive back to Loudy Stevenson's and stay all night. Stevenson had a double log house. The next day James Otis persuaded Porter to go over the river and buy his claim. There was no house on the land, so Mr. Porter made arrangements to stay with 'Uncle Loudy,' as he was familiarly called, until they could erect a small house. They fared pretty hard that winter, living mostly on turnips, potatoes and salt. I will give the number and location of the houses on our prairie at the time we first crossed it from Marengo to George Ames'. The first sign of a house was a body without a roof, near where Wash Sears lived afterward. I think it was the one that David Barron moved into some time after. If my memory serves me right, there was a log house started up where the Renwicks lived afterward. There was a small field fenced where Wash Sears built his house afterward, but no house. We brought a nice bull dog with us from Pennsylvania. We stopped at a tavern in Marengo to feed our horses (three of them), but when we hitched up, the dog must have been asleep and we did not miss him until we got to this field. Father started back on foot to find the dog. He did not have to go far before he met the dog coming. It was a hot day and the dog was about used up, so father put him over the fence in the shade. The next day father went back and found him dead. The house on the hill (White) was owned by Francis Barren, the next was Loudy Stevenson's house (Sears), the next was Mr. Sackett's house (in Garden Prairie), the next was the Alfred Ames' house, the next was George Ames' tavern. I think that John Spinknabe, or as we pronounced it, Sponable, had a house north of the road in a grove near the river where the Boomers lived before they built the frame house near the road. Thomas Heaton and Putnam Morse helped Captain Boomer build the frame house. I believe it was the first frame house built on the prairie. S. P. Hyde and George T. Kasson had a small cabin north of the river, close to the old Indian ford; they lived on their claim and kept 'bachelor's hall.' They had a fine large cow and I used to go over there in order to get a rich bowl of mush and milk. Old Uncle Benn Heaton bought them out and lived there till he died. There were no other houses over the river until you crossed Rush Creek. There was a piece of prairie broken and some sod-corn on the place that Joseph Gray bought and settled upon some time after we came to Amesville. I think a man by the name of Wilder took the claim and broke the land that Gray got. Wilder planted some muskmelons and I used to go down there occasionally, and often the muskmelons, some of them, would go with me the same as the goose 'went with' the soldier who was trailing along a fish-hook baited with kernels of corn. I tell you, those muskmelons were the best that I ever tasted. I can almost smell them today. I believe Nat Perry was in the country before we came to Illinois. Mr. White came after we came, but it could not have been more than two or three years later. He bought the Francis Barren place on the hill. The Searses came about the time Marcus White came. Mr. White moved in with us for awhile. The Sears boys also lived with us for awhile. They had fine guns and prairie chickens were thick, so we lived on chickens as long as they (the Searses, not the chickens), lived with us. Loudy Stevenson sold out to them and he took up another claim on Bonus. The McDougals came a year or so before we came. Morris Yates came later and took up a claim on this side of the river. He afterward sold out to Sryrl P. Hyde and took up a claim at the mouth of Coon Creek. Yates went to California and died there. When we came to Amesville there were a few settlers about Shattuck's Grove. Among them was John Baxter. He came in 1838. I have heard him say Indians were pretty plenty at that time. The pen made of shakes around Big Thunder's body, on the Mound, was standing. I have seen a portion of his body and blankets and willow baskets inside of the inclosure. His head had been removed before we came."

REMINISCENCES OF MR. DOTY.

Simon P. Doty celebrated his 80th birthday, May 9, 1877, by giving a supper to a number of the old settlers. According to Mr. Doty's recollections as reported in the paper on this occasion, he had a little cabin some twenty or thirty rods northwest of where Union Hall was afterward built. It happened that a grand Whig rally was held and composed chiefly of Mr. Doty and Dr. Whitney. Dr. Whitney wrote up the meeting and the various resolutions for the Chicago papers, and described it as "A large and enthusiastic meeting held at the Belvidere Hotel." Mr. Doty was the large and Dr. Whitney the enthusiastic part. Some time later two Chicago travelers stopped at a cabin on South Prairie, but the proprietor was not in shape to entertain them. They thereupon recollected the account as to "Belvidere Hotel" and made their way to that place. Mr. Doty's bill of fare happened to be confined to hulled corn, but he did his best to entertain his guests and started them next morning on their journey fairly well satisfied and filled with nutritious hulled corn. In that way Mr. Doty commenced in the hotel business.

Mr. Doty once got up quite a reputation as the man who shaved by the blaze on a white oak tree. This happened in '40, when the great hard elder meeting was held at Springfield. Mr. Doty and a large number went down as delegates. When they arrived at Sangamon River, as it was to take a long time to cross the large party, they all began to "fix up" in order to make a respectable appearance on their arrival in the city. When the rest began to pull out their little looking glasses, the Belvidere pioneer thought he would spruce up a little, like the others. So he took his axe and made a place on a big white oak tree and stood up before it and shaved off his beard. This was highly original and nobody had ever seen a man shave in this way before and hundreds witnessed it. It was a droll joke. It got into the papers and went the rounds. Mr. Doty could have filled a good sized book with stories connected with the early settlement of this section of country, but the book could not give Doty's style of telling it.

MARGARET FULLER IN BELVIDERE.

Margaret Fuller, the celebrated writer, visited Kishwaukee and Rock River Valleys in 1843, and added by her genius much interest to the places at which she stopped. Miss Fuller belonged to the gifted circle of which Hawthorne, Emerson, and James Freeman Clarke were a part. She afterward married Count d'Ossoli, and was drowned in a shipwreck within sight of land, while returning from Italy to her native home. Miss Fuller took a trip from Chicago to Oregon and Dixon, Ill., in 1843, and among the places connected with her name in that region are Hazelwood, Eagle's Nest and Ganymede Springs, all of which are along the Rock River. She told of her experiences in her book entitled "At Home and Abroad." The only reference to Belvidere in that book is the statement that she stopped here on her way to Chicago and found a very good hotel. This was probably the American House, which at that time was considered one of the best hotels between Chicago and Galena. Miss Fuller also states that Big Thunder had been buried in Belvidere, but that his grave at that time had been despoiled. It is apparent that she was pleased with the location and prospects of Belvidere, because on October 21, 1843, Block 20 in the original town of Belvidere was deeded to her brother, Arthur B. Fuller. It was purchased of John Walworth at a consideration of $455.00, and the tradition is that Miss Fuller furnished the money. Mr. Fuller ran a school on said premises for a short time, but sold them March 29, 1845, and they afterwards came into the possession of Rev. Chas. Hill Roe. This is the block upon which Squire H. C. DeMunn lived for so long. The building was that used by the old "Newton Academy" in the very early days. It does not appear that Miss Fuller herself ever stayed any considerable length of time in Belvidere.

MOSS NEIGHBORHOOD.

The Moss family occupied considerable land along the river road and have been prominent in the county's history. Asa Moss, Sr., was born at Waterbury, Conn., 1779. He married Harriet Sherwood at Kingsbury, Washington County, N. Y., in 1803. They had thirteen children. They removed to Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1821. In 1836, Andrew Moss and Edward E. Moss took passage in a sailing vessel from Dunkirk, N. Y., to Chicago, where they arrived in seven weeks. Andrew Moss reached Belvidere May 10, 1836, and took up a claim southwest of Belvidere, where he died 1883 on the same land he took up from the government, and which had never been mortgaged. Although but 19 years old at the time he arrived in Belvidere, he was a good carpenter and had charge of a force of men working for the Belvidere Company. Edward E. Moss was a member of the first grand jury in May, 1838. On the land afterwards occupied by the Bennett creamery lived Edward E. Moss, Jr. Charles S. Moss was county surveyor of Boone County for twenty successive years, 1869 to 1889, when he removed to Kansas City. Edward E. Moss owned the farm now occupied by the gas plant, Columbia Heating Co., and the corset factory. He died in 1895, near Denver, Colo., aged about eighty years. Further east lived Ephraim Smedley, whose wife was formerly Sally Moss. Mr. Smedley came in 1843 and remained until his death in 1886. George B. Moss was born in the house afterward occupied by James Kelly, in September, 1846. Mr. Moss is well known for his fine penmanship and is an authority upon the early history and weather conditions.

ASHER E. JENNER AND EARLY BELVIDERE.

"I was born in the Town of Moriah, Essex County, N. Y., April 10, 1818. My parents were Stephen Jenner and Betsey Eliza Mather Jenner. I lived in the town of Moriah until 1831; while I was there I went to school. Then my folks moved to Chautauqua County, N. Y. That was before the days of the railroad. The only railroad at that time in New York State was one that ran up the hill at Albany to Schenectady. We went by schooner on Lake Champlain; Erie canal to Buffalo, team to Dunkirk, ox team from there to Harmony, where they located; that was in the spring of 1831. I went to school there the winter of '31 and '32. At 14 years of age I went to Jamestown, N. Y., to learn the trade of watch repairing and silver smithing of James Harrison and learned those trades thoroughly. I left there in '38 and came with my father west, around by the lakes. I had a brother who came in '36 and a brother-in-law in '37. Father had been here in '37 but went back and came again in '38. My sister and brother-in-law's family came with us. Came around the lakes from Dunkirk to Chicago. Landed in Chicago May 29, 1838. Came on foot, father and I, from Chicago to Belvidere, in just two days to an hour. Got here the first day of June, 1838, at 11 o'clock in the morning.

"We first stopped at Doty's. He had a tavern on the corner where Mart Bowley's store now is. Towner was just finishing up his hotel, had the frame raised, on the ground where Dud Derthick lives now.

"I hung out my shingle and started watch repairing in a room that was called the store room to Doty's hotel, right on the corner where Mart Bowley is. Had about all the watch repairing I could do for several years. Was the first repairer from Chicago to Galena."

"What families did you find here when you came, Mr. Jenner?"

"Prof. S. S. Whitman on the ground where W. S. Brown is now. Cephas Gardner on the ground where Pamela Monlton owns now.

"Down in the hollow across the street, Mason S. Sherburne lived.

"Right back of the Presbyterian Church, east of that, was a little building about 12 feet square made of rough lumber, Whitney's office. He didn't occupy it.

"The building now occupied by Pet Courville as a shoe store stood on the corner where Dempsey is, and was Alexander Neely's store. The family lived in the back end and a man by the name of Johnny Scanlan had a tailor shop upstairs.

"As you crossed State Street, right back of Greenlee's store, was Hiram Waterman. On the corner where the hardware store is was the frame of an unfinished building, not finished until 1839.

"On the next corner, Lincoln Avenue, and Kishwankee Street (only there was no Kishwankee Street, the only roads were the State Road and County Road), a man by name of D. D. Elliott occupied the back end of a building and John D. Cowles the front end of the same building as a grocery and liquor store.

"Up in front of Amos Jones' on Ogden Street, in what is now Lincoln Avenue, was a double log house. In one end Samuel Cates and family lived and in the other end my brother-in-law and his family lived.

"Nothing between that and the mill down that way. Dr. John S. King's family lived there. He was one of the original Belvidere Company. Down in the hollow near the race lived the man that tended the saw mill, Dan Sheldon.

"Coming back up through the woods, up to the State Road, on the corner was Doty's Hotel. Up the street at the Towner place was the Towner family, and on the next lot beyond it was a shop belonging to J. Fiske, that he moved there from out on the State Road.

"Then up on the mound was the frame of the academy, with the rafters not yet put on. That was the extent of the buildings when I came here. Nothing on the south side in what is now city. Up where Coleman's property is were Dr. Daniel H. Whitney and Aaron Whitney and David Caswell. Up on the hill was a log house that Tom O. Davis lived in (the man that started the old "Chicago American"), further on was Chas. McDougall, Lorenzo McDougall's father. That was in the present town of Bonus. Norman Bartlett lived between that log house and McDougall's.

"When I came here S. S. Whitman was postmaster. He had a little cupboard about three feet square and Mrs. Doty used to tend post-office for him. The mail facilities were a stage coach that ran through three times a week each way. Came here in the night from both ways. I ran the postoffice the first season I was here and for five or six years.

"When I came Simon P. Doty was sheriff. I guess he was appointed when the county was organized. In '38 H. C. Walker was elected sheriff on the Democratic ticket over Doty on the Whig ticket. The politics of the county used to be Democratic on a straight ballot, but the Whigs generally managed to get a majority of the offices. Walker didn't ever get his commission. It was sent from Vandalia, the state capital, but he never got it. The Democrats used to accuse somebody of taking it out of the post-office. Walker appointed B. F. Lawrence deputy sheriff.

"When I came, there was a frame bridge across the river on State Street, where the present bridge is. The high water in '40 (the highest I have ever seen here by a foot or two) took that bridge off. Then they built a float bridge. And then Cline built another frame bridge (Gilman having the contract and Cline doing the building), on the site of the present bridge. That stayed until it washed out. Then another wooden bridge was built. Then in '66, the father of E. E. P. Truesdell built an iron bridge there. About ten years ago the Clinton Bridge Company built the present bridge.

"A little above Main Street bridge used to be a ford that we drove across with teams.

"Scott's army crossed near Main Street bridge. Scott told me so himself in the fall of '38. He came through in a coach. He had a valet to help him dress, as he had a lame arm. He also brought a coachman with him and two horses. Stopped at Towner's over night; driving in a little before sundown. When we found out who it was we determined to serenade him. There was a fiddler here by the name of Lovejoy, he used to be the stage agent at Rockford; Henry Green played the flute; John Sheldon the tenor drum and I played a clarinet. We went up there and after being introduced to the General we got to talking. He said 'When I crossed your bridge down here I saw where we forded across.' I said, 'where was it?' He said, 'I saw where the bank was broken down a few rods above the bridge. That's where we broke it down to take our artillery across.'

"Scott was 6 feet 2 inches and over, tall; weighed 250 to 275 pounds. His pictures give a good idea of how he looked. He was inclined to be a little aristocratic, 'felt his oats,' but after all he could speak to a common fellow even if he was too poor."

"What about the different houses that were here when you came, how were they built?"

"Doty's hotel. Made of ash and basswood. At the further end a one story kitchen. Then in the middle a one and a half story dining room. Then a bar room, one story. Then a store room came out on the corner. None of it was painted.

"Whitney's house was not painted. I think that was a one and a half story frame. Gardner's house was the same kind.

"The log houses, of course, were not painted. Whitney's office was one story. Whitney's store was afterwards painted. The next house was a balloon frame house where Waterman lived, that was not painted. Dr. King's was a log house, double, one and a half story; up the ladder was the sleeping bunks. It was not painted.

"Towner's hotel was afterwards painted; but not when I came. Fiske's shop was a one and a half story, pretty high. Not painted. The Methodists held meetings in the upper room."

"How about the land owned by the county?"

"Hiram Waterman was commissioner of sales. S. P. Hyde did the surveying and platting. It was finished after I came here. When I came nobody owned any land. There was a sale at Galena in '39, range 3, and a sale at Chicago for range 4 in '40. The Belvidere property was owned by the Belvidere Company, of which Dr. King, Nath. Crosby, Dr. Whitney and Aaron Whitney, and Dr. Goodhue of Chicago, were members. That company was organized in '36 or '37. When the land was bought in '39, Col. Joel Walker they appointed to purchase the land and he did purchase it but whether in his own name or William H. Gilman's I don't know. The county property was donated to Boone County by the Belvidere Company if they would locate the county seat there and they stuck the stake there, about 40 feet from the corner of the court house."

"How about domestic animals?"

"When I came here in '38 there wasn't a live hog in town. Funk came up with a drove that same fall and he sold them out to George Waterman and Alexander Neely; sold them seventy or eighty. A few years afterwards, in '42 and '43, Dr. Post had a house and barn built on the south side of Lincoln Avenue now about opposite the Presbyterian Church, and that winter was a hard winter. There came a cold snap and when there comes a thaw Doc thought things weren't exactly right under his barn, and he went and looked and there were seventy hogs dead under his barn. They had piled up there and had froze up."

"How long did it take to drive the logs to Chicago?"

"Oh, about four or five days."

"Were there many deer around here when you got here?"

"Well, the only deer that I recollect of seeing: I was over the river and there was a flock of three or four deer loomed up over the hill beyond Turner hill, and turned south. One winter, about the winter of '39 or '40, we had considerable snow, about as much as I have ever seen here since; so much that in the spring of '40 the river was as high as I have ever seen it. The Maloney boys lived over on Squaw Prairie, what we called the Walker property, among them was Mike Taplin and Mike goes into the woods and got into a wallow and he killed a dozen of them—knocked them in the head with an axe."

"Was there much timber around where your house now is?"

"Right along here you know it was all timber from the mill up to Doty's, pretty near up there it was timber, and right here it was timber, and a little further out from that timber it was hazel brush. The people used to drive across from the mill up to Towner's and cut right across the corner."

"When you came here where did they get their grinding done?"

"Well, they had got a mill started here. My father was out here in '37 and helped to build a grist mill down below here and they were doing some grinding there, but it was mostly done over on Fox River. Then they had a mill down at Newburgh, Sayers."

"Did they have a saw mill near here?"

"They had two or three of them. Crosby had a saw mill on the Beaver between here and Rockford, and then there was a saw mill below here near the grist mill and afterwards Crosby built a saw mill where the brewery is now. He had a mill there run by horse power."

One of the early settlers was Chas. McDougall. He came by the way of Chicago, in 1836, and settled on land in Sections 31 and 32 in Bonus, through which runs the State Road. Most of this land is still in the possession of Hazen McDougall. Mr. McDougall left two children, Miranda Merchant and Lorenzo McDougall. Lorenzo McDougall died about two years ago. He had very vivid and accurate recollections of the early days, and it is to be much regretted that they were not written down, as they contain a great deal of value concerning the history of the county. Shortly before Mr. McDougall's death, an old settler's picnic was held at the farm, which was much enjoyed. The author understands that Mrs. Countryman, one of Mr. McDougall's daughters, has material from her father's recollections, which it is hoped she will publish.

Among the other old settlers were the Hales. Oliver Hale settled on Squaw Prairie at an early date. His son Devillo Hale lived until a few years ago, and was a great mine of information as to the early days. He afterward moved to Washburn County, Wis., and the writer has several times had the pleasure of conversing with him there about early Boone County history. It seemed strange to be sitting away up in the Wisconsin woods in a chair, made in Boone County in the '40s, and looking at Big Thunder's scalping knife, while Mr. Hale told of the incidents connected with his getting it. Probably the best authority as to Belvidere city itself was Asher E. Jenner, who for many years was city clerk and town clerk, and who held many of the offices in the county and town before most of the present generation were born. Some of Mr. Jenner's recollections are given in this history.

EARLY DAYS IN FLORA.

Mrs. H. L. Bowen, who still lives on the old farm in Flora, which has been occupied by her people for so many years (in Section 25, just across from Bloods' Point Cemetery), is the author of the following article on the early days in that locality, which we consider the best article on early days in Northern Illinois which we have ever seen. Much of the information as to the mode of living and other matters is applicable to the whole county. The paper was read to the Boone County Historical Society some years ago, but has never before been published:

"Place a tallow candle among the electric lights—the rays are very dim. That is the position I am placed among so many learned writers and speakers who are members of the Boone County Historical Society. I was asked to prepare a paper on the early history of Boone County. My paper will be very commonplace and written in a rambling manner, consisting mostly of incidents of my own township. We all magnify that which is our own: spread an ideal glory over our own country, state, county, town or neighborhood, and think with reverence and pride of everything that pertains thereto. There are a number now living in this thriving city, who at an early day came with their parents, and settled in what is now Flora Township, much older than I, who can remember what transpired at a very early date, while I cannot write from recollection. I was not one of the "first white children born in the township," but it was my fortune to be born, and live continuously, on the same farm, all the years of my life, what but few in the county can say for the same length of time.

"Once upon a time," as the story-tellers say,— In the year 1835, an uncle of mine, Willis Case, his wife and three children, came to the then far west and settled near where Charter Oak Church now stands, just out of Boone County, in DeKalb. Most of the early settlers built their cabins in or near the timber and near a stream of water. They were very lonesome, and homesick, but wrote glowing accounts to their relatives in the East of the fair land of promise they inhabited, that it was a veritable Garden of Eden and that when land came into market it could be bought for $1.25 per acre. In 1838, a company of seven started from their homes in Collinsville, a large manufacturing village in Connecticut, consisting of Daniel Bliss, wife, and two children, Edmund, and Maryette, who, in after years married Clark Russell, Wait Rice, and wife, my father and mother and Candace Case, who subsequently married Robert Norton, parents of E. C. Norton, of this city. They came by the way of the Erie Canal, around the chain of lakes, from Buffalo to what is now the Garden City of Chicago, but was then:

"A barren waste of swampy land.

Flat as a pancake, rich as grease,

Where gnats were full as big as toads,

And mosquitoes quite as large as geese."

Their worldly possessions were packed in huge chests; feather-beds, patch-work quilts, broad-cloth suits and velvet vests for the men, and silk dresses for the women, tables, wooden clocks, dishes, glassware, tallow candles, brass candlesticks and snuffers, andirons, groceries, and even large brass and iron kettles, for laundry use, were among the precious things brought to the new country. Three men, and three span of horses were hired, to convey them to the end of their journey; the women and children riding on the large loads.

All streams had to be forded, and the swamps were bottomless; many times were they stuck in the mud, unloaded, doubled teams, and pulled through. They were almost a week on their way from Chicago, for the teamsters lost the trail, wandered over the prairies, and through sloughs, and near 12 o'clock one night, they espied a hut, hallooed and Uncle Andy Miles came out to direct them. The women were tired, cross and homesick, and said they knew that they had reached the Garden of Eden, and that he was old Adam. They went on repining and in due length of time reached their destination, their brother's log cabin; 14 feet square, a fireplace and chimney, built of sticks of wood, daubed with mud, at one end of the room; a puncheon floor; one small window with oiled paper for glass; a door of slabs, with a latch-string.

No screen had been devised to keep flies and mosquitoes out, but there was a "smudge" near the door; a dense suffocating smoke, to keep the pests away. No telegraph or telephones, not even free rural mail delivery then and it cost 25 cents to send a letter. Their arrival was unexpected, the hosts were not prepared to receive company. A saucer of grease, with a rag for a wick, was all the light they had. The culinary department consisted of some corn meal, that had been pounded in a mortar and then ground in a coffee-mill. The nearest grist mill was at Beloit. Some one was dispatched in haste to the nearest neighbor for supplies,—potatoes, salt-pork and some wheat flour were obtained. No gas-stoves then; the baking was done in a tin oven called a "baker," placed on the hearth and open next to the fire, or in a flat iron kettle with a cover of iron, buried in coals of fire. Each fire-place had a crane, with iron hooks, for supporting the kettles, and swung over the fire; these, with a long-handled frying-pan, were the cooking utensils, and in this way all food was prepared. Imagine 17 people, in that 14 foot room, on a hot night in July, as there were two boarders, besides their family of five, namely B. N. Dean, father of C. B. Dean, and Isaac McCoy, who recently died in this city, the three teamsters, and seven emigrants.

It was the kitchen, dining room, and sleeping-room, but true hospitality prevailed, there was always room for one more at the table, and any number of lodgers could be accommodated, as long as there was an inch of space on the floor.

The Indians had left, not long before, and their trails were still distinctly seen. Near where Cold Spring Factory since stood was an Indian idol, made of wood; but, by the deep paths worn around it, it must have been worshipped as devoutly as the ones set with precious stones in the far East.

Arthur Blood was the first white settler in what is now Flora Township, and from him Blood's Point takes its name. He erected two log cabins at the point of timber east of us, and pre-empted, or claimed, whole sections of land.

Pre-empting was the right of a settler, to purchase land in preference to those who came later, when the land came into the market. At that time Blood's Point, Shattuck's Grove, and such places, were as widely known as Belvidere.

In a few days, the party from the East decided to locate near Blood's Point, and two families lived in one of the cabins, until they could build on the claims they purchased. Among old papers of my father's, I see that in 1838, he paid $110.00 for the right, title, interest and claim, to 240 acres of land. When the land came into market, land warrants were issued for a certain number of acres, not to exceed 80 at one time, at the land offices at Galena, 1841, Chicago, and Dixon, 1843, at $1.25 an acre. A certificate of the register of these offices was deposited in the general land office of the United States.

The signature of John Tyler, President, was affixed to the patent. My father was a jack-of-all-trades, and in 1838-9 built a frame house, of three rooms, the first in the township.

The frame, siding, flooring, shingles, and lath, of oak, the doors, cupboards, and window sash of black walnut, and two rooms were ceiled with the same kind of wood. One room was plastered, not as smooth, and white, as the hard finish of to-day,—the fireplace and chimney of brick. One day while he was at dinner, nearly a mile away, some one with the proper authority came and wrote with chalk, on the frame-work "This is Fairfield Precinct." It was changed to Benton in 1850, and to Flora Township in 1853. Trees were chopped, and hewed, for the frame,—not a foot of lumber for use, without drawing the logs miles away, to be sawed into boards and then a long drive, of nearly 80 miles, and return, to buy nails, and glass, for the windows.

"How independent they did live,

In the old pioneer days.

When everything was done by hand,

In good old-fashioned ways."

No furniture stores nearer than Chicago, chairs, bedsteads, and tables were made of walnut, hickory, or oak—the real article, not veneered. The seats of the chairs were of hickory splints, or braided corn husks, manufactured at home, as were also the low wooden cradles, to rock the babies in, but just as skillfully made as the one on exhibition in the Massachusetts building at Chicago, in 1893.

"That was made of wood, strong and good,

And has lasted for many a day.

It will always be treasured.

For in it John Quincy Adams lay."

So that I cannot boast of being born or of ever living in a log house, as most children of the old settlers can, and of which so many statesmen, and noted ones are proud.

I have seen the log-cabin at Detroit, Mich., where Thomas W. Palmer, President of the National Commission which promoted the great World's Fair at Chicago, was born. He gave the cabin, with a portion of the homestead on which it stands, as a park for the city, on the condition that it should have perpetual care. He had also been U. S. Minister to Spain, and wrote while there:

"In the royal court of Madrid,
Its titles, and degrees,
I often think with longing,
Of a spot across the seas,
It has worn no royal splendor,
But the dearest spot on earth,
Is the vine embowered cabin.
That marks my place of birth."

"Still within the chimney corner,
Stands my mother's rocking chair,
In its seat, the half-done stocking,
With the needles rusting there,
Splendor keeps no hold upon me,
For wheresoe'er I roam,
Dream of dreams, I'm always dreaming,
Of my old log-cabin home."

Every family had a flock of sheep, and in every house was a spinning wheel, reel and swifts, where all the wool was spun into skeins of yarn. Most of it dyed (at home), to be woven into sheets, coverlets, and winter clothing, for men, women, and children, or doubled and twisted into yarn, to be knit by hand, into stockings and mittens for the family; yet there was leisure time to knit yards of edging for trimmings.

There were eleven hand looms, within a distance of two and one half miles, on which all the cloth for the neighborhood was woven. A tailor-ess lived in the vicinity, who went from house to house, cutting and making all the clothing for the men and boys. No sewing machines, all hand sewing. No thread came on spools, but was in skeins, whether of silk, linen or cotton. Each family had from one to three cows, and not one of them had a pedigree. No college professor with a testing machine ever came to tell of what the milk was composed. A dasher churn for making the butter, no thermometer to get the right temperature, or ice for cooling it, but with other merchandise it was taken in a lumber wagon to Chicago, where the best sold for eight or ten cents a pound. Almost every family made some cheese in the summer. The press was very simple in design,—the lever weighted with stones, a peck measure for a hoop, and placed under a tree for shade, but they were genuine full creams; never heard of hard skins or filled cheese. Sometimes a sage, or a tansy one was made for a rarity.

The poultry was a mixture of all the varieties since they came out of Noah's Ark, of every shape and color and would weigh from 2½ to 3 pounds each.

There were hogs, "prairie rooters." In the market report of a Chicago paper of 1845, are the following items. "Owing to the small amount of produce arriving from the country, prices are unsettled. PORK—Prices have not changed if it can be said there are any. We noticed a small lot of hogs, averaging about 300 pounds each, which only brought $2.75 each. We hear of a sale today of 5,000 bushels of winter wheat to be delivered on board of steamers." There was no Board of Trade and "puts and calls," and "longs" and "shorts," and rises and falls, and risks of such sorts.

Teaming to Chicago was one of the paying occupations, carrying produce to market and bringing back supplies. The price paid in 1840, for drawing about 30 bushels of wheat, $7.34, and bringing back a barrel of salt, $1.12½. The expenses on the road, four shillings for supper, lodging, and breakfast at the "tavern." (hotels were unknown), and hay for the team. The feed was taken from home. It took five or six days to go and return. At that time all the fruit was wild, and was dried, or preserved for winter use, and pumpkin butter, and pumpkins cut into rings and dried, included the winter supply. Nothing canned except oysters; they could be bought in tin cans, in Chicago, but now if the North Pole is ever discovered, it will probably be surrounded by old tin cans.

Deer were plentiful and often came and drank from the spring near the house as late as 1841; three saddles of venison sold for $1.62½.

There were but few books in the neighborhood. In each house was a bible, a hymn-book and an almanac. Almanacs were not then given away, but cost two shillings. If in addition to these they possessed the "Pilgrim's Progress," Pollock's "Course of Time," "Paradise Lost," and in fiction, "Alonzo and Melissa," "Charlotte Temple" and "Robinson Crusoe," one had a large library. But—

"Of all the books that helped them,
Along life's onward track,
In summer, winter, spring or fall,
None beat the Almanac."

The first school house erected in the precinct was of logs, in 1838, and was the only one until 1847. The seats were of oak, without a back, and no plane used in making them.

"It was a church on Sunday,
And the people did the singing,
Not a trained artistic choir."

Many denominations held services there, but in 1842, a church organization named the "First Christian Church of Fairfield Precinct" was organized and maintained its existence until 1861. Domestic Science was taught then, but not in school, that is, work by the hands, and consisted of churning, knitting, mopping, baking, shopping, and splitting rails, (no boards, barbed or woven wire for fencing).

The girls took music lessons, lessons upon the spinning wheel, and practiced late and early, on the spindle, swift and reel. Domestic Economy was instilled in the mind of the child, from youth up. Holidays were few. The first Fourth of July I can remember of celebrating I was nearly four years old, and came to Belvidere, in a lumber wagon filled with people seated in chairs, and when one had a good span of horses, that was a tony rig. On what is now Pearl Street, near the residence of Mr. Geo. Ames, one of the boys had to get out and open a large gate, it could not have been a laid out road. They assembled at the old court house on the mound. All the children were to march, and all that lived in the county were to have a narrow green ribbon tied on their right arm. I do not know why green was selected as the color—perhaps for the same reason, as by the country milk-maid in Fable No. 2 in the old Webster's Elementary Spelling-book, that was used for a reader, as well as a speller, in early days. "She was musing on buying a silk dress—green, let me consider—yes—green suits my complexion best, and green it shall be." Two women tied the ribbons on the arms of the children, asking each one, where they lived. One said to me—"little girl in what county do you live?" I answered "Boone." There was a girl older than I, who was to march with me. She said I did not, that I lived in DeKalb, and the older one was thought to be right. I did not get any, and I grieved over the injustice of marching without a ribbon, when the others had one, and I rightfully should have had. I still remember the circumstance distinctly.

Old account books are not very interesting reading—nevertheless here are some accounts taken from one of 1841 to '42.

1 barrel salt, $2.50; 2 loads of hay, 50 cents; 70 feet oak plank, 70 cents; 1 pound raisins, 25 cents; 5 pounds beef, 2 cents pound, 10 cents; 1 Almanac, 25 cents; 1 bunch of quills, 15 cents; 2 deeds, and 11 acknowledgments, $2.00; 1 bottle of ink, 75 cents; 50 fence rails, 3 cents each,

$1.50; Cradling 4 acres of wheat, 50 cents per acre, $2.00; Taxes on 180 acres of land, $2.89; In 1844, 1 dozen steel pens, 56 cents.

Neighbors were nearer then than now; a log house could be rolled up in a short time, and there was much more sociability, more neighborly kindness, and more cheerful aid in sickness and trouble. The names of the pioneers of the early settlements should be preserved. Here is a record of those who first located on or near what is now Kirkland Road, but was then called the County Road, down to 1843, and all lived within the distance of two miles from Blood's Point:

Arthur Blood, the first settler; Reuben Penwell, 1836; Allen Russell, 1837; David Russell, 1835; Abraham Bush, married Henrietta Russell in 1838, the first couple married in the precinct; Moses Bush; Abel Blood; Henry Cushman; Daniel Bliss, taught the first school, 1838-9; Horace Lucas; Albert Lucas; Ammi Smith, first justice of the peace, was also a Wesleyan Methodist preacher; Nahum Rice; Daniel Blanchard; Allen Blanchard, made and repaired boots and shoes; John Randall, horse shoeing, oxen were also shod; John Whitney; Elijah Robinson; Jonathan Young; Thomas Cunningham; Leonard Whitney; Robert Norton; Henry Sawtell, doctor, died in 1846; Samuel Cochran; James Robinson; F. P. Low, early supervisor; Augustus Herring; Samuel Robbins, one of the brothers who located the first claim in Boone County. Part of the city of Belvidere is located on this claim. He sold, went farther west, came back, and married Mary Whitney, daughter of John Whitney. She died in 1850. He enlisted in the Civil War, and was killed at the battle of Shiloh. Wait Rice, early treasurer of schools, 1842, and at the December term of the county commissioners' court, 1843, was the first one appointed overseer of the poor for Fairfield Precinct. R. D. Rix, he received his commission for justice of the peace from Governor Thomas Ford, and was sworn and subscribed before A. E. Jenner, August 26, 1843. He died while he held the office, but many a couple he joined in wedlock. Among them, Moses Lucas and Merinda Cochran, parents of J. G. Lucas, B. N. Dean, and Lydia Smith, parents of C. B. Dean. They had big weddings then, fifty or sixty being invited to the wedding feast. There were no wedding presents or lengthy descriptions of the occurrence in the papers. Of the above list, not one now remains to relate incidents of the past. All have been cut down by the scythe of Time. They may not have attained what the world calls greatness,—but we owe a debt of gratitude to the ones who raised this county from its primitive state.

"They have gone to the beautiful City,
In that country far away,
Where a day is as a thousand years,
And a thousand years, a day."

SOME EARLY BUILDINGS.

The Baptist meeting house was erected in the later '30s on the corner of Van Buren and Hurlbut Avenue, where Squire Reynolds afterward lived. It was removed directly across the street and used as a church building by the Universalists. In 1861 it was again moved and used as a paint shop. It was finally moved to what is now 615 Madison Street and used as a dwelling place. The first Circuit Court was held in this building, and more is said elsewhere in this history concerning it.

The first building occupied by the Presbyterian Church, which was used exclusively for church purposes, was erected in 1842. In June, 1856, it was decided to tear down that building, purchase the next lot and erect a new building upon the two lots with side and end galleries and a seating capacity of 800. After considerable effort the building was completed in 1858. Here, on the evening of April 20, 1861, was held one of the most soul thrilling meetings ever held in Belvidere, when the people gathered, aroused by the firing on Fort Sumter, to plan for the coming conflict.

The residence formerly occupied by William Derthick was built in 1837 by Dr. Enos Campbell. The American House was open to the public in December, 1842, a large number being present to share the festivities.

FROM A GAZETTEER PUBLISHED BY GEORGE HAWES
IN 1858.

It is stated that Belvidere contained about 2,500 people, 40 stores and 4 banks. The "Standard" was issued weekly, having commenced publication about 1852. There were three flour mills, a steam planing mill, nine churches, a female seminary, two union schools, several private schools and five hotels. John Saxton was postmaster. Among the names given we note the American Hotel conducted by Mr. Truesdell, B. Ames & Sons, druggists, near the railroad depot, Bidwell & Reynolds, carriages and wagons, Boone County Bank, Belvidere Hotel, conducted by Mr. Doty, Fuller, Lawrence & Woods, bankers, John M. Glasner, dry goods, American Express Company, C. W. Ives, agent, Julien Honse, J. C. Parkhouse, proprietor, Arcade House, H. Mixer, proprietor, John Plaine & Co., hardware, Ransom & Fuller, drug store, Mark Ramsey, harness, W. R. Woodruff, drug store, John Yount, lumber.

THE STATE ROAD.

The state road through Bonus, as shown by the original plat, appears to have run from the east line of the county for about two miles, about the same as it does now, until it reached William Ames' Tavern in the northwest corner of section 25, on what was afterward the Cephas McMaster farm. From there it ran west about half a mile and then turned northerly to cross the Kishwaukee River about the middle of the southwest quarter of section 27. It then turned west again and ran a little south of the half section line of section 28 and 29 to the Piscesaw. In the government plat of Bonus, most of the north half, except in the westerly part, appears as prairie and the remainder appears as timber. Most of the trees used as monuments appear to be burr oak, but we also find ash, white oak, black oak, pin oak, walnut, cherry, iron wood, lynn, hackberry, and red oak.

NEWBURGH.

One of the most interesting, and in a sense romantic, incidents in the history of the county, is the rise and almost complete extinction of Newburgh.

This little community was situated on the south half of Section 30, and the north half of Section 31, in Belvidere Township. No plat of the township was ever recorded, either in this county or in Winnebago, and it is impossible to locate where most of the lots and blocks were. The land where Newburgh was originally located, was entered by Benjamin Hoyt, in October, 1839. Mr. Hoyt erected a two story frame tavern about 1840, which was called the Newburgh House. The school house stood about ten rods north of the tavern, but was removed somewhere about 1850 to a place a few rods west of the tavern. In 1855, the teacher was Miss Eliza Marsh, who had thirteen pupils. On account of the weather and difficulty of travel the terms were very short. Miss Marsh afterwards became Mrs. Church and was the mother of Cassius Church of Belvidere. The saw mill was located to the north of the village on the Beaver. It was built by Rossman and afterwards sold to Edwin Ballard. It was torn down about 1886.

There was a wool carding establishment, a chair factory was operated by Mr. Campbell, brother of George Campbell, formerly of Belvidere. In many farm houses around vanished Newburgh there probably exist chairs and other furniture turned out in this early establishment. There were two stores in the village, one directly south of the school house and the other about east of the tavern, the first was run by Squires, the latter by Benjamin F. Hoyt, (usually called "Frank"), son of Benjamin Hoyt, in 1839, and for a time thereafter, Abel C. Gleason and M.

Samuel Bowley

W. Gleason ran a blacksmith shop. Among the other names connected with the village were those of James Sayre, Chas. Waterman, Densley Keezer, Robert M. and John Toffelmire, and the Hartwell family. Some of the streets in the town were Columbus, Bridge, and Broadway. The place was also called Sayreville, and an old summons now before the writer dated in 1847, and issued by Justice Thomas W. Hartwell called it Cleveland. Mr. Hartwell was the first male child born there. Col. Sayre was one of the leading men of Newburgh, and it seemed doubtful at one time as to whether Belvidere or Newburgh would be the coming city. The fact that Belvidere was on the State Road, and the lack of a railroad in Newburgh, caused Belvidere to gain the ascendancy and the dwellers of Newburgh dropped away one by one, some to Belvidere and some to Cherry Valley, and elsewhere, so that only the old tavern remained to mark the place of vanished Newburgh. The land on which the village stood was sold under a mortgage foreclosure in 1847, and afterwards passed into the hands of Green Brimmer, and then of Mr. Brimmer's son-in-law, John P. Jones. Mr. Jones was born in New York State and graduated from a law school in Elmira, but there being very little law business in the new community, he purchased the old tavern at Newburgh and ran a dairy business. For some time the county poor were also kept on the Newburgh farm. The farm is now owned by J. P. Brimmer Jones, son of the former Mr. Jones.

CHAPTER VI.

TOWNSHIP HISTORY.

INDIVIDUAL HISTORY OF THE SEVERAL TOWNSHIPS OF BOONE COUNTY—FIRST SETTLERS—RECORD OF CONDITIONS AND EVENTS IN BELVIDERE, BONUS, FLORA, SPRING, BOONE, CALEDONIA, MANCHESTER AND LE ROY TOWNSHIPS.

The following notes concerning the various townships only include such matter as will not be found elsewhere. The records of the county commissioners' court and the files of the old "Standard" contain notes of many persons who lived in the various townships and will be found there. For much of the biographical matter concerning the citizens who were prominent in 1877, the writer is indebted to the former history of the county. He has not attempted to present much biographical matter concerning those who are now living, as that is treated in the biographical sketches included in this work.

BELVIDERE TOWNSHIP.

The northwestern part of Belvidere Township is quite hilly and rather picturesque. In section '5 is the Stephenson stone quarry. In the early day this was owned by Dr. Stone and besides the quarry, there was also a mill and lime kiln. The White Pigeon School House is in section 8. In sections 9 and 10 was the Amzi Abbe farm, most of which was owned by Mr. Abbe from a very early date, part of it being entered by him directly from the government. East of the Abbe farm in section 10 was the William McBride farm. Mr. McBride was an early settler and died at Belvidere several years ago, his farm being sold in tracts, to settle the estate.

A RIDE IN BELVIDERE AND BONUS.

Driving across the Big Thunder bridge, we see, just before coming to the river, the Coleman house, where the family have resided many years and engaged in canning and raising vegetables. This was the site of the old Daniel Caswell place. Crossing the river and the race and turning east, between us and the river is a small stone house, formerly occupied by Dr. Payne. Further along is the old Stone farm, entered by Albert Stone from the government in 1840, being in section 29. In this house John Gray had his arm amputated many years ago on account of blood poison, caused by a wound received while butchering sheep. Dr. Foote performed the operation and he and Mr. Gray had gone several times to the old room on the anniversary of the occasion. The McMaster farm is also on this road, also the Henry Biester farm. We now come to the Lawrenceville School House and turn north. In this part of Boone the Lawrences formerly settled very early and they still own some of the farms there. On the right hand side of the road as we go north is the Lawrenceville Cemetery, where members of several prominent families in this region are buried. In section 20 is the Early farm, formerly owned by Collins, and on the right hand side of the road is the old Horace Green farm. Somewhat further north is the old Uriah Turneure farm, now belonging to B. S. Herbert of Belvidere. Mr. Herbert owns about 500 acres of fine land in this locality, while Mrs. Herbert owns a considerable portion of the McMaster property. In the early days there used to be some wolves in the timber in this region. In the northwest quarter of section 16 is Isaac Melzer's farm, from which a fine view of Belvidere and the intervening country can be had. North of this is the Mabie farm. The Russellville School House is at the northeast corner of section 8. R. W. Morgan owns considerable land in this locality. To the north, on both sides of the road, we see the settlement known as Russellville and at the southern end of the houses, on the east side, is the church. Turning west at the school house we drive through as fine a lot of farm land as anyone could wish; almost as level as a floor. Part of this is the old Deacon Mabie farm. Turning south again we pass the Daniel Andrus farm, with the Andrus Cemetery near by. Across the Piscasaw we see the Covey farm, part of which was formerly the old Oliver Hale farm. A little further south we come to the Sands farm, some more of the Herbert farms, and a part of the Mulligan farm. In this locality is the Stockwell School House. Turning to the west along the center line of section 18, on the south is the L. D. Miller farm. Mr. Miller built the Little Thunder Mill, which was afterward run by the Luhmans and now run by Henry Herbert. On the bottom lands near the Piscasaw, a man was drowned while trying to walk across the flats, which were covered with water from the over-flowed streams. To our north for some distance is the Mulligan farm. We are now in the eastern part of Squaw Prairie and passing to the township of Belvidere, south of the Stockwell School House, is the Gongh farm and east of that is the Henry Clark farm. North of the road are the Huntington farms. The McMeekins formerly lived in this locality. Turning south, we pass the farm of Dr. Page. His daughter married E. E. P. Truesdell. Mrs. Page was living until recently at Belvidere. To the west is E. W. Warren's farm, and also the Maloney farm, which is now owned by Dr. Charles Scott's heirs. Also the Greenlee farm, owned for many years by the Greenlee Bros. Coming still further south we pass the Luke Wheeler farm on the east. This was formerly occupied by Judge McWhorter. Mr. Wheeler owned it for many years, and it was then sold by his heirs and Messrs. Marshall and Whitman became interested in it. It is now used in connection with the sheep yards, which are located just south of it. Much of the land in this locality belongs to the Duntons and the old Dunton house, with its large fluted columns, still remains. On McKinley Avenue lived Josiah Wheeler. He was a wool buyer and afterwards removed to Mason City, Ia., and became wealthy. Thos. Donohue lived in a small house on Perry and McKinley Avenues, which was one of the oldest houses in this locality. Two other old houses are the one on the corner of McKinley Avenue and Madison Street, and the Stone house in which Capt. Petty lived, and which was built in an early day and occupied by Dr. Stone.

NORTH ROCKFORD AND RIVER ROADS.

Driving out along State Street toward the North Rockford Road, we pass many fine residences, among them being those of Geo. Murch,

Wm. Bowley, A. E. Loop and Phosa McMaster. Here is also the new residence of Mrs. Catherine Rhinehart and that of Judge R. W. Wright, these being undoubtedly the two finest residences in town. Just beyond Judge Wright's is General Fuller's residence, surrounded by fine old trees. In this residence many prominent men have been entertained and it, with General Hurlbut's mansion on Hurlbut Avenue, constitute the two most historic residences in town now standing. Beyond General Fuller's is the Hildrup place, a picturesque old colonial mansion with fine trees, now owned by Prof. Fitzer, formerly county superintendent of schools. To the south of the road lie a number of long strips of land, having a comparatively small frontage on the road, but running back nearly half a mile. One of these strips, which was formerly owned by Shreve and afterward owned by the Vandersalls, has been subdivided as "Meadow Lawn." The Luces also own considerable land here. Many of the residents along the North Rockford Road are prominent in the North Baptist Church, among them being the Tolyne, Van Epps, and Deacon Sterling. At the bend of the road is a school house. One of the Van Epps' houses is built of brick manufactured in the brick yards in that locality. In section 21 is the Glasner farm and a little further along is one of the many farms owned by the heirs of Ezra May. We now pass the Beaver Creek and come to the Beaver farm, formerly owned by John J. Foote, and now the property of two of his granddaughters. Toward the eastern edge of the county is the Dubois School House, in a very pleasant locality. North of it lies the Dubois farm, part of which was entered from the government by Cornelius Dubois. In section 19 considerable of the land was entered by Geo. W. Campbell, one of the very early settlers. Running south from the school house is a road to Newburgh. Lying to the east of this road is a large farm owned by Dr. A. W. Swift. In section 30 is the Shaw farm. Mr. Shaw's father was a very prominent Chicago business man, but Mr. Shaw himself, with the aid of a fine farm and a swift automobile, finds life very pleasant in Boone County. South of the Shaw farm is the very large farm of J. P. Brimmer Jones, which includes all that is left of Newburgh, of which considerable has been said in another place.

Coming across the Kishwaukee and turning east again along the river road, we pass some more of the Ezra May farms, also farms belonging to Frank Stockwell, A. Puls, and Abram O. Witbeck, Mr. Witbeck's farm being on both sides of the road. As we get toward Belvidere we see the "Electric Stone Quarry," to the south and at the bend in the road is the O. J. Lincoln farm and the ruins of the Bennett Creamery, which was destroyed by fire. After entering section 35 the land for some distance on the north side was formerly owned by James Kelley, whose genial disposition made him a wide circle of friends, and who, until rheumatism rendered him unable to move about, was the life of many a social gathering. To the south of the road was the "Moss neighborhood," where the various Moss relatives settled at a very early date and took up land from the government. Still further south is a magnificent tract of land formerly owned by John J. Foote and now the property of his heirs. On the river road is the Columbia Heating Co. site, and the Gas Plant. Near this is Scott Clark's tract and east of that is another piece of land belonging to the Foote estate, known as the "Smith Place." East of that is a tract which has been in possession of the Smedley family for many years. The old stone house where Dr. Smedley lived has recently been improved so as to make a very modern residence.

BOONE TOWNSHIP.

This township was taken up from the government mostly between 1840 and 1850. Among the early settlers were the Lawrences. They came from Cuba, Alleghany County, N. Y. Luther W. Lawrence and Daniel W., two of the brothers, arrived in September, 1836. They had walked most of the way from Toledo, Ohio. They put up at Timothy Caswell's Tavern, near the present Big Thunder Mills. At that time the grass along the Pisceasaw was so high that for a joke some one tied the tops together over the back of the oxen, just to show how tall it was. The Lawrences selected their claims in the southwest portion of Bonus, and bought out William Dresser. When the land was afterwards surveyed they found their lines did not correspond with the section lines, but were able with a little sacrifice of land to get located in the proper quarters. The two young men then went back to New York State and the following spring they returned with their father, John Lawrence, and some of their brothers. They came by horse teams and arrived May 11, 1837. They marked down the number of houses between Chicago and Belvidere, and found that not including Chicago, but including Belvidere, there were sixteen buildings. They built houses on their claims, Daniel on the east, Luther W. on the west and the father between. That was the year of the seventeen year locusts, and the insects were very thick. Daniel sold his claim to Benjamin Heaton in July, 1837. John Lawrence, the father, went back the last of August, 1837, and William Stewart, a relative of the Lawrences, came from Fredonia and moved into his house. John Lawrence, the younger, also remained there. In the fall of 1837, another large part of the Lawrence family came to Boone County, consisting of John Lawrence and his wife and daughters, Sarah Ann, Fretta, and Mary Lucinda, also the son, Edwin C., then eleven years old, and Luther W. Lawrence and his wife and four children. They arrived October 27, 1837. That was a very wet season, and the rivers and sloughs all overflowed. Near Garden Prairie they found two families named Ames, who were no relation. On what was afterwards the Seymour Fox farm in sections 26 and 27, William Ames had located in 1837 and built a double log house, in which he ran a tavern for a number of years until the railroad caused the decline of the tavern business. "Billy" Ames also ran a tavern on the farm afterwards belonging to Mark Beckington, lying west of the Fox farm. When the Lawrences came in the fall, the water had carried off the bridge across the Kishwaukee and was all over the flats. They borrowed a boat from Benjamin Sweet and loaded the goods from the wagons, standing in the water, onto the boat. Then they led the horses across, taking several loads. Then the women and children got in the ox wagon and were taken across, while the men waded. They arrived long after dark at the Stewart home, but Mrs. Stewart had a good supper for them and they soon felt in good cheer. The little cabin was quite crowded that night, there being sixteen people in all. The first child born in Bonus was William Shinn, son of James Shinn. The first death was that of "Billy" Ames in August, 1837. The first school was taught by Mrs. Lydia Lawrence, the mother of Luther W., E. C., and the others, under the shade of a large white oak tree. The first school house was built of hewed logs near the residence of James Shinn on section 7, in the fall of 1838.

Garden Prairie is a pleasant town situated on both sides of the state road and near the railroad, in section 36. One of the oldest residents is Mrs. Daniel Sackett. She is the daughter of an early settler. She lives with her son, Clarence E. Sackett, who is the postmaster and also conducts a printing establishment. In Mr. Sackett's office is a very ingenious machine in which a roll of paper is put in at one end and comes out as complete shipping tags at the other end. The machine performs the operations of cutting, perforating, wiring and printing and is almost human in its workings. The Village of Garden Prairie was surveyed by Yates V. Beebe, the county surveyor, on December 14, 1854, for David H. Sackett, the owner. Mr. Sackett also made an addition to the village in 1865.

VILLAGE OF GARDEN PRAIRIE.

In 1852-53 on the completion of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad from Chicago, the first plat of the village of Garden Prairie was made by D. H. Sackett, consisting of two blocks of eight lots each. Since then two additions were made by Mr. Sackett, also additions by Frank Tanner, Mr. Avery and others. The village has five stores, a feed mill, lumber and coal yard and elevator, Cornell Brothers' Creamery and Condensed Milk Plant—one of the largest in the State—the Caslin Company's Milk-Sugar plant, three blacksmith and wagon shops, a public hall, etc. There is also an Odd Fellows' Lodge, a Camp of Modern Woodmen and Lodge of Mystic Workers.

The first station agent for the Galena road was C. H. Avery, followed in 1853 or '54, by W. S. Graves. In 1863 Daniel Stott was appointed to succeed Mr. Graves and served till his death in 1881. E. D. Codrington succeeded Mr. Stott, and Bert Codrington succeeded his father. On the resignation of Bert Codrington his successor was Charles Klester, who has been agent for the past fifteen or twenty years. The Elgin & Belvidere Electric line railroad was built in 1906 and opened for traffic in February, 1907.

There are two churches in Garden Prairie—a Congregational and a Methodist. The first Congregational was organized in 1840 and flourished for a number of years, but finally died. In 1858 the present Congregational Church was organized by Rev. N. C. Clark, of Elgin, Ill., and in 1859 a church building was erected, which was burned July 31, 1896. Service was held only occasionally from 1896 to 1899, when a new church was erected, costing some $1,800. The society also have a parsonage. The Methodist church was erected in 1872 and is in good shape. The first school house in what is now the village of Garden Prairie was built near the State Road, a few rods east of where the Methodist church stands. In the early '50s the building was moved into the northwest corner of section 36, and about 1857, an addition was built on the south, as the number of pupils was then nearly 100. The frame of the old school house is of oak, many of the sills being as they came from the woods, the bark on one side, and are as sound today as when put there sixty years ago. In 1884 the old school house was sold and a new one erected on a lot of land purchased of Frank Tanner, southwest of Congregational Church.

Among the early settlers in Bonns were Loudy Stevenson, H. O. Sears, Charles McDougall and his son, Lorenzo S., John Lawrence, Wm. Ames, George F. Ames, Allen Boomer, D. H. Sackett, Billy Ames, C. H. Avery, Thos. W. Porter and others.

AMESVILLE POSTOFFICE.

Mr. Sackett furnishes us with the following: On June 13, 1838, the postoffice department established a postoffice on the stage line from Chicago to Galena and named it "Amesville," in honor of the first postmaster, "William Ames," who kept the "Ames Farm," located one and one-quarter miles west of the present village of Garden Prairie. Mr. Ames died April, 1849, and on the 24th of the same month Cyrus H. Avery was appointed postmaster and the office was moved to Mr. Avery's house, about half a mile east of the village. In 1852-'53, Mr. Avery, having gone into partnership with Frank Safford of Marengo, built a store in the village and moved the office to that place. On February 23, 1853, the name of the office was changed from Amesville to Garden Prairie, so as to conform with the name of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad Station. In April, 1857, William S. Graves, who was then station agent, was appointed postmaster and the office was moved to the railroad depot. In April, 1861, Charles Burnside was appointed, and the office was moved back to the store, where it remained till December 2, 1862. Mr. Burnside having moved to Iowa, the store was then closed and the office removed to the residence of David H. Sackett.

and C. E. Sackett was placed in charge when only 14 years old. D. H. Sackett was appointed postmaster in 1863, and served till 1879, when he resigned and C. E. Sackett was appointed his successor, serving until January, 1894, when G. W. Hendrickson was appointed postmaster, and he served during President Cleveland's second term, the office being then located in Mr. Hendrickson's store near the railroad depot. In January, 1898, C. E. Sackett was reappointed and is still serving.

There are two rural mail routes connected with the Garden Prairie office. No. 1 was established December 1, 1900, of which J. W. Klester was R. C. The route is nearly 25 miles long, covering the territory west to Camp Epworth, and south and southeast into Spring. Route No. 2, established July 1, 1903, of which H. C. Gooch, its route carrier, is nearly 20 miles long and covers territory to the north and northwest. Previous to the completion of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad (1852-'53), the mail was carried by stage from Chicago to Galena, but as soon as the railroad was built, the stages only ran to the terminus of the road. The Galena & Chicago Union Railroad became a part of the Northwestern System in 1864. The records of the Postoffice Department show that the Belvidere postoffice was established in 1837, Amesville in 1838, and Marengo in 1841.

FLORA TOWNSHIP.

This township was first called "Fairfield." About 1850 it was changed for a short time to "Benton." In October, 1851, the following names were proposed: Flora, Arabella, Freeman and Jay, and the first one was adopted. The land in Flora was taken up from the government mostly between 1839 and 1845, although some was taken a little later. Many of the Flora people have retired from farming and moved to Belvidere, a large number of them being located in the southern part of town, as if to be as near their farms as possible. One of the prominent Flora families was the Lucases.

Squire Walter Lucas was born in Flora Township June 7, 1839, on a farm called the Cushman place, now owned by Frank King. His father, Horace Lucas, took it up from the government. The elder Mr. Lucas afterward traded farms with Mr. Cushman, whose daughter Squire Lucas afterward married. It thus happened that Squire Lucas and his wife were born in the same house. The Lucases lived for a time in DeKalb County, but afterwards came back to Boone. Among the other early settlers of Flora were Arthur Blood and Abel Blood. They lived on the edge of the woods at what is now called the old Cunningham place. They came to Boone County about 1835. Blood's Point was named after them. Waite Rice took up land in section 25, where the Bowen farm now is, across from the Blood Point Cemetery. Another early settler in Flora was Daniel Bliss, who lived just south of the cemetery.

Among the other early settlers of Flora were Lew Penwell, David Russell and Reuben Russell. The first school house in Flora was on the Norton farm. Most of the settlements were around the edge of the woods in the southeast corner of Flora. Bradford L. Cunningham's place was one of the first settled in Flora, it having already been occupied when Mr. Cunningham came in 1837. In the southwest part of the town the Griggs family, Calvin, Horace and Laydon, were settlers. B. N. Dean lived just over the county line, on what is now the Hugh May farm. He afterward became identified with Boone County history and his son, Chauncey, was county judge and an attorney in Belvidere. The elder Mr. Dean came with Mr. Cushman from Paris, Me. Horace Lucas came in 1838. Lewis Keith settled in the southwest part of the township at an early date and became the owner of considerable land.

Among the Flora citizens who have been successful and influential in Boone County history is Francis King. Mr. King possesses one of the clearest judgments in business matters in Belvidere, and he has been the adviser of a large number of people. He is also one of the directors in the People's Bank and in other corporations, and in the early days was city marshal under Mayor Swail. He is a great believer in Flora land as an investment and owns some seven or eight fine farms in that township, besides considerable property in other parts of the country.

Henry W. Avery settled in Flora Township at an early date and owned considerable land there until his death about a year ago, when it came into the possession of his grandsons, Edward A. and Henry A. Thompson.

Charles Bennett's farm in this town is known as one of the best equipped farms in the vicinity and the residence has many modern conveniences. The Illinois Central Railroad runs through the southwest corner of Flora. It was just west of the Boone County line that the terrible collision happened at Perryville on a bitter cold night some six or seven years ago. On the railroad in section 29 is the little village of Irene, consisting chiefly of an elevator, a creamery, and a few residences. The Union Church in section 32 was built in 1859 by the people in that part of Flora Township and those of North Franklin Township in DeKalb County, just across the line. Flora Grange was organized in 1873 and built a Grange Hall, which is still used for meetings of various sorts. In section 14 is the Hall stone quarry, from which considerable stone has been taken out by F. I. and Fred Hall. The Grange Hall is situated in section 27, near the Graves farms. One of the important roads in Flora is known as the Blood's Point Road and runs along the easterly part of the township. In section 25 is the Blood's Point Cemetery, where memorial services are held each year, and are arranged by a committee appointed for that purpose and very largely attended. Across the road from the cemetery is the H. L. Bowen farm. Mrs. Bowen is quite an authority on the early history of the county and has written some very bright and interesting papers on the county, one of which is published in this volume. Along the Blood Point Road lie a number of the Shannon farms, the owners being children of Mr. Shannon, one of the early settlers, who died quite wealthy. Mrs. Harvey Woods of Belvidere is one of the daughters.

SPRING TOWNSHIP.

This was first called Ohio Precinct and about 1850 it was called "Concord," after which it received its present name. The following is copied from the earlier history of Boone County, for the reason that it was evidently procured by the writer of that book from the lips of individuals who have now passed to the better land:

"The first settlement was made in 1835 by John Handy, at what is now known as Reed's Corners, four and a half miles west of south from Belvidere, and two miles west of Shattuck's Grove. In the early part of 1835, Alfred Shattuck and wife and two sons (Harlyn, aged twenty years, and F. H., aged about twelve) left Painesville, Geauga County, Ohio, to find a new home in Illinois. Arriving in Dupage County, twenty-seven miles from Chicago, they rented a farm from a man named Sweet, and raised a crop of corn. In the latter part of September of that year, Alfred Shattuck and his son, Harlyn, came out to the Kishwaukee country to select claims, which they made in the grove that bears their name. The elder Shattuck returned to Du Page County to take care of his crop, and Harlyn remained to prepare a cabin, make rails for fencing purposes, etc., boarding with John Handy, who had preceded them a few weeks, and who was already settled. The first work Harlyn did was to cut and gather some old grass of the previous year's growth on which to feed a yoke of cattle he had brought up from Du Page County. A small quantity of corn meal was mixed with this old grass and thus rendered a substitute for more substantial fodder. In February following, the balance of the family came up. The log cabin for which Harlyn had cut the logs was soon after raised on the grounds occupied by Harlyn's present residence, of which the family took possession before fully completed. The doors, window casings, pantry shelving, etc., were made of bass-wood puncheons dressed down. The flooring was made of the same kind of material. The roofing was made of oak clapboards, made by hand, and held in place by weight-poles, between which knees were placed to separate at proper distances. At that date there were in that settlement, John Handy and family, Erastus Shattuck, wife, three sons and one daughter, and Alfred Shattuck and family (already mentioned). Erastus Shattuck and John Handy had come together in the summer before. At the time Alfred Shattuck's family moved into their new house, the last of February or first of March, 1836, there were not to exceed fifteen persons in the settlement. In the spring of 1836 the Blatchfords, Curtis brothers and John Baxter joined the settlers. Of the Blatchfords there were the father, mother and three sons, Stephen, James and Francis. The Curtis brothers were unmarried, and kept 'bachelor's hall.' McVeigh and Bruce came soon after, and Dr. Orris Crosby was the next one to put in an appearance. During that summer and fall there was quite a rush of immigrants to that neighborhood."

Most of the land in Spring was entered from the government between 1840 and 1850, considerably later than the land in Belvidere Township. The principal road in the township is the Genoa Road, running southeasterly from the northwesterly corner of the town toward Genoa in DeKalb County. On this road is the Davis M. E. church near Herbert, named after Joel Davis, Sr., who had a farm just across the road, which afterwards became the property of his sons, Joel and Samuel Davis. A branch of the Northwestern Railroad also runs across the westerly part of the town, about parallel to the Genoa road. The Town of Herbert is situated in Section 33 of Spring. It was laid out in September, 1885, the owner being Daniel D. Bathrick. An addition was made by Mr. Bathrick in April, 1890.

Among prominent citizens are Joel and Samuel Davis, sons of Joel Davis, Sr., who live in Herbert. Joel Davis, Jr., went to Colorado some time ago and was a successful miner for a number of years. He has in his home an interesting collection, containing minerals, fossils and Indian's relics, most of which were collected in the West. He also has a large collection of coins, including ancient Greek and Roman copper pieces. The Meyers family is prominent in Spring, and are well known as dealers in fine horses. Some of them have also become interested in the banking business of Belvidere.

In the central part of Spring Township lies the wooded part known as "Shattuck's Grove." In section 17, where the road crosses the railroad track, is what is known as Reed's Corners. In the central part of the town is a prairie known as East Prairie. Among the early settlers in Spring were the De Wolfes, Bretts, Landers, Crittendens, and Cunninghams.

BOONE TOWNSHIP.

Some of the land in this township was entered in 1839 by William Taylor, but most of it was entered from 1845 and after. There was also a portion entered in 1839, and the early '40s by William Flomming, S. Stocking, Lemuel Hawley, Amos Hixson, George Atkinson, the Mitchells, Edward Stevenson, David Barnes, Joseph H. Gray, James C. Gooch, William Williamson, C. W. Jackson, George and Obadiah Sands and others. The principal towns are Capron and Poplar Grove. Capron was platted in May, 1862, by Robert P. Lane of Winnebago County. It was named after Colonel Capron, who had considerable to do with putting the railroad through, and who lived in an adjoining county. Among the prominent people of Capron are the Stevensons, Livingstons, Lindermans, Cornwells, Ridges and Kelloggs. The Capron Bank has always been associated with the Cornwells. There is also a tile factory situated near the railroad track and there is a good school and several churches. The additions to the original town are those of Sands, Linderman and Chester. Among the first settlers of the township were Messrs. Barker, Bradford, Dean and Putney. Mr. Dean was the first school teacher, the school being located just across the line, in Caledonia, in 1838 and 1839. Poplar Grove was laid out in 1859 by Evi Shearman and was first called Shearmantowu, after the name of the founder. Part of it is in Caledonia Township and part in Boone. The Poplar Grove Bank was conducted for some time by the Websters, but has since been incorporated, Warren Webster being the cashier. D. C. Cowan has been postmaster, and a prominent citizen of Poplar Grove for a considerable length of time.

Among the additions to Poplar Grove are Woodward's, which was made by the executors of Alpheus Woodward, Cowan's, Jory's, Rays', Renne and Dymond's. A number of the early settlers, particularly in the northern part, were of Norwegian descent.

CALEDONIA TOWNSHIP.

Some of the land in this township was entered by William Taylor in 1839, and that year William Brayton, James Ramsey, Luke Joslyn, Joseph P., Daniel L. and John R. Bartlett, John Cooper, Charles Babcock, Edward Hawley, George Armond, Alexander Reed, James Haven, Robert Morgan, Thos. Fleming, James Hammond, Allen Carpenter, John Dean, Abraham Drake, John Sturtevant, Joshua M. Randall, Elijah A. Kirk, Jonas Tofflemire and James J. Pettit also entered land. The majority of the land, however, was entered in the late '40s and early '50s. The land entered in this county, particularly in Caledonia and Boone Townships, by William Taylor, was in behalf of a number of residents of Aberdeen, Scotland, and amounted in this county to almost 5,000 acres, besides considerable in the adjoining counties. Mr. Taylor, according to the written agreement he made before coming from Scotland to America, took the land in his name. He was drowned in the Mississippi River, near St. Louis, from the steamer "War Eagle." This necessitated a chancery proceeding in Winnebago County and the court authorized a commissioner in 1845 to convey all of the title to Alexander Ferguson, from whom it has come down to a great number of actual settlers, who trace title through Mr. Taylor. Among the earliest actual settlers were Michael S. Taplin, Abijah Story, James and Thomas Ramsey, Nancy Stevens, Enoch O. Garland, Allen Carpenter, Dr. Calvin Cass, Philemon DeGroff, Benjamin Guile, Robert Morgan, Isaac Sewell, Steven Covey, John Bruce, John and George Picken and Charles Whiting.

Squire Drake was one of the first postmasters, commencing about 1843 and holding for about 10 years. The first school was taught in 1841 to 1842, at the residence of Philemon DeGroff, the teacher being Miss Kuox. A large part of Caledonia Township is occupied by the "Scotch Settlement," which extends westward into Winnebago County. Near Argyle is a very large Presbyterian Church, known as the "Willow Creek Church." Caledonia Center is on the Beloit branch of the Northwestern Road, and was platted July 8, 1853, the land being owned by Gavin Ralston. Two additions have been made, known as Cornwell's and Ralston's. In Section 11 is the Quail Trap School House and north of this lie the farms belonging to members of the Vickers family, who are of English descent. Another branch of the Northwestern passes across the township from east to west, going through Argyle at its west edge, and Poplar Grove at its east boundary.

MANCHESTER TOWNSHIP.

Among those who entered land in Manchester in 1839 and 1840 were David Campbell, Lars Baarson, Timran Tollefson, Alvin Cady, Benjamin F. Riddle, Harry H. Smith, William Linderman, James Bennett, Ariel B. Wadsworth, Samuel P'ye, David Noggle, Calvin M. Stowell, Thomas C. Sanders, Walter Warren and William Crosby. Most of the land, however, was entered between 1844 and 1849. Among the early settlers were Rollin Gray, Alvin Cady, William Ward and Luther Linderman. The first school was taught by Mary Jane Campbell, wife of Horace Campbell, in a private house on the southwest quarter of Section 9, where Mr. Campbell then lived. A. D. Wadsworth was the first postmaster, commencing his duties about 1844. The postoffice is Hunter, situated in the north half of Section 34 and the south half of Section 27.

LE ROY TOWNSHIP.

In the early days this township was known as Lambertson, the first settlement being made by James B. and Jeremiah Lambert in the fall of 1836. Among the very early settlers were John Langdon and his family and brothers, who settled in the northeast corner of Long Prairie in the fall of 1836. John Langdon's wife died in the winter of 1837-38. The Chamberlain brothers also came at an early date and settled on Round Prairie. John Wright and family also settled on Round Prairie in April, 1837. John Kerr lived on what is now Edward Conye's farm at an early date. Blaine, which is the only village in Le Roy, was formerly called "Union Corners." Methodist Camp Meeting was held at Parks' Corners, across from the present Delos Blodgett farm. Rev. Van Ness lived on Round Prairie, in the southeast part of Le Roy; he was of the Baptist denomination and preached at Burr Oak School House. Elder Smalley was the Presbyterian preacher and lived on the south end of Long Prairie in one of the very few frame houses built at that time. The Burr Oak School has been at or near its present location for many years. John Gray went there from 1842 to 1844. Mr. Gray was born in England and came from there to New Jersey as a young man, and arrived in Boone County in 1842. He is very well acquainted with Le Roy, Bonus, Boone, and, in fact, all of the county, and has given the author much assistance in compiling this history. Mr. Gray for many years kept a livery stable on the North Side. He and his brother sub-divided two additions on Turner's Hill. He has been a constable for many years and has taken a part in most of the things that have happened in Boone County almost since it started. There are few people left in the county who know as much of the early days as John Gray. Hurd's Corners was one of the first postoffices. It was situated on the farm, afterwards owned by Mr. Ardney, in Section 27. Robert B. Hurd was the postmaster and held office from 1839 to his death about 1848. It was sometimes called "Amazon." Mr. Hurd was one of the early county commissioners and had the largest part in building the first court house. He took a number of lots in the original town of Belvidere in payment for his work.

Most of the land in Le Roy was entered after 1842 and between that time and 1850, although a comparatively small portion was entered in 1840. Among those making the entries were Thomas Hinton, John Wright, Henry Tranger, James Murray, Mary E. Warner, J. D. Lambert, John C. Linderman, James B. Lambert, Robert B. Hurd, Richard P. Hovey, Elijah Bowman, Levi Hammond, John D. Mason, James H. Pierce, Alonzo Whitmore, Gibson Wright, William R. Streeter, Cyrus Tillotson, Thomas C. Sanders, Leander S. Walker, Guilford Hammond, James Van Ness, Joseph Chamberlain, Levi Adkin, Jr. Mr. Adkin joined with Robert B. Hurd in taking the contract for the first court house.

CHAPTER VII.

POLITICAL.

BOONE COUNTY REPRESENTATIVES IN STATE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS—CONGRESSMEN WHO HAVE REPRESENTED THE BOONE COUNTY DISTRICT

—PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS—CITIZENS WHO HAVE REPRESENTED THE COUNTY IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The first Constitutional Convention in Illinois held its session at Kaskaskia, Aug. 3-26, 1818, and adopted the first State Constitution. What is now Boone County was then a part of Crawford County and the delegates were Joseph Kitchel and Edward Cullom, neither of whom, of course, resided in this county, as this region was then inhabited only by Indians. At the Constitutional Convention held at Springfield, June 7, 1847, Daniel H. Whitney was the delegate from Boone County. A convention was held in Springfield, January 7, 1862, and adopted a constitution for the state, which was rejected by a vote of the people at an election held June 17 of that year. In this convention Luther W. Lawrence represented Boone County. Our present constitution was drawn by a convention held December 13, 1869, to March 13, 1870, and was ratified by the people July 2, 1870. In that convention Jesse S. Hildrup was the delegate from Boone.

CONGRESSMEN.

Until 1832 the state of Illinois constituted one Congressional District and the congressmen generally came from a southern part of the state, which was then much more thickly populated than the northern part. They were as follows: John McLean, Democrat, was the first representative in Congress from the state, taking his seat in the second session of the Fifteenth Congress. He was followed by Daniel P. Cook, December, 1819, in the Sixteenth Congress, who represented the state during the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth Congresses, a period of nearly nine years, being from December, 1819, to March, 1827. Residence, Kaskaskia.

Joseph Duncan, Democrat, succeeded Daniel P. Cook and took his seat at the first session of the Twentieth Congress in 1827. He represented the state in the Twentieth, Twenty-first and Twenty-second Congresses, being from 1827 to 1833. Residence, Jackson and Morgan Counties.

In the Twenty-third Congress from 1833 to '35 the congressman was Joseph Duncan, Democrat, of Jacksonville, who was elected Governor, and William L. May, another Democrat, of Springfield, succeeded him. Mr. May also represented the district in the Twenty-fourth and the Twenty-fifth Congresses. In the Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Congresses, from 1839 to '43, John T. Stuart, a Whig, living at Springfield, represented the district. In the Twenty-eighth Congress John Wentworth, of Chicago, a Democrat, represented the district, of which Boone County was a part. The convention which nominated Mr. Wentworth was held at Joliet, May 18, 1843, and the Boone County delegates were Benjamin F. Lawrence, Jas. L. Loop, and William T. Burgess. Mr. Wentworth was also the congressman in the Twenty-ninth, Thirtieth, and Thirty-first Congresses. Among the delegates to the Democratic conventions during this time were George Kretsinger, Allen C. Fuller, Richard S. Malony, Benjamin F. Lawrence, Daniel Howell, William T. Burgess, Charles Waterman, Hiram C. Miller, Abraham L. Bush, John Handy and Alfred E. Ames. In 1846, John Kerr, of Boone County, was the Whig candidate for Congress. In the Thirty-second Congress, Richard S. Malony, Democrat, of Belvidere, represented the district. In the Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth, Thirty-sixth, and Thirty-seventh, Elihu B. Washburn, a Republican, of Galena, represented the district. In the Thirty-eighth Congress, John F. Farnsworth, Republican, of St. Charles, was congressman and also served in the Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-first and Forty-second Congresses. In the Forty-third Congress Stephen A. Hurlbut, Republican, of Belvidere, was representative and Gen. Hurlbut also served in the Forty-fourth. In the Forty-fifth Congress, from 1877 to 1879, William Lathrop, Republican, of Rockford, served. In the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Congresses, John C. Sherwin, of Kane County, was congressman. In the Forty-eighth Congress, Reuben Ellwood, Republican, of Sycamore, was representative at Washington. In the Forty-ninth Congress, from 1885 to 1887, Mr. Ellwood also served and upon his death Albert J. Hopkins, of Aurora, now Senator from Illinois, was elected to fill the vacancy and served during the Fiftieth, Fifty-first, Fifty-second, and Fifty-third Congresses. In the apportionment of 1893, Boone County became part of the ninth district and Robert R. Hitt, Republican, of Mt. Morris, was elected. Mr. Hitt also served in the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth, and Fifty-seventh Congresses from 1897 to 1903. Under the apportionment of 1901, Boone County became part of the Twelfth District and our own citizen, Judge Charles E. Fuller, Republican, was elected and served in the Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, and Sixtieth Congresses.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

In 1860, Allen C. Fuller was one of the Republican presidential electors. In 1868, Stephen A. Hurlbut was one of the Republican presidential electors. In 1876 Allen C. Fuller was a Republican presidential elector. These are our only candidates for electors, who were of the successful party.

MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Under the apportionment of 1848 Boone County, together with Winnebago and McHenry, became part of the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District. The senator was Alfred E. Ames, in the Sixteenth General Assembly, and the Representative from Boone County was Selby Leach. In the Seventeenth General Assembly the senator was Thomas B. Talcott, of Winnebago County, and the representatives were A. H. Nixon and George Gage, both of McHenry County. In the Eighteenth General Assembly, from 1852 to 1854, the senator was again Mr. Talcott, and the representatives were H. C. Miller, of Boone County, and A. H. Nixon, of Mc-

Henry. Under the apportionment of 1854 Boone County formed, together with Winnebago, Ogle and Carroll, the Third Senatorial District, and with McHenry formed the Fifty-fourth Representative District. The Senator was Waite Talcott, in the Nineteenth General Assembly, and the representatives were Luther W. Lawrence and W. Diggins. In the Twentieth General Assembly, the representation was the same except that L. S. Church, of McHenry, took Mr. Diggins's place. In the Twenty-first General Assembly, from 1858 to 1860. The Senator was Zenas Applington of Ogle and the representatives were Mr. Church, of McHenry, and Stephen A. Hurlbut, of Boone. In the Twenty-second General Assembly the representation was the same. Under the apportionment of 1861 Boone County became part of the Twenty-third Senatorial District, including also Winnebago, McHenry, and Lake, and was joined with DeKalb as the Fifty-first Representative district. The senator in the Twenty-third General Assembly was Cornelius Lansing, of McHenry, and the representatives were Westel W. Sedgwick, of DeKalb, and Luther W. Lawrence, of Boone. In the Twenty-fourth General Assembly, from 1864 to 1866, the senator was Mr. Lansing and the representatives Allen C. Fuller, of Boone, and Ira V. Randell of DeKalb. In the Twenty-fifth General Assembly from 1866 to 1868, the senator was Allen C. Fuller of Boone, while Stephen Hurlbut, of Boone, and Robert Hampton, of DeKalb, were the representatives. In the Twenty-sixth General Assembly, Mr. Fuller still served as senator and Elijah H. Talbott, of Boone, and Charles W. Marsh, of DeKalb, served as representatives. In the Twenty-seventh General Assembly, under the apportionment of 1870, Boone County together with Winnebago and Lake, formed the Twenty-third Senatorial District, and the Ninety-second representative district. General Fuller was senator and John Early of Winnebago, and Jesse S. Hildrup, of Boone, were representatives. Under the apportionment of 1872. Winnebago and Boone formed the Ninth Senatorial District. The separate representative districts have been abolished under the new constitution. John Early, of Winnebago, was elected senator to the Twenty-eighth General Assembly, and Mr. Hildrup, of Boone County, a representative. In the next General Assembly Mr. Early was still senator and Myron K. Avery the Boone County representative. In the Thirtieth General Assembly all of the members came from Winnebago County. In the Thirty-first Charles E. Fuller, of Boone, was senator and Omar H. Wright, of Boone County, a representative. The same in the Thirty-second General Assembly. Under the apportionment of 1882, Lake, McHenry and Boone Counties formed the Eighth Senatorial District. Judge Fuller was a representative, being the only Boone County member from the district. The same for the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth General Assemblies. In the Thirty-sixth General Assembly from 1888 to 1890 Judge Fuller was senator, and all the representatives came from outside of Boone. The judge was also senator in the Thirty-seventh General Assembly and George Reed, of Boone, a representative. In the Thirty-eighth General Assembly Reuben W. Coon, then of Lake County, but prominently identified with this county, was senator and Mr. Reed was representative. The same as to the Thirty-ninth General Assembly. In the Fortieth General Assembly, from 1896 to 1898, DuFay A. Fuller, Republican, and Jacob Edelstein, Democrat, both of Belvidere, were representatives. D. A. Fuller also served as representative in the Forty-first General Assembly, and became senator in the Forty-second. Cornelius V. O'Connor, Democrat, of Boone, served as representative at this session. Mr. Fuller also served as senator the following session. In the Forty-fourth General Assembly Frank R. Covey, of Boone County, was representative. During this session, Edward D. Shurtleff, of Marengo, was speaker of the house, being a representative from the district including Boone County. In the Forty-fifth General Assembly Mr. Covey again served as representative, and Mr. Shurtleff was speaker.

CHAPTER VIII.

COURTS.

BOONE COUNTY CIRCUIT COURTS AND EARLY OCCUPANTS OF THE BENCH—LIST OF CIRCUIT JUDGES—CIRCUIT CLERKS AND STATE'S ATTORNEYS—COUNTY COURTS AND JUSTICES OF THE PEACE—MEMBERS OF THE COUNTY BAR—PROMINENT MEN WHO HAVE HELD THE POSITION OF CIRCUIT JUDGE—SKETCHES OF PRESENT COURT OFFICIALS—COURT HOUSE AND OTHER PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The circuit judges, clerks and state's attorneys in the early days were as follows:

CIRCUIT JUDGES.

Dan Stone, 1839 to 1841.
 Thomas C. Brown, 1841 to 1847.
 Jesse B. Thomas, 1847 to 1849.
 Hugh Henderson, 1849 to 1851.
 Isaac G. Wilson, 1851 to 1861.

The first circuit judge who resided in Boone County was Allen C. Fuller. He was commissioned July 1, 1861, and resigned July 18, 1862, in order to become adjutant general of the state. He was succeeded by Theodore D. Murphy. This county was in the Thirteenth Circuit at that time. Under the act of 1877, Boone County became part of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit. The judges have been as follows: Theo. D. Murphy, June 16, 1873, Woodstock; Hiram H. Cody, September 15, 1874, Naperville; Clark W. Upton, August 20, 1877, Waukegan; Clark W. Upton, June 16, 1879, Waukegan; Isaac C. Wilson, June 16, 1879, Geneva; Charles Kellum, June 16, 1879, Sycamore; Isaac G. Wilson, June 1, 1885, Geneva; Clark W. Upton, June 1, 1885, Wankegan; Charles Kellum, June 1, 1885, Sycamore; Charles Kellum, June 1, 1891, Sycamore; Clark W. Upton, June 1, 1891, Wankegan; Henry B. Willis, June 1, 1891, Elgin.

Under the apportionment of 1897, Boone County became part of the Seventeenth Circuit, the judges were as follows:

John C. Garver, Rep., Rockford, June 18, 1897, deceased; Charles E. Fuller, Rep., Belvidere, June 18, 1897; Charles H. Donnelly, Rep., Woodstock, June 18, 1897; Arthur H. Frost, Rep., Rockford, March 5, 1902, vice Fuller; Arthur H. Frost, Rep., Rockford, June 18, 1903; Charles H. Donnelly, Rep., Woodstock, June 18, 1903; Robert W. Wright, Rep., Belvidere, June 18, 1903.

CIRCUIT CLERKS.

Seth S. Whitman, 1829 to 1849.

Noah W. Birge, 1849 to 1850, when he departed this life, and in April, 1850, Stephen C. Gooding was appointed clerk by Hugh Henderson, then circuit judge. Gooding held the office of clerk from 1850 to 1851.

Daniel T. Olney, 1851 to 1853.

Fayette B. Hamlin, 1853 to 1857.

Daniel H. Whitney, 1857 to February 12, 1864, when he died.

Horatio C. DeMunn was appointed circuit clerk February 15, 1864, and held the office until December, 1876, when James W. Sawyer was elected.

STATE'S ATTORNEYS.

Shelton L. Hall, 1829 to 1843.

Joseph B. Wells, 1843 to 1845.

James L. Loop, 1845 to 1846.

Thomas L. Turner, 1846 to 1847.

W. A. Boardman, 1847 to 1849.

Alonzo Platt, 1849 to 1851.

P. W. Platt, 1851 to 1852.

Amos B. Coon, 1852 to 1853.

Millard M. Boyce, 1853 to 1857.

E. L. Joslyn, 1857 to 1861.

Amos B. Coon, 1861 to 1865.

Charles E. Fuller was elected in 1876.

LATER JUDGES AND CLERKS.

In 1897 Charles E. Fuller was elected circuit judge and held that office until 1903, when the new Eighth Congressional District was formed and Judge Fuller was chosen by his fellow citizens to represent them in Washington. Judge Fuller's ability as a lawyer and on the bench is so well known it is useless to enlarge upon it here. The regret at losing him as a judge was only compensated by the fact of his being our congressman. It will be unanimously conceded that Chas. E. Fuller is at the present time Boone County's foremost citizen in public life and his name is known throughout all Illinois.

The county, however, was able to offer to the other parts of the judicial district another lawyer, whose legal ability fitted him for the place, and Judge Robert W. Wright was elected circuit judge in 1903 and still holds that position. Judge Wright is an excellent lawyer and left to go on the bench, a practice which probably netted him considerably more than the salary of his office. As a counselor his advice was sought by many large interests, both in the county and from elsewhere. During the vacations of court in this district, Judge Wright has held court in Cook County to relieve the overcrowded conditions of the docket there.

The present circuit clerk is Adelbert C. Fassett, who has held that office since 1884 and is also unopposed for the coming term, which commences this fall. Mr. Fassett has the records of his office thoroughly in hand, and is known throughout the county for his courtesy and the assistance he offers in many ways to the citizens who have to consult the records or engage in court matters.

The county clerk since 1894 has been William Bowley. Probably no man in the county has more friends. The present state's attorney is Patrick H. O'Donnell, a young lawyer of ability and popularity. Mr. O'Donnell was elected in 1904, succeeding Judge C. B. Dean, and is also a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket. Previous to Judge Dean's term, Robert W. Wright was state's attorney for a number of years.

COUNTY COURT.

Among the county judges have been Daniel H. Whitney, elected in 1849; Hiram C. Miller, in 1853; Allen C. Fuller, in 1857; M. M. Boyce, in 1861; L. W. Lawrence, in 1865, and for many years thereafter; Wales W. Wood, in 1889. C. B. Dean for several terms. William C. De Wolf in 1898. Judge De Wolf is the present county judge.

JUSTICE'S COURTS.

So many of the citizens have held this important position that we will not attempt to name them all, or any large proportion. Among the early justices were John K. Towner, John S. King, Hiram Waterman, Alexander Neely and Frederick W. Crosby. The present justices, who are holding court in Belvidere, are Walter Lucas, M. C. Marean and Charles S. Spackman. Among the others, who have held justice's court in Belvidere in the last ten years, have been William F. Hovey, A. E. Jenner, Squire Reynolds, H. C. DeMunn and A. F. Appleton.

THE BOONE COUNTY BAR.

Among the earliest members of the Boone County bar were J. L. Loop, William T. Burgess, John C. Kemble. Many of the parties were represented by lawyers from outside of the county. Soon after this Gen. Hurlbut and Allen C. Fuller came to Belvidere, the first in 1845 and the second in 1846, and together with William H. Wood, brother of Wales W. Wood, and Mr. Loop, they constituted the leaders of the Boone County bar for many years. Among the other prominent attorneys were M. M. Boyce, Lewis Pray, J. S. Terwilliger, F. B. Hamlin. The next generation of lawyers consisted of Chas. E. Fuller, Omar Wright, Sr., Robert W. Wright, J. S. Hildrup, William R. Dodge, Wales W. Wood, C. B. Dean. Somewhat later William C. De Wolf, William L. Pierce and William Biesler were admitted, all of whom are still prominent attorneys at the present time. In 1899, Charles S. Kucker, Arthur S. Appleton, and Richard V. Carpenter commenced practice in Belvidere. Mr. Kucker died a few years ago. Mr. Appleton is practicing at Spokane, and Mr. Carpenter is practicing in Belvidere. At about this time the following attorneys were also in Belvidere, all of whom by reason of death or removal have ceased to be practicing members of the Boone County bar. Philip C. Lampert, Charles Roach, Fred Evans, Guy Powell, Max Kunze, William Labrie, Fred L. Hunt, H. D. Blodgett. Among the others who were admitted in the '90s or since then and are still practicing are P. H. O'Donnell, Frank R. Covey, J. M. Huff, William Israel, James R. Jaffray, E. T. Gridley and Irving Banks. Edward A. Thompson, grandson of Deacon Avery, practiced here for several years but has recently removed to Colorado to engage in the mining business. Arthur Tripp and William Waugh have been admitted recently, and Mr. Tripp is practicing in Belvidere. The only practicing attorney outside of Belvidere is H. B. Stevenson of Capron.

Of the present members of the Boone County Bar the following brief mention is submitted:

Wm. C. De Wolf, who is county judge, was born in Spring Township, 1865. He was admitted in 1887 and formed a partnership with Judge Fuller. He has one of the best practices in Belvidere. Wm. R. Dodge has been practicing for many years and holds the office of master in chancery. He occupies the building formerly used as Neely's Bank. Mr. Dodge is one of the most careful and accurate men in Boone County. Judge Wales Wood was born in New York in 1837, and read law in Belvidere in the firm of Fuller & Wood, which was composed of Gen. Fuller and William H. Wood, who were both very able lawyers. Judge Wood was admitted to the bar in 1860 and shortly afterward enlisted in the Ninety-fifth Illinois. He was adjutant of that regiment and held several other commissions. Afterward he was master in chancery, state's attorney, city attorney, and county judge. He is and for many years has been prominent in the G. A. R., and in many of the public affairs of our city, and is regarded with great respect by his many friends for his long, honorable career and pleasant disposition. Judge C. B. Dean was born in DeKalb County, where his father was a prominent early settler. He located in Belvidere in 1862 and after graduating in 1873 at Ann Arbor, commenced practice in Belvidere. He has been city attorney, county judge and state's attorney and also has done a great deal of abstract work. Judge Dean recently removed to Oklahoma. Wm. L. Pierce was born in the spring of 1868. He graduated from the Northwestern Law College in 1892. He has practiced since then, part of the time alone and part of the time in partnership, being associated at various times with F. J. Evans, J. M. Huff, Chas. Roach, Wm. Israel, and Jas. R. Jaffray. Mr. Pierce is one of the best jury lawyers in Boone County. He is now mayor of Belvidere and also was mayor before Mayor Lyon, whom he succeeded. Jas. R. Jaffray was born in Belvidere in 1862 and took up surveying and abstracting, which profession he followed for a considerable time. Some six or seven years ago he was admitted to the bar, and is now associated with Mr. Pierce. He is also corporation counsel. William Biester was brought up in Belvidere and admitted to the bar in 1887. For a number of years Mr. Biester was interested in bees, horticulture and political economy, and did not actively pursue his profession, but he is now located in the Foote Block and gives his full time to law and has one of the best practices in the city. Richard V. Carpenter was born in Chicago in 1871 and graduated from the Chicago College of Law in June, 1897, being admitted to the bar that year. He came to Belvidere in 1899 and formed a partnership with Chas. S. Kucker and Arthur F. Appleton. Mr. Kucker came from Waukegan, was one of the best known young men in the city in lodge and social circles, and had a large circle of friends. He married Miss Edith Coon, daughter of R. W. Coon. He died about two years ago. Mr. Appleton married Miss Daisy Dean, daughter of Judge C. B. Dean, and is now practicing at Spokane, Washington. Attorney Carpenter occupies offices with John C. Foote in the Foote Block. He has been for many years associated with Judge Orrin X. Carter, now of the supreme court of the state, and spends about one third of his time in Chicago, assisting Judge Carter.

P. H. O'Donnell was born in Belvidere in 1872 and graduated at Ann Arbor in 1898. He is at present state's attorney and one of the most prominent of Belvidere's younger lawyers. William Israel was born in New Jersey and was educated at Ann Arbor. After practicing for a time in Chicago, he came to Belvidere and became associated with Mr. Pierce. He is now associated with Judge Fuller. James M. Huff came from Indiana, where he had been practicing for some time, and commenced practice in Belvidere about 7 years ago. He occupies a suite of offices on Buchanan Street, with Frank King. Mr. Huff has been prominent in the Masons and was a member of the North Side school board, in addition to his legal work. Ernest C. Gridley comes from Winnebago County and commenced practice in Chicago. He came to Belvidere about three years ago and has offices in the Starr Block. Arthur Tripp was brought up in Belvidere and is located in the suite with Mr. Biester, in the Foote block. Irving Banks was brought up in Flora Township and has practiced part of the time in Belvidere and part of the time in Chicago.

COURT HOUSE AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The location of the court house was decided upon by the commissioners named for the purpose, by sticking a stake in the ground where they thought it should be. The location selected was about where the present court house now stands. The first court house, built in 1839-40, had two stories and a basement. Robert B. Hurd, Levi Adkin, Jr., and James Johnson had a great deal to do with the building of the structure. Before this was built the county commissioners' court seems to have been held at Simon P. Doty's and various other places. The first term of the circuit court was held at the "Baptist house of worship in Belvidere (the place appointed by the county commissioners' court for holding courts in Boone County)," on Thursday, the fourth Monday in April, 1839. The judge was Dan Stone, the clerk, S. S. Whitman, and the sheriff, Houghton C. Walker. The first case called was that of Ira Gould vs. Thos. O. Davis, an appeal from a justice court. When it was called it appeared that it had been settled out of court and was therefore dismissed. The Baptist meeting house then stood on the southeast corner of Van Buren Street and Hurlbut Avenue, where the red brick house formerly owned by Squire Reynolds now stands. It was removed directly across the street and used as a church building by the Universalists. In 1861 it was moved next to where Moore's Livery Stable now is, on West Lincoln Avenue, and was owned by John Gray and rented for a paint shop. About 1865, it was sold to Ira D. Hill and moved by him to a tract of land which he owned on Hurlbut Avenue, not far from where that street joins Lincoln Avenue. It still stands in quite good condition and is owned by Pundt and rented by him as a residence. Mrs. Adelia Robinson, daughter of Mr. Hill, resides on Madison Street, just northerly of this building, and is well acquainted with the facts of its history. In passing, it is interesting to note that

Mrs. Robinson, her father, daughter and grandchild, are residing at the place noted, constituting four generations. The former meeting house is a rather low, one story structure, somewhat along the lines of the New England houses. When Belvidere gets larger and wealthier, perhaps this interesting relic of the early days, "the first court house," may be moved to the public park and turned into a museum.

The present court house was completed about September, 1855, and stands on the hill facing Main Street. In the lower floor it has two rooms for the county superintendent of schools, one of which is being fitted up for the holding of county court; also a room for the county treasurer, one for the board of review, and one which is known as the "old jail room," where records are kept. The stairs go up the left side of the entrance and the upper floor is devoted to the court room, jury room, and two retiring rooms for the bar. Allen C. Fuller and Leonard M. Beebe were the building committee for the county board, and were given a vote of thanks by the supervisors for their faithful work. The question of selling the building and grounds for school purposes and moving the court house to another site was agitated in 1872. Supervisors Hall, De Munn and Bogardus were appointed a committee to look into the matter, but nothing definite ever was done concerning the change.

In July, 1875, Supervisors Murch, Lambert, Greenlee were appointed a committee to attend to the erection of a fence around the public square, either posts and boards, four boards high, or posts and rails. Main Street was extended across the square in September, 1878. A galvanized barb wire fence was placed on the west side and another fence on the east side, with turn-stiles in front of the buildings.

The record office was built by Reuben Cook, contractor, in 1878. Ira D. Hill was superintendent of the work and the building committee consisted of John Greenlee, John J. Foote, Wil-ham Andrews and O. S. Nichols. Considerable repairing was done to the court house in 1880, the committee being W. D. Cornwell and William D. Swail. In 1892 the city was allowed to place a water tower on the square. Within the last few years the court house has been repainted, remodeled and greatly improved.

The sheriff's residence, at the back of which is the county jail, stands on the mound next north of the court house, and is a handsome, well-built structure, in a very pleasant location.

BANKS—PUBLIC UTILITIES.

HISTORY OF BANKING ENTERPRISES IN BOONE COUNTY—LIST OF EARLY BANKERS—RATES OF INTEREST AT DIFFERENT PERIODS—RAILROADS—EARLY STEAM ROADS—PRESENT ELECTRIC LINES—FIRE DEPARTMENT—WATER AND LIGHT SERVICE—TELEPHONES.

One of the earliest bankers was Alexander Neely. Mr. Neely's bank was in the red brick building now owned by William R. Dodge on East Lincoln. Mr. Neely was at that time one of the most prominent men in Belvidere. The bank afterward failed during one of the panics, which used to cause so many failures among the business men in the early days. One of the last accounts withdrawn was that of the Presbyterian Church, by Deacon Avery, who had a hint of the coming failure from a friend and hurried to get the money out. Among the assets was a large number of notes of the "Wild Cat" currency, mostly from Milledgeville Bank of Georgia. The First National Bank was organized in May, 1865. Allen C. Fuller was elected president and Newell C. Tompkins, cashier. Among the other presidents have been William

S. Dunton and Mark Ramsey and the present one is George M. Marshall. The present cashier is Albert E. Loop, who has grown up from boyhood on the north side, and who, like his father, Major Loop, is one of the most popular of the citizens. This bank occupies, as it has for many years, part of the Greenlee building at the corner of North State and Lincoln Avenue, and is one of the chief financial props of the city. The Second National Bank was founded in 1884. It occupies a very handsome white stone building on South State Street with large Ionic columns. Omar H. Wright is the president and succeeded D. D. Sabin in that office. Before that Gen. A. C. Fuller was president. Irving Terwilliger has been cashier for many years, and has been brought up in banking business since boyhood. The People's Bank is an organization chartered under the state laws and has its bank building on the easterly side of State Street, near the bend at Logan Avenue. It was founded in September, 1889, and has always been very popular with the depositors. George M. Murch is the president and he succeeded William B. Swail. John Greenlee was cashier for many years, but upon his failure in health Benjamin Harnish was advanced to that position, which he fully merits by his genial and accommodating attention to all details of the patrons' wants. The Farmer's Bank was established in the spring of 1908 and occupies the old Murch & Pettit building at the bend at Logan Avenue. The vault in the new bank is a very fine one. George Myers is president and A. Gates White, who for many years has been one of the best known business men at Garden Prairie, is cashier. The bank has a large number of stockholders and has already taken its place among the solid financial institutions. Among the private banks in the early days were those of Fuller, Lawrence & Woods in the '50s and Yourt, Lawrence & Company, which was organized July 15, 1874, on the south side, and conducted by a board of five directors elected annually. The Second National Bank was the successor of Yourt, Lawrence & Co.

INTEREST RATES.

The following table of interest rates in Boone County was compiled by Mr. Frank N. Cummings from the books of the Boone County Abstract Company. For each year since the beginning of county records, a large number of interest rates were taken from the mortgages, and an average taken for that year. This shows the price paid for the use of money, as affected by the business conditions in this part of the state, for a long time back. It is believed that no such table has been compiled outside of Chicago and that these figures will form an interesting, and perhaps valuable, addition to the financial history of this region.

RAILROADS.

The chief line of railway in Boone County is the Freeport Division of the Chicago & Northwestern. This was one of the earliest railroads in the state and was known as the Galena and Chicago Union Railroad. It is interesting to note that the "Galena" in those days was placed before the "Chicago" in the name. This road was in operation as far as Marengo in the summer or fall of 1852, and that winter, in December, it came to Belvidere. The first engine was known as the "Pioneer." The Chicago depot was not far from where the present Wells Street station is, being on the corner of Canal and Kinzie Street. It was a frame building of two stories with a cupola and a one story "L" reaching along the track. When the railroad came to Belvidere it was at first intended to have it come through north of the river, as the court house and original town were located on that side and everyone expected the coming city to be there. However, William H. Gilman was the owner of a large portion of the present South Side of Belvidere, and through his relative, Ebenezer Peck, was well acquainted with the leading men in the new company. Through his influence, and because there appears to have been some delay or opposition to securing the north side route, the railroad was put through on the south side of the river. It is stated that Mr. Gilman presented the road with land for the depot and right of way through his property. No one fact, since the founding of Belvidere, has ever made so great a change in its history. The South Side immediately began to increase in population and in importance, and now contains the largest part of the business interests, besides a little more than half of the population. The Freeport branch runs almost east and west across Boone County, through the southerly portion of Bonus and Belvidere. The Kenosha Division of the Northwestern was afterward built, and runs in an easterly and westerly direction across Caledonia and Boone townships, passing through Capron, Poplar Grove and Argyle. It runs between Kenosha and Rockford. Another line of the Northwestern Division runs through Caledonia toward Beloit, Janesville, and Madison, Wis., connecting at Belvidere with the main line. It crosses the Kishwaukee on a high bridge east of town. This bridge was burned down years ago and the railroad company seemed to be inclined to discontinue the road, but still hold the franchise. Through the efforts of the citizens, led by General Hurfbut, the road rebuilt the bridge and continued the trains over this division. Another branch of the Northwestern leaves the Freeport Division at the mile post east of town and runs southeasterly across Spring Township through Herbert to Sycamore. The Illinois Central line, running between Chicago and Rockford and other western points, crosses the county in the southerly part of Flora, the station being at Irene. A very small portion of the Northwestern also crosses the extreme northeastern part of Le Roy, running to Sharon, Wis.

ELECTRIC LINES.

In 1901, the Belvidere & Rockford Electric line was put in. This starts on Pleasant Street near State and runs along by the Northwestern line until about half a mile from the western edge of the county, where it runs south. It crosses the tracks again at Cherry Valley and thereafter continues in the same general direction to Rockford connecting there with Freeport, and the Beloit and Janesville lines. The passenger station was first located in the back part of the Hopkins building, but afterwards the building occupied as Fulkerson's Machine shop was turned into a station, which it now occupies.

When the Rockford line was built there was still a space between Belvidere and Elgin not covered by an electric line, but recently a railroad was built between these two cities, thereby connecting Belvidere, as well as parts west of it, with Chicago. This road also starts at the corner of State and Pleasant Streets and uses the tracks of the Belvidere local line for a short distance down State Street. A cement bridge near Camp Epworth on this road is said to be quite a feat in bridge construction. The Belvidere local line was put in in 1896, and was largely owned and controlled by John Roach, the Chicago traction expert. It has a line running from the southerly part of South State Street along State Street to General Fuller's corner on the north side, where it turns and runs to the cemetery. Another line goes out West Lincoln Avenue to the fair grounds. The barns of this line, near the cemetery, were burned in 1908.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

During all the early years of Belvidere there was no regularly organized fire department, either paid or volunteer. When a blaze was discovered the citizens turned out in force, and under the direction of some natural leader, such as Gen. A. C. Fuller, Ezra May or William Haywood, organized a bucket brigade and quenched the flames. There were also two garden engines in town, one on the south side owned by R. J. Tousley, afterward proprietor of the Jullen House, and one on the north side owned by A. E. Jenner. With these two contrivances, which were small tanks, each fitted with a pump and small hose, and operated by one man at the lever and one at the nozzle, and with an enthusiastic bucket brigade, many fierce conflagrations were subdued.

One of the largest fires of those early days occurred in the building at the corner of North State and Lincoln Avenue, now occupied by Mr. Dempsey, but which at that time belonged to Alexander Neely and contained the postoffice, a dry goods and a drug store. The fire was started about 6 o'clock one Sunday evening by some alcohol fumes, which had escaped from a barrel in the drug store, being ignited from a match. The whole building burned down. Of the postoffice the key of the mail bag alone was saved, as the postmaster, E. D. Ransom, had it in his pocket.

In 1858 or 1859, a wooden hotel, run by Ephraim Morely on the ground where the Julien House now stands, burned down; and in the '60s another wooden hotel, situated where Reichert Bros., hardware is at present, and a church on the site of the present South Baptist Church, both fell prey to flames.

The destruction of the old Union hall took place in 1860. This was a large three story building on the southwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and State Street. The ground floor was occupied by four stores and an entrance to the hall; the second floor contained offices; and the top floor was a large public hall. The fire was started by a clerk in one of the stores, attempting to fill a lighted lamp with kerosene, the flames caught a row of dry goods hanging overhead and soon spread to the entire building, quickly reducing it to ashes.

Perhaps the most serious fire of recent years was the destruction of Union hall, where Derthick's opera house now stands, which will be remembered by most of the readers. The Columbia Heating Co. plant, in 1908, was another spectacular blaze.

After the city water works was established, it became possible to fight fires with pressure direct from the mains. A truck and hose cart were thereupon purchased, together with grounds and a building for headquarters of the department, and a volunteer company was formed. The building was purchased from the estate of William Haywood and paid for by the city, July 6, 1886. It is situated on North State Street and is still headquarters for the department. In April, 1896, the paid fire company was started. The chiefs have been Frank McCoy, Charles Braden and Frank Clark. Within the last six or seven years a second fire station has been built on Whitney Street, near the Julien House. Considerable will be found in the extracts from the "Standard" concerning the organization of the fire department and the serious fires which have taken place.

WATER AND LIGHT.

Considerable will be found in the extracts from the old "Standard" as to the water and light service of Belvidere, and it will not be repeated here. The water is excellent. It has been obtained from an artesian well on the South Side, near where Caswell Street strikes the river. Just recently a new artesian well has been put down near the city pumping station at Meadow and Whitney streets. A stand pipe formerly stood on the Public Square near Main Street on the North Side, but as it commenced to lean to one side the city (not wishing to be another Pisa) had it pulled down. County Clerk William Bowley purchased the iron base and uses it for a fish pond in his yard. There is another stand pipe on the South Side near Union Avenue and Fifth Street.

The gas plant is situated on the river road, west of town. Gas lighting has been superseded by electricity and the streets are lighted with arc lights. The power is furnished by the Public Service Operating Company, located on Whitney Street near Locust. This company also furnishes what is known as "city heat," being a hot water system laid under some of the streets of the South Side.

TELEPHONES.

The telephone service is furnished largely by two companies. The Belvidere Telephone Company is a local concern, the stock being mostly held in this county. It gives good service and recently put in a very modern equipment at a large expense. Among those who have been prominent in running this company are Messrs. J. R. Balliet, M. C. Marean, Wm. Marean, and F. D. Rowan. C. L. Brown has been the manager for many years. The central office is located over the Second National Bank.

The Bell Telephone Company, Belvidere system, was started August 1, 1883. Frank Plane installed the plant and was manager for 21 years. The first central headquarters were located in the hardware store run by Mr. Plane's father, now the Reichert block. In a few years the central was moved to a location on South State Street, near the Brackett House, where it remained for many years. A few years ago it was removed to the Udelowish block, on the west side of State Street, near Locust. Mr. Plane is now the manager of the "Rural" telephone which is a branch of the Bell system, and has its central office in the stone building near the railroad track occupied by Mr. Plane as a screen door factory.

INDUSTRIAL.

BOONE COUNTY A FARMING DISTRICT—AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS AND ENTERPRISES—BOONE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—ITS FIRST OFFICERS—THE DAIRYING INDUSTRY—STOCK-RAISING—NUMBER AND VALUE OF LIVE STOCK IN BOONE COUNTY IN 1896 AND 1908—SHEEP YARDS—BELVIDERE GRAIN ELEVATOR—LAND VALUES—MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES—NATIONAL SEWING MACHINE

COMPANY—COLUMBIA HEATING COMPANY—CORSET AND PIANO FACTORIES—THE BORDEN CONDENSED MILK COMPANY.

Boone County is essentially a farming community. With the exception of Belvidere City, there are very few manufacturing industries, except creameries, and the county contains some 280 square miles of fine farm land. While the soil is perhaps not as rich and productive as in the black soil region, a few counties south, yet it will hold its own in any part of the world, and there are few communities in this country that present a more prosperous, neat and well kept lot of farms than our own "Little Boone." Considerable will appear in other parts of this work concerning the agriculture of the county, and probably a majority of our foremost men written of here have been farmers. So that, under this head, we will only attempt in this place to sum up in a general way concerning the subject. In the early days of the county, farming was of course about the only industry, excepting saw and grist mills, and the few stores and taverns that were established for the benefit of the farmers. The principal crop at that time seems to have been wheat, and many tales are told of hauling it to Chicago and selling at a price which would barely pay the expense of hauling. There is at present very little wheat raised in the county, most of the crops being corn and oats, besides some rye and considerable hay. At one time, Mr. Bogardus raised considerable broom corn, and Marcellus G. Leonard endeavored to start sugar cane growing. There was also, until recently, considerable truck farming in the vicinity of the Coleman and Lyon canning plants, for the purpose of raising vegetables to be canned. The Boone County Agricultural Society was formed in the spring of 1865, the meeting being held at Plane's Hall, April 25th. of that year. Isaac Miller was chairman of the meeting and Elias Congdon, Stephen A. Hurlbut, and M. G. Leonard were appointed as a committee to draft the constitution and by-laws. The officers for the first year were as follows:

President, Allen C. Fuller; Vice-President, John Stockham; Secretary and Treasurer, George J. Wood; Directors, Frederick P. Low, Flora; Nijah Hotchkiss, Belvidere; Martin Y. Gilbert, Caledonia; Hiram Hopkins, Manchester; E. L. Tisdell, LeRoy; Willett Webster, Boone; H. W. Pier, Bonus; C. F. Witt, Spring. The Fair was held most of the years from the organization until 1867 with a varying degree of success. Those who assisted in the work are entitled to a great deal of credit for their work in keeping together the institution and furnishing to the people of the county this incentive to the successful production of choice agricultural specimens. In 1867 the fair grounds were moved from their early location, near Belvidere cemetery, to the present location, a tract on the north side of the river, west of Belvidere. In 1871 the society was made a joint stock company with a capital of $5,000, in shares of $10 each. Most of the stock is held in rather small blocks among a number of citizens. The fair is held in the fall of each year and is well attended. It has been a great help toward maintaining a high standard in stock raising and agricultural products in Boone County. Further items as to agriculture and stock raising will be found in the extracts from the "Standard."

LAND VALUES.

Land values in Boone County, when entered from the government, were as in all other districts $1.25 per acre, which was the price fixed by law. The school sections were sold by the commissioners at quite an early date, at the best price that could then be obtained.

Land in Boone County, while not so high in price as that one hundred miles or so further south, is not by any means what could be called cheap land either in quality or price. Generally speaking, the land ranges from $75 to $125 per acre, the latter price being just one hundred times what it was seventy years ago. Some of the finest farms, particularly those near Belvidere or which have unusually excellent improvements, run as high as $150 per acre, or perhaps more. A little less than $100 may be taken as an average value of good farm land in the county, in round figures. A few years ago land values took a decided jump and many farms changed hands at high prices. The number of transfers lately has not been very large, but Boone County land makes a very good investment for money and no decided lowering in value has taken place, nor is it likely to for many years.

In order to give some idea of the fluctuation in values, we have compiled from the records and other sources the following table of comparative values of Boone County farm lands, per acre, at various times:

Year	Per acre
1840.....	$ 1.75
1850.....	4.50
1860.....	16.50
1870.....	35.00
1880.....	31.75
1890.....	51.00
1900.....	65.00
1906.....	100.00

STOCK-RAISING.

While there is considerable blooded stock-raising in Boone County, the number of horses and cattle raised here is not so great as formerly, as more attention is being paid to dairying and many of the cows are shipped in for that purpose. It is impossible within the limits of this work to name even a fraction of those who now are, or formerly have been, successful in raising stock, but a few names will be given in that connection.

In Spring Township the Meyers family, including Charles J., John, Dan and George, are prominent horse-raisers, and very successful in that line of stock-raising. West of Poplar Grove, the Merritts (Robert, Mark and Frank) raise a large number of cattle and horses. On Bonus the Porters, McMasters, Herberts, and Searses have been successful raisers of stock. In the northern part the Goodalls (William and Robert) have raised a number of cattle and hogs. Captain James Humphrey in the past was a successful raiser of Durham cattle, and William E. Gorham still raises a number of that breed. Charles Blake has made a specialty of Holsteins. The Morgan horses have long been a favorite in this vicinity and there are quite a number of that strain in the county. Dr. Hawkey usually has some very fast horses on the track and is considered one of the experts in that line. William H. Shaw has a large farm near Newburgh, where he raises some fine stock. Frank King raises a large number of small Shetland ponies on his farms in Flora. Among the other stock-raisers are Fred Covey, John Larson on the Hale farm, and George Grummon on his farm.

The following figures show the number of different kinds of stock in the county in six of the townships in 1896:

1908	LIVESTOCK IN 1908.
	Horses	Cattle	Mules	Sheep	Hogs
Flora	1,065	2,188	4	748	1,906
Belvidere	860	2,531	4	356	1,509
Belvidere South	406	25			2
Belvidere North	216	47	8		10
Caledonia	522	2,922	3	1,326	2,175
Manchester	706	2,541	12	2,088	1,927
Spring	1,026	3,006	6	286	1,905
Bonus	915	3,267		598	1,506
Boone	897	3,583		1,132	1,783
Le Roy	722	3,107	2	413	1,716
Total	7,815	23,087	20	6,907	14,457
Full value.	$570,525	$528,240	$2,880	$29,950	$92,670

The following figures show the number of the different kinds of stock in the county in 1908. These figures being from the tax books, it is probable that they are, if anything, less than the full number and much less than the full value:

1896	LIVESTOCK IN SIX TOWNSHIPS.
	Horses	Cattle	Sheep	Hogs
Bonus	743	3,264	37	3,615
Manchester	593	1,809	1,281	1,264
Flora	766	1,929	171	2,618
Caledonia	796	3,134	637	4,572
Spring	988	3,571	170	4,519
Boone	367	1,635	155	783

It will be noticed that, generally speaking, the most horses are in the southern part of the county, Spring and Flora Townships having the greatest number, except Belvidere, which includes the city. The cattle are more evenly distributed. As to sheep, the northern part of the county has the largest number. As to hogs, the number (outside of Belvidere city) does not vary much in the several townships. The average value of horses, as shown by the assessors' tables, is $73; of cows, $23; of mules, $73; of sheep, $4.28, and of hogs, $6.42.

Stock-raising, and particularly the dairy and sheep interests, form a very important part of the wealth of Boone County.

DAIRYING.

Much of the land in the county is used as pasture for grazing cattle, Boone County lying toward the western edge of the great dairy region of which Elgin is the center. Much of the milk is carried each morning to the Borden's Condensing factory at Belvidere, Cornell's at Garden Prairie, Wait Creamery in Belvidere, and a number of other creameries scattered through the county. Dairy products form a large part of the wealth of the community.

SHEEP YARDS.

About four years ago Marshall Bros., acting in conjunction with the Northwestern railroad, established a large sheep yards in the north-easterly part of town. The land was purchased from the Duntons and lies near to the round house and easterly of the north yards. A very long platform for unloading the sheep from the stock cars runs along the western edge. There are also large sheds capable of holding thousands of sheep at a time, and an elevator which rises as a conspicuous landmark toward that part of town. There is also a very complete shearing shed, in which the sheep are washed and then sheared by machine very rapidly. The sheep are brought by train from the far west and are unloaded (usually at night) into the yards. The shipper goes on to Chicago, the sheep in the meantime being fed in the sheds or on the Wheeler farm or some of the farms in the locality. When the shipper decides to sell, he can telegraph to Belvidere in the evening and, on the following morning, the sheep will be in Chicago, fat and healthy, and not weary from the long ride from the west.

ELEVATOR.

The Stone elevator near the Northwestern depot was erected in 1851 by William H. Gilman. Several years afterward it was sold to Reed & Congdon and converted into a flour mill. In 1860 or '61 M. G. Leonard purchased it and took out the mill machinery, making it again an elevator. Mr. Leonard sold it to the firm of Marshall Bros., composed of George M. and Taylor Z. Marshall, and they ran it in connection with their coal and feed business until somewhere about five years ago, when they sold it to Hyland Bros., formerly of Cherry Valley, who still continue to run it. George Marshall accepted the presidency of the First National Bank, while Taylor Z. has charge of the sheep yards.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES.

The National Sewing Machine Company is so well known in Belvidere, and so important to the well-being of the town, that it is not advisable to try to give within the limits of this volume the space its relative importance in the life of the community would entitle it to. Some of the facts as to its early history have been told in extracts from the "Standard" and can be found in that portion of this history. It was started by the June Manufacturing Company and run largely by the June Bros., but for many years the present management, of which B. Eldredge is the head, has been in charge and has made it the immense concern it now is. Until about seven or eight years ago the plant was bounded by State and Main Streets on the east and west, by the river north and Meadow Street on the south. The principal departments are the tool room, the polishing room, the plating room, the press and stand department, the japanning room, the foundry, the shipping room, the mill room, the automatic screw department, the assembling room. The principal output of the "National" is sewing machines and they are made at all prices and in many varieties. Most of them are known as the "Eldredge" machine of various styles, but a large number have been supplied at various times to the mail order houses in Chicago. During the time when bicycles were popular, the National turned out some very high grade wheels, known as the "Eldredge" and "Belvidere," but not much work is done along this line at present. When automobiles first began to attain prominence considerable experimental work was done in designing an automobile, but the manufacture of those vehicles has been practically discontinued. About seven years ago a large addition was made to the factory on the east side of Main Street, including a foundry and a large brick building. The opening of the new addition was celebrated by a ball, which probably was the largest social event ever given in Belvidere. The assassination of President McKinley took place about the time the new foundry was completed, and the public funeral services in Belvidere were held there, Judge Fuller being the speaker, and a very large number of citizens being present to express their grief over the loss of their beloved president. It would be impossible in the limits of this article to set down the names of the men who have contributed to making the company what it is, either as officers, foremen, machinists or foundrymen. Those at the head have been B. Eldredge, president; Franklin Eldredge, vice-president; David Patton, secretary, and Messrs. Frank Goodrich, Willis S. Brown, W. H. Moore and L. W. Conkling. The National has always had the good will of its employes; its sewing machines and its bicycles have always been of the very best workmanship, and upon its prosperity depends largely the prosperity of Belvidere from time to time. Little more need be said than that in a business way it is the pride of Belvidere and its chief manufacturing industry.

COLUMBIA HEATING COMPANY.

The Columbia Heating Company was organized in the early part of 1901, for the manufacture of steam and hot water heaters, originated by Eugene M. Fancher. The company was organized for $35,000 and a plant was erected on the river road, southwest of town. The officers were S. L. Covey, president; Geo. M. Marshall, vice-president; Francis King, secretary (who was succeeded by Richard V. Carpenter); T. A. Hovey, treasurer; E. M. Fancher, general manager. The furnaces were known as the "Florence" heaters and boilers, after Mr. Fancher's wife, who was a Belvidere girl, Mr. Fancher being a resident of Chicago. The products of the factory found good sale and, after a few years of business, it was found necessary to increase the capital stock to $125,000. In negotiating for the sale of the surplus, the company became acquainted with Charles E. Pope, of Chicago, and Mr. Pope, having offered a good price for the whole interest, all the stockholders sold to him and the company was thereafter conducted by him. In June, 1908, the plant caught fire and was practically destroyed, the fire being a very hot one and attended by large numbers of people. On account of the distance from town the water pressure was very limited and the efforts of the fire department to save the building were unavailing. The early superintendents of the plant were Charles Gram and Gus Peterson.

CORSET FACTORY.

When the Columbia Heating Co. plant was built, the stockholders as individuals also purchased about twenty-five acres in the vicinity which they platted as "Columbia Subdivision." Included in the tract was also some land owned by Benjamin Fry and the poultry and truck farm now run by Bert Lucas. Later on the "Belvidere Commercial Club" negotiated with the Classic Corset Co. to run a factory in Belvidere, and the lots in Columbia subdivision were purchased, subscriptions were received from the business men and a factory erected on some of the lots, the remainder being distributed among the subscribers. The Classic Corset Company did not establish a factory in the building, but it was turned over to the H. M. Goddard Company, a very successful firm of corset manufacturers having their headquarters in Chicago. The factory is now one of the important institutions of Belvidere, and has a large number of employes, mostly young women.

PIANO FACTORY.

In 1907 the Fuehr & Stemmer Piano Company, largely through the efforts of Rev. Heinemann, signified its willingness to remove its plant to Belvidere from Oak Park, providing some inducements were offered toward establishing it in its new location. Through the efforts of Omar H. Wright, P. R. Kennedy and others of the Business Men's Association, the building in Fairview formerly occupied by the Lyon Canning Co. was secured and fitted up. The company now occupies it to the full capacity of the plant, turning out high grade pianos and employing a large number of skilled workmen, many of whom came with the company from its former location.

MILLS.

The Big Thunder Mills were built in 1845 by Alexander Neeley and Harvey D. May. They were run as flour mills for some time and were afterwards turned into a machine shop by the Cox Bros. for the manufacture of small hardware specialties. Afterwards they were used by the Big Thunder Manufacturing Company of which Geo. Greenlee, Jr. was the principal owner.

for the manufacture of sewing machine shuttles and other small steel articles.

The Baltic Mills were erected in 1845 by the Crosby Company, in the general locality used in the early days by Dr. King and others for mills. These mills were afterward owned by James B. Martyn and the Johnstons. The Baltic mill dam is of considerable importance to Belvidere on account of the change it makes in the height of the river.

BORDEN MILK COMPANY.

Borden's Condensed Milk Company has a large plant on the south side of the Kishwaukee River between the Beloit branch of the railroad and the land owned by the National. It was established about 1895. This is a very important institution to the county, because it buys much of the milk from the farmers. The plant, in common with all of the plants of this large company, is very pleasing from its neat appearance and the care taken in the different processes. W. H. Shearman is the manager. J. H. Southard preceded him. In connection with the plant a large ice house is operated.

CHAPTER XI.

EDUCATIONAL.

FIRST SCHOOLS IN BOONE COUNTY—WIVES AND DAUGHTERS OF PIONEERS—THE FIRST TEACHERS—PRESENT STATUS OF THE SCHOOL SYSTEM AND PRINCIPAL SCHOOL BUILDINGS—PROMINENT CITIZENS WHO WERE EARLY TEACHERS—GERMAN PAROCHIAL SCHOOL—BELVIDERE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The first schools in Boone County were taught under the shade of the trees by the wives and daughters of some of the early settlers. Among these was that held by Mrs. Lawrence in Bonus at a very early day. Among the first buildings erected in Boone County was the "Newton Academy," which stood on the block afterwards owned by Squire De Munn on Madison Street, in Belvidere. The frame work, at least, of this building was erected about 1837, and it was evidently intended to be an institution of some size and literary merit. A number of the old citizens in Belvidere went to the old academy on the hill. The writer was told of one of the pupils who jumped out of the window and rushed down the hill and across lots to the river when the first train came through on the railroad, and was followed at full speed by the teacher, more interested in catching him than in seeing the train. Scattered all through the county are the district schools, those centers of education where the boys and girls are trained to make good citizens. Each of these districts and the communities whose children attend them would make a history in itself, but within the limits of this volume little can be said of the details. Among the school houses are the Burr Oak in LeRoy, Lawrenceville in Bonus, Rollins, White Pigeon, Sager's Corners in Belvidere, Quail Trap in Caledonia, Flora Center in Flora, Porter School in Bonus. Some of the most prominent and useful citizens in the county have taught school in these little district school houses and many of the fondest memories of the citizens cluster around their worn benches, the sound of their bells, and the nooks and corners of their play grounds. In Belvidere there are now two school districts, the north and the south, each with its separate board of education, superintendent, and teachers. In 1907 and 1908 the proposition to consolidate the districts, was voted on, but failed on both occasions. The Main Street School is located at the corner of Main Street and Perry, on land purchased from the county years ago by the school trustees, and which formerly was part of the Public Square. General Hurlbut was appointed by the county authorities as a commissioner to convey the land. Fred Reiwoldt has been the efficient janitor for about 18 years. The Perry Street School has only been in operation about six or seven years. It is located in the westerly part of town on Perry Street, in a high and slightly location. The superintendents of the North Side School for several years past have been Prof. Snyder, Prof. Knapp, and the present superintendent, Prof. Eugene Merriam. Miss Flora Fellows is the principal of the Main Street School. Ida Van Epps is the principal of the Perry Street School. On the south side there are two school buildings located on the corner of Pearl and First Streets. One of these is a red brick building, being the older of the two, and the other building of yellow pressed brick. There is also the Logan Avenue School, a brick structure built about eleven years ago. The superintendents of the South Side Schools for many years past have been as follows: Prof. J. G. Lucas, Prof. DeGross, Dr. Montgomery Moore, Prof. C. H. LeVitt. The principals of the high school have been as follows: Miss Longley, Miss Porteus, Miss Lindley, Prof. Bardine, Miss Myrtle Strickler.

Among the foremost educators of the county was Henry J. Sherrill. Mr. Sherrill was born in Madison County, N. Y., April 28, 1824. He lived in that state for 42 years and was a teacher most of the time. He came to Belvidere in 1865 and was principal of the North Belvidere School for many years. His widow, formerly Miss Alice Bentley, survived him and is one of Belvidere's most talented ladies, as is also her sister, Mrs. A. O. Witbeck. Mr. Sherrill was afterwards elected county superintendent and served in that capacity for a number of years, until his resignation. Mrs. Mary Creary was county superintendent of schools in the '70s. She was born in New York, in 1846 and came west in 1856. She was educated at Rockford Seminary and Vassar College and after a few years of teaching was married and settled in Belvidere. She continued to teach in the High School and in 1873 was elected county superintendent. Prof. Levi R. Fitzer was county superintendent from 1897 to 1901. Mr. Fitzer now lives on the Hildrup farm and devotes considerable attention to agriculture. The present county superintendent is Prof. Jackson G. Lucas. Mr. Lucas comes of the family which has been prominent in Flora since the earliest days. He was principal of the south side schools and assistant postmaster at Belvidere. Many of Belvidere's young men and women look back to the time when they were under "Jack's" tuition with great pleasure, and realize how much he helped them, not only in getting an education, but in building a character.

The following excellent article on the early schools was written by a lady correspondent of the "Standard" some years ago:

"All schools were elective until 1850. By this is meant that any one desiring to teach, engaged a room and then went about soliciting pupils, who paid a regular tuition. The first school of this kind, and in fact the first school held in Belvidere was taught by Miss Cates, in 1837, at the corner of the present State Street and Lincoln Avenue, near the hardware store of Greenlee & Son.

"As these schools were conducted by single individuals they were not kept up long and in 1838 another school of the same nature was started by Miss Sheldon at the corner of State and Perry Streets. In 1839 Miss Penny continued a school in the same place and Miss King opened a school on State Street.

"In 1844 Belvidere could boast of an academy; this was on Perry Street between Hancock and Webster Streets. It was a graded school consisting of three departments. The brother of Margaret Fuller was a noted teacher at the time. The building was set on fire at one time. School was kept up here nearly six years and then gradually declined but it was at one time in good standing and had scholars from several different states.

"After 1845, Mr. Pettit organized a school in a part of the old Baptist Church and afterwards taught in this place in all eight years. His scholars were from six years of age to twenty-seven.

Pupils came from the country around and used every kind of book imaginable.

"An attempt was made to establish a school on the south side in 1844 but was abandoned after one year.

"In 1846 Mr. Phillips had a school in the basement of the Baptist Church.

"About this time successful efforts were made to start a public school system here. This was done by using the money which came from the school lands, by renting and afterwards selling them. These lands occupied the sixteenth section of each township and were held by the state till they reached a certain value, when they were sold and the money used in the building of the public school house.

"In 1850, the stone part of our present (north side) building was completed, being the first public school house in the county. There were three rooms. Mr. Rogers taught at the time. One of the principal events in the history of the old stone part was an entertainment which took place there, the prominent feature of it being that the floor went down, leaving some of the audience seated high above all others in the windows.

"In 1858-9 there was added to the stone building another and larger one of brick costing $8,000.00. You may be sure that this was a great undertaking for so small a place and caused a rise in taxes, so that many of the people at that time thought it was far too great an expenditure.

"Mr. Foster was the first teacher, followed by Mr. Busb, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Snyder, and then by Mr. Sherrill who was an earnest and faithful teacher here for many years."

Mr. W. H. Durham, who was county superintendent of schools in the early days, is now living at Healdsburg, Cal., and furnishes us with the following:

"I came to Garden Prairie in A. D. 1863, as a teacher in the public school of that place. The little old school-house north of the railroad was headquarters for the school. There were over 100 pupils of all grades, mostly adults. The studies consisted of reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, map-drawing, algebra and mental arithmetic, with only one teacher and poor accommodations. The school had to be thoroughly classified, thorough and careful discipline had to be adhered to, with a minute program for all of the classes. The teacher was successful and the school was quite interesting for that kind of a school. Many of the substantial people who were pupils then, now have families and their families are some of the pupils who grace the new and improved school houses, properly graded, with many or all of the modern improvements in furniture and teaching. After the school year closed the teacher turned his attention to agriculture, purchasing a farm of 170 acres known as the Dr. Lewis farm, now the north part of Camp Epworth. I bought the farm for ten dollars per acre. I owned it nearly three years and sold the same for twenty dollars per acre. Now, the farm is worth at least $125.00 per acre. While living here I was elected county superintendent of schools of Boone County, moved to Belvidere in the autumn of '65 and entered upon the duties of that office. Public and private examinations were held throughout the county. Some of those receiving certificates, now prominent men and ladies, I will mention here, who are still living and ornaments to society and people of ability from a business standpoint and integrity of character, and successful in all of their undertakings, as also they were as teachers. I mention first, Hon. C. E. Fuller, M. C., J. R. Balliet and his esteemed wife, Mrs. Sherrill and Mrs. Witbeck. Miss Flora Fellows, who is now a teacher in N. B. School and very successful, Mr. Cowan of Poplar Grove. I now recall the names Messrs. Sherrill, Gibson, Geo. Rix, principals, the first mentioned have passed away. I desire to mention Mr. F. I. Hall, of Flora, a teacher who turned out some of the best trained business young men and ladies for the time of any schools in Boone County."

Also 1806 the Female & Miss Harriet King opened a school. Dr. John S. King. Another of our pioneer teachers was Miss Rebecca Loop, 1806—Mr. John K. Turner, who taught 1806—the winter of 1807 at the Fowler family school on the north side.

In October, 1815, D. R. Pottit commenced a school on north eighty-six scholars, in the old B. post-office, at which we have spoken. He continued to teach for six months, when he went east, remained absent a few months, and returned resumed teaching. During Mr. Pottit's absence, his school was continued by Jeremiah Phillips, who came here in February, 1816, to visit a sister, and while making this visit engaged in teaching penmanship. After Pottit's return, he and Mr. Phillips were engaged in teaching for six years, occupying rooms wherever they could be obtained, sometimes in the court-house and sometimes in second stories of business houses; a part of the time occupying the old academy.

About this time (1812) the lands had become taxable, and the people wealthy enough to maintain public schools, and to build school-houses. In town and country the good work was prosecuted. About 1851 the stone part of the public school building in the court-house square was undertaken, and when completed was the most pretentious school building in the county. In 1857-8 a brick addition was built, affording accommodations for 400 scholars.

GERMAN PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.—This school was started in 1886 on the South Side. It was first kept by Rev. Theodore Kolm; Rev. E. Heinenmann also ran it for four years. The first teacher called was August Hoffman, the second Martin Schreiber, the third John Richert, and the present teacher is L. Abraham. The present school building on West Boone Street was built in 1905 and cost about $6,000. The average number of pupils is about 50.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The growth of the Public Library from a small organization, started by the Ladies, to a public institution run by the city, has been traced in the extracts from the "Standard." The institution now supplies the reading part of the community with books, so far as the library accommodations will admit. The library is quartered on a part of the upper floor of the city building, over the postoffice. The directors hope that when the postoffice is removed to the new building, the library will be able to occupy a whole floor, so as to give accommodation for the reading and reference rooms that are needed so much. The librarian is Miss Mary Crandall.

CHAPTER XII.

NEWSPAPERS.

FIRST NEWSPAPER IN BELVIDERE ISSUED IN 1847—

THE STANDARD FOUNDED BY RALPH ROBERTS IN 1851—OTHER PAPERS OF A LATER PERIOD—THE DAILY REPUBLICAN THE LEADING NEWSPAPER OF BELVIDERE.

The "Belvidere Republican" was a Whig organ commenced in 1847, by J. W. Snow and ran for about two years. The former history of Boone County states that its last number was printed on brown paper.

The "Belvidere Standard" was commenced in 1851 by Ralph Roberts and was an excellent paper for a young community. It was Democratic in politics up to the organization of the Republican party in 1856, when it became a strong advocate of that party. General Allen C. Fuller preserved the copies of the "Standard" from 1865 to 1893 and the bound volumes were presented at his death to the Public Library, from which much of this history has been drawn. Mr. Roberts was born in East Hartford, Conn., December 24, 1824, and afterward lived in New York City, Chicago, and Woodstock. He came to this county in 1851.

The "Northwestern" was commenced in January, 1867, by E. H. Tallott. In 1870 it was purchased by Renben W. Coon. It was printed in rooms over Geo. B. Ames' store, and then in Charles Dean's building near the railroad track. In 1875, it was removed to the Sabin building where Hovey & Schaffer's store now is. Afterward it was removed to a building devoted exclusively to the paper on the easterly side of State Street, a few doors north of the railroad track. Afterwards, in 1888, the paper was sold to Alson H. Keeler and was continued with considerable success until about 1899 when it was sold to Mr. Wilgus. For several years, commencing in 1895, Charles R. Truitt was half owner. The paper still published a creditable sheet, under the editorship of Roy B. Dunn, a newspaper man of much ability, but it did not prove financially successful to Mr. Wilgus and he sold it back to Mr. Keeler. Afterward Mr. Keeler sold it to J. H. Carpenter and the paper for some time did not flourish. It was then sold under chattel mortgage to a number of gentlemen including Dr. A. J. Markley, Mayor Lyons and A. S. Collins, who became the editor, and was run, for a time, with considerable success. The Leader block at the northwest corner of South State and Locust was fitted up for its reception. The Northwestern took a very positive stand upon different phases of Republican politics in the city and state and, after a time, the interest of proprietors and the public having waned, the paper became less successful and was finally merged into the "Republican."

The other newspaper ventures, none of which proved very successful, have been as follows:

Two or three numbers of a weekly paper were issued by Prof. Gower, about 1859. These were printed in Rockford.

The "Belvidere Independent" (Rep.) by J. N. Brockway, afterwards postmaster, for some years.

The "Belvidere Union" (Rep.), by Mr. Jackson, which weathered the storm for a year or two.

The "Boone County Democrat," by Mr. Wilson, which lived through the presidential campaign of 1864.

The "Boone County Advertiser," by W. H. Cadwell, lived two or three years, when the office was removed to Rock Falls, where it was used by Messrs. Cadwell & Tuttle in the publication of the "Progress."

The publication of the "Daily Index" was undertaken by W. C. Coates, in 1875. It was published two or three months, when the enterprise was abandoned.

Another small sheet, called "Students' Thought Leaves," was undertaken by J. N. Brockway, but only two numbers were published, and it went to join its predecessors.

DAILY REPUBLICAN.

The leading newspaper in Belvidere is the "Republican." The first successful daily ever published in Belvidere was commenced by F. T. Moran and A. H. Keeler, in 1893. Mr. Moran, afterward retired from the firm and spent a year in Rockford and then purchased a half interest in the "Boone County Republican," then published by Charles Beverly. They bought the daily from Mr. Keeler and continued together until January 1, 1896, when Mr. Moran became sole proprietor. Frank T. Moran was born near Rockford in 1872 and after graduating from Rockford Academy he taught school in Winnebago County and then entered into newspaper work. He is the present postmaster and is one of the most influential men in the county. Since the "Northwestern" ceased publication, the "Republican" is the only paper in Belvidere, and it gives to its readers a clean, newsy sheet, very free from partisan bias, considering the opportunity it has for taking sides. It is published in the Whitney building on Pleasant Street, which is now owned by the proprietor.

Among those who have assisted in the editorial department to make the paper what it is, are A. F. Conklin, city editor, formerly of Rockford; and Messrs. Walker and Plane, the reporters.

who transferred the property of his family in Belvidere to the county, connected with the family and have stayed in the county. Dwight B. Bond and Joseph C. Leggett in charge of the business department, together with Mr. Moran,

CHAPTER XIII.

CHURCHES.

PRINCIPAL CHURCHES OF BOONE COUNTY—DATE OF ORGANIZATION AND LATER HISTORY—LISTS OF PASTORS AND IMPORTANT EVENTS—CATHOLIC CHURCH HISTORY—MEN WHO HAVE BEEN ESPECIALLY PROMINENT IN CHURCH WORK—SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

For the following account of the Belvidere churches, the writer is largely indebted to the "Past and Present of Boone County" and a very valuable work on the later history of Boone County known as "Belvidere Illustrated," which was published by Mr. Moran of the "Republican" in 1896.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The church is designated on the records of the Ottawa Presbytery as the "First Presbyterian Church of Belvidere, Ill." It was organized at the log house of Stephen Burnet, March 17, 1829, with 23 members, whose names were as follows: Mrs. Dorcas May, Ezra May, Mrs. Abigail Burnet, Stephen Burnet, Mrs. Harriet Sheldon, Frederic S. Sheldon, Mrs. Abigail Hicks, George D. Hicks, Mrs. Mary Gardner, Austin Gardner, David Caswell, Aaron H. Blings, Mrs. Louisa Rollins, Chaney Bristol, Mrs. Mary L. Fisk, Mrs. Mary C. Dubois, Mrs. Hannah Blood, Mrs. Juliet M. Gilman, Mrs. Nancy Hale, Mrs. Phil McBride, Mrs. Louisa May, Mrs. R. Cunningham, Miss Adeline E. Sheldon.

At the organization Rev. John Morrill officiated, and Ezra May and Austin Gardner were elected ruling elders. The Articles of Faith and Covenant now in use were then adopted.

Up to the arrival of Col. Joel Walker, the congregation worshipped at the residence of Mr. Burnet, and then in the former's log house across the prairie, three miles north of Belvidere, until the following year.

In 1840, the second story of the frame store-building erected by Col. Walker the previous year, on the north-west corner of State and Mechanics Streets was finished off, and its use as a place of worship given the society. The hall was dedicated June 4, 1840, and occupied three years.

The church was received into the Ottawa Presbytery, when in session at Belvidere, June 23, 1841, at which time Rev. Royal Nathaniel Wright was installed as the first pastor, with a salary of $400 per annum, $150 of which was pledged by the Home Missionary Society.

In 1843, the first church edifice of this society, and the first building in the county used exclusively for religious purposes, was erected, on the corner of Main and Mechanics Streets, the present location. It was dedicated in August of the same year. The material was white brick, its dimensions 36 x 48 feet, its cost $2,250, and the design plain and unpretentious.

In April, 1857, the erection of the church building now occupied as a place of worship by the society was commenced, and in February, 1858, it was dedicated. It was built of red brick, after the Corinthian order of architecture, with the addition of a spire. It was 60 x 80 feet in dimensions, seated 800 persons, and cost $18,000. While the new church was building, the society met for worship in the first Union Hall.

The pastors have been: Morrill (supply), commenced labor, March 17, 1829; pastorate ceased, March, 1840.

Royal Nathaniel Wright, commenced labor, June, 1841; installed, June 23, 1841; pastorate ceased, October 6, 1849, at his death, aged 38.

Charles Fanning, installed October 23, 1850;

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, BELVIDERE

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BELVIDERE

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, BELVIDERE

pastorate ceased, April, 1854; resigned on account of ill-health.

E. D. Willis (supply), commenced labor, April, 1854; pastorate ceased, May, 1855.

Eleazer T. Bell, commenced labor, May 6, 1855; installed July 9, 1855; pastorate ceased at his death, August 9, 1855.

Henry B. Holmes, commenced labor, January 18, 1856; installed, April 23, 1856; pastorate ceased, December 1862; Mr. Holmes accepting a call to Dubuque.

David R. Eddy, commenced labor, May 10, 1863; installed May 4, 1864; pastorate ceased, July 7, 1872; resigned to accept call to Flint.

Supplies, July to December, 1872.

Thomas C. Easton, commenced labor, December 15, 1872; installed September 15, 1873; pastorate ceased October, 1879; when he resigned to accept a call at Erie, Pa.

Henry M. Curtis commenced labor February 15, 1880; installed May 18, 1880; resigned to accept a call at Flint, Mich.

No regular pastor was engaged until November, 1882, when Matthew F. Howie was installed; he resigned in June, 1885, owing to ill health.

John H. Windsor commenced labors November 8, 1885 and resigned November 4, 1888. During his pastorate C. S. Bullock, an earnest evangelist, conducted revival work for three weeks.

John Clark Hill commenced work November 25, 1888. He was succeeded by Rev. George R. Pierce. Dr. Pierce is a man of fine education and literary ability. He was educated at Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y. Mrs. Pierce is an excellent writer and a frequent contributor to the prominent magazines. Dr. Pierce resigned the pastorate about six years ago and they still make their home in Belvidere.

Rev. Benjamin L. Brittin is the present pastor and his ministry has been marked with much success. He was brought up in Nebraska, and received his theological education at the McCormick Seminary, Chicago.

March 16, 17, 18, 1889, the Presbyterian Church celebrated its Semi-Centennial, the proceedings were printed and form a very complete history of the church up to that time. Among the other happenings of importance to the building and the society, we take the following:

The grounds were enlarged to provide space for horse sheds and the park between the Presbyterian and North Baptist Church, in 1874. The manse was purchased of Mrs. Doolittle in 1880. This lot is on East Lincoln Avenue across from the church and was first occupied by Rev. James McKean in 1842. He sold it to Harry J. Doolittle, in 1850, and it remained the Doolittle property until 1880, when it was deeded to the trustees of the Presbyterian society, has been used as a residence for the minister and usually is known as the "Manse." In 1881, the tall church spire, being considered unsafe, was taken down. Within the last two years some very tasty work has been done in interior decoration, including new carpets, pew cushions, repainting and the remodeling of the rooms at each side of the pulpit. The room on the south side is now occupied by what is known as "Helen Sabin Brown's Class" of the Sunday school. This class has been very prominent in the affairs in the Sunday school and church for many years. It was organized by Mrs. Helen Sabin Brown and has now been taught for several years by Mrs. Emma Pettit. Mrs. Brown is now Mrs. Anderson, of Auhurn, N. Y. The influence of these two cultivated and charming ladies, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Pettit, on the young people of the Presbyterian Church, can hardly be over-estimated. Probably the most earnest worker in the history of the Belvidere Presbyterian Church was Deacon Henry W. Avery, who died about two years ago. He was a powerful force for good in this county for years.

PRESBYTERIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday School was organized in the hall owned by Col. Walker, June 6, 1840. Deacon Austin Gardner was its first superintendent. Mrs. Mary Gardner, Col. Walker, and Mrs. Alice Walker were his associates, teachers, and the pupils numbered about twenty (20). Additions were gradually made and soon the names of C. C. Bristol, Bradford Dean, Mrs. Hannah Blood, Mrs. Annette S. Wright, and Mrs. Louisa M. Fisk, appear as teachers. In 1843, Deacon Gardner was removed by death. Albert Brainard was elected his successor. Much responsibility in the conduct of the school in its early days was borne by Col. Walker, who, from its organization to his death, in July, 1855, was zealous for the prosperity of this Sunday school. Mr. Brainard was succeeded by N. C. Amsden, in 1844. About the first of January, 1846, H. W. Avery, Jr., was elected superintendent, and by re-elections, was continued until May, 1863, excepting short intervals during which the office was filled by H. P. Woodworth, E. B. Conklin, L. B. Danforth, Seymour Gookins, and E. N. Bush. In May, 1866, Dr. D. E. Foote was elected superintendent, and by annual re-election, was continued until May, 1876, when he was succeeded by D. D. Sabin. In May, 1877, Mr. Sabin declining a re-election, James R. Leonard was elected. The superintendents after Mr. Leonard were as follows: J. G. Stevens, Henry J. Sherrill, Dr. D. E. Foote, Deacon Henry W. Avery, David P. Greenlee, Eugene Sabin, Richard V. Carpenter, and Edward Warren, the present superintendent.

NORTH BAPTIST CHURCH.

The first religious sermon was preached here in March, 1836, by Dr. John S. King. There were quite a number of Baptists here at that time, and Rev. Dr. John S. King, Deacon N. Crosby, Ira Haskins and others, soon thereafter began holding regular religious meetings. Every door was kindly opened, and the house was filled every Sabbath, whether for preaching or praise meeting. In July, 1836, the Baptist Society was organized, with the following named constituent members:

Rev. John S. King, Mr and Mrs. Ira Haskins and daughter, May; Timothy Caswell and wife, their daughter Mercy Matilda Whitman, and Mrs. Elizabeth Payne, another daughter; Moses Blood and son, Caleb, now Rev. Caleb Blood of Kansas; Melvin Schenck and wife, Ann; Calvin Kingsley and wife, Charlotte S.; Nathaniel Crosby, Andrew F. Moss, and Charles Whitman. Melvin Schenck was chosen church clerk.

Others soon joined the new church. In September, 1836, Prof. Seth S. Whitman, from Hamilton, N. Y., became their first pastor. Their numbers rapidly increased by the coming of John Lawrence and wife, Luther W. Lawrence and wife, Asa Moss, Sr., and wife, and others. This church was blessed with many strong and efficient members, and soon became a power. It was the first church to incorporate the adult members into the Sunday school.

List of Pastors—Prof. Seth S. Whitman, ten years; Rev. S. A. Estee, three years; Rev. Charles Hill Roe, D. D., thirteen years; Rev. H. J. Eddy, D. D., four and one-half years; Rev. N. W. Miner, D. D., three years; Rev. J. P. Phillips, four months (resigned on account of ill health); Rev. W. A. Welsher, Revs. A. C. Keene, Emery Curtis, Jesse Coker, H. C. Mable, H. W. Reed, J. J. Irving, Romanzo Walker, Rev. Julian A. Herrick, Rev. Charles H. Wheeler, Rev. Frederick Bateson, and the present pastor, Rev. W. H. Jones. The first meetings were held at the home of Dr. John S. King. The first regular pastor was Prof. S. S. Whitman. He was one of the pioneers of Belvidere and the family is still prominent here. He entered considerable land from the government and after his death it was sold for building lots and much of the city property in Belvidere is situated on it. He was the first postmaster and first circuit clerk. In 1838 a small frame building was erected which was also used for secular purposes. It was on Van Buren and East Streets, across from the present Universalist Church. During the pastorate of Rev. Roe a brick church costing $5,000 was built on the site of the present edifice. The church now used is a large brick structure.

having a tall spire. It was built in 1867, at an expense of $50,000. Mr. J. H. Saxton has recently written a very valuable history of the North Baptist Church, which was published.

SOUTH BAPTIST CHURCH.

In 1865, about 65 members were dismissed from the First Baptist to form the South Belvidere Baptist Church. This church has had for pastors: Revs. Horace M. Carr, J. L. Benedict, John Fulton, J. M. Whitehead, W. P. Elsdon, A. C. Peck, C. E. Taylor, E. C. Stover, James A. Pierce, T. W. Heyland, and the present pastor, Rev. Hurley. Like the parent society, this congregation has a fine house of worship. It is situated on Logan Avenue, just beyond the intersection with State.

In 1866, the South Belvidere Church built a temporary house of worship, 24 x 40 feet, costing $1,000. It was afterwards used for a conference room. In 1867, they built a house on the corner afterwards occupied by John Plane's hardware store, which cost $12,000. That building was destroyed by fire in December, 1871, and in 1873 the present edifice, 44 x 70 feet, and a conference room, 24 x 36 feet, was built, at a cost of nearly $15,000.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Some time during the year 1838 the first Methodist preacher was heard in Belvidere. In 1850 a brick church on the north side was built; 1866 about twenty-four of the members of the First Church on the north side withdrew and formed a class on the south side. Until 1876 regular preaching services were held in both churches. In that year the Rev. N. H. Axtell supplied the two societies. The same arrangement was continued under the pastorate of Rev. W. S. Harrington. In 1879 Rev. O. E. Burch was appointed to the First Church, and Rev. G. C. Clark to the church on the south side. The two churches were occupied until 1885, when under the pastorate of Rev. S. H. Swartz the two societies united, and have so continued until the present. During the pastorates of Revs. Cessna, Bigelow and Craven a new church edifice was planned and completed, and dedicated by the Rev. Lewis Curtis, of Chicago, Feb. 12, 1893. The church is a fine modern building on Logan Avenue near the Julien house. The ministers in the early days were as follows: 1838, Jesse Walker; 1839, N. Jewett; 1840, Rev. Brayton; 1841, Jas. McKean; 1842, R. A. Blanchard; 1843, M. Decker; 1844-5, R. A. Blanchard; 1846, Wesley Latin; 1847, George Lovesse; 1848, W. Wilmot; 1849, R. Beatty; 1850, M. Decker; 1852-4, Thos. North; 1856, L. Anderson; 1857, S. Stover; 1859, C. S. McReading; 1860, S. F. Denning; H. Crew, P. E.; 1861, S. F. Denning; R. A. Blanchard, P. E.; 1862, F. A. Read; 1863, H. Atchinson; 1864-6, George J. Bliss; H. L. Martin, P. E.

Since then the preachers have been: 1867, J. C. Stoughton, First Church; S. Cates, Second Church; 1868, E. W. Adams, First Church; S. A. Cates, Second Church, W. A. Willings, P. E.; 1869, W. H. Fisher, First Church, S. Cates, Second Church; 1870, W. H. Fisher, First Church; R. A. Blanchard, Second Church; 1872, Rev. Newton, First Church; J. O. Odgers, Second Church; W. A. Gray, P. E.; 1873, W. H. Haight, First Church; J. O. Odgers, Second Church; 1874, W. H. Haight, First Church; J. O. Odgers, Second Church; 1875, W. H. Haight, First Church; W. T. Shaw, Second Church; 1876, N. H. Axtell, First and Second Churches.

The ministers during the last ten years have been Rev. Earney, who afterward became presiding elder, and died recently; Rev. Tompkins, a gentleman of much education and who had a fine library; Rev. Hull, a man of great force and a good pulpit orator; Rev. Claude Moore, and Rev. H. J. Warren.

This denomination first occupied, as a place of worship, the second story of a frame building that had been commenced by Mr. Fisk, on the Rockford Road between Belvidere and Beaver Creek; but after being raised, was pulled down and removed to Belvidere and erected at the corner of State and Perry Streets, opposite the residence afterward occupied by Mrs. John K.

Towner. At a later period, they moved into a building erected by Dr. Whitney for a law office, on the rear end of the lot now occupied by the Presbyterian church, and occupied it one winter, when they moved into a building that had been erected on State Street (afterward occupied as a residence by Mrs. Wiburo) by J. G. Saxton, for a hardware store for Nijah Hotchkiss.

CONGREGATIONAL.

This church was founded in 1853 and built a church building afterwards occupied by the Free Methodists, where they maintained worship about three years. The present church building was at first only partially completed, and services held there for several years, but it has since been finished into a very artistic and comfortable church building. Rev. E. L. Benson has been pastor for about ten years. He is a gentleman of much ability and education, being very popular not only with his own congregation but with a large circle of other friends, and has worked very earnestly toward keeping the city on a high moral plane.

TRINITY EPISCOPAL.

This building was completed in 1857 and continued regular services until about 1872, when on account of removals and deaths the congregation became small and regular services were discontinued. The work was resumed in 1893 and the church, while comparatively small in numbers, includes some of the most prominent people in Belvidere. The church building at the corner of Main and Hurlbut Avenue is a gracefully designed wooden structure with a spire, and has been recently covered with staff, making a picturesque little building somewhat on the line of the English churches.

The ministers have been as follows: Rev. Alfred Londerback, Rev. S. D. Pufford, Rev. E. B. Tuttle, Rev. Mr. Waterbury, Rev. La Bagh, Rev. W. H. Cooper, Rev. W. H. Couch, Rev. W. H. Yeator, Rev. W. H. Partnons, Rev. W. H. Eddy. Owing to the loss of church records by fire a full history cannot be given. Rev. C. A. Cummings was the pastor for a number of years and was succeeded by Rev. Mahood, the present pastor.

CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The following is compiled from the Catholic Directory issued several years ago by the church, a copy of which was kindly furnished by Rev. Father Murphy:

For the early years in Belvidere's history Catholic services were held from time to time by priests from Donnelly's Settlement, now Hartland, McHenry County. The first priest prominently connected with Belvidere is Rev. Patrick McMahan, who came here at intervals from 1844 to 1850. The first mass in Belvidere was at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Connelly, at the corner of Hurlbut Avenue and Webster Street. In 1850 Rev. Hugh Brady took charge at Hartland and held occasional services at Belvidere, either in the old courthouse or at the homes of different Catholic residents. In July, 1851, Rev. John Hauptstone was appointed a resident pastor in Belvidere. He lived at the corner of Lincoln Avenue and Burgess Street, and also held services at Rockford and Maren-go. He died in 1854 and was succeeded by Rev. George Hamilton, and he by Rev. William Lambert. During the pastorate of Rev. Lambert, William H. Gilman offered a site for a Catholic church at the corner of Church and Caswell Streets. The kind offer was accepted and a stone church built there. During this time the priests resided at Rockford, as that had grown to be the larger place. Rev. Thomas Boulger was the pastor for several years and was succeeded by Father John P. Donelan. In 1860 a successful bazaar was held in October of that year to furnish the church and parish house. Father Donelan was one of the most popular priests, who had been in charge of the church here up to that time. In 1864 Rev. Patrick McGuire came as the first resident pastor of Belvidere. His pastorate was very successful. About 1872 the parochial residence was built and, in 1886, the present Catholic church was erected at a cost of $22,000, being dedicated March 28, 1880. Father McGuire died June 19, 1893. The pastor for a number of years thereafter was Rev. Charles J. O'Callahan, who was assisted during his successful pastorate by Rev. John C. Murphy, and at the present time Father Murphy is in charge of the parish.

Among the Catholic societies represented at Belvidere are those of the Archeon fraternity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the Archeon fraternity in Behalf of the Souls in Purgatory, The Altar Society, Society St. Vincent De Paul, (organized for charitable purposes), Father Matthew's Total Abstinence Society, St. Charles Court of the Catholic Order of Foresters, which was organized May 29, 1896, and St. Clara's Court of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters, organized January 31, 1897.

The Catholic population of Belvidere constitutes a fair portion of its inhabitants, particularly on the South side and many of the important public and business positions are held by members of this church; so that the Catholic church and its societies have had considerable to do with the prosperity of the city and county.

FREE METHODISTS.

This church was organized November, 1860, and purchased its building from the Congregational Society at the corner of Main and Perry, where it still conducts its services.

THE GERMAN EVANGELICAL.

The German Evangelical Society was organized September 18, 1867, at a private residence on the corner of Madison and Webster Streets, with a membership of eight, viz: Mr. and Mrs. Lampert, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fritz, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Huber, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Voshage. Its meetings were held at various places until 1873, in which year the society purchased two lots and a residence, and remodeled the latter into a house of worship. In 1888, another structure was erected, under the pastorate of Rev. J. Alber, and a few years later the parsonage built. In 1907, this church built a fine brick building at the north-east corner of Madison and Main Streets, where its services are now held.

GERMAN LUTHERAN.

In 1868, the Rev. A. Wagner, of Chicago, occasionally came to Belvidere, delivering sermons to the German Lutherans of the town and vicinity. Early in 1869, about twenty families were organized as a congregation, and sent a call to Rev. Phil Estel, which was accepted. Services were held at the court house, and in private residences. In time, Mr. Estel accepted a call to another field, and services were rendered to the congregation by surrounding ministers, until in 1873 Rev. William Steurauf accepted a call as pastor of the congregation. In 1875 they succeeded in buying the former Congregational church, a frame building 50 x 30 feet, 20 feet high, surmounted by a steeple 40 feet in height. The church was consecrated the 25th of July, 1875, after being thoroughly repaired and refurnished. In July, 1877, Rev. Steurauf removed to Missouri, and was succeeded in the pastorate by Rev. C. F. Th. Eissfeldt, who was installed August 12th.

The following pastors have served the church in the order named: Rev. Ph. Estel, Rev. Steurauf, Rev. C. Eissfeldt, Rev. P. Baumgartner, Rev. Th. Kohn, Rev. E. Heinemann, since 1892. The latter was born in Crete, Will County, Ill., received his education in the parochial schools of Madison County, Ill., and Ft. Wayne, Ind.; graduated from Concordia College, Ft. Wayne, in 1879, and from Concordia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, in 1882. He is the present pastor.

SWEDISH.

The Swedish people have a fine edifice near the Catholic Church, which was erected largely through the labors of Rev. Ekeberg.

UNIVERSALIST.

The Universalist Church did not become permanently organized until 1853. Among the ministers of that denomination who preached here was Rev. Seth Barnes, of Rockford. August 1, 1853, the first regular organization was effected, and a number of the prominent families were among its members. Meetings were held in the old Baptist Church building at the corner of Van Buren and East Street (now Hurlbut Avenue), which property they afterwards purchased and in 1862 erected a frame church building thereon. The Universalists do not hold regular services at Belvidere, at the present time, but maintain their organization and have leased their church building to a Swedish Church.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

The Church of Christ, Scientist, conducts its services over Longcor's drug store. Mrs. Morris was until recently the reader.

CHAPTER XIV.

MEDICAL PROFESSION.

FAMILY PHYSICIANS IN BOONE COUNTY—SKETCHES OF MEN WHO HAVE BEEN PROMINENT IN MEDICAL HISTORY—BOONE COUNTY PHYSICIANS IN 1878—CHOLERA VISITATIONS—HOSPITALS.

Two of the earliest doctors in Belvidere were Dr. Molony and Dr. D. H. Whitney. Dr. Whitney has already been spoken of and took a prominent part in the early days. He afterwards entered public life and devoted most of his time to public affairs, holding several high offices in the county. Dr. Molony was a member of a prominent family who lived here in the early days and did a large part of the surgical operations. Dr. Stone was another of the early doctors and lived in the house afterwards occupied by Captain Petty on the mound, near Madison Street.

The dean of the profession at present in the county is Dr. D. E. Foote. He came from Chenango County, New York, in 1854. In 1873 he built a fine large house at Perry and Van Buren Streets, which he and his family still occupy. Dr. Molony turned most of his surgical practice over to Dr. Foote and the latter has been one of the chief surgeons in Belvidere for many years. Among the early operations which he performed was that of trepanning the skull of a man who was injured by a falling rock, while digging a well on the Rev. Chas. Hill Roe place, afterwards occupied by Squire De Munn, also the removal of a very large tumor, weighing over twenty pounds, from the breast of a lady, and also the amputation of John Gray's arm.

Among the doctors of the former generation were Abner Angell, who came from New York State and settled in this county in 1845. He was a surgeon in the army during the war, Leonard L. Lake was born in Erie County, New York, and came here in 1837. He was a surgeon in the army, during the war, and besides his medical practice was much interested in grape culture and also held several public offices. He was the father of Prof. L. N. W. Lake, the musician. Dr. Chas. Scott was born in Pennsylvania and after graduating from Rush Medical College in 1874, came to Belvidere and had a very large practice. Dr. Scott died while a comparatively young man, and his son, also Dr. Chas. Scott, is now practicing in Belvidere, having his office in the fine family residence at the corner of State and First Streets. Dr. C. H. Seymour was born in New York and came to Belvidere in 1877. Dr. Nathan Smedley was a prominent doctor for many years and the family owned considerable property on the river road. Dr. Frank S. Whitman is one of the ablest men in Boone County, not only as a physician, but in public and business life. He comes of a family which has been very prominent in our community since the earliest days. He was born in Belvidere and in 1849 commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Jas. K. Soule and graduated in 1872, when he immediately commenced practice in Belvidere and was very successful. He has been mayor of Belvidere, director of the People's Bank and several other corporations, and for six years was superintendent of the Northern Hospital for the Insane at Elgin. He is a man of very high executive ability and one of the leaders of the Republican party in this district. Dr. Whitman's time is now largely devoted to work as consulting physician and lecturer on nervous diseases. Dr. Arthur W. Swift was born in New York in 1860 and came to Belvidere with his parents five years later. He studied with Dr. Whitman and graduated in Chicago in 1885. For many years he was a partner with Dr. Whitman and afterward with Dr. Andrews. He was mayor of Belvidere and has held several other offices as well as being prominent in the Methodist Church. He married Miss Jessie Curtis, whose father was one of the very early settlers in Spring and they have a pleasant home on Locust Street. Dr. R. W. McInnis was born in Rockford in 1857 and came to Belvidere about 1885, being associated with the elder Dr. Scott. He was afterwards associated with Dr. Markley. Dr. McInnis was mayor of Belvidere and is one of the prominent political leaders. He also occupies one of the foremost places among the medical men in the county. Dr. A. J. Markley has practiced in Boone County for about 27 years, part of the time at Poplar Grove and Garden Prairie, but mostly at Belvidere. He was born in Ohio in 1858 and graduated at Chicago. He married Belle B. Bills, whose parents were early settlers of Bonns. Mrs. Markley is prominent in social circles. Dr. Markley has a large practice and takes considerable part in public affairs. Dr. Willis Butterfield was born in 1848 and after graduating from the medical department of the Northwestern University, he practiced at Barrington and came here in 1885. He has been successful in his professional career and is a very well-read man both along medical and general lines. Among the other physicians at the present time are Drs. Alden and Annie Alguire, Dr. R. G. Mitchell, Dr. R. W. Hawkey, Dr. Boyd Andrews, Dr. Delaverzue, Dr. Haley, Dr. Robie (osteopathist), Dr. Byers, Dr. George T. Tallerday, and Dr. George Tallerday, Jr. The elder Dr. Tallerday was born in Michigan and came to Boone County in 1880. He conducts the American Hospital and has a large practice.

The following list of the early doctors in Belvidere was given the author by Dr. D. E. Foote, who is the dean of the medical profession in Boone County. As has been said elsewhere, Dr. Foote was born in Chenango County, N. Y., and spent some time in Cortland County, N. Y., with Dr. Hyde, a prominent surgeon who was professor of surgery in Syracuse University. After practicing for several years in Tioga County, Dr. Foote located in Belvidere in 1854. Dr. D. H. Whitney lived on Menominee Street, next to the westerly side of the Public Square. Dr. Richard S. Molony had been Democratic congressman at Washington and was a prominent man here. His brother lived in a fine house on West Lincoln Avenue, which has been reconstructed and is now used as a residence by P. R. Kennedy. Dr. Molony lived in that vicinity on West Lincoln Avenue. Among the other physicians were Dr. Smedley, who lived in the house on the river road still owned by the Smedley estate. He had a considerable practice south of town. Dr. Daniel Ransom, father of the druggist, was one of the earliest practitioners. Dr. Stone, who was uncle to the present Dr. C. A. Stone. The latter Dr. Stone is still living in Belvidere, and Mrs. Stone has no superior in the city as a singer. Dr. Gooding, who lived on Kishwaukee and Madison Streets, and married Dr. Whitney's daughter. Dr. Lake, who first lived near Dr. Gooding and later moved to a small tract of land on Madison Street near Perry Street school, where he could engage in his favorite pastime of raising fruit. Dr. Ellis, who lived on Hurlbut next to Harvey Gould's residence. Dr. J. K. Soule, who lived where Irving Terwilliger now lives. Dr. Angell, who lived on the South Side and afterwards in the country about five miles south of town. Dr. Smedley, the younger, who has since gained a large practice in Chicago. Dr. A. W. Burnside, who lived near the present L. C. Willard residence and moved to Chicago. Dr. Williamson. Dr. Tillotson, who moved to Chicago, where he still lives. Dr. Seymour, and his wife, who was also a physician. They lived near Strong's marble works. Dr. Brown. Dr. G. N. Woodward, who lived on the South Side, near where Dr. Butterfield now lives. He studied in the same office with Dr. Foote.

NOTE.—Following is a list of physicians in practice in Boone County, February 5, 1878: Abner Angell, homoeopathic, 34 years' practice; A. W. Burnside, homoeopathic, 25 years' practice; M. C. Briggs, Poplar Grove, practice regular, 18 years; J. W. Bachelder, Caldonia, practice regular, 18 years; David E. Ellis, practice regular, 35 years; Daniel E. Foote, practice regular, 26 years; John Wesley Green, practice regular, 31 years; Robert Hutcheson, Boone, practice regular; Leonard L. Lake, practice regular, 32 years; F. A. Nichols, Capron, practice regular, 17 years; D. S. Randall, Garden Prairie, practice regular; S. H. Richmond, Caldonia, practice regular, 8 years; C. H. Seymour, homoeopathic, 16 years; Mary A. Seymour, homoeopathic, 8 years; D. J. Stow, Boone, homoeopathic, 12 years; Chas. Scott, practice regular, 4 years; F. S. Whitman, homoeopathic, practice regular, 6 years; Geo. Williamson, practice regular, 11 years; Peter J. Wood, Capron, eclectic, 12 years.

HOSPITALS.

The St. Joseph Hospital was built on Turner's Hill, in a very commanding site, some six or seven years ago. It is run by the Catholic Sisters of St. Joseph and furnishes careful medical attention to those who go there for surgical operations or other illness. The Belvidere doctors, or those called in from other cities, perform the operations and the sisters act as nurses. Many serious operations have been performed there and the patients, both Protestant and Catholic, speak in high terms of the institution.

The American Hospital is a private institution conducted by the Drs. Tallerday, assisted by trained nurses. Many serious operations are also performed at this hospital.

CHOLERA EPIDEMICS.

The cholera has been here twice. Once in 1854, the year Dr. Foote came, and again several years after. Both of these times the epidemic swept over the whole region and Belvidere only suffered its proportionate share. While there have been several smallpox outbreaks at various times, the disease has at no time gone beyond control and has always ended with the first lot of cases which were discovered. Dr. Foote says that this is a fairly healthy region and no great epidemics have been here, except such as have been prevalent in the whole region hereabouts from time to time.

CHAPTER XV.

WAR HISTORY.

PART BORNE BY CITIZENS OF BOONE COUNTY IN THE CIVIL WAR—JUDGE WALES W. WOOD'S HISTORY OF THE WAR PERIOD—LIST OF VOLUNTEERS FROM BOONE AND THE MILITARY ORGANIZATIONS WITH WHICH THEY WERE CONNECTED—REGIMENTAL SKETCHES — SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR — GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

For a record of what our soldier boys did in the Civil War, it has been customary for years to turn at once to Judge Wales W. Wood. We have been fortunate, therefore, in securing him to prepare that portion of the history. At his suggestion, we have also included the list of names given in the former "History of Boone County," as he states that the list, generally speaking, has been found to be a valuable one and quite correct in its details. Judge Wood was Adjutant of the Ninety-fifth Illinois, which is so closely related to Boone County war history.

In 1865, he published a valuable history of that regiment, which had a considerable sale after the war, and is still being sought for by some of the large libraries, from time to time, to complete their lists of regimental histories.

BOONE COUNTY IN WAR OF REBELLION.

(BY JUDGE WALES W. WOOD.)

The County of Boone, though consisting of only eight townships, and commonly known as "Little Boone," performed a great work, and proved an important factor, in helping to carry on the war for the Union, and subduing the Rebellion of 1861-65.

At the earliest outbreak of the Civil War, immediately after the firing on Fort Sumter, the patriotic citizens aroused to action in support of the government, and commenced holding meetings for the purpose of raising means, and furnishing volunteers for the Union Army, which was to go forth to new battle fields of the nation, conquer the Confederate armies, protect the old flag of the Union and save the country from the attacks of secession.

Enthusiastic meetings were frequently held for this purpose in some of the churches and halls in Belvidere, and were eagerly attended by all classes of citizens, the members of the churches and the political parties all laying aside their usual differences and partisan feelings and uniting, solidly, on the common platform of "One Country and One Flag." and that the same must and shall be defended and preserved at all hazards.

These patriotic gatherings, or war meetings, were generally addressed by some of the old timers and residents then active in public affairs, such as Dr. Daniel H. Whitney, Allen C. Fuller, Stephen A. Hurlbut, Dr. R. S. Molony, Chas. B. Loop, Wales W. Wood, and others, some of whom volunteered for the war, and became active and prominent as officers and soldiers in the United States service.

Almost all of those earlier settlers who were went to address these large assemblages with stirring words and eloquence, and performed their whole duty in helping to defend and save the nation, have passed away from the scenes of their patriotic and successful work. They lived, however, to see this labor bear fruits of complete success in the final overthrow of the Rebellion in all the states.

Stephen A. Hurlbut, on the breaking out of hostilities, enlisted at Belvidere in the Fifteenth Regiment, Illinois Infantry Volunteers and became captain of one of the companies, and later on in the war, was promoted to Brigadier-General, and then to Major-General in the volunteer service. Allen C. Fuller was made Adjutant General of the state, under Governor Yates, the War Governor of Illinois, during whose administration most of the Illinois regiments were mustered into the United States service. Captain William Haywood and David L. Baker and L. O. Gilman, with others from Belvidere and Boone County, were also early volunteers in the Fifteenth Illinois Regiment, L. O. Gilman being promoted to lieutenant-colonel of that regiment, during the war. Chas. B. Loop enlisted in the Ninety-fifth Regiment, Illinois Infantry Volunteers, became captain of Company B, and was afterwards promoted to major of that regiment in the field. Wales W. Wood enlisted as a private in Company G, of the Ninety-fifth Regiment, was then chosen as second lieutenant of that company, was afterwards promoted and mustered in at Camp Fuller, Rockford, Illinois, as first lieutenant and adjutant of the Ninety-fifth Regiment and, during the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, served as Assistant Adjutant General to General John McArthur, who commanded the Sixth Division of the Seventeenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, under General U. S. Grant.

Probably no county in the United States furnished more money and men to carry on the Civil War, from inception to close, than Boone County, in proportion to its size and population, and it well earned the title of banner county of Boone County of the United States, in the great contest for independence and preservation of the Republic. Records on file show that, including the accounts of 1860, had appropriated by this county to pay soldiers' bounties and to help support the families, while in the service of their country, and the liberal sums of money freely contributed by the citizens of the county, from time to time, and the generous appropriations made by the eight townships constituting the county, there was thus furnished by "Little Boone," all combined, as sinews of war for the same grand patriotic object, over three hundred thousand dollars, an amount equal, proportionally, to $27.05 for each man, woman and child then living in the county. It will be difficult to find another county in this state, or for that matter in the United States, that made any better showing and record of "material aid," furnished for the suppression of the great rebellion, according to size and population.

Equally true is it, that, in like proportion, she stands unexcelled in the number of volunteers she furnished for various regiments and organizations, which took conspicuous part and performed brave and valiant deeds on many a battle field, throughout the war for the Union and for the preservation of the republic.

For Boone County not only furnished one full company (B) of the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, three full companies (B, G, and K), for the Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, but also a large number of volunteers for many other regiments and commands in the infantry, artillery and cavalry. In conclusion, we offer hereto the great roll of Honorable and Patriotic Service, containing the names of all the volunteers credited to Boone County, who served in the United States Army during the Civil War, to which high roll of patriots, as volunteer soldiers, and the successful military record made by them on the battle fields of that great conflict, the citizens of this county may ever point with pride and satisfaction.

SKETCH OF FIFTEENTH INFANTRY.

The Fifteenth Regiment Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Freeport, Ill., and mustered into the United States service, May 24, 1861—being the first regiment organized from the state for the three years' service. It then proceeded to Alton, Ill., remaining there six weeks for instructions. Left Alton for St. Charles, Mo.; thence, by rail, to Mexico, Mo. Marched to Hannibal, Mo., thence, by steamboat, to Jefferson Barracks; then, by rail, to Rollo, Mo. Arrived in time to cover General Sigel's retreat from Wilson's Creek; thence to Tipton, Mo., and thence joined Gen. Fremont's army. Marched from there to Springfield, Mo.; thence back to Tipton; then to Sedalia with General Pope, and assisted in the capture of 1,300 of the enemy a few miles from the latter place; then marched to Otterville, Mo., where it went into winter quarters, December 26, 1861. Remained there until February 1, 1862. Then marched to Jefferson City; thence to St. Louis, by rail; embarked on transports for Fort Donelson, arriving there the day of the surrender.

The regiment was then assigned to the Fourth Division, General Hurlbut commanding, and marched to Fort Henry. Then embarked on transport for Pittsburg Landing. Participated in the battles of the 6th and 7th of April, losing 252 men, killed and wounded. Among the former were Lieutenant-Colonel E. T. W. Ellis, Major Goddard, Captains Brownell and Wayne, and Lieutenant John W. Puterbaugh. Captain Adam Nase wounded and taken prisoner. The regiment then marched to Corinth, participating in various skirmishes and the siege of the place, losing a number of men killed and wounded.

After the evacuation of Corinth, the regiment marched to Grand Junction; thence to Holly Springs, back to Grand Junction; thence to Lagrange; thence to Memphis, arriving there July 21, 1862, and remained there until September 6th. Then marched to Bolivar, thence to the Hatchie River, and participated in the battle of the Hatchie. Lost fifty killed and wounded in that engagement. Then returned to Bolivar; from thence to Lagrange; thence, with General Grant, down through Mississippi to Coffeeville, returning to Lagrange and Memphis; thence to Vicksburg, taking an active part in the siege of that place. After the surrender of Vicksburg, marched with Sherman to Jackson, Miss.; then returned to Vicksburg and embarked for Natchez. Marched thence to Kingston; returned to Natchez; then to Harrisonburg, La., capturing Fort Beauregard, on the Wichita River. Returned to Natchez, remained there until November 10, 1863. Proceeded to Vicksburg and went into winter quarters. Here the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, remaining until February 1, 1864, when it moved with General Sherman through Mississippi. On Champion Hills had a severe engagement with Carney. Marched to Meridian; thence south to Enterprise; thence back to Vicksburg. Was then ordered to Illinois on veteran furlough. On expiration of furlough joined Seventeenth Army Corps and proceeded up the Tennessee River to Clinton; thence to Huntsville, Ala.; thence to Decatur and Rome, Ga., thence to Kingston, and joined Gen. Sherman's army, marching on Atlanta.

At Alatoona Pass the Fifteenth and the Fourteenth infantries were consolidated, and the organization was known as the Veteran Battalion Fourteenth and Fifteenth Illinois Infantry Volunteers and numbering 625 men. From Alatoona Pass it proceeded to Ackworth, and was there assigned to duty, guarding the Chattanooga and Atlanta Railroad. Whilst engaged in this duty, the regiment being scattered along the line of road, the rebel General Hood, marching north, struck the road at Big Shanty and Ackworth, and captured about 300 of the command. The remainder retreated to Marietta, were mounted and acted as scouts for General Vandever. They were afterwards transferred to General F. P. Blair, and marched with General Sherman through Georgia.

After the capture of Savannah, the regiment proceeded to Beaufort, South Carolina; thence to Salkahatchie River, participating in the various skirmishes in that vicinity—Columbia, S. C., Fayetteville, N. C., battle of Bentonville—losing a number wounded; thence to Goldsboro and Raleigh. At Raleigh, recruits sufficient to fill up both regiments were received, and organization of the Veteran Battalion discontinued, and the Fifteenth reorganized. The campaign of General Sherman ended by the surrender of General Johnston. The regiment then marched with the army to Washington, D. C., via Richmond and Fredericksburg, and participated in the grand review at Wash. D. C., May 24, 1865; remained there two weeks. Proceeded, by rail and steamer, to Louisville, Ky.; remained at Louisville two weeks. The regiment was then detached from the Fourth Division, Seventeenth Army Corps, and proceeded by steamer to St. Louis; from there to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., arriving there July 1, 1865. Joined the army serving on the Plains. Arrived at Fort Kearney, August 11th, then ordered to return to Fort Leavenworth, September 1, 1865, where the regiment was mustered out of the service and placed en route for Springfield, Ill., for final payment and discharge—having served four years and four months.

SKETCH OF FORTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The Washburne Lead Mine Regiment was organized at Chicago, Ill., December 25, 1861, by Col. John E. Smith, and mustered into the United States service as the Forty-fifth Infantry Illinois Volunteers, January 15, 1862, moved to Cairo, Ill., February 1st, assigned to brigade of Col. W. H. W. was ordered to Brigadier-General Sherman's command, Tennessee. They landed below Fort Blunt, on the 10th, crossed the river, and on the 6th marched to the battle of Shiloh. They were surrendered to the enemy. They were moved toward Corinth, Miss., on the 22d, and on the following days fought the battle of Corinth, Miss., and of the battle of Iuka, Miss. On the 15th, 1862, was the first planted on the mountain. Loss: 2 killed and 26 wounded. May 1st, 1862, moved to the Tennessee River, and 11th, arrived at Savannah. Was engaged at the expedition to Pin Hook. March 25th moved to Pittsburg Landing, and encamped near Shiloh Church.

The Forty-fifth took a conspicuous and honorable part in the two days' battle of Shiloh, losing 26 killed and 260 wounded and missing—nearly one-half of the regiment. April 12th, Col. John E. Smith, of the Forty-fifth, took command of the brigade. During the siege of Corinth, the regiment was in the First Brigade, Third Division, Reserve Army of Tennessee, and bore its full share of the labors and dangers of the campaign. June 4th, the regiment was assigned to Third Brigade, and moved towards Purdy, fifteen miles. On the 5th, marched to Bethel; 7th to Montezuma, and on the 8th to Jackson, Tenn., the enemy fleeing on its approach.

During the months of June and July, engaged in garrison and guard duty. August 11th, assigned to guarding the railroad, near Toon's Station. On the 31st, after much desperate fighting Companies C and D were captured. The remainder of the regiment, concentrating at Toon's Station, were able to resist the attack of 1,200 Confederate forces. Loss—3 killed, 13 wounded, and 45 taken prisoners. September 17th, moved to Jackson; November 2d to Bolivar, and was assigned to First Brigade, Third Division, R. 2d Army, Thirtieth Army Corps. November 3, 1862, marched from Bolivar to Van Hook, Tenn., to Lagrange, and were assigned to the 25th, and moved to Hot Springs; December 31, to Waverly, Tenn.; to Abbey, Tex;

5th, to Oxford, to Youngs River, near Spring Dale.

Communication with the North having been cut off, foraged on the country for supplies. December 17th, notice received of the promotion of Col. John E. Smith, to Brigadier-General, ranking from November 20th. December 22d, returned to Oxford; 24th, moved to camp three miles north of Abbeville, on the Tallahatchie River, where the regiment remained during the month. Mustered out July 12, 1865, at Louisville, Ky., and arrived at Chicago July 15, 1865, for final payment and discharge.

SKETCH OF NINETY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The Ninety-fifth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Camp Fuller, Rockford, Ill., in August, 1862, by Col. Lawrence S. Church, and mustered into the United States service, September 4, 1862.

The regiment moved from camp, November 4th, and proceeded, via Cairo and Columbus, to Jackson, Tenn., and, afterward, to Grand Junction, Tenn., where it was assigned to Gen. McArthur's Division, Army of the Tennessee. Took part in Gen. Grant's campaign in Northern Mississippi, in the winter of 1862.

Moved from Memphis to Milliken's Bend in the spring of 1863. Participated in the march to Grand Gulf, and all the battles between that place and the rear of Vicksburg. Was in the charges of May 19th and 22d, losing 25 killed, 124 wounded, and 10 missing—a much heavier loss than that of any other regiment in the division.

In March, 1864, went on Red River expedition, under Gen. A. J. Smith, and was engaged at the capture of Fort De Russey and in the battles of Old River, Clontierville, Mainsouri, Yellow Bayou, and all the movements of that advance and retreat.

In May, 1864, returned to Vicksburg, and soon after moved to Memphis and took part in the ill-fated Sturgis expedition. Was in the battle of Guntown, and fought with undaunted bravery, but was overpowered, and, with the whole of Sturgis' army, retreated in confusion to Memphis. Col. Thomas W. Humphrey was killed, and nearly the whole regiment was killed, wounded or made prisoners. The campaign nearly annihilated the regiment.

After recruiting at Memphis, the command, in August, joined General Mower. Moved up White River, and marched from Brownsville, through Arkansas, to Missouri, in pursuit of Price. The Ninety-fifth arrived at Benton Barracks, Mo., November 1, 1864. November 30th, moved to Nashville, Tenn. Took part in battle of Nashville, December 15 and 16, 1864, and in pursuit of Hood's defeated army to Tennessee River, January 2, 1865, moved up the river to Eastport.

In February, 1865, embarked for New Orleans, arriving February 21st.

On 14th of March, moved to Dauphin Island, at mouth of Mobile Bay. On the 18th, landed at Cedar Point, with Colonel Moore's Brigade, and commenced the first offensive operations against Mobile. Took part in General Canby's movement from Fish River. During the siege of Spanish Fort, carried its trenches to within 20 yards of the enemy's works, and participated in the storming and capture of the fort, April 8, 1865, being the first regiment to occupy what was known, in the rebel line, as the "Red Fort."

After the fall of Mobile, the Ninety-fifth marched to Montgomery, Ala., arriving April 25th. From thence, moved to Opelika, Ala.

July 18th, started home. August 3d, arrived at Vicksburg; 19th, at St. Louis, and moved to Camp Butler, Ill., where, August 18, 1865, it was mustered out of service.

During the summer of 1864, the regiment had a detachment of 100 men, with Maj. Charles B. Loop, Capt. James Nish and Capt. A. S. Stewart, in charge. They participated in the battles of Kenesaw Mountain, Chattahoochie River, Atlanta, Jonesboro and Lovejoy Station.

The regiment had marched 1,800 miles, and moved by rail and water, 8,160 miles. Eighty-four men had been killed in battle or died of wounds and 176 died of disease. Total number of men who belonged to the Ninety-fifth, 1,355.

SKETCH OF NINTH CAVALRY.

The Ninth Cavalry Regiment was organized at Chicago, Ill., in November, 1861, by Col. A. G. Brackett, and was mustered in November 30th. On February 17, 1862, moved to Benton Barracks, Mo., and thence to Pilot Knob. On 27th, marched to Reeves' Station, on Big Black, and was assigned by Brigadier-General F. Steele, to Third Brigade. On May 23d, Steele's Division joined General Curtis' army, at Jacksonport, Ark. In a skirmish at Waddell's Plantation, June 12th, lost 12 wounded and 1 missing, and Stewart's Plantation, on June 27th, lost 2 killed and 35 wounded. Among the latter were Colonel Brackett, Adjutant Blackburn, and Captain Knight. June 26th, commenced the march to Helena. During this march, five men died from hardships—water and rations being almost impossible to obtain. At Helena, the Ninth Cavalry was assigned to Third Brigade, Col. Cyrus Bussey, Fourth Division, Brigadier-General A. P. Hovey, General Steele's army, District of Eastern Arkansas. On September 15th, two 12-pound mountain howitzers were assigned to the regiment, and were commanded by Lieutenant E. G. Butler, with a detail from the regiment. On November 7th, at Lagrange, Lieutenant Butler repulsed a charge of two regiments of Texan Rangers, killing over fifty of the enemy. His loss was 20 killed and wounded. The regiment went on an expedition under General Washburn, and was engaged, November 6th, at Okolona, Miss., and near Coffeeville, November 7th. January 9, 1863, marched, with General Gorman, to Duvall's Bluff, and returned. On April 7th, moved to Memphis, and on 12th, moved to Germantown, Tenn.

Was assigned to brigade of Colonel McCrillis, of Third Illinois Cavalry, and to the Sixteenth Corps. Engaged at Coldwater, Miss., July 28th, and at Granada, August 18th, and moved to Lagrange, Tenn., August 26th. Made an attack on the enemy at Salem, Miss., October 8th, and drove him from his position. Met the enemy at Wyatt, Miss., October 13th, and after fighting all day, the enemy fell back and retreated in the night. November 8th, moved from Lagrange to Corinth, and soon after returned. Marched to Collierville, and was assigned to Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. Was engaged with the enemy December 3, 1863, at Saulsbury, Tenn., and on the 4th, the division, under command of Brigadier-General B. H. Grierson, was engaged at Moscow, Tenn. In this battle, the Ninth Cavalry took a conspicuous and honorable part. On February 11, 1864, marched with the expeditions of Brigadier-General B. H. Grierson and General W. S. Smith, into Mississippi. Met and defeated the enemy at West Point, February 20th. Was engaged at Okolona, February 21st, and at Mount Ivy, Miss., on the 23d, and camped at Germantown, on 24th. On March 16th, the regiment was mustered as a veteran organization, and on the 17th, marched to Memphis. Moved to Illinois for veteran furlough. April 27th, returned to Memphis.

A detachment of the regiment was with General Sturgis, on the expedition to Guntown, Miss., and was rear guard for the disorganized command on the retreat, losing 5 killed, 23 wounded, and 12 prisoners, out of 160 men. July 7th, marched, with Generals A. J. Smith and Grierson, to Tupelo. Had a severe engagement at Pontatoc, driving the enemy, and was engaged in the two-days' battle, July 14th and 15th, at Tupelo and Old Town Creek. On August 3d, moved, via Holly Springs, to Abbeville, Miss., where it skirmished with the enemy. On the 11th, skirmished at Oxford. Had an engagement at Hurricane Creek, Miss., August 13th, losing 4 killed and several wounded. Returned to camp, near Memphis, September 4th. On September 30, 1864, moved eastward, Captain Blackburn commanding regiment. Crossed Tennessee River at Clifton. Moved via Waynesboro, Lawrenceburg, Florence, Alabama, Waterloo, Hamburg and Savannah, to Clifton. The command moved again to Florence, and met Hood's advancing army.

General Hatch's Division did hard fighting at Shoal Creek. On November 19th, crossed the river and attacked the enemy—the Ninth Cavalry in advance. Two divisions of the enemy advancing, compelled it to recross the river. One battalion of the regiment becoming detached, passed through the rebel line, and was compelled to remain in the enemy's rear until night, when it re-crossed. The command skirmished with the enemy's advance every day. At Campbellville, November 24th, the regiment was very hotly engaged, but stood their ground, holding back many times their number, until their ammunition was entirely exhausted, when they fought hand to hand, clubbing their carbines. Took a prominent part in the battle of Franklin, Tenn., and the two-days' fight, December 15th and 16th, at Nashville. Engaged in the pursuit of Hood, to Tennessee River, skirmishing at Brentwood, Franklin Pike, near Franklin, Rutherford's Creek, and at Ross' farm.

The command moved to Huntsville, Florence, Eastport and Gravelly Springs. On February 9, 1865, moved to Eastport. On June 22d, to Iuka, Miss. July 4th, moved to Decatur, Ala., and thence to Montgomery, Selma, and finally to Gainesville, Ala., arriving August 20th. Mustered out at Selma, Ala., October 31, 1865, and ordered to Springfield, Ill., where it received final payment and discharge.

MEXICAN WAR.

In 1847, the United States waged war with Mexico, and although a large part of the citizens of the country did not approve of the war, Illinois turned out loyally to follow the flag, wherever it might go. Some of our greatest heroes of the middle period of our history, such as Hardin, Bissell, and Shields, took prominent part as officers in this war. The names of Palo Alto, Buena Vista, Monterey and Vera Cruz still shine with brightness in our national history. A more deadly foe than bullets was always present and hundreds of the soldier boys sickened and died in camp from the diseases due to the hot climate. A study of the list of those who died from this county, compared with the number who went, will show the awful mortality. Most of those who went from here were in the Second Regiment, Company E, commanded by Capt. Shepard, and the list which follows is taken from the official records issued by the state.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

When the Maine was sunk in Havana Harbor, a wave of patriotism spread over the country and Boone County, as usual, was ready to respond and to send forth her men for whatever was needed to protect the honor of the nation. Judge Chas. E. Fuller was looked to by common consent as the colonel of a provisional regiment raised in this locality, but the regiment was never called into action, as only those already a part of the Illinois National Guard were needed. Most of the Boone County men who enlisted in the Spanish War were in the Third Regiment, commanded by Colonel Fisher, of Rockford. The list as given in the state publication is as follows:

HISTORY OF THE THIRD REGIMENT INFANTRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS.

Regiment was enrolled April 26, 1898, and mustered into service for two years May 7, 1898, at Camp Tanner, Springfield, Ill. Left Camp Tanner, and arrived at Chickamauga Park May 16, 1898, arrived at Newport News July 24, 1898, sailed on St. Louis for Porto Rico, July 25, 1898, arrived at Ponce, P. R., July 31, 1898, landed at Arroyo August 2, 1898, under slight resistance by Spanish. Participated in engagement at Guayama August 5, 1898, north of Guayama August 8 and 13, 1898, out-post duty north of Guayama till October 1, 1898, in camp east of Guayama until November 2, 1898, embarked on Roumania for New York November 2, 1898, and sailed November 3, 1898, arriving November 9, 1898. CHAPTER XVI.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL HISTORY.

CITIZENS OF BOONE COUNTY WHO HAVE BEEN PROMINENT IN LOCAL, STATE AND NATIONAL HISTORY—
 GEN. STEPHEN A. HURLBUT, GEN. ALLEN C. FULLER AND CONGRESSMAN CHARLES E. FULLER—
 STATE SENATOR D. A. FULLER—LIST OF EARLY CITIZENS ABOUT 1837—CITIZENS OF A LATER PERIOD CLASSIFIED BY TOWNSHIPS.

The four most prominent men in Boone County within the memory of the present generation have been Stephen A. Hurlbut, Allen C. Fuller, Charles E. Fuller and John J. Foote. Mr. Foote's prominent public duties were more closely connected with his native state, New York, than with Boone County, his more active life having been in the east and his residence here being a well earned and comparatively quiet rounding out of an honorable career. As to either of these prominent citizens it is not possible to add, by anything we can say, to the place they occupy in the history of our county and we will therefore present but brief notes of their lives and services, as the record of what they did appears in every phase of our county's history. Mr. Foote's biography will be found in another part of the work.

GEN. STEPHEN A. HURLBUT.

A brief account of General Hurlbut's life, taken mostly from the former history, is as follows: Stephen A. Hurlbut was born at Charleston, S. C., November 29, 1815, was thoroughly and liberally educated, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1837; removed to Belvidere, Ill., September, 1845, where he resided until his death, practicing his profession when not engaged in public duties; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Illinois in 1847; was candidate for presidential elector on the Whig ticket in 1848; was a member of the State Legislature in 1850, 1861 and 1867; and chosen presidential elector at large on the Republican ticket in 1868. He raised the first company in the state of Illinois for the regular United States service for three years, which afterwards became Company B of Fifteenth Regiment; was appointed Brigadier-General of Volunteers, June, 1861, to rank from May 17, 1861; commanded the 4th Division at Pittsburg Lauding, General Hurlbut has the credit of forming the best line of battle and saving the day to the Union Army at the battle of Shiloh, and for meritorious service on that occasion was appointed Major-General in September, 1862; was assigned to the command of the Sixteenth Army Corps at Memphis, and to the command of the Department of the Gulf in 1864 and 1865; was honorably mustered out in July, 1865; was appointed by President Grant, Minister Resident to the United States of Colombia from 1869 to 1872; was elected to the Forty-third Congress as a Republican, receiving 15,532 votes against 5,134 votes for his opponent, S. E. Bronson; re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress; married Sophronia Stevens, Alleghany County, New York, in 1847. General Hurlbut died suddenly at his post of duty at Peru, where he represented the United States. His funeral was probably the largest ever held in Belvidere, bodies of Knights Templar, Masons and other friends coming by special train from all directions. He lies buried in Belvidere cemetery. There was no one ever lived in Boone County more popular than General Hurlbut. During the latter part of his life he lived in a large mansion on East Street (which name was changed in honor of him to Hurlbut Avenue). The house is now occupied by Mr. Morrison. General Hurlbut's family resided here for some time after his death, but are now living in the east.

GEN. ALLEN C. FULLER.

Allen C. Fuller was born in Farmington, Hartford County, Conn., September 24, 1822. He studied law with Judge J. R. Doolittle at Warsaw, N. Y., and was admitted to the bar in that state. He came to Belvidere in 1846 and immediately took high rank among the lawyers of that day. After holding several of the minor offices he was elected judge of the circuit court, which office he held until he resigned, July, 1861, having accepted with some reluctance the position of adjutant general of the state. His conduct in that office, and the way he supplied the Illinois soldier boys with the comforts and necessities of life during the Civil War, is a part of the history of the state and the nation. After the war he came within a few votes in the convention of being nominated for governor by the Republican State Convention. In 1864 he was elected representative in the general assembly and was chosen speaker of the house. He was afterwards state senator. During the latter part of his life General Fuller became interested in business enterprises outside of Belvidere, notably the street railway system of Denver, Col., and the lumber industry in northern Wisconsin. In the latter business he was associated with some of the noted men of Wisconsin. He founded a bank at Bayfield, Wis., and spent much of his time during the late years of his life at a fine home which he built in that locality. General Fuller's brother, also a man of great ability, became one of the most prominent advertising men in the country. General Fuller's business enterprises were very successful and he became one of Belvidere's richest men. He was a director in the First and Second National banks and had more or less interest in many other enterprises. His close associate was James Gregory, whom he met in Wisconsin, and who afterwards became his valued assistant, and one of his executors. Mr. Gregory also, through such an able teacher, became quite wealthy and is connected with the lumber and banking interests in Wisconsin. General Fuller lived in a large house surrounded by beautiful grounds at the bend in North State Street. He died Dec. 6, 1901, and his funeral was attended by a large number of people, including the Boone County Bar, which turned out in a body. Rev. Easton, a former pastor here, came from Washington especially to deliver the funeral address for his departed friend.

JUDGE AND CONGRESSMAN FULLER.

The most prominent citizen of Boone County at the present time is Congressman Charles E. Fuller. His biography as given in the former history is as follows: Charles E. Fuller, attorney and counselor at law; born in Flora, Boone County, Ill., March 31, 1849; son of Seymour and Eliza A. Fuller, who came to Illinois from Genesee County, N. Y., and settled in Flora Township, Boone County, in 1845; attended district school until 12 years of age; in 1861 to 1863, clerked in store in Belvidere for his uncle, J. C. Mordoff; afterwards, until 1867, was employed at clerking in Cherry Valley, Ill., Independence, Ia., and Wataga, Ill.; in 1867-8, carried on a book store at Waverly, Ia., in connection with a brother, J. A. Fuller; afterwards, until spring of 1869, traveled through Iowa and Minnesota as agent for a wholesale book house in Dubuque; in 1869 commenced the study of law in the office of Jesse S. Hildrup, at Belvidere, Ill.; was admitted to the bar August 17, 1870, at the age of 21 years; he then practiced his profession at Belvidere with success second to none. Has taken a "somewhat active part" in politics, as a Republican; made several active political canvasses for the Republicans in 1870, 1872 and 1876, gaining considerable reputation as a stump speaker; in 1875 was elected corporation attorney of Belvidere, and re-elected in 1876; at the fall election of 1876 was elected state's attorney; was married April 24, 1873, to Miss Sadie A. Mackey, daughter of Hugh Mackey, of Cherry Valley, Ill.; after the death of Judge M. M. Boyce in 1873, purchased the law office and library of the old firm of M. M. Boyce & Bro. As stated in another part of this work, Judge Fuller was elected circuit judge and held that position until he was elected congressman. He has been a congressman for several terms, and if the people of Boone County had the whole say, he would hold that office for many years to come. It is hoped that the citizens of the other counties in the district will look at the matter in the same light, for at least several terms. Judge Fuller is now associated in the law business with William Israel, but devotes most of his time to congressional duties. His office is in the Fuller block, a building on South State Street, just south of the turn, owned by Judge Fuller and his brother, Senator Fuller. In the house of representatives at Washington, his chief work has been on the committee on insular possessions and invalid pensions, and many veterans and veterans' widows in the district are indebted to him for his work in obtaining them pensions. He also secured a large appropriation for the new postoffice at Belvidere, which is to be placed on the site of the old Woodruff House on South State Street, just north of Locust Street. In state conventions, Boone County's eight delegates would make a comparatively small showing among the hundreds of others, but with Judge Fuller as its chairman, the county is able to take a prominent part in the proceedings. Probably the most stirring part in Judge Fuller's career was when he managed John A. Logan's candidacy for United States senator, but that is a part of the history of the state and need not be repeated here.

SENATOR D. A. FULLER.

DuFay A. Fuller, brother of Judge Fuller, is also one of the leading citizens of the county. He was senator for this district at Springfield for several terms and is one of the leaders of the Republican party in this locality. He conducts an insurance business, representing some of the strongest companies in the county, and probably writes more insurance than anyone else in the city. He is also associated with Frank Stockwell and Frank Johnston in the real estate business, their offices being in the Fuller block on South State Street. Mr. Fuller was born in Flora Township in 1852.

It is a rather curious coincidence that the name of so many of those prominently connected with our history should have been Fuller. Margaret Fuller, Gen. Allen C. Fuller, Judge Chas. E. Fuller, and Senator D. A. Fuller. The two latter are brothers, but none of the others were related.

LIST OF EARLY CITIZENS—1837.

The writer in delving into the musty papers, has been able to find the road commissioner's list for the year 1837. District No. 1 was the east part of the State road and Chas. McDonough was the commissioner. District No. 2 was the State road, beginning at the west line of the county, and running to Crosby's store in Belvidere. John S. King was originally appointed road commissioner but excused on account of age and Israel Stone appointed, he being succeeded by Ira Haskins, or vice versa. District No. 3 included the County road beginning at the State road near Crosby's and running to and intersecting the State road near Billy Ames's. This was East Lincoln Avenue and the road around the big bend of the river. David Caswell was supervisor and the largest population was contained in this district. District No. 4 included the road which commenced at the angle of the State road east of Belvidere and ran westerly on the south side of the Kishwankee to the county line. This was the River road. Cornelius Cline was the supervisor. While there may have been a few citizens who were too young or too old to work the road, or a few who were skipped, yet these lists represent very fairly the names of the Boone County citizens in 1837.

PROMINENT CITIZENS OF THE MIDDLE PERIOD.

So many citizens, in the generations that have gone by, have taken their part in making Boone County what it is, that it is very hard to include them all and to measure with any degree of precision the space to which the services of each entitle them. In order that the names of the generation which has just passed may be included we have taken from the history of Boone County, published in 1877, the most important facts shown in the lists given in the back of that work. Some of these citizens have passed to the great beyond and some are still with us, many of them being prominent and active citizens. There are doubtless others who are not mentioned but who should be, and we have endeavored in this list and in the matter given in the foregoing part of the history, to mention as many as space will permit of those who have helped in building up the community.

BELVIDERE TOWNSHIP.

Amzi Abbe, born in Berkshire County, Mass., July 15, 1806; came to Belvidere, Boone County, in 1842; married Sybil Bates, of Pittsfield, Mass., in 1829; she died October 30, 1864; he married Mrs. Susan Collins, of New York.

CHAPTER XVII.

PATRIOTIC, SOCIAL AND BUSINESS MEN'S ORGANIZATIONS.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC—SOCIAL FRATERNITIES—MASON'S, ODD FELLOWS, KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS AND MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA—BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS—A SECRET SOCIETY TRAGEDY—WOMEN'S CLUBS—FORTNIGHTLY, GAMES, SOBOSIS, NEW CENTURY AND OTHER LADIES' ASSOCIATIONS.

"Hurlbut Post," Grand Army of the Republic, organized shortly after the close of the civil war, was named for the great war hero of Boone County, Stephen A. Hurlbut. The commanders of the post have been Major C. B. Loop, H. H. Hakes, Judge Wales W. Wood, Circuit Clerk A. C. Fassett, who held the office for many years, and George Robinson, the present commander. The meetings were first held in a building next to the present postoffice, where the steam laundry is located, afterward over Glasner's store building on North State Street and then in the present location over Sewell's carriage store, which is known as G. A. R. Hall. The present membership is about 57. The hall is decorated by the pictures of the men who went out from Boone County or where they then lived, to help save the Union, also by photographs of General Hurlbut, John A. Logan, and by a small field cannon. The Woman's Relief Corps is an important auxiliary to this organization and gives frequent suppers in the hall, which are well attended. The Sons of Veterans also assist in some of the patriotic celebrations. Of late years the ranks of the veterans are becoming lessened and "Father Time" is doing what bullets, exposure, and disease could not do, during the four years they followed the "Stars and Stripes" in the great civil conflict. In the cemetery is a large cannon, which was secured by Congressman Fuller and brought from the East and placed in position by the post, with the financial assistance of John C. Foote and Mrs. Harriet Sabin, and which stands as a silent guard over the resting place of the soldier dead.

Y. M. C. A.

Although there has been a Y. M. C. A. in Belvidere for some time, as shown in the extracts from the "Standard," the present prosperous institution dates from the generous donation of Deacon and Mrs. Henry W. Avery, in 1903. The building is on State and Locust Streets, and contains a hall, gymnasium and swimming tanks, as well as other rooms and, under the efficient leadership of Mr. H. B. Hawkins, it is the center of a wholesome, helpful activity among the young men and boys of Belvidere.

FRATERNAL ORDERS.

Belvidere Lodge No. 60 A. F. and A. M. (the Blue lodge of the Masons) was chartered October 4, 1818, the charter members being as follows: Alfred E. Ames, first master; Orris Crosby, Nijah Hotchkiss, Lucius Fuller, Amos Witter, Asa Williams, Hezekiah Ripley, Joseph G. Prentiss. All are now dead.

Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90 Royal Arch Masons was chartered October 5, 1865, the charter members being as follows: A. W. Burnside, John B. Mulliken, Nijah Hotchkiss, Cephas Gardner, Charles Loop, George W. Downs, Stephen A. Hurlbut, George B. Ames, L. E. Benson, W. C. Detrick, Nathan Smedley, William D. Avery, D. D. Sabin, A. C. Fuller. For many years both organizations have held their meetings in the brick block at the northeast corner of State and Lincoln Avenues. The building is now old and in bad repair and the question is being agitated of building a Masonic Hall. It is expected that one will be commenced before long. Many of the prominent citizens of Belvidere have belonged to this ancient and honorable order, and its present membership fully maintains the high traditions of the lodge. There are also a number of Templars and Shriners residing in Belvidere, but the Chapter is the highest lodge that meets in the city.

Odd Fellows, Big Thunder Lodge, No. 28, I. O. O. F., was organized April 28, 1847; the charter members were as follows: Daniel Hornell, B. A. J. Crosby, N. W. Birge, E. G. Wolcott, J. S. Whitney. The Odd Fellows erected a hall forming the second floor of a two story building on the easterly side of South State Street just south of the railroad. The ground floors are owned by Frank W. Starr. The meetings are held in this hall, as well as those of several other lodges.

Royal Arcanum, Mississippi Council No. 1158 was organized June 3, 1889, with twenty-one members. It rapidly increased in membership until it had more than 400. The first regent was O. G. Forrer. The other regents have been Dr. R. W. McInnis, B. F. Harnish, A. H. Keeler, Albert J. Yaw, L. E. Coleman, Grant C. Whitney, Fred Wolfe, Chas. S. Kueker, Mark I. Hall, Walter Adams. The council meets in the hall over Ray's block, of which it holds the lease and sub-leases to other orders. One of the oldest members is Cassius M. Church. Charles S. Kueker, now deceased, was one of the most active members Mississippi Council ever had, and was responsible for many good times enjoyed by its members.

Among the other orders having lodges in Belvidere are the Good Templars, the Knights of Pythias, North American Union, Red Men, Woodmen of the World, the Court of Honor, Mystic Workers, Brotherhood of American Yeomen and Yeomen of America, Knights and Ladies of Security, Knights of the Maccabees, Knights of Columbus. The ladies have the following lodges in connection with the other orders, the Eastern Star, the Rebeccas, the Royal Neighbors.

Boone County Camp No. 52 of the Modern Woodmen of America is one of the flourishing fraternal orders in Belvidere. The present membership of the camp is 565. Thirty-six have died since the camp was chartered and $86,000 paid back to beneficiaries. A. C. Fassett is V. C., and Geo. B. Fry is clerk. The society meets in Royal Arcanum Hall.

BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS.

The Business Men's Association which exists at the present was founded in 1903. A. E. Hauter was in a large measure responsible for the organization and became the first secretary, and Eugene Sabin was the first president. Upon Attorney Hauter's removal to Rockford, Attorney Richard V. Carpenter was elected secretary, and he commenced the publication of the "Weekly Bulletin" of real estate transfers which still continues. Upon his resignation, Eugene B. Sabin was elected secretary and still holds that position. Omar H. Wright was elected president. While the association does not hold regular meetings, it has taken an active part in several undertakings for the good of Belvidere, notably in Fourth of July celebrations and in securing the removal of the piano factory to this town from Chicago.

There were several Business Men's Associations in Belvidere before the present one. Among them was the Commercial Club, which, after some difficulty with one corset company which failed to come here, finally secured the location of the Gossard Company, which has been very successful and employs a large number of young ladies.

The Belvidere Chautauqua Association held its first meeting in 1905 on the flats on the south side of Kishwaukee River, near State Street.

Among the gentlemen prominent in bringing the Chautauqua to Belvidere, were W. H. Shearman, George M. Marshall, J. W. Preston, and E. B. Fisher. The talent has been secured by Harry Holbrook of Oak Park, who has managed a successful line of Chautauquas at Janesville and other points for a number of years past. The Chautauqua for 1908 was held in the Epworth Camp Meeting Grounds and while quite well attended is understood not to have been a financial success, on account of the distance from town.

Among the social clubs organized in Belvidere during the last ten years or so have been the Fellowship Club, the Bon Ami, and the R. A. I. X. Club, each of which has given a series of dances during the winters.

A SECRET SOCIETY TRAGEDY.

In 1851 considerable excitement was caused in Belvidere by the death of a young woman through an operation. The man charged with being accessory to the death was a member of one of the secret societies. The lodge at the time seems to have been divided into factions and more or less bad feeling was caused on either side. It is impossible at this late date to state which faction was in the right, but the names of very prominent and respected citizens appear on both sides. It was charged that one of the officers of the law, being a member of the same fraternity, did not execute the warrant placed in his hands. It is stated that the man against whom the warrant was issued was secreted under a load of oats and driven out of town, but was pursued and captured. One of the very prominent members of the lodge disliked the acts of his brother members and denounced them in very vigorous terms, to which they replied just as vigorously, and in the course of the argument many charges were hurled back and forth as to the general standing of those on the two sides. The matter was used later on as an argument by some of those who were strongly against secret societies, but so far as the writer can see the matter did not argue anything against the great and beneficent accomplishments of the order, but merely showed that the lodge in Belvidere at the time was not as amiable as it might be.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mrs. Anna R. King, who is one of the most prominent and best posted in the work of the women's clubs in Belvidere, has kindly furnished us with this sketch of the history of several of the most important.

AMATEUR MUSICAL.

The Amateur Musical Club was organized in 1896 and has been the leading woman's musical club for several years, with Mrs. John Ramsey as its presiding officer. It has about twenty-five active and seventy-five associate members. Many noted musical artists have been brought to Belvidere by this club, to give recitals. The Amateur Musical belongs to the National Federation of Musical Clubs.

FORTNIGHTLY.

The Fortnightly, a purely literary club, was organized in 1895 with a membership of fifty, and joined the State Federation of Women's Clubs in 1900. Its work has been chiefly studies of various countries, their history and present conditions. Mrs. D. D. Sabin, Mrs. Irving Terwilliger, and Mrs. A. O. Witbeck have been among the presidents in its later years. Music at each meeting is a special feature. The Fortnightly has done some practical philanthropic work, and for some years had charge of several traveling libraries.

GANESHA.

The Ganesha Club was organized in 1898 as a strictly literary club. Its work has been very largely confined to discussions of the social questions of the present, including topics on education, philanthropy, civics, labor reforms and all present social conditions. Some historical studies have been taken in connection with the sociological. The membership is limited to thirty-five. The club entered the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs in 1903. Mrs. O. Leonard, Mrs. Azro Fellows and Mrs. L. M. Kelley are among the later presidents of the Ganesha. Minnie Starr Grainger, of this club, has been nearly two years the state vice-president for the Twelfth Congressional District. Several members of both the Fortnightly and Ganesha have been members of the state committees.

SOROSIS.

The Sorosis was organized as a literary club in 1902, being admitted to the State Federation in the same year. Mrs. Oberholser and Mrs. Cuttridge have been its presidents.

The work of the Sorosis has been mostly historical, with several years' study based on the "Bay View Course." This club makes a specialty of social life among its members, entertaining elaborately at each meeting.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

A club for the study of domestic science was organized in Belvidere in 1905. It has a membership of about seventy-five, with instructors and lecturers from abroad. Mrs. S. E. Bailey and Mrs. E. Orth have held the office of president.

SCHUMANN.

The Schumann is a musical club composed of about sixty young ladies. About twenty comprise the active members, the others forming the chorus. The club works under the instruction of a musical director, Mr. Latimer, and has done much to develop the musical talent of its members. Miss Bertha Woods and Miss Helen Pettit have been its presidents.

THE NEW CENTURY CLUB.

This is the only literary club admitting men to membership. It has about thirty members.

R. W. W. C. C. C. C. C.

mostly men and their wives. Current magazines furnish the material for their study topics, which are usually along the lines of sociology. Dr. A. W. Swift, Dr. C. S. Fox, J. G. Peart and others have been among the leaders. The New Century Club is entirely composed of Methodists.

CHAPTER XVIII.

NATURAL HISTORY.

GEOLOGY—NATURAL CONDITIONS AND CHARACTER OF THE SOIL—ROCK AND GRAVEL PITS—ABSENCE OF FOSSILS—WATER—FAUNA—ANIMAL SPECIES OF PRIMITIVE AND PRESENT PERIODS—BIRDS OF BOONE COUNTY—FLORA—TREES, PLANTS AND FLOWERS—SEVENTEEN YEAR LOCUSTS—WEATHER CONDITIONS.

According to geological investigation there have been at least three different periods when glaciers or ice sheet have covered more or less of the state of Illinois. The first one probably covered all of the state as far south as the Ozark Hills. The second one extended only over three or four tiers of counties on the north line of the state. On the area where the drift from this second glacier has not been covered by a later glacier the soil is divided by geologists into two classes. One is known as the pre-Iowan glaciation and the other the Iowan glaciation. According to the soil map issued by the state of Illinois, practically all of Boone County, except that along the Kishwaukee River, lies in the Iowan glaciation. Of this kind of soil the State Bulletin has this to say:

This type of soil occupies a large part of the upland in the Iowan glaciation. The top soil consists of brown sandy loam containing some gravel in places and occasionally pieces of stone. The subsoil at a depth of three feet or more frequently contains much stone, and the proportion of stone increases with the depth, the disintegrating bed rock being found commonly at 4 to 10 feet beneath the surface.

In the surface and sub-surface this type of soil is usually more or less acid, but the pieces of stone which are often, though not always, found in the subsoil above 40 inches, contain some limestone, the underlying bed rock being on impure limestone.

The average composition of the Iowan brown sandy loam shows 3,970 pounds of nitrogen, 850 pounds of phosphorus, and 26,700 pounds of potassium, in two million pounds of surface soil. While the nitrogen and phosphorus are low as compared with rich normal soils, it should be understood that porous sandy loam soils afford a much more extensive feeding range for plant roots than more compact soils, and consequently lower percentages of plant food elements may be adequate for the production of large crops on sandy loam soils.

On the other hand because of the porosity and thorough aeration of sandy soils the decomposition of organic matter is rapid. Thus insoluble organic nitrogen is rapidly converted by nitrification into soluble nitrates and with the perfect natural drainage of sandy loam it is easily carried away in drainage waters, in consequence of which nitrogen is much more likely to be the limiting element in sandy soils than in more compact silt loams of equal nitrogen content.

ROCKS.

The rock underlying Boone County is limestone. While it makes a fair material for building purposes and street paving and some of it is very hard, most of it is softer and less durable than the stone near Joliet and Lemont. At the same time, many houses and foundations built of Boone County material have stood for years without much wear. As this is a glacial region there is more or less gravel, but generally speaking, there are not many boulders or "hard heads' to bother the farmers. It is much different from New England, where stone fences, picked up with much back-breaking labor, line the road sides. The author remembers an occasion when he went with Taylor Marshall to measure the old Hildrup farm into three parts, and when it came to marking where the end of the tape was, no stone large enough to be seen a rod or two away could be found in the vicinity.

There are a number of gravel pits situated along the Kishwaukee River and other places. One of the largest is on the McDougall farm and another is near Bennett's creamery on the River Road, having been run by Mr. Penwell. The chief stone quarries are Stevenson's, situated in the north part of Belvidere Township on the Beaver, Hall's quarry, situated in Flora, and the Electric Stone Company's quarry, situated southwest of town near the Rockford electric line. From this quarry has come much of the stone used in paving the streets in Belvidere. While there are a number of fossils found in the quarries and in the rocks in other places, they are apt to be more or less broken on account of the softness of some of the stone. Some very large fossils from the Electric quarry were exhibited for a time in John C. Tripp's office window.

The county, as a whole, is not a very good place for fossils, compared with many of the other counties in the state. However, a thorough search would probably result in getting together quite a collection of specimens.

WATER.

The artesian water in Boone County is very good. It is apt to be quite hard and contains considerable magnesia and a little iron and other substances. The city water supply of Belvidere is as good, if not better than, that of any city the writer has visited. No trouble has ever been had with typhoid fever, resulting therefrom. Most of the water supply outside of Belvidere is from wells and cisterns and, as the land is generally high and free from swamps, the quality is generally excellent.

ANIMALS.

Probably the most common of the larger animals in Boone County is the cow. This is in the dairy region and a Boone County landscape without a number of cows in it would not seem homelike. According to the official records, compiled for taxes, probably the scarcest animal is the dog. While one can see a great many animals running around the streets that look, act, and bark like dogs, official records show that the number is very limited and that these other animals must be zebras, yaks, ibexes, or platypuses.

In the early days, it is probable that the American buffalo roamed in this region, as they surely did in great numbers over the southern part of the state. When the first settlers came here, deer were fairly plentiful and deer horns and skulls could be picked up almost anywhere on the prairie. Wolves were quite troublesome in the early days, and a few are still brought in to the county clerk for the bounty, principally young ones. There are, of course, the usual number of squirrels, chipmunks and gophers, and a few other animals of that nature. Now and then one sees that little black and white animal which the city consins call "dear little kitty." Boone County has been settled so long and contains so few extensive woods that the large animals, from a hunter's standpoint or even from that of a naturalist, are not very numerous. Rabbits are quite plentiful, and some muskrat, weasels, and mink are found in various portions.

BIRDS OF BOONE COUNTY.

Mrs. Clara L. Lampert, who is known as one of the most enthusiastic and best informed bird lovers in the county, has kindly contributed from her extensive observation of our bird neighbors, the following:

Long, long ago—to be exact, in 1768—the Rev. Gilbert White, the great English naturalist, in writing his quaint letters, "The Natural History of Selborne"—still read with delight by nature lovers everywhere,—said:

"All nature is so full that that district produces the greatest variety which is most examined."

In like manner, that part of our county which is most observed will be found to contain the most birds. So, though this account must be short, if you will look for your bird neighbors, you will find more of them, and learn far more about them than could be told in a book as big as this history itself.

In the preface to "Wild Birds in City Parks," the authors say:

"The living bird is the one important fact which will make the brief hints offered of value. Anyone caring to make use of these hints, may be assured that, during the migrations of the birds, city dwellers have one of the keenest delights of country life brought to their very doors, because many birds, migrating largely at night, are attracted by the lights of the city and stop off in their long journey to feed, so that a city park often contains a greater variety of feathered visitors than an equal area in the country."

Our permanent residents, or the birds that are always with us, are the most useful of all, because they depend for their food supply upon the most injurious insect pests, and often kill whole colonies of these by eating eggs and larvae that are dormant in the winter time, but become active and very harmful when the warm weather comes. Besides this our native sparrows destroy countless numbers of weed seeds that would otherwise cause the farmer endless trouble.

Our Kishwaukee River, and the smaller Piasasaw and Beaver in our county, offer many attractions to the inhabitants of the bird world, so that we have plenty of water birds, as grebes, loons, tern, pelicans, ducks, teals, geese, bitterns, herons, rails, woodcock, snipe, sandpipers, killdeer, plover, etc.

The grouse family is well represented by our bob-white (the so-called "quail"); the ruffed grouse (the so-called "partridge"); the prairie hen and the grouse.

Of the pigeon family we have the mourning dove, but the passenger pigeon, once so common here, has now disappeared.

Of the hawks it has been proven that all the family (except Cooper's and the sharp-shinned) are most helpful to the farmer by devouring the small rodents so destructive to crops; while the owls are even more beneficial. Members are marsh, red-tailed and red-shouldered hawks, barn, American long-eared, short-eared, barred, great gray, saw-whet, screech and horned owls.

Of the cuckoo and kingfisher family we have the yellow and black-billed cuckoos, and the belted kingfisher.

The woodpeckers are of great economic value. Hairy and downy woodpeckers remain in our county the year round; and Prof. Beal, ornithologist, in his biological survey, states that two-thirds to three-fourths of their food consists of noxious insects. The redheaded woodpeckers and flickers go south in the fall. John Burroughs says of the latter, in speaking of the birds which herald the coming of spring, that for us Solomon's beautiful description should read:

"For, lo, the winter is past; the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the call of the high-hole comes up from the wood."

The goat-suckers are represented by the whip-poorwill and the nighthawk.

Of the swifts we have the familiar chimney swifts, which nest in large numbers in the great factory chimneys in Belvidere.

Of the humming birds only one, the ruby-throat, is found east of the Mississippi. This is the smallest in size of all of our birds.

Of the order of perching birds there are eighteen families.

The flycatchers are of necessity only with us during the summer is the kingbird, phoebe, wood pewee, hairy woodpecker, etc.

The purple-throated blue is the only member we have of the Protonotaria family, which sing in the woods during the winter.

Crows and their cousins, the blue jays, are known to us, and they cannot be utterly condemned, for if they do some damage, it has been found by the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, which has for some years past been conducting a systematic investigation of the food habits of our native birds, that they do more good than they do harm. Reference is hereby made to reports of the Biological Survey leaflets may be had for the asking.

The blackbird family is well represented among us by the gay bobolink and his demure little wife of our meadows; the brilliant red-winged blackbird of our swamps and marshes; the lazy cowbird, who imposes upon other and much smaller birds the rearing of her brood; the dear, common meadowlark; the orchard oriole and his beautiful relative in Lord Baltimore's colors—black and orange; the rusty blackbird and his stately cousins,—the bronzed and purple grackles.

Of the English (or common house) sparrow introduced into America from Europe in 1851 and later dates, and now bidding fair to exterminate by mobbing our native birds, there is nothing good to say. Frank M. Chapman says:—

"What an overwhelming catastrophe was the introduction into America of the house sparrow! Its harsh, insistent, incessant chirp is now the dominant bird voice about our homes, where we may never again hope to hear a chorus of native bird music unmarred by the discordant chatter of this pest. It is as though some foul order had forever defiled the fragrance of our fields and woods."

But our native sparrows and finches, by far the largest family of birds, which contains over five hundred and fifty species, of which we have about forty species, and some of which are with us throughout the year, some coming from the South in early spring and remaining until snow falls, others coming from the far North to pass the winter with us, are without exception useful and helpful citizens. Some of their names, more or less familiar, are:

Evening, rose-breasted and pine grosbeaks, American and white-winged crossbills, purple finch, red poll, longspur, American goldfinch, pine finch, vesper, savanna, grasshopper, white-crowned, white-throated, white-crowned, tree, chipping, field, song-swamp, and fox sparrows, junco, chewink, indigo, bunting, dickcissel, etc.

The remarkable brilliance of the tanager family is well shown by the scarlet tanager, which is a beautiful sight against the soft green of the fresh foliage in our Public Square during the spring migration.

Swallows, birds of the air, which take their food while on the wing, are good summer residents. There are the purple martin, the cliff, barn, tree, bank, and rough-winged swallows.

Cedar waxwings are erratic, migratory birds and are to be found in our Public Square occasionally in small flocks.

Shrikes are frequently seen along our country roads, especially among the osage orange hedges.

Vireos are all American. We have the red-eyed, white-eyed, warbling, and yellow-throated vireos.

The wood warblers are many and most interesting, being so small in size, restless in habit, and so beautifully dressed. They come to us—guests from the South—when the apple-trees are covered with soft bloom, and, as they flit ceaselessly in and out among the blossoms, one thinks of the gay butterflies. The shortness of their stay makes their identification difficult. Over thirty species visit us.

The wren family includes the familiar catbird, brown thrasher, house wren, and the less known winter and marsh wrens. The mocking bird seems to like Southern Illinois better, at least it is not common in our county.

The brown creeper with tireless energy hunts insect enemies of tree trunks, vying with the woodpeckers in this good work.

Of the nuthatches we have two, the white and red breasted. These also watch over our tree trunks and destroy numberless insect eggs during the Winter season.

In her delightful book: "Birds of Village and Field," Florence A. Merriam says:

"He who knows the chickadee only by name is an enviable person, for he has still before him the initial pleasures of one of the choicest of all bird friendships.

"The chickadee is no musician. Still every note he utters is dear to his friends. We can have the society of the friendly chickadees if we but offer them a little food when cold weather comes. A piece of suet nailed to a tree pleases them very well." It will be appreciated by other Winter birds also.

Kinglets, golden and ruby crowned, are smaller than the warblers and may be known by their habit of nervously flitting their wings at frequent intervals.

The thrushes are given first place among birds for their singing, and are also first in our hearts for their quiet, lovable qualities.

Bradford Torrey says:

"What a sweet voice the bluebird's is! Calling or singing it is the very soul of music—a voice that caresses the ear; such a tone as no human mouth, humanly invented instrument, can ever produce the like of. He has no need to sing—his simplest talk is music."

Every Spring we say: "Have you seen the first robin?" "Have you heard the first bluebird?" It is like a greeting from the home-coming children to hear their dear, familiar voices once again. They are at home with us throughout the summer; but, like Riley's South Wind and the Sun,

"And they heard the killdee's call.

And, afar, the waterfall,

But the rustle of a falling leaf
They heard above it all.

And our love for them they weigh,
As their fickle fancies may;
And when at last we love them most,
They laugh and sail away."

Miss Alice Munn, whose work in nature study has made her very familiar with the plant life, has kindly contributed this article on

TREES, PLANTS AND WILD FLOWERS.

The timber of Boone County is unevenly distributed. The towns of Spring and Flora and most of the country south of the Kishwankee, Shattuck's Grove excepted, is a broad, comparatively level prairie with scattered patches of timber which serve to relieve the landscape and help preserve the primitive beauty. North of the Kishwankee the country changes in appearance, becoming more rolling. More streams are seen. There are wide stretches of thin timber and brushwood extending for miles along these streams and over the intervening hills. Occasionally a better grove of timber may be found. The northeastern part of the county is the most heavily wooded.

The timber more common is several varieties of oak and hickory. Besides these we find black walnut, butternut, bitternut, cottonwood, honey locust, sycamore, water and slippery elm, haw, dogwood, common poplar, white and black ash, basswood, willow, thorn apple, wild plum, wild crab apple, black cherry and an occasional white pine. The most familiar shrubs are hazel brush and sumach.

The native flowers of Boone County since the lowlands have been tilled and the timber cleared, are rapidly disappearing beneath the plow share of the thrifty farmer. None of the varieties, however, are yet obsolete and the botanist or nature-lover is delighted from early April, when those harbingers of spring, the hepaticas, lift up their dainty blossoms, until September frosts kill the golden red and purple asters that give patches of color to the country roadside.

There are to be found in the sloughs, marsh marigolds, crowslips, the children call them), buttercups, iris and cat-tails. On the higher prairies grow at least five varieties of violets, shooting stars, wild phlox, hair bells, juncosons, Indian tobacco, and wild strawberries.

In the woods are anemones, blood root, white and red wakerobins, dog tooth violets, Dutchman's breeches, mandrakes and columbine. Ferns grow abundantly and wild grape vines, woodbine, wild honeysuckle and bitter-sweet make our groves beautiful.

THE SEVENTEEN YEAR LOCUSTS.

These insects were very thick in 1837, when the first settlers commenced to come here. The custom of the locust is to develop in the ground for 17 years and then come forth in great numbers, making a loud, shrill noise and clinging to all the vines and shrubbery, to which they do considerable damage. While there are a few in the odd years, the greatest swarms of this pest have been in 1857, 1854, 1871 (in which year the writer also made his appearance), also in 1888 and 1905. The latter visitation was very noticeable on the mound, as well as in many other portions. The next visit will be in 1922.

WEATHER.

The weather conditions in Boone County have been touched upon very largely in the extracts from the "Standard," from the time which that paper covers. The earliest observer of the weather in Boone County was probably Col. Joel Walker, who kept a record for many years, most of which is still owned by his son Frank Walker. An observer at a later date was Geo. B. Moss, who for many years kept the records for the government, and is still a great authority on early weather conditions. Another careful observer was John Greenlee, formerly cashier of the People's Bank, who also noted the rainfall and other conditions for many years.

The winter of 1842-43 was very cold. Mr. Moss's record shows that the winter of '74 to '75 was much colder than that of 1842. The year 1853 produced a fine peach crop, the next winter was severe and killed the trees. On the afternoon and evening of June 3, 1858, occurred a great flood which did much damage along the railroads and highways. In 1859 there was a frost every month in the year in Belvidere township. The year 1869 was famous for its large crops, especially of wheat. The season of 1870 was very early and very dry. Corn planting commenced April 15, much of the oats were cut for fodder and many fields of timothy hay were not worth cutting. The winter of 1877-78 was very short. Good plowing up to January 2d, and again on March 3d. On December 31, 1883, and the following day was one of the worst storms had in Boone County. The wind blew from forty to sixty miles an hour and the thermometer went to twenty-five degrees below zero.

CHAPTER XIX.

LOCAL CHRONOLOGY.

A SUMMARY OF LOCAL CURRENT EVENTS FROM 1865 TO THE PRESENT TIME, DRAWN FROM NEWSPAPER FILES.

The following items of Boone County local history are made up in chronological order from the files of the "Belvidere Standard":

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED SIXTY-FIVE.

Among the advertisements:

Gritzbaugh, clothing, next door to Boone County Bank; H. D. Waterman & Bros., hardware; Miss C. Brink, milliner; Wm. W. Fuller, drug store; H. G. King, drug store.

Gerie M. Cluskey

April 11, it was rumored that the First National Bank was about to be started.

April 10, two or three thousand persons assembled in the streets to celebrate Lee's surrender, and the close of the war.

Gardner Block, Union Block, and other buildings were decorated. The Wide-a-Wakes turned out and General Fuller, Capt. Coon, and Dr. Molony spoke. Jefferson Davis was burned in effigy in the streets.

Lincoln's death plunged Belvidere, as well as the rest of the country, into great gloom. Union services were held at the Presbyterian Church, Sunday morning, April 16. Services in all the other churches were dispensed with. A great throng filled the church and all the ministers of Belvidere took part, including Rev. Eddy of the Presbyterian, Rev. Cooper of the Episcopal, Rev. Lawrence of the Baptist, and Rev. Bliss of the Methodist.

The First National Bank commenced business May 10, 1865. The first board of directors was elected March 27th, and consisted of Allen C. Fuller, I. T. Witbeck, Mark Ramsey, John Yount, Benj. F. Lawrence, N. C. Tompkins, Ezra May, Wm. S. Dunton, George Waterman.

Officers were as follows: President, Allen C. Fuller; Cashier, N. C. Tompkins; Vice-President, Benjamin F. Lawrence; Teller, James S. Terwilliger.

The spring of 1865 was quite cool, frost being in the ground as late as the middle of May.

The Manchester Republican was published in 1865.

Howe's circus exhibited in Belvidere in May.

The dam at the Baltic Mills, which was damaged in the spring of 1865, was repaired with over three hundred loads of brush and small trees. Thirty or forty rods of new race was also cut.

The Boone County S. S. Convention was held at the Baptist Church at Belvidere, May 26. H. W. Avery, Jr., was elected president, E. Moss, vice-president, and Chas. E. Abbe, secretary.

Many of the boys in blue were returning from time to time in June.

I. R. Mudge's rhubarb plantation employed twelve to fifteen men during the season and made from 1,000 to 1,200 gallons per day or about 10,000 gallons during the season. The juice was pressed out by an ordinary cane mill and a special press, and placed in large vats in the cellar. The production was known as "American Sherry."

A drought of considerable length took place this year.

The Fourth of July celebration took place on Gooseberry Island. There was a procession of some length, including a car of young ladies representing all of the states in the Union. From 5,000 to 6,000 people were present. J. S. Hildrup was president of the day and Judge T. D. Murphy, of McHenry County, gave the oration. A display of fireworks on the Court House Square closed the festivities in the evening. General Stephen Hurlbut, who had just returned from the war, also spoke at the exercises, amid great enthusiasm.

The wheat crop in 1865 was very poor, the oats and corn good.

Outside of corporation, 999; south side within corporation, 1,198; north side, within corporation, 1,554; total, 3,361.

The Ninety-Fifth Illinois Volunteers arrived at Springfield the middle of August and were mustered out shortly after. August 22nd, the Ninety-Fifth Illinois returned home. Companies B, G and K were from Belvidere; a very large crowd assembled in town and the train arrived shortly after dinner time, amid much confusion of welcomes given the soldier boys by fathers, mothers, wives, and sweethearts. A procession was formed with P. J. Garcelon as marshal, and W. R. Cornell and W. F. Hovey as assistants. Simon P. Doty was president of the day and many of the citizens and veterans already returned took part. A banquet was held at Rider's new stores, after which a crowd of about 5,000 people gathered in front of Rice's Block and impromptu speeches were made by General Allen C. Fuller, General Stephen Hurlbut, Major C. B. Loop, and I. M. Moore. In the evening parties were held at Union Hall and Ames' Hall.

Oris Caswell died in the early part of September.

The County Fair was held in the early part of September, and among the exhibitions was James Kelley's 76 varieties of apples from his orchard of 1,000 trees. S. W. Bristol's pears and grapes. Horses by J. V. Wing, H. D. Waterman, and P. J. Garcelon. Dogs exhibited by Asa Moss.

November, 1865, Luther W. Lawrence was elected county judge. Major Loop, county clerk. E. L. Lawrence, surveyor. W. H. Dunham, superintendent of schools. Enoch Kendall, county treasurer.

Adelphi Hall was completed in November, 1865. The Standard of that time stated that they considered the name a little fancy and rather poor for a hall in a country village.

S. Molony completed his gothic house, costing over $10,000; December, 1865, at that time the most expensive residence in the county. Dr. Soule completed his new residence about the same time (where Irving Terwilliger now lives). During 1865, two frame stores were built by Mr. Rider and a plough factory by S. Longcor.

Adelphi Hall was dedicated by a grand ball on Thanksgiving Eve., 1865. Tickets were $5.00, and none were admitted except on invitation. Seventeen sets danced at one time and the social leaders of the city were present. General Fuller made an address, and the Messrs. Traver of the Julien House served the supper.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED SIXTY-SIX.

A reminder of the time when Belvidere was well provided with wooden awnings, is found in the item that the awning at Coger and Van-wise's grocery store fell down, February, 1866, the posts having been gnawed by horses.

At the corporation election, held March 12, the no-license board was elected by a majority of about 91.

The firm of D. D. Sabin & Co., commenced business March, 1866, in the Adelphi Block.

On Sunday morning, April 1, 1866, a fire broke out on North State Street and several wooden buildings were burned.

March 20, the Kishwaukee still covered with ice. On April 1, 1866, a fire broke out in the Ball Alley on State street about 1 o'clock in the morning and consumed several frame buildings. By forming a line to the river and one or two mud holes, the fire was kept in check.

A base ball club was formed April 19, 1866, with the following officers: Wales W. Wood, president; W. S. Wheeler, vice-president; John C. Neely, secretary; E. H. Talbott, treasurer; J. S. Terwilliger, Chas. H. Fuller, and H. G. King, directors. It was known as the "Mystic Base Ball Club."

The Philharmonic Society held a concert at Adelphi Hall May 7, 1866. The president of the society was W. H. Gilman.

The postmaster in 1866 was J. Nelson Brockway.

Another base ball club known as the "Belvidere Base Ball Club," was organized on the south side of the river, with D. D. Sabin as president.

Considerable excitement was caused among the Irish citizens in 1866 by Fenians in Canada. According to the paper the Irish citizens seemed to be divided on the question, some of them joining the Fenian Brotherhood, and others keeping aloof from the movement.

Belvidere postoffice was designated a money order office in June.

In June the railroad bridge across the Kishwaukee was totally destroyed by fire and after burning about an hour fell into the river. This bridge was built about 1854 and was made of wood, with a large number of iron bolts. The stone work was uninjured.

Fourth of July celebration was held north of town, near General Fuller's. The marshal was P. J. Garcelon and the oration of the day was by General Hurlbut. In the afternoon a large crowd witnessed the ball game by two nines of the Mystic Base Ball Club.

The railroad company did not immediately rebuild the bridge and a meeting of the citizens was called to protest.

Frost about the first of October caused considerable damage, spoiling about 50 per cent of the corn crop and a great deal of broom corn.

After a short time the Mystic and Belvidere clubs joined under the name of the Phoenix, with Major C. B. Loop as president. The grounds were in Dr. Woodworth's pasture lot, south of the river, a few rods above the bridge.

The State Street sewer was reconstructed in 1866. Previous to that time it was built of planks, which became very much rotted; the contract was awarded to Wm. Haywood and L. O. Gilman.

In October, John Plane placed a handsome iron fence on the South State Street side of his premises, being the only one in Belvidere.

Rev. Mr. Cooper held select school in the brick block on Mechanics Street, above the old bank.

L. O. Gilman was elected sheriff November 7, 1866, and Stephen Hurlbut, representative, Daniel E. Foote, coroner.

John R. Gough lectured in the Presbyterian Church December 7th.

The corner stone of the South Baptist Church was laid December 6th.

In December, Union Hall was partitioned in the center, one suite being occupied by Wales W. Wood as offices and the other by Wm. R. Dodge.

Silvester Tripp raised a Chester hog two years old and weighing over 1,100 pounds.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED SIXTY-SEVEN.

On January 24, 1867, occurred the heaviest snow since 1842.

The Belvidere Northwestern was established in January, the editor being E. H. Talbott.

Clara Barton, the noted nurse during the Civil War, lectured at the Presbyterian Church in February.

Wendell Phillips spoke in Adelphi Hall February 12, on the subject, "Reconstruction."

Wales W. Wood was appointed master in chancery in place of J. S. Hildrup, who resigned, in February, 1867.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED SIXTY-NINE.

Velocipedes being ridden by the men.

Business changes, John & W. Gray bought out Pearsall & Terwilliger; Gage & Fuller have sold out their crockery line to W. W. Fuller and are keeping a stock of hardware; I. T. Witbeck has become a member of the firm.

Among the advertisements are: H. Cunningham, Jr., hardware; Dr. George Peal, drug store, opposite Adelphi Hall; D. D. Sabin & Co., dry goods, Adelphi Hall building; Greenlee Bros. & Co., hardware. Gen. Hurlbut was nominated for minister to Bogota. Union Hall being built.

Petroleum V. Nasby lectured April 24, 1869.

Chas. Tripp was experimenting on a velocipede worked by hand.

May 11, 1869, apple and cherry trees blossoming in abundance.

"Mr. Doty (May 25) has raised the frame of his new hotel located on the flats. This building, we suppose, is the first of a row which will extend along there at no distant day. It wanted Doty to pioneer the thing."

Decoration Day was held at the Cemetery. Col. Gilman and Major Loop being in charge. Among the speakers was General Doubleday, who fired the first gun at Fort Sumter on the Union side.

Forepaugh's circus exhibited in Belvidere, June 16.

June 15, "The Board of Trustees have caused several lamps to be placed along our streets, which we suppose will do duty on dark nights, 1869, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, of them to eight or ten feet high.

The Boone County Agricultural Society, President, Geo. W. Gales, Vice-president, Geo. H. Bond, Secretary and Treasurer, A. E. Jettie.

Fourth of July, 1869. President, General Euler. Orator, J. S. Hildrup. Marshal, R. E. Osgood. The procession was held in the morning, a contest of fire engines from Rockford and Harvard in the afternoon, and fireworks in the evening.

The Winnebago Fire and Hose Companies, including about seventy-five firemen in uniform, marched in the procession. The exercises were held in a grove of young oaks on the premises of Mr. Hollister, near the railroad culvert on the south side. Anvils were fired and bells were rung very early. About 2,500 people were present, and the day was fine and quite cool. Slater's Cornet Band, and a band from Poplar Grove, furnished the music.

The week before June 22 was very wet, causing a freshet in the river and did considerable damage to crops.

The paper suggests that the citizens trim off the lower branches of their shade trees along the streets, and leaving it to the cows to cheer them off.

This year, 1869, the hay crop was heavy, and oats good, wheat and rye less than the average, corn only fair, potatoes good. Wages for farm help, during harvest, averaged from $2.50 a day, sometimes $3.00.

A county map was gotten up in 1869 by Thompson & Co.

A new school house was contracted for on the school grounds at a slight distance from the old building on a spot made vacant by the removal of the Primary Building, a two-story frame, 30 by 60 by 24 feet high.

The brick school house was also considerably improved. The directors at this time were B. N. Dean, D. D. Sablin, and Chas. Abbe.

Boone County Fair receipts for 1869, $3,000, which was $1,000 greater than any previous fair.

The basement of the Presbyterian Church was furnished off this fall and divided into rooms. M. G. Leonard had charge of the work.

The fall, during October, was unusually cold. Four prisoners escaped from the county jail November 1st, by sawing out the upper portion of one of the bars.

Election held November 2, 1869. Luther W. Lawrence was elected county judge, C. B. Loop, county clerk, L. O. Gilman, county treasurer, W. H. Dunham, County Superintendent, Jesse S. Hildrup and Westel W. Sedgwick, delegates to the constitutional convention.

Asa Moss was experimenting with new kinds of potatoes.

Rev. N. W. Minor engaged as pastor of the North Baptist Church. Previous to this he had been pastor in Springfield for fifteen years.

The Mississippi Valley National Telegram Co., removed its office to the room over Stewart's clothing store. M. D. Williams was manager. The rate of a message to Chicago was twenty cents.

Union Hall was opened December 25, 1869, by a grand sociable and oyster supper. J. S. Hildrup presided and W. W. Wood made the address.

Mr. Hildrup in the constitutional convention was appointed upon the committee on finance, banks and currency, and congressional apportionment.

Col. Gilman was appointed U. S. deputy marshal.

Dr. Lake was experimenting with a grape known as the "Belvidere."

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED SEVENTY.

January 16th, there was a heavy thunder shower. The next day was the coldest thus far of the season, about ten degrees below.

The Young Men's Christian Association, February 5, 1870, elected officers, President, S. S. Fisk, Vice-president, Dr. D. E. Foote, Secretaries, A. S. Downs and Jas. Goodman. The society appears to have had several meetings before this time.

Anna E. Dickinson gave a lecture on the Mormon question in Union Hall, February 8.

This year the government officials buying horses for the U. S. cavalry spent several days in Belvidere, having their headquarters at Trusdell's stable, and about thirty horses were purchased, from $90.00 to $100.00 apiece.

March 15, 1870. Heavy snows.

At the corporation election, several colored citizens voted, evidently for the first time, under the Fifteenth Amendment.

John Plane resumed specie payment, being the first resumption of cash in Belvidere.

The following table was furnished to the "Standard" by A. F. Moss.

Year	Wheat		Oats
	Sowing	Reaping	Sowing	Reaping
1857—April 20	Aug. 4	May 4	Aug. 13
1858—March 29	July 23	April 23	July 23

1869—April 8	Aug. 2	April 20	July 29

Average commencement of sowing wheat, April 1st. Reaping wheat, July 21st. Average time of growth, 111 days.

Average commencement of sowing oats, April 12. Reaping oats, July 26. Average time of growth, 104 days.

March 22nd, ice still in the river.

April, 1870, a freshet in the river broke through the Baltic Mill dam, about 20 feet wide.

Union religion meetings were held in Union Hall during April, being attended by a large audience.

A petition being circulated asking the Board of Trustees to purchase some hand fire engines.

April 13th, Osgood & Ellison's livery stable near the Julien House was burned. The flames also destroyed Fellows & Hare's planing mill and a large pile of wood. On account of the fact that there were no fire engines in town the fire was difficult to handle. The article speaks of the burning of the old Union Hall Block, about 1860.

Wm. Derthick speared a pickerel in the Kishwaukee, weighing 13¾ pounds.

Capron.—Messrs. Stow & Tripp keeping store. A number of citizens leaving for Kansas. Mr. Cornwell's cheese factory in full blast, with Frank Robinson in charge.

The board of trustees considering as to the organization of a fire department.

The proposed constitution of the state was published in the issue of May 24, 1870.

George Francis Train lectured in Union Hall, May 28.

Decoration Day services were held at the cemetery. It was stated that about twenty-nine soldiers were then buried there. General Fuller was chairman and W. W. Wood, Mr. Rollins, and L. W. Lawrence addressed the meeting.

May, 1870, an arbor-vitae hedge was set along the main road in the cemetery, a well dug and other improvements made.

From a short history of Belvidere by Joseph H. Hills, of Chicago, in the issue of May 31, 1870, we take the following:

The last Indians went away November, 1835. They were Pottawatomies under their old chief, "Monomonic," and were about seven families, composed of about seventy people.

Simon P. Doty came from Rochester, N. Y., June 10, 1835. Dr. Whitney, the same date, from Yates County, N. Y. About the same time came Cornelius Cline, Timothy Caswell and family, John K. Towner and family, and Albertus Nixon. In the spring of 1836, came Oliver Hale, Obadiah Sands, Cephas Gardner, and Mat Molony. In 1837 came McDougal, in 1838, John M. Glasner, and Wm. H. Gilman. The four corners at State and Mechanics Streets were laid out by Doty and Nathaniel Crosby with a common square in 1836. Mr. Doty built the first house, which now (May 31, 1870) stands on the raise of ground in the rear of Union Hall. It was a frame building, 24 by 18 feet. In 1839 Mr. Doty was on the southwest corner, Alexander Neely on the northeast, Joel Walker on the northwest, and a cellar on the southeast of the "four corners."

In 1850 Belvidere had about 1,000 inhabitants, in 1870 about 5,000.

Some business firms then here were:

Dry goods, Ira Wilson, established in 1856. Gage, Fuller & Witbeck, groceries. E. T. Gage was for a number of years with Ira Witbeck in the dry goods business. C. H. Fuller was with Waterman from 1863 to 1866, when they sold out to Greenlee Bros., with whom he remained for about two years, when he formed a partnership with Mr. Gage. Mr. Witbeck came from Chicago, being a brother to a prominent lumber dealer of that city. Geo. Bement, jeweler, came to Belvidere about 1851. J. R. Williams located in Union Block, next door to the postoffice, came to Belvidere in 1845, now in the clothing business. American House now kept by F. A. McIntyre, late of Chicago, for a number of years kept by Wm. Anderson.

June, 1870, Capron building a new school house at a cost of about $3,500.

Little Thunder Mill was built by I. D. Miller in 1852, and sold to the McKay Bros. in 1870.

Among the teachers in the North Side School were the following: Principal, J. C. Zinser, assisted by Grace Sharp, Mamie Devlin, Flossie Ayer, Dove Greenlee, and Nellie Gilman. On the South Side were the following: Principal, Prof. J. G. Lucas, assisted by Carrie Longley, Mamie Herriek, Alice Warren, Miss Dawson, Ella Hollenshead, Miss Morris, Miss Swail, Ida Sylvius, Mary Hakes, Miss Adams, Miss Richardson, and Grace Hollenshead.

The auction of the Highland lots was held in May and June of 1893.

The "Banner," published by Grant C. Whitney ceased publication in June, 1893. It was formerly a Capron paper which Mr. Whitney moved to Belvidere.

Rev. Patrick Maguire, for thirty years pastor of St. James Catholic Church in Belvidere, died in Chicago, June 19, 1893. He was largely responsible for the building of the present Catholic Church and was an active worker. He held services in several other cities in the vicinity. Father Maguire was born in County Sligo, Ireland, in 1835. He was ordained a priest at Maynooth College, Dublin. The funeral procession was a mile long.

W. R. Eddy, a former Belvidere boy, whose father was a minister here, has since been an authority on weather conditions and kindred subjects, particularly with relation to observations taken from kites.

Miss Bessie Leach, of Belvidere, was principal of the Capron school for several years. She married Frank Priddy, a prominent lawyer of Adrian, Mich., September, 1893.

Marion L. Head succeeded A. Vance as postmaster at Capron in 1893. At Poplar Grove, E. H. Burnside succeeded J. W. Warren, and at Caledonia, William Cunningham succeeded Robert Wilson.

During 1893, a large number of the Belvidere people attended the World's Fair at Chicago.

Timothy Caswell and his wife moved to Houston about 1863. They visited in Belvidere in 1893.

E. L. Lawrence died in California, September 16, 1893, where he had gone for his health. Mr. Lawrence came to Boone County in 1837 as a boy of four years, with his father, John Lawrence, and the family, who settled on Bonus. Mr. Lawrence was county surveyor for several terms and enlisted in the war, where he arose to the position of first lieutenant. He also held several other offices and was one of the prominent citizens of the county. He married Mary E. Lawrence in 1856 and they had five daughters.

Frank R. Smiley died September, 1893, aged 47. He was a prominent business man in Belvidere and a member of several of the lodges.

A new school building was built at Pearl and First Streets in the fall of 1893.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Keeler celebrated their golden wedding, January, 1894. They both came from New York, and settled in the early days on Squaw Prairie.

Postmaster Whitman was succeeded in January, 1894, by C. N. Smith.

In January, 1894, the National, when running nearly full strength, employed about four hundred hands.

In 1894, complaints began to circulate about the shabbiness of the Northwestern railroad depot at Belvidere and a new one was petitioned for.

D. B. Pettit, Sr., died February 8, 1894. He was born in Wayne County, Pa., in 1822, and after living for a short time in New York, came to Illinois at an early date. He was a prominent Methodist worker and a successful farmer on Bonus. He is said to have taught the first school in Belvidere.

Considerable controversy was had in 1894 as to the hitching posts for teams along State Street, and the council finally determined that posts should be furnished at the expense of property owners under the direction of the street supervisor.

In 1894, a contest of considerable enthusiasm was had for members of the North Side School Board, it being the first time that ladies ran for that office. A. C. Fassett was elected, practically unanimously, being on both tickets, and Mrs. H. J. Sherrill and Mrs. R. G. Whitman were elected members. The ladies came out ahead in the contest.

A very serious storm took place the latter part of April, 1894, which was particularly destructive on the river road, where several barns were blown down and much damage done.

D. D. Sabin, who had been in the dry goods business for twenty-eight years, retired from active membership, May 14, 1894, being succeeded by his two sons, Sidney and Eugene.

Rev. William Craven was pastor of the Methodist Church this year and for several years before. His daughter, Miss Jane Craven, married Dr. Chas. Scott and still lives in Belvidere.

In November, 1894, Wales W. Wood was elected county judge, Wm. Bowley, county clerk, Cassius M. Church, county treasurer; Floyd Smith, sheriff; Levi R. Fitzer, county superintendent, and Louis A. Warren, county surveyor.

Charles Greenlee died February 8, 1895, in Belvidere, aged 64. He was born in Scotland and was a brother to Geo. and John Greenlee.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Ransom celebrated their golden wedding in February, 1895. Mr. Ransom was postmaster for four years and assistant in the postoffice for twelve years. He was in the drug business for nearly forty years on the north side.

The first meeting of the newly elected city council was held May 20, 1881, under the new city organization. The mayor was William D. Swail. The aldermen from the first ward were F. H. E. King, A. L. Livingston, and Robert Parkhill; the aldermen from the second ward were John Greenlee, William Haywood, and J. S. Terwilliger. A. E. Jenner was city clerk.

C. B. Dean, city attorney, and G. W. Murch, city treasurer. The mayor made an address in which he stated that rigid economy was necessary, as the city had on hand only $800 in the general fund, besides $1,000 for street improvement. It also appears that the city had no calaboose at that time for the imprisonment of minor offenders. One has since been provided under the city hall.

HAPPENINGS OF THE LAST TEN YEARS.

During the ten years just passed, Belvidere has made considerable advance toward becoming a large city. Ten years ago State Street in the spring was a sea of mud and required much care to cross dry footed. It is now paved its full length, in the business portion being asphalt in the center with brick gutters, and in the residence portion being macadamized. The Fair Cement Company has done most of the macadamizing in Belvidere and the stone has come largely from the "Electric Stone Quarry" west of town. Pearl Street has been macadamized, as has also East Lincoln Avenue. West Lincoln Avenue is also being paved at present. The cement walks on the business portion of State cover almost its entire length and most of the hitching posts have been taken down. There is a great change since the wooden awnings were considered the proper thing in front of the stores. The approach to State Street bridge has been raised and cemented. The Y. M. C. A., has been built, through the generosity of Deacon Henry W. Avery. A fine red brick block at the corner of Pleasant Street has been put in by Messrs. Wright, Balliet and Hopkins. On the westerly side of the street have been built Willard Longcor's row of small stores on the flats, the Leader Block. Omar Wright's artistic little coal office near the railroad track, the fine new front to the Second National Bank and the reconstruction of the Rider Block. On the east side, the National has put in the finest stretch of lawn in the city, in front of its factory, with beds of geranium, an exhibition of public spirit which deserves much credit. The Pease Block has been improved and the Foote Block reconstructed into a fine office building. The Murch & Pettit Block was also remodeled for the Farmer's Bank. As to churches, the Swedish Church and the German Evangelical Church have been built, and the Episcopal Church has been covered on the outside with stucco, so as to present a very artistic appearance, and the Presbyterian Church has been redecorated on the inside and painted. The National Sewing Machine factory built a large addition west of Main Street with a new foundry building and another large building. The corset and piano factories have been located in Belvidere and the Columbia Heating Company has been located and afterward burned. The Main Street bridge has been carried away, and the State Street bridge and the bridge near the Catholic cemetery have been reconstructed. A number of fine new residences have gone up, notably those of Judge R. W. Wright, and Mrs. Catherine Rhinehart. Death has claimed a number of prominent citizens, including Gen. Allen C. Fuller, John J. Foote, Omar H. Wright, Sr., and Deacon Henry W. Avery. Among the older settlers who have passed away during this time have been Lorenzo McDougal, Asher E. Jenner, George Greenlee, Sr., Harlyn Shattuck, Devillo Hale, William McBride, George Newell, Mrs. Glasner and Mrs. Page. Belvidere has affirmatively voted on local option and the two school districts have voted on the question of school consolidation twice, but against it each time.

Permission to operate the electric line in Belvidere was granted September 6, 1895, to John M. Roach of Chicago and the line was built shortly afterward. The first hydraulic survey of the city was made by J. W. Alvord, a Chicago expert. E. E. Spooner was in charge of the construction of the city water service. William Marean has been city engineer for a considerable time past. The gas plant was built in 1895.

BIOGRAPHICAL

CHAPTER XX.

THE PART OF BIOGRAPHY IN GENERAL HISTORY—CITIZENS OF BOONE COUNTY AND OUTLINES OF PERSONAL HISTORY—PERSONAL SKETCHES AR-RANGED IN ENCYCLOPEDIA ORDER.

The verdict of mankind has awarded to the Muse of History the highest place among the Classic Nine. The extent of her office, however, appears to be, by many minds, but imperfectly understood. The task of the historian is comprehensive and exacting. True history reaches beyond the doings of court or camp, beyond the issue of battles or the effects of treaties, and records the trials and the triumphs, the failures and the successes of the men who make history. It is but an imperfect conception of the philosophy of events that falls to accord to portraiture and biography its rightful position as a part—but no unimportant part—of historic narrative. Behind and beneath the activities of outward life the motive power lies out of sight, just as the furnace fires that work the piston and keep the ponderous screw revolving down in the darkness of the hold. So, the impulsive power which shapes the course of communities may be found in the molding influences which form its citizens.

It is no mere idle curiosity that prompts men to wish to learn the private, as well as the public, lives of their fellows. Rather is it true that such desire tends to prove universal brotherhood; and the interest in personality and biography is not confined to men of any particular caste or vocation.

The list of those, to whose lot it falls to play a conspicuous part in the great drama of life, is comparatively short; yet communities are made up of individuals, and the aggregate of achievements—no less than the sum total of human happiness—is made up of the deeds of those men and women whose primary aim, through life, is faithfully to perform the duty that comes nearest to hand. Individual influences upon human affairs will be considered potent or insignificant, according to the standpoint from which it is viewed. To him who, standing upon the seashore, notes the ebb and flow of the tides and listens to the sullen roar of the waves, as they break upon the beach in seething foam, seemingly chafing at their limitations, the ocean appears so vast as to need no tributaries. Yet, without the smallest rill that helps to swell the "Father of Waters," the mighty torrent of the Mississippi would be lessened, and the beneficent influence of the Gulf Stream diminished. Countless streams, currents and counter currents—sometimes mingling, sometimes counteracting each other—collectively combine to give motion to the accumulated mass of waters. So is it—and so must it ever be—in the ocean of human action, which is formed by the blending and repulsion of currents of thought, of influence and of life, yet more numerous and more tortuous than those which form the "fountains of the deep." The acts and characters of men, like the several faces that compose a composite picture, are wrought together into a compact or heterogeneous whole. History is condensed biography; "Biography is History teaching by example."

It is both interesting and instructive to rise above the generalization of history and trace, in the personality and careers of the men from whom it sprang, the principles and influences, the impulses and ambitions, the labors, struggles and triumphs that engross their lives.

Here are recorded the careers and achievements of pioneers who, "when the fulness of time had come," came from widely separated sources, some from beyond the sea, impelled by divers motives, little conscious of the import of their acts, and but dimly anticipating the harvest which would spring from the sowing. They built their primitive homes, toiling for a present subsistence while laying the foundations of private fortunes and future advancement.

Most of these have passed away, but not before they beheld a development of business and population surpassing the wildest dreams of fancy or expectation. A few yet remain whose years have passed the allotted three-score and ten, and who love to recount, among the cherished memories of their lives, their reminiscences of early days.

[The following items of personal and family history, having been arranged in encyclopedic (or alphabetical) order as to names of the individual subjects, no special index to this part of the work will be found necessary.]

ACKERMAN, Fred, farmer and dairyman, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. Boone County has been greatly benefited by its citizens of German birth, who, like the subject of this sketch, have brought to bear upon the problems of life those principles of industry, thrift and honesty which make for good citizenship everywhere. Mr. Ackerman was born near the river Rhine, in Baden, Germany, December 24, 1868. His father, George Ackerman, and his mother, who before her marriage was Lena Sexoner, were descended from old German families. The former is still living in his native land, the latter died there when she was about fifty years old. They had nine children of whom the immediate subject of this sketch was the fourth born. He spent his childhood and youth and gained his education in the Fatherland, and in the fall of 1885, when he was not yet quite seventeen years old, sought a new home in America beyond the sea. Landing at Baltimore, Md., he came thence direct to DeKalb County, Ill. There, for a year, he was employed by the month at farm labor, when he came to Boone County, and during the succeeding six years was employed on the farm of John Sexoner, of the family of his mother, who had settled in Bonus Township. At the expiration of that time he was able to engage in farming on his own account, which he did in that township as a renter.

After operating a rented farm three years, he determined to buy a farm. In March, 1897, he bought his present farm of one hundred acres in Flora Township. The land was well improved and was outfitted with good buildings. He has given his attention to general farming and made somewhat of a specialty of dairying. Having applied the best methods to the operation of his farm and conducted his business on a basis that has won for him the confidence of his fellow townsmen and the best people generally throughout the county, he has achieved a success which has given him standing among the well-to-do farmers of his vicinity.

Mr. Ackerman married, in Belvidere Township, May 31, 1894, Miss Mary Brohammer, also a native of Baden, Germany, born February 28, 1874, a daughter of Christian and Mary (Spat-halt) Brohammer, the last mentioned of whom is deceased. Mrs. Ackerman, who was the eldest of the five children of her parents, came to America in the spring of 1892. She has borne her husband three children, named in the sequence of their births: Fred G., Allie L. and Lillie F. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman are devoted members of the German Methodist Church. Mr. Ackerman has in many ways demonstrated his public spirit, taking a deep interest in the progress and prosperity of the community in which he lives.

ALLEN, Darwin W., (deceased), one of the oldest, most worthy and wealthiest of the early residents of Belvidere, Ill., was born at Deerfield, Oneida County, N. Y., November 15, 1817, a son of John P. and Phoebe (Brown) Allen, natives of New York and Vermont, respectively, both born in 1792. The subject of this sketch was reared on a farm, receiving his education in the country schools. At the age of twenty-one years he was married to Mary Rix, and in 1850 came to Illinois, settling on a farm four miles south of Belvidere, where the wife died in 1860, leaving two children, Frances and John. The former became the wife of Col. J. Wilson Harper, now of Missouri, while the latter went to California and is now living at Los Angeles. D. W. Allen left the farm and located in Belvidere, where he was married, October 15, 1860, to Ruth Foster, a daughter of Leighton and Clarissa (Rieker) Foster, natives of Maine, who were married in New Portland, Mich., 1833, and located in Belvidere, Ill., in 1852. Mr. Foster was a farmer and settled in Flora Township, just south of Belvidere, his family going to the village for their household provisions. He built a new house, which they occupied until 1864, then selling it and moving into Belvidere, where he lived for a while at leisure. In 1881 he moved to Waverly, Iowa, where he died in 1901 in his ninety-first year, his wife having passed away in 1889 when seventy-six years old. Ruth Allen, a daughter, is the only member of the family residing in Illinois, her two brothers, John R. and Seth L., having gone to Iowa when young men, where the former died at the age of fifty-six years, the latter still being a resident of the vicinity of Waverly. Ruth Allen was twenty-six years old at the time of her marriage, up to 1858 having taught school several terms. She is the sole survivor of the early teachers now living in Boone County. Some of the old houses in which she taught are still standing.

After his marriage Mr. Allen continued farming for six years, just south of the village, and then selling the farm, moved into a house on Pearl Street, buying land and plating a piece of ground called the "D. W. Allen Addition," one of the streets laid out being named Allen Street. In the meantime, in 1852, his parents had come from New York, his father acquiring about one hundred acres of land just south of Belvidere. His father died when sixty-seven years old, and his mother then made her home with the subject of this sketch until her death at the age of eighty-six, the former having lived on what is now Highland Addition on Pearl Street and there passed away. Darwin W.

Allen also owned ground in the business center of the town, on which he erected buildings. He built a three-story brick building on the corner of First and State Streets, which he deeded to School District No. 57, to be used for school purposes, and since his death the school district has received the rental income therefrom.

In early life Mr. Allen was a Democrat in his political relations, but after 1860 acted with the Republican party, which he strongly supported. Although not a church member, he contributed liberally to the South Baptist Church. He was a well read man and, while entertaining positive opinions, enjoyed friendly discussion, having an active and forceful mind that retained its full strength to the last. He was afflicted with some ailment of the heart, but his mental vitality continued unimpaired. Remarkably sociable in disposition and fond of the company of friends, he was still thoroughly domestic in his inclinations. He had an adopted daughter, Lizzie C. Allen, whom he reared from childhood. Mrs. Allen is a lady of amiable character, and greatly respected by all who know her. Miss Allen is a member of Rebeccahs and is active in that order. The Allen home was the old Barney Smith house, built in 1853, and being the first residence erected on what is now Pearl Street in Belvidere. Mr. Allen died August 22, 1905.

ARDERY, Robert F., County Treasurer of Boone County, Ill., and one of the most astute and influential public men in the county, was born in Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 28, 1848. He is a son of James and Agnes (Montgomery) Ardery, natives of that county and State. In 1852 James Ardery located in McHenry County, Ill., buying eighty acres of land, and living there until 1858, when he started for California, spending the entire summer in making the trip overland. He purchased a vineyard in California, whither his family followed him in 1861. He died there in October, 1889, his wife having passed away in June, of the same year. The father was in his eighty-fourth year at the time of his death. They had ten children.

Robert F. Ardery accompanied his mother on her trip to the Pacific Coast, and attended school at Placerville, also when only seventeen years old, working on a fruit farm. In December, 1866, he came back to Illinois via the Nicaragua route, crossing the Isthmus on a mule. In the fall of 1867, he went to Beloit, Wis., where he began to learn the machinists' trade, and in 1869 went to Virginia City, Nev., where he worked for six years as an engineer in the Bonanza Mine. Returning to Illinois in 1874, he located in Blaine and bought one hundred and ninety acres of land in the following year.

On February 21, 1877, Mr. Ardery was married to Ella Conyes, a daughter of Philo and Dianna (Head) Conyes, who was born in Leroy Township, Boone County, and two children, Claude Earl and Alta, have been the issue of this union.

Politically, Mr. Ardery is an active and very popular Republican. He has held the office of Assessor and Supervisor and is now serving as County Treasurer, to which position he was elected November, 1906. In fraternal circles, he is identified with the A. F. & A. M., being a Master Mason and a Knight Templar.

BANKS, George W., farmer and stockraiser, Flora Township, and owner of the elevator at Irene, Boone County, Ill. There is not so wide a distinction between farmers and business men as there was formerly. Indeed, farming is now a business demanding the same degree of ability and the same amount of persistence and systematic application as any other enterprise involving a like investment of capital and results which measure up to the same amount. Hence, it is not uncommon, as in the case of the well known citizen of Boone County whose name is above, to find the farmer and business man combined in one wide-awake individual of ever broadening purposes and strenuous activities.

George W. Banks was born in Franklin Township, DeKalb County, Ill., December 13, 1847, a son of Alfred and Sarah (Foster) Banks, the former a native of Maine and the latter of Massachusetts. In July, 1845, the family came to DeKalb County, Ill., where they lived in Franklin Township until the spring of 1883, when they retired to Belvidere. There Mrs. Banks died in March, 1886, aged seventy-six years. Mr. Banks died in Flora Township, in May, 1888, in the eighty-second year of his age. They were the parents of five children: Charles, Sebastian S., Benjamin F., Sarah and George W. Sebastian S. Banks is represented by a biographical sketch in these pages. Sarah married Parley Roach and died in Franklin Township, DeKalb County, Ill.

The immediate subject of this sketch was reared in his native township and county, his early life being passed in attending the public schools near his home and in acquiring a practical knowledge of farming and stock raising. There he remained until the spring of 1883, when he removed to Flora Township, being then a little more than thirty-five years old. In 1889 he became identified with the grain trade and, in 1896, built the elevator at Irene which has a capacity of twenty-five thousand bushels. Besides this fine business property, he is the owner also of five hundred and thirty-seven acres of valuable land round about Irene.

September 16, 1878, Mr. Banks was married, at Genoa, DeKalb County, to Miss Elva L. Brown, a native of that town and a daughter of James P. and Susan (Pratt) Brown, born January 7, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. Banks are the parents of eight children, whom they named as follows in the order of their birth: Frank, W., Sarah Ida, Alfred J., Herman A., Edward G., Gerson L., Lloyd P. and Raymond L.

BANKS, Sebastian S., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. In the days before the telephone and the electric railways, farming may have been under some circumstances and conditions a dull life. The farmers of the '50s, '60s and '70s were not as closely in touch with the outside world as are most of the farmers of today, and few of them traveled extensively or had adventures or experiences not associated purely with the agricultural life; yet here and there a farmer ventured far from home, adding much to his knowledge of the world. As will be discovered by reading further, the subject of this sketch had in his early life an experience which, if fully and truthfully written, would make an interesting and instructive little volume.

Sebastian S. Banks was born in Piscataquis County, Me., February 24, 1827. His parents were Alfred and Sally (Foster) Banks, the father born in Maine, and the mother in Massachusetts. In July, 1845, when he was about eight years old, the parents came with their family to DeKalb County, Ill., and located in Franklin Township, and there farmed until 1883, where the mother died in March, 1886, when she was seventy-six years old. The father died at the residence of the subject of this sketch in Flora Township in May, 1888, then being in his eighty-second year. They had five children; Charles, Sebastian S., Benjamin F., Sarah and George W. Sarah, who became the wife of Parley Roach, died in Franklin Township, DeKalb County. George W. is represented in this work in a separate biographical sketch.

It was as a boy of eight years that Sebastian S. Banks gained his first knowledge of life in Northern Illinois. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, gaining a rudimentary education in the common schools, and receiving from his father careful and systematic instruction in everything pertaining to farming and stockraising. About the time he attained his majority the spirit of adventure seized him, and obeying the call to "the Slope," went overland to California, driving a team all the way, and for three years was there engaged in mining and prospecting, and in the construction of a road from the source of the Sacramento River to a point in Oregon. After making the return trip on horseback he engaged in farming, wiser in many ways because of his western experiences. Not all of them were pleasant, however, nor all profitable; but as he looks back upon them, he is glad that they were his. For two or three years after his return he was a partner with his brother, Benjamin F. Banks, in the operation of a part of their father's farm. In 1865 he bought one hundred acres of good land in Flora Township, which he improved, and to which he has added from time to time until he now owns two hundred and thirty acres, with fine buildings and modern appliances and machinery—a good, rich farm, well stocked and admirably cultivated, which is as good a dependence as a reasonable man could want.

Mr. Banks married Miss Jane Jeanette Bucklin, at Belyvidere, Ill., March 2, 1871. Mrs. Banks was born in Rushville, Yates County, N. Y., December 14, 1850, a daughter of Allen G. and Sally Ann (Soule) Bucklin. Her father was a native of Massachusetts, and her mother of the State of New York. The latter died in Rushville, N. Y., and the father came to Boone County, Ill., in the fall of 1870, and there lived out his days, dying aged about seventy-five years. Of their eleven children, Mrs. Banks was the tenth in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. Banks have a daughter, Anna S., who married Harry Shane, and a son named Irving S. Banks. Mr. Banks is a public-spirited citizen who takes a thoroughly patriotic interest in the affairs of his township and county.

BARKER, Edmund H., a resident of Boone County, Ill., for more than half a century, and for thirty-three years of that period a highly respected farmer, in Spring Township, where he still lives, was born in Worthington, Hampshire County, Mass., October 8, 1826. His parents were Abijah and Nancy (Caldwell) Barker, who passed their last days in Dalton, Mass., leaving a family of ten children. The subject of this sketch was about ten years old when his father and mother moved to Dalton, Mass., and there he grew to manhood. He was married in Berkshire County, Mass., November 18, 1851, to Harriet M. Cleveland, who was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., August 16, 1832. In the fall of 1854 he came to Boone County, Ill., settling in Belvidere Township, where he lived twenty-one years, when, selling out at the end of this period, he moved to the farm which he now owns in Spring Township. He is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of well improved land, the buildings being substantial and convenient. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Barker, namely: Eva M., wife of John C. Longcor; George E., who died at the age of four years; Fred E. and Etta May. The mother of these children died September 22, 1899, when sixty-seven years old.

Mr. Barker has been long and actively connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, as was his lamented wife. For a considerable period he has acted in the capacity of Superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School at Garden Prairie.

BARRINGER, Edward K., who became a resident of Belvidere, Ill., in 1857, and where he was for many years one of the leading citizens and representative farmers, was born in Albany, N. Y., September 5, 1856, of German ancestry. His parents, Lawrence and Theresa (Keller) Barringer, came singly to the United States in 1844, and were married in Albany, N. Y., locating in the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill. In youth, Lawrence Barringer was a stonemason by trade, but in New York worked on a farm and also in connection with a hay press and grist and plaster mill. He continued farming in Boone County until his death, November 30, 1897, at the age of seventy-two years. Edward K. Barringer is one of the original stock-holders and directors of the Belvidere Creamery, serving as secretary from the time of its organization, for the last six years being treasurer and having detailed charge of its operation. Mr. Barringer, enjoyed the advantages afforded by the public schools and was reared to the life of a farmer. He has a farm of one hundred and twenty acres, lying a little more than two miles east of Belvidere, and mainly devoted to the dairying industry. All the improvements are first class. He was one of the organizers of the Belvidere Creamery, which was incorporated February 18, 1897, with a capital stock of $5,000, the stock-holders, who number 108, being all farmers. Luther Lawrence, its first president, still continues to act in that capacity, and he and Mr. Barringer are the only ones remaining of the original directors.

On April 3, 1884, Mr. Barringer was married to Bertha Hambridge, born in Baltimore, Md., a daughter of Richard Stephen and Jemina Hambridge, who were born in England, married at Shorditch, London, and came to this country in 1840, locating in Belvidere, in 1858. Mr. Hambridge was a professional musician, particularly well skilled as an operator of the pipe organ, of which instrument he was a teacher. He took up his residence in Belvidere in order to assume the position of organist of the Episcopal Church. Mrs. Barringer has three sisters, namely: Emma J., wife of Edward McBride, of Belvidere, Ill.; Mrs. Charles Tibbits, of St. Joseph, Mo.; and Mrs. William Richards, of Belvidere. Mr. and Mrs. Barringer had three children, of whom but one, Lawrence, survives. The eldest son, Edward L., died January 12, 1906, just after passing his twenty-first birthday. He had remained on the home farm where he had decided to live. The second child died in infancy. Mr. Barringer has two brothers and three sisters living.

In politics, Mr. Barringer is a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and has taken an interest in public affairs to the extent of fulfilling the obligations of good citizenship. He never accepted any office except those of Director of the Gould School, District No. 47, and Road Commissioner, occupying the former position efficiently for sixteen years.

BATES, Albert, E., farmer, Boone Township,

Boone County, Ill. Elsewhere in these pages appears a biographical sketch of Samuel Bates containing much material of interest in connection with the career of Isaac Bates, father of Samuel and of Albert E. Bates. In this brief sketch of the life of the well known citizen last mentioned, is included other material touching the life of Isaac Bates, the pioneer, which to a considerable extent completes the notes first referred to.

Albert E. Bates was born in Boone Township, June 19, 1858, a son of Isaac and Phoebe Ann (Tongue) Bates. He passed his boyhood on his father's farm and in the common schools, and worked four years in the shop of his brother Samuel at Capron, acquiring a knowledge of the blacksmith's trade, at which he became an all round workman. Going to O'Brien County, Iowa, he improved a farm a few miles from the town of Sandborn. After having lived there twelve years, he returned to Illinois in 1894 to care for his parents in their declining years, and though he still owns his Iowa farm, he has since that time operated the Bates homestead in Boone Township.

Mr. Bates married Miss Orvetta Spaulding, of Madison, Wis., and a native of that State, March 20, 1882, and she has borne him three children. Their son, Fred W., died aged five years. Their daughter, Doris M., is a member of their household, their daughter Winnifred is a high school student.

The parents of Albert E. and Samuel Bates were natives of Birmingham, England. Isaac Bates was born November 16, 1818, and died May 15, 1894. Phoebe Ann Tongue was born August 18, 1821, and is still living on the old Bates homestead in Boone Township, where she has lived for the past sixty-four years. They were married at Birmingham, England, July 27, 1840, and came to the United States in 1844. Mr. Bates's sister, Ann D., wife of John Halls, had come over with her husband the year before and settled on the farm where William H. Bates now lives. His sister, Fannie A., wife of Joseph Wood, had come also with Mr. Wood, who improved the farm now owned by the Fred Johnson estate. Mrs. Bates's brothers, Samuel and Henry, also came to Illinois, but Samuel later went to Philadelphia, where he became a manufacturer of edged tools, and Henry soon returned to Canada. Mary Bates, another of Isaac's sisters, who had married William Willotts, settled on the Ray farm, which is now marked by the Ray school house. Mr. Bates and some of his relatives took up land in common, and they and their families lived in the double log house until, one after another, they located on farms acquired by each separately. In time Mr. Bates became the owner of three hundred and twenty acres of as good land as is included within the boundaries of Boone Township.

Isaac Bates and some of the others mentioned were mechanics. (See sketch of Samuel Bates.) He was so expert a workman when he was only eighteen years old, that he was given a place as foreman. Much in detail concerning his operations at Beloit and in Boone County will be found in the article just referred to. He was the only one of the English settlers here mentioned who lived permanently in the township, though in 1868 he and his wife returned to England for a short time, coming back more than ever satisfied with America and its opportunities. He helped organize Boone Township and the first township election was held in the double log house above mentioned. Later, township elections were held in his more modern residence, which was erected in 1861, when and for some time later it was considered the finest house in the township. The lumber of which it was constructed Mr. Bates hauled forty miles from Kenosha, Wis., where he found a market for wheat and other produce, which he took to that point by the wagon load. It is said that, at one time or another, he filled every township office. Among his earliest public positions were those of Township Clerk and Township Trustee. He passed his declining years on his homestead, which has for some time been operated by his sons. His widow is, with the possible exception of Mrs. Milliken, the only pioneer of her time still living in the township.

Isaac and Phoebe Ann (Tongue) Bates had six sons and one daughter. William H. owns and operates the Halls homestead. Charles, who has never married, lives with his mother on the family homestead. Frederick J. is farming at Allison, Butler County, Iowa. Samuel is represented in a separate biographical sketch in this work. Benjamin is living at Madison, Wis., retired from farm life, but has interests at Mason City, Iowa. Ellen became Mrs. Theodore L. Bowman and died in 1896, aged thirty-nine years. Albert E. is referred to at considerable length above.

BATES, Samuel, dealer in hardware, buggies, wagons, agricultural implements and coal, Capron, Boone County, Supervisor of Boone Township and Chairman of the Boone County Board of Supervisors. This prominent citizen of Boone County is truly a native of the soil—emphatically one to the manor born. His birthplace was within twenty rods of the center of Boone Township, and he first saw the light of day May 11, 1848. Isaac and Phoebe Ann (Tongue) Bates, his parents, were natives of Birmingham, England, and his father was a blacksmith. In August, 1844, they came with their three children to the United States. John Halls, and William and George Willotts, brothers-in-law of Isaac Bates, had come over from Birmingham some time before and had secured land in Boone County, where they were joined by the Bateses. Mr. Halls, who was a brass-founder, had soon after his arrival gone to Boston, Mass., to work at his trade, and there he remained until 1862. Returning to Illinois he passed a year or two on his farm, then went back to Boston to work again as a brass-founder. William and George Willotts, who were blacksmiths, went to Rockland, Wis., and there operated a shop, but returned to Boone County some time before 1870. George was killed by a runaway horse, and his farm is now owned by his son, J. S. Willotts. William Willotts sold his property in Boone County about 1871 and went to Nebraska, where he died after having become an extensive land-owner there. Isaac Bates bought government land in 1844 and his son, who is now in possession of it, has the original deed which bears the signature of President James K. Polk. John Halls made his first purchase of land in Boone County of a man named Atkinson—"a Millerite"—who believing that the world would soon come to an end, sold his farm for fifty dollars. It is worthy of note in this connection that the fanatic who thus impoverished himself, soon removed to Chicago, where in time he exemplified the old saying, "a fool for luck," by becoming wealthy. The land bought by Isaac Bates was timber land lying along Beaver Creek. He built a log house on it and, in 1848, after he had made many improvements thereon, he removed to Beloit, Wis., where he lived until 1858. He established a shop in which he did miscellaneous work at his trade but made a specialty of the manufacture of tools for the drilling of artesian wells. The first artesian wells west of Buffalo, N. Y., were drilled with appliances made by him. While giving attention to his farm, he later devoted much of his time to ironing reapers, thus earning considerable money which he invested in land until he came in time to be the owner of three hundred and twenty acres. He continued in this line of contracting until 1866, and from that year until his death he devoted himself exclusively to farming. He was a good business man, economical, but a believer and investor in substantial improvements. He planted a grove of ten thousand ash trees, in which he took great pride. It was the finest grove in the county, and widely known as a landmark in Northern Illinois. He erected on his farm good buildings of all kinds, and his house was, in its time, a fine residence, easily the best in the township, while his barn was the largest in Boone County. He engaged extensively in grain growing and hog raising and bought cheap land whenever opportunity offered, one of his purchases having been in Iowa. He died in May, 1894, aged seventy-six years. His widow, who is living on the old homestead with her son Charles, has attained the advanced age of eighty-nine years. A hater of slavery, Isaac Bates, after he came to America, became a Whig and later voted with the Republican party from 1856 until his death. Influential in township affairs, he is said to have held every office within the gift of his fellow townsmen, and to have filled them all with integrity and marked ability. Though not in the modern sense a highly educated man, he read widely and studiously and was well grounded in the Bible and in ancient history, and exceedingly well informed in modern history and current events. It is remembered of him that he was fond of discussing questions of religion and of politics. A consistent observer of the Sabbath, he was liberal enough in his interpretation of his duties in that respect to believe that he would commit no sin in caring for or saving crops or performing other necessary labor on that day. He was an ardent advocate of public improvement and a liberal supporter of all churches and religious work in his vicinity. He was the father of six sons and a daughter: William H. lives in the old Halls home; Charles, a bachelor, is living with his mother on his father's homestead; Frederick J. is a farmer at Allison, Butler County, Iowa; Samuel is the immediate subject of this sketch; Benjamin, a retired farmer, is living at Madison, Wis., and has interests at Mason City, Iowa; Ellen married Theodore L. Bowman, and died aged thirty-nine years in 1896, leaving four daughters; Albert E. operates the old Bates homestead.

January 1, 1863, not yet having reached his fifteenth year, Samuel Bates began learning the blacksmith trade in his father's shop at Beloit, Wis. In July following he went to South Bend, Ind., to work under the direction of his uncle, William Willotts, who was then foreman of the blacksmith shop of the Oliver Chilled Plow Works in that city. There he remained until 1872, when he set up a shop of his own at Capron and began to manufacture plows there, making in some years as many as one hundred. He manufactured also many wagons and buggies. His brother, Frederick J. Bates, a woodworker, who had been living at Beloit, Wis., joined him in the enterprise, taking charge of the woodworking department. They employed four of five mechanics and were partners until 1885, when Frederick J. went to Iowa to operate a farm there which had been given him by his father. He has prospered so well that now he is the owner of four hundred acres. The factory at Capron was continued by Samuel until 1898. In the meantime Mr. Bates included in his business the sale of buggies, wagons and agricultural implements. For this new trade he was obliged to erect new buildings, and has continued in it successfully to the present time.

Mr. Bates is known as one of the public men of his township. In August, 1883, he was appointed Supervisor to fill a vacancy, and was elected to that office in 1884 and has been re-elected at every election since. He has several times served as Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and is filling that responsible position at this time. He has served also as a member of the rebuilding and remodeling committee of the County Board. In his political convictions he is a staunch Republican. Besides attending numerous conventions as delegate, and often serving as a member of the township Republican Committee, he has been Chairman of the Boone County Republican Committee, and has at all times and in all possible ways advanced the interests of his party and of his township and county. His public spirit is beyond question and there is no movement looking to the benefit of any considerable number of his fellow citizens that does not receive his hearty support.

December 27, 1871, Mr. Bates married Miss Jennie Willotts, of Mishawaka, Ind., a daughter of Joseph Willotts, a brother of his uncle William Willotts and a resident of that town. They have two daughters; Myrtle is the wife of A. H. Hanson, of Manitowoc, Wis., and Vivian, who is a member of her parents' household, is achieving success as a music teacher. Mr. Bates has advanced to a high place in the Masonic order, having been made a Master Mason at Capron in 1873 and being a member of Masonic bodies at Capron, at Woodstock and at Rockford. He has attended two National Encampments of the order, one at Washington, the other at Chicago. He is a Modern Woodman, also, and has been banker of his lodge for about fifteen years.

BENNETT, Charles, whose farm in Flora township, Boone County, Ill., compares favorably with the best in the country, and who has always taken a prominent part in the affairs of the community, was born in Belvidere, Ill., October 8, 1845, a son of James and Mary (Shattuck) Bennett, natives of Groton, Mass., where they were respectively born, November 25, 1802, May 25, 1805, Joseph Bennett, the father of James Bennett, was born at Groton, Mass., in 1771, and married Sarah Proctor, who was born the same year, Joseph Bennett's father (the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch) was James Bennett, a native of England, who came to America about 1730, and settled at Groton, Mass.

The marriage of James and Mary (Shattuck) Bennett took place January 5, 1830, and in 1839 they came to Illinois, settling first in Belvidere Township, Boone County, and afterwards purchasing a tract of land in Flora Township, and living there several years. Ultimately the family moved to Belvidere, where the father died August 20, 1868, the mother surviving him until January 22, 1892. Seven children composed their family. The subject of this sketch, who was the sixth of this number in order of birth, was brought up in Belvidere, receiving his education in its public schools and those of Chicago, and attending Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. In 1869 Mr. Bennett located in Flora Township, devoting his attention to farming and stock-raising, which has been his lifelong occupation. He is the owner of three hundred acres of land, and the buildings on the property, erected by him, are all of a substantial, convenient and well appearing kind. Mr. Bennett has always been earnestly interested in educational and religious matters, and to some extent in business affairs, being President of the Y. M. C. A. of Belvidere, and of the Belvidere Farmers' and Mutual Insurance Company. He is one of the Directors of the Boone County Agricultural Society, and was formerly President of the Boone County Farmers' Institute.

On December 1, 1868, Charles Bennett was married to Ellen C. Reynolds, who was born in Mukwonago, Waukesha County, Wis., July 9, 1847, and is a daughter of Edward H. and Olive (Bidwell) Reynolds, natives of New York and Massachusetts, respectively. They moved in 1855 from Wisconsin to Belvidere, where both passed the remainder of their lives. By trade Mr. Reynolds was a wagon-maker, and carried on that business in Belvidere for several years, afterward turning his attention to farming. For a considerable period he held the office of Justice of the Peace. He died February 22, 1900, at the age of seventy-six years, his wife having passed away in September, 1874, when about fifty-two years old. They had a family of seven children, of whom Ellen C. was the eldest. Twelve children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bennett as follows: Herman James; Edward Joseph; Ellen Gertrude, wife of William G. McMorran; Jennie Mary, wife of Seymour Williams; Stella; Charles Shattuck; Samuel Augustus; Nettie; Ethel Anna; George Frederick; Esther Olive, and Jay Stephen.

In politics Mr. Bennett has always been a Republican and has taken a leading part in the public affairs of his township, serving as School Trustee and School Director. He and his wife are active members of the South Baptist Church, in which the former was Sunday School Superintendent for a number of years.

BLAKE, Frank J., one of the most energetic and thorough farmers in the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill., was born near Dixon, Ill., April 11, 1868, the son of William and Susan (Hawkins) Blake, natives of Cornwall, England, where they were married, coming to the United States in September, 1853, and proceeding directly to Illinois, where they settled near Rockford and engaged in farming. A short time afterward

William Blake bought a farm in the vicinity of Dixon, whence in 1875 he moved to Boone County, locating in Flora Township, about four miles southwest of Belvidere. There he died in January, 1903, at the age of sixty-six years. He had bought another farm a mile south of Belvidere, where he had intended to locate, and after his death his wife and family moved to that place, where she died February 13, 1898, when sixty-nine years old. William Blake and his wife had eight children, as follows: Mary E., who married Henry Luge, and died at the age of thirty-five years; James, of Flora Township; George, of Belvidere, Ill.; Fannie, who married Ernest Minter, of Chicago; Charley, a farmer one mile south of Belvidere; Anna, wife of Sylvester Bowley, of Flora Township; Frank, and Fred, before mentioned, who farms in Flora Township. On arriving in this country, William had but one dollar, and on arriving in Boone County he had several thousand dollars, accumulated by hard work. His first farm consisted of three hundred and twenty acres, and the one last purchased of one hundred and ten acres, the latter being nearly paid for. His widow took charge of this place and paid off the indebtedness.

Frank J. Blake, remained at home until the time of his marriage, April 11, 1895, when he wedded Kittle Frint, born in Flora Township, a daughter of Norman and Emily (Lines) Frint, the latter also born in Flora Township, two miles south of Belvidere, where her parents had settled in 1877. They had lived in the Township since 1870, coming from Michigan, where Mrs. Frint was born, Mr. Frint being a native of New York. Both parents died in Flora, leaving eight sons and four daughters, all of whom are living. After his marriage Mr. Blake occupied the A. O. Witbeck farm seven years, moving to his present place in 1902. The latter is the late home of John C. Burton, adjoining Belvidere on the south. It consists of forty acres, and is devoted to dairying. This Mr. Blake rents, but he owns eighty acres in Flora Township, between three and four miles from the city, known as "The Robert Swall farm." Mr. and Mrs. Blake have two children, Gertrude and Hazel, aged ten and eight years, respectively.

Politically Mr. Blake is a Republican, but is not active in party contests.

BOGARDUS, Israel Seabury.—Visitors to Boone County, Ill., invariably remark upon the fertility, attractiveness and flourishing condition of its farms, and one of those which attracts special attention is the fine property owned by Israel S. Bogardus, an excellent tract of one hundred and eighty-six acres situated in Boone Township. Mr. Bogardus was born in Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., April 3, 1855, son of Israel R. and Irene (Brown) Bogardus, natives of Cortland County, N. Y., where they were married. The family came to Illinois about 1845 or '46, and secured 300 acres of government land on Bonus Prairie, four miles north of Garden Prairie and ten miles northeast of Belvidere, and this they converted into a first-class farm, selling out in 1868 to move to Belvidere Township, one and one-half miles northwest of Belvidere. After six years they returned to Bonus Township and here Mr. Bogardus purchased a farm adjoining his original homestead, living on this property until selling out to go to live with his son, Seymour J., who lived in Iowa. He died at the age of seventy-six years, his wife having passed away when Israel S. was but four years old. There were six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bogardus, namely: Henry B., a retired farmer of Belvidere; Stephen, a graduate of the Normal School at Normal, taught a business college at Springfield for twenty years, was later Superintendent of the Public Schools at Springfield, and died at Clinton, Ill., at the age of sixty-two years; Sarah, who married Russell Morgan, retired, of Belvidere; Marian, who married Harlan Andrews, a retired farmer of Syracuse, N. Y.; Israel Seabury, and Seymour J., a farmer of Iowa, whose death occurred in his thirty-eighth year. Israel R. Bogardus was a Republican in politics and served as Supervisor during the Civil War. He was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was one of the organizers of the church of that denomination at East Bonus, in addition to being its main supporter.

Israel Seabury Bogardus attended the schools of Belvidere, and just prior to his father's going to Iowa purchased the latter's farm in Bonus Township, on which he resided until 1889, when he bought his present property, situated nine miles northeast of Belvidere and six miles south of Capron, and which was formerly the property of his wife's family and was known as the old Lamb homestead. On February 23, 1881, Mr.

Bogardus was married to Ella Lamb, who was born on the homestead just described, daughter of Eben G. and Mary (Kelsey) Lamb, the former of Vermont and the latter of New York State. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb were married in Michigan and, in 1840, came to Illinois, settling on 240 acres of government land, which included the present farm of Mr. Bogardus. Mr. Lamb's death occurred in 1888, and his widow survived him until 1901, when she passed away at the age of seventy-one years. Their family was as follows: Mary D., who died in 1873, at the age of twenty-seven years; Jennie A., the wife of James S. Norris, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Payson E., of Brookings County, S. D., a farmer; Ella, Mrs. Bogardus; Florato, who died at the age of twelve years; and Eben H., a grocer at Belvidere. Mr. and Mrs. Bogardus have had one daughter, Mary Irene, who attended the Belvidere High School and the Rockford College, and now resides at home. In his political belief Mr. Bogardus is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Poplar Grove.

BOWEN, Homer L., one of the oldest residents, and a thorough farmer and a prominent citizen of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., was born in Newport, Herkimer County, N. Y., March 9, 1839. His parents were William and Maria (Rix) Bowen, natives of New York and Connecticut, respectively, both of whom died in Herkimer County, N. Y. They had a family of four children. The subject of this sketch, who was the third of this number, was reared in the place of his birth, and lived there until he reached the age of eighteen years, locating in Boone County, Ill., in March, 1857. After working as a farm hand for a few months, he rented land in Flora Township two years, then purchasing a part of the farm on which he now lives. He was married in the same township, September 14, 1859, to Lura M. Rice, a native of the township, where her birth took place June 12, 1841. Mrs. Bowen is a daughter of Waite and Lura (Case) Rice, natives of Litchfield County, Conn., who settled in Boone County, in the summer of 1838, locating in Flora Township (then Fairfield Township), where Mr. Rice purchased a tract of government land in Section 25, on which he followed farming until his death at the age of about thirty-three years, his widow living to be seventy-nine years old. Their famly consisted of one son, who died in childhood, and a daughter, Lura M. Mrs. Lura Rice married as her second husband, Havel S. Smith, in Flora Township in February, 1848. Mr. Smith was one of the oldest settlers of the township, and died November 14, 1907, when nearly ninety-one years old.

S. M. Peabody

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen have always resided on the farm, where they located at the time of their marriage, and where Mrs. Bowen was born. It contains one hundred and fifty-five acres of land, improved with good buildings. They had a daughter, Nellie, who married Fred Hall, and died in Belvidere, Ill., September 22, 1892, leaving one child, Homer, whose home is with his maternal grandparents, and who graduated from DeKalb Normal School. Mrs. Bowen is a woman of considerable literary ability, and takes a great degree of interest in historical matters, being a member of the Boone County Historical Society. Mr. Bowen was treasurer and manager of the Blood's Point Creamery for eighteen years.

Politically, Mr. Bowen has always been a Republican. He has held the office of township collector and assessor, and for many years served as highway commissioner and school director. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America.

BOWLEY, William.—When a public servant combines efficiency, good judgment, conscientiousness and kindness of heart, with popularity, he usually can command almost any office within the gift of his constituents, and none has proven this more thoroughly than William Bowley, the County Clerk of Boone County, who has successively filled that very responsible office since 1894, and never met with any opposition except once, when he was returned with so large a majority that the proportion was seven to one. Having filled the office for so long a time, Mr. Bowley is thoroughly conversant with its every detail and conducts the business as he would a private enterprise, giving his personal supervision to duties other officials leave to subordinates. By nature congenial, courteous and accommodating, every consideration is shown to the public, and those dealing with him and his office feel that there is not another man like him in the service of the people.

Mr. Bowley was born in the county in 1862 and was well educated in the public schools, and has added to the knowledge he there acquired by close observation and intelligent reading. His father was one of the pioneer settlers of Boone County, and was greatly beloved for his good traits of character, many of which his son has inherited. In 1890 Mr. Bowley married Ida Miller, and no little ones coming into their home. Mr. and Mrs. Bowley have adopted three children and reared them as their own, namely: Gussie, now twenty-three; Bessie, now seventeen, and Eldon, now eight. Mr. Bowley is a man of wide charity and never stops to ask whether the object of his kindness is worthy, but assists first, and then generally forgets to make inquiries, believing in keeping the deeds of his right hand a secret from his left. Fraternally, he is a member of the Masons, the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Royal Arcanum. Politically, he is a Republican and a very enthusiastic worker in the party ranks.

BROWN, Martin Isaac, farmer and dairyman, Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill. Among the citizens of Boone County, men of no other nationality take higher rank than do natives of England. The reason for this is obvious, for the Englishman is more truly the brother of the native American than any one except, perhaps, the Scotchman or the Irishman. He simply stayed longer on the other side of the water, and it is comparatively easy for him to become in all essential respects almost like one to the manor born. It should be borne in mind that, if there was ever much prejudice against us in England, very little remains and everywhere in America the worthy Englishman is hailed as a man and a brother.

Martin Isaac Brown was born in Somersetshire, England, April 12, 1848, and was there educated and reared to a practical knowledge of agriculture. One after another, five of his half-brothers and several uncles and cousins, came to the United States, located and sent back glowing reports of the country. Edward Cary, an Englishman, had come to the States, too, and had lived for a time in Boone County. He returned to England, but in 1872 came back to this country. Mr. Brown came with him. For thirteen years after his coming, he worked out as a farm laborer in Boone and Whiteside Counties. In 1901 he bought his present farm on Beaver Creek, four miles west of Belvidere. It consists of one hundred and seventy-two and one-half acres, and is in every way well outfitted for profitable operation. The house and barn on it were built in 1897 by Ollie Whittle. For this property Mr. Brown paid sixty dollars an acre. He devotes much of his land to general farming, but keeps about twenty-five cows, selling his milk at the condenser.

Mr. Brown married Flora M. Burton, October 6, 1881. Miss Burton was a daughter of Hiram and Minerva (Payne) Burton, former residents of Bonns Township, where they owned a farm which is now the home of their son Hermus. Mr. Burton receives separate notice in another biographical sketch. He is now living at Belvidere, aged about eighty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are the parents of the following named children: George, Bertha, Elsie and Grace, who are members of their household, and Laura, who is the wife of Victor Lawson, a farmer in Spring Township. Politically Mr. Brown is a Republican. As a citizen he takes a helpful interest in all local affairs. Before he bought his present farm he for a time owned and operated a farm in Bonns Township.

BROWN, Willis Simpson, general superintendent of the National Sewing Machine Company at Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., is one of the substantial, conservative business men of this locality, and has attained his present prominence through his own energy and foresight. Mr. Brown was born at Kelloggsville, Ashtabula County, Ohio, January 31, 1855, a son of William and Mary Fletcher (Kinnear) Brown, the former of whom was born in Center County, Pa., December 24, 1816, and the latter in the same locality September 23, 1820. Until he was fifteen years of age, Mr. Brown attended the district school at Kelloggsville, but at that time left for Austinsburg, Ohio, where he took up a course at Grand River Institute under Professor Tuckerman. After remaining there for two years, he went to Geneva, Ohio, and continued his studies in mechanical engineering at the Geneva Normal School for another two years, but left just before his graduation to take a place with his father, who was a contractor and builder on a large scale.

In 1874, when the family removed to Geneva, Mr. Brown accompanied them and soon became connected with the Geneva Sewing Machine Company of that place. Six years later he removed to Erie, Pa., and accepted a position as tool-maker, later becoming superintendent with the Noble Sewing Machine Company. In 1884 he connected himself with the Thompson-Houston Electric Company, at Lynn, Mass., and was directly under Elihu Thompson, the great electrician. Later, when he was offered the position of superintendent of a branch of the New England Brush Company, of Boston, Mass., he severed his connection with the former concern, but within a few months left the latter to embark in business for himself at Friendship, N. Y., with George A. Maye and Stephen A. Holbrook, of Belmont, N. Y. In 1888 he came to Belvidere to accept a position with the June Manufacturing Company, where he has since continued, remaining with that concern when it was merged into the National Sewing Machine Company. When he was first connected with this company it was as expert tool-maker, but he was soon advanced to the position of foreman of the tool room. His unusual capacity and ability being recognized, he was rapidly promoted to be master mechanic and in 1894 was made superintendent, and finally was made general superintendent of the entire establishment, which position he continues to occupy to the entire satisfaction of his employers and fellow employes. Mr. Brown has a very thorough and practical knowledge of every detail of the work, and is therefore peculiarly well fitted for his position.

On February 20, 1877, Mr. Brown was married to Lillian Carine Pettey, at Geneva, Ohio, and the following children have been born to them: Richard Ralph, born at Geneva, December 6, 1879; Elizabeth May, born at Erie, January 20, 1884; Mollie, born at Friendship, April 4, 1887; Willis Simpson, Jr., born at Belvidere, February 21, 1890; Byron Pettey, born at Belvidere, June 6, 1894. In politics, Mr. Brown is a Republican, and fraternally is a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter No. 90, R. A. M.; Crusader Commandery, No. 17, Rockford, Ill., K. T.; Tehala Temple A. A. O. N. M. S., and Adeline Chapter No. 118, O. E. S. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have a delightful home at No. 954 East Lincoln Avenue, Belvidere, where they dispense a charming hospitality to their many friends.

BUCK, Clinton W., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. Formerly, any man, however ignorant or well equipped, who plowed, planted, harrowed and garnered, was by grace called a farmer. The farming of today rests as truly upon scientific principles as does the work of the miner or of the chemist, and a glance at a census report would convince the most casual investigator that farming is the greatest business of the age, not only because all other kinds of business would perish without it, but because it is, in fact, the largest industry now commanding the devotion of any class of our people. One of the scientific and successful farmers of Boone County is the gentleman whose name is the title of this brief article.

Clinton W. Buck was born on a farm in Erie County, Pa., April 4, 1851, a son of Truman and Eliza (Drown) Buck, natives of the State of New York. In 1853, when he was about two years old, he was brought by his parents to Winnebago County, Ill., where for about two years he lived in Cherry Valley. Then his father settled on Section 18, Flora Township, on the farm where Clinton W. now lives. There his father died aged about sixty-six years, and his mother aged about seventy-three years. Of their eleven children, he was the ninth in order of birth. Reared to manhood on the farm which has been his home since he was four years old, he early acquired a practical working knowledge of general farming and stock-raising, meanwhile gaining a practical education in the common school. His life has been a busy and successful one, and he is now the owner of one hundred and seventy-five acres of improved and productive land, on which he has erected up-to-date buildings which would be a credit to any farm in the county.

March 20, 1872, Mr. Buck married Miss Clara L. Vincent, who was born in Wisconsin, March 18, 1854, a daughter of Thomas and Charlotte (Smith) Vincent. Thomas Vincent was born in Canada, while his wife was a native of England. They both died in Livingston County, Ill., the latter in January, 1876, aged forty-two years. This worthy couple had eleven children of whom Mrs. Buck was the second in order of birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Buck have had thirteen children, eleven of whom are living. Josie I. and one son having died in infancy. Lydia M. is the wife of William Gnakon; Effie B. married Thomas Atkin; Stella J. is the wife of Henry Cassidy; Flora E. married William Baxter; Nellie F. is Mrs. William Stupfel; and Clara E. married Elmer Bates. The remaining living children are Clinton R., Earl C., Emice E., David A. and Delbert W. Mr. Buck is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and devoted to the beneficent principles of that great order. As a public-spirited citizen he takes an active and helpful part in all local affairs, lending his influence to and advancing to the extent of his ability such measures as he deems beneficial to the welfare of any large class of his fellow citizens.

The reader's attention is called to a sketch of Truman Buck, which appears in an adjoining section of this work.

BUCK, Truman, (deceased), Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. In all parts of our country the people gladly award to the pioneer due praise for the part which he performs in the work of settlement and development. Space here does not admit of any adequate account of the labors and hardships of this class, but the writer cannot pass by an opportunity, in this connection every way appropriate, to pay brief but earnest tribute to men who, like Truman Buck, paved the way for such wonderful progress and prosperity as is today manifest in Northern Illinois.

Born in Otsego County, N. Y., at a place named Fredonia (which must not be confounded with Fredonia in Chautauqua County), May 22, 1811, a son of Joseph S. and Betsy (Eastwood) Buck, he died January 26, 1877, after a very useful if not a very long life. His parents were natives of Vermont and his father lived to be eighty-six years old. The son married Eliza Drown, a daughter of Solomon Drown, of Parsonsfield, York County, Me., and a granddaughter of John Drown, who gallantly risked his life for the cause of the Colonies in the Revolutionary struggle. She was born in Wayne County, N. Y., August 15, 1817, and died May 30, 1892. Her father moved in 1816 to Vermont and in 1832 to Erie County, Pa., and three years later to Seneca County, Ohio. Her mother was Elizabeth Hatch.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Buck married in Erie County, Pa., and in 1853 emigrated to Illinois and located at Cherry Valley, Winnebago County. They came by way of the lakes to Chicago, from which city Mr. Buck drove his own team to his destination. He did not come to Illinois as a stranger at this time, for he had come out before to "view the land." He lived at Cherry Valley two years and in 1855 removed to his farm in Flora Township, new land in the western part of the township which he improved into a fine two hundred and forty acre farm, the same on which his son Clinton W. now lives. Always interested in educational matters, he was instrumental immediately after his settlement in establishing a school which in time became known as the Buck school. As a farmer he was notably successful, and as a citizen he was public spirited and in every sense of the word liberally helpful. He died in 1877, his widow following him in 1892. They had children as follows: Elizabeth L., who is Mrs. Henry R. Van Eppes, of Peoria; Mary J., who is the widow of Abial L. Adams and lives at Belvidere; Eliza, who died soon after attaining to young womanhood; Joseph S., who is engaged in the agricultural implement trade at Sioux Falls, S. D.; William P., a retired farmer living at Rockford; Emma, who is Mrs. George H. Grummon, of Belvidere; Clinton W., a detailed sketch of whom appears in these pages; and Horace, who is a farmer in Pocahontas County, Ia. Mr. and Mrs. Buck were original members of the Baptist Church at Cherry Valley. In politics Mr. Buck was a Republican from the organization of the Republican party until his death.

Abial L. Adams, who married Mary Jane Buck, was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1829 and was drowned in the river at Belvidere July 14, 1859, when he was about thirty years old and less than two years after his marriage. He was a commission merchant and grain buyer, a man of fine abilities who, had he lived, would doubtless have made his mark in the business world. After his death his widow lived in the old family home until after her mother passed away. She inherited a share of the old homestead and, after living for some years at Peoria, returned to Belvidere. Her son, Frank E. Adams, now a retired farmer, formerly occupied a part of the old Buck farm.

BURTON, Hiram, retired farmer, Belvidere, Boone County, Ill. There is something in the soil or atmosphere of Vermont that seems to impart, to men and women born there, some qualities of character which enter most forcefully and abundantly into the making of good citizens. Almost without exception, men from Vermont are thrifty, honest, progressive and patriotic. As farmers the knowledge which they acquired there on farming on a small scale, stands them in good stead when they branch out in big farming on the broad, deep and rich western prairies. The subject of this sketch obtained his first lessons in agriculture in the State mentioned, and from 1856 until a few years ago very successfully operated a farm in Bonus Township.

Hiram Burton, born in Vermont, September 19, 1821, was a son of Stephen and Hannah Burton, natives of that State who, however, ended their days in New York State. They were blessed with a good old-fashioned family of eleven children. Hiram Burton married, July 17, 1853, Minerva Payne, a daughter of Daniel and Mahala (Sweet) Payne. Miss Payne was born in the State of New York, May 29, 1825, her parents, being natives of the Empire State, who settled in Boone County in 1856, and each of whom lived to be eighty-three years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton became the parents of children named as follows: Pluma, who married M. G. Gurney; Flora M., the wife of Martin I. Brown, of Belvidere Township, who receives special mention in a biographical way on another page; Daniel R., living in the State of Washington, and Herman, on his father's old homestead in Bonus Township.

Mr. Burton, now about eighty-seven years old, is living in retirement in Belvidere. His good wife died November 24, 1900. They were life-long members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Since the organization of the Republican party he has voted and exerted his influence for its men and measures.

CARPENTER, Richard V., was born in Chicago, November 22, 1871. He attended the public schools and graduated from the West Division High School in 1891. After being employed for a short time as a chemist at the Illinois Steel Company's plant at South Chicago, he became a teacher of chemistry and physics in the West Division High School and taught there for three years. In September, 1895, he commenced studying law in the Chicago College of Law and was admitted to the bar June, 1897. During the first part of his law course he was employed during the day in the law office of Newman, Northrup & Levinson, and in September, 1896, became connected with the office of the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago. He remained with the election office until the summer of 1899 and has had more or less connection with it up to the present time, in matters of a legal nature. Mr. Carpenter has written a book on the Primary Law and a Digest of the Supreme and Appellate Court decisions concerning elections, and has made a special study of election law. In 1897, while still connected with the election office, he commenced the practice of law with Arthur F. Appleton, and they occupied offices in the Ashland Block and afterwards in the Title and Trust Building. In the spring of 1899, together with Charles S. Kucker and Mr. Appleton, Mr. Carpenter came to Belvidere and continued the practice of law. Since 1903, he has been practicing alone, his practice largely concerning real estate titles, chancery matters and the settlement of estates. During Mr. Carpenter's connection with the Election Commissioners' office, Judge Orrin N. Carter, as County Judge of Cook County, was at the head of the office and, upon Judge Carter's election to the Illinois Supreme bench in 1906, Mr. Carpenter became his assistant, spending about one-third of the time in Chicago. In 1903 he superintended the making of the Tract Indexes for the Boone County Abstract Company, of which he is secretary and manager. He was also secretary of the Columbia Heating Company, when it was owned by the Belvidere stockholders. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Belvidere and was for two years superintendent of the Sunday school. He is a Republican in politics and is secretary of the County Central Committee. He occupies a suite of offices in the Foote Building, with John C. Foote. He is a member of Belvidere Lodge, and of Kishwaukee Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, also of the Royal Arcanum, North American Union, Illinois Historical Society, and the legal fraternity Phi Delta Phi. Aside from his business Mr. Carpenter's hobby has been Illinois history, and he has also spent considerable time in looking up his family history. William Carpenter, the first of the family in America, settled in Rehoboth, Mass., in 1628, and the different generations have moved westward by way of Woodstock, Conn.; Brimfield, Mass.; Clinton and New Hartford, N. Y. His father, Charles H. Carpenter, came to Chicago in 1865, where he engaged in the wholesale carriage goods business. Several of the Belvidere carriage makers, including Messrs. Dawson, Wing and McDowell, remember doing business with the elder Mr. Carpenter.

Mr. Carpenter married, in 1904, at Evansville, Ind., Anna Zuppann, of Warsaw, Ill. They have one son, Richard Albert Carpenter, born in 1905. They live on the North side, in Belvidere. Mr. Carpenter is a member of the Belvidere Library Board and of the North Side School Board.

CASE, David L., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., comes of stock long identified with the beautiful and historical Hudson River country of New York. His parents were born in Rensselaer County, in that State, not far from the thriving city of Troy, and lived there until about 1845, when they settled in Winnebago County, Ill. There his father, Amon Case, died November 2, 1883, aged sixty-seven years, his mother January 10, 1908, aged eighty-three years. They had five children, thus named in the order of their birth: Amy Jane, Charles C., David L., Joseph S., and Sarah E. Amy Jane died aged about three years. Sarah E. is the wife of D. W. Cook, of Beatrice, Neb.

David L. Case, third child of Amon and Mary Jane (Lamb) Case, was born on the old family homestead in Winnebago County, Ill., July 29, 1850. He was brought up to the life and labors of the farm, received his education in common schools and was a member of the household of his parents until in 1873, when he married Miss Alcebe Cottrell. His wife lived only about two years, and he married, February 22, 1877, Miss Emma A. Wheeler, a daughter of Hanson and Esther Augusta (Grout) Wheeler, and a native of Winchendon, Mass., born May 8, 1853. Hanson Wheeler was a native of New Hampshire, his wife was born in Massachusetts. They came to Illinois in 1854 and settled in Winnebago County. There Mr. Wheeler died in 1861, aged forty-five years, his wife in 1896, aged seventy years. They were the parents of seven children named in the order of their birth, Sophia, Carrie, Emma A., Helen, Willet and Cyrus (twins), and Agnes. Mr. Case settled on his present farm in Flora Township in 1873. He has been markedly successful as a farmer and stockraiser and as a business man, now owning nine hundred and twenty-nine acres in Boone and Winnebago Counties.

Politically, Mr. Case is a Republican. His interest in national affairs is equaled only by his interest in all those matters which have to do with the progress and prosperity of his township and county. For fourteen years he filled the office of township assessor of Flora Township with signal ability and fidelity and he has performed the duties of other township offices with no less credit to himself than to his party. He is a devoted member of the Masonic fraternity. He and his wife are communicants of the Free-will Baptist Church and for many years he has been superintendent of his Sunday school, and in all church work they are notably active and helpful.

Mr. and Mrs. Case have two daughters—Elizabeth, who is the wife of Dr. Charles Klontz, of Cherry Valley, Ill., and Mabel Esther, who married Albert Martin and lives at Green Bay, Wis.

CASEY, George, (deceased), formerly a well known and successful farmer in Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., was born in Philadelphia, Pa., July 12, 1853. When ten years old he was brought by his parents, James and Johanna Casey, to Boone County, where they located two miles from Irene in Flora Township, and later into DeKalb County, where the mother still lives, the father having passed away in 1888. George was the eldest of their family, but he had four brothers: William, now of Flora Township; James, deceased; John, deceased; Joseph, now of DeKalb, and one sister, Catherine, also deceased. The early life of George was spent on the home farm, where he remained until he reached the age of forty years. From the time when he was twenty-one, he had conducted the farming operations. On November 29, 1893, he was married at Belvidere, Ill., to Jennie McCane, a daughter of James and Sarah (Wilson) McCane, and born in Bonus Township. Her mother died when she was three years old, and her father died on the farm in Bonus Township, four miles east of Belvidere, March 16, 1903, in his seventy-ninth year. He was born in County Armagh, Ireland, and at the age of twenty-one came to the United States, passing three years in Philadelphia. Thence he moved to Illinois, working on a farm until his marriage to Sarah Wilson at Belvidere in 1879. Mrs. McCane was born in Canada and died in 1898. The second wife of Mr. McCane was Celia Manley, who survived him two years.

After his marriage Mr. Casey moved to the farm which he had owned several years, situated three miles north of Irene and six miles southwest of Belvidere, which he operated until his withdrawal from active pursuits. He died in Belvidere March 25, 1905. His farm consisted of 160 acres, on which he had erected buildings before his marriage, and there he passed the greater part of his later life engaged in general farming, his labors being rewarded with deserved success. On moving to Belvidere he built a very neat residence, which he occupied in comfort and contentment until his final sickness. Of the family born to him and his wife but one is living, John J., aged ten years. Both parents were reared in the Catholic faith, Mrs. Casey always attending St. James Catholic Church, of Belvidere, of which her father was one of the original members.

CASEY, William H., a resident of Boone County, Ill., for nearly sixty years, and one of the best known and most worthy farmers of Flora Township, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., September 3, 1855. His parents, James and Johanna Casey, who were natives of Ireland, came to the United States early in the '50s, and on leaving Pennsylvania proceeded to Illinois, settling in Boone County, where they first located in Belvidere Township. After living there four years they moved to Flora Township, which was their home many years. Next, they passed four years in Bonus Township, and finally moved to Kingston, DeKalb County, where James Casey died, February 7, 1889. His birth occurred December 25, 1812. He and his wife had six children, William H. Casey, who was the second born of the number, was between two and three years old when his parents arrived in Boone County, and since then he has lived most of the time in Flora Township. He has always followed farming, and is the owner of ninety acres of land.

On February 22, 1894, Mr. Casey was married, in Belvidere, Ill., to Cora E. Wilcox, who was born in Flora Township, October 1, 1846, a daughter of Henry A. and Susan (Oakes) Wilcox, old residents of the township, where Mrs. Wilcox died November 8, 1873, in her thirty-second year. Henry A. Wilcox was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., December 24, 1837, and was brought to Boone County, Ill., in 1844. Of the family of six children born to him and his wife, Mrs. Casey was the eldest.

Mr. and Mrs. Casey are the parents of two children, Franklin and Nettie G. Politically,

Geo. R. Pierce

Mr. Casey is independent and has held the office of school director for a number of years. Fraternaly he is affiliated with the M. W. A.

CHESTER, Oscar L., President of the Capron Bank, Capron, Boone Township, Boone County, Ill. From the families of the Norwegian settlers in Boone County, a stock industrious and progressive, have come men who have attained to more than average prominence in the community. It is probable that none of these is better or more widely known, or more favorably regarded by his fellow citizens, than the gentleman whose name appears above. In all essential respects he is a self-made man, for his success in life has been achieved by sheer force of character and by the exercise of the very best of those principles which must, anywhere, enter into the constitution of the prosperous and progressive business man.

Oscar L. Chester was born in LeRoy Township, Boone County, a few miles north of Capron, March 5, 1864, a son of Lawrence and Anna (Olson) Chester, natives of Norway. His father came to the United States in the early '40s—10' he exact, sometime between 1842 and 1844—and married in LeRoy Township. His wife had come over from Norway with her parents, and her mother's home was in Manchester Township. His brother Seeger, and his sister Carrie, now the widow of Ole Forgersen, came with him and they settled side by side in the woods in LeRoy Township, where they took up government land. Mr. Chester prospered in the face of many difficulties and came in time to own a farm of two hundred and eighty acres in Illinois and other farms in Iowa and Minnesota. He began in a log house on forty acres with no capital but his two hands and a good head for business, for he had learned no trade and had no means of picking up money on the outside, and early in his career, even before his land was cleared, one of his arms was torn off at the shoulder by a thresher and from that time the number of his hands was smaller by one-half. He erected good buildings and made one of the best farms in the vicinity, giving considerable attention to stock. He died at the age of fifty-two years, when his son, Oscar, had just attained his majority, his untimely death having been caused by the kick of a horse.

Of the thirteen children of Lawrence and Anna (Olson) Chester, eight grew to maturity.

Seven of his sons are living, six of them near the place of their birth. After Mr. Chester died, Charles, his eldest son, managed the farm until the younger brothers came in time to take his place. About 1891 he moved to Lake Benton, Lincoln County, Minn., where his mother is living at an advanced age. John Chester is now managing the Chester homestead and Frank is living there also. Lawrence Chester, in spite of his handicaps, achieved a success as great as that of any of his fellow countrymen who settled in the vicinity and won the respect of all who knew him. His ruling characteristics were ambition and persistency, but he prospered by labor, not at the expense of others. In politics, he was a Republican. His brother, Seeger Chester, improved a farm and died about twenty years ago, but none of his family are left in LeRoy Township. His sister, Carrie (Mrs. Ole Forgersen) lives at Capron.

Oscar L. Chester remained on the Chester homestead until he was seventeen years old, then went to Capron and became a partner of H. H. Stove's in the ownership and management of a general store. He succeeded to the entire business four years later and continued it for two decades. He erected slightly and substantial buildings in the center of the village and had practically the business of the town. His neighbors confided their money to his care and sought his financial advice and assistance so frequently that he was gradually led into what was practically a banking business; and, selling his store to Robert Johnson, in September, 1905, he became assistant cashier in the Capron Bank, of which he became president July 1, 1907. He loans much money outside of the bank, and his financial affairs and the care of a farm in Boone Township which he owns demand his entire attention. He is an ardent Republican and as such has often been a delegate to conventions and a member of important party committees. His public spirit has impelled him to promote to the extent of his ability all measures which, in his opinion, have promised to benefit his village and township. He married, when he was twenty-four years old, Miss Anna Ellingson, daughter of Elem Ellingson, of Capron, a biographical sketch of whom appears in this volume. No children have been born to them, but they have a twelve-year-old adopted daughter, Elma, who has been under their loving care since she was a child of five.

CLINITE, Charles W., farmer and stock-raiser, Flora Township, Boone County Ill. In war, as well as in peace, the German has shown himself to be a worthy citizen of America. Industrious, progressive, a promoter of education and a lover of liberty, he has patriotically risen to every demand upon him, and his example has been always for thrift and advancement. Such a citizen was Jacob Clinite, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, who came early in life to America and married Caroline Earnest, a native of Pennsylvania. This worthy couple, who came to Boone County in 1851, settling on Section 33, in Flora Township, were the parents of the subject of this sketch.

Jacob Clinite remained on his farm in Flora Township for a year or two after the death of his wife, which occurred April 22, 1892, when she was about sixty-two years old. The last year or two of his life he spent at Belvidere, where he died December 30, 1896, when he was about sixty-nine years old. He was the father of ten children, of whom Charles W. Clinite was the fourth in order of birth. Charles was reared on his father's homestead and educated in public schools near by. He gained an intimate knowledge of farming and stock-raising, to which he has devoted all of his active years so successfully that he is now the owner of two hundred and thirty-five acres of valuable land in Boone and Winnebago Counties. He married at Belvidere, Ill., in February, 1880, Miss Lily T. Taylor, a native of Ohio, who died in Flora Township in September, 1890, leaving him a son named Raymond G. Clinite. Mr. Clinite married Miss Angie White, a native of Christian County, Ill., December 16, 1895, and she has borne him six children, named as follows in order of birth: William L., James J., Charles L., Marvin, Rufa and Paul F. Mr. Clinite has taken an active interest in township affairs. Mrs. Clinite is a useful member of the Methodist Episcopal church. There is no man in Flora Township who more richly deserves the success that he has achieved than does Mr. Clinite. As a farmer and stock-raiser he has an intimate knowledge of everything that he should know. He never leaves undone anything that he should do, not the smallest thing does he leave to chance. Always alert and intent upon producing the best results, he plans wisely and carries out his plans so carefully and systematically that, barring such circumstances as no one can foresee, his success is absolutely certain. His public spirit is recognized by all his fellow citizens, and his helpfulness is not only conceded but highly appreciated by those among whom his lot in life has been cast.

COCHRAN, John, one of the retired residents of Belvidere and venerable pioneers of Boone County, was born in Atkinson, Piscataquis County, Maine, October 5, 1829. The family originated in America with Peter and John Cochran (twins), who came from Scotland to Maine, and John became the father of Samuel Cochran, and the grandfather of John Cochran. John Cochran made a home out of the wilderness thirty miles north of Bangor, Maine, being a pioneer of that locality. The second John was the eldest of the family and, at the age of fourteen years, started for Boone County, Ill., with a member of the family and neighbor, James Hayes. Samuel Cochran went to Cleveland, Ohio, visited friends there, and returned to Atkinson, Maine. Another old neighbor, Elijah Robinson, an uncle of the subject of this sketch, had gone to Boone County one year previous, and so, in 1843, the Cochrans and James Hayes families took horse teams and traveled 2,000 miles overland. The trip was made via New York along the Erie Canal to Buffalo. From Buffalo to the vicinity of Chicago, they expected to go by the Lakes, but were forced to keep to their teams until they reached the New York & Erie Canal, finally landing near Chicago and thence going to Boone County. In the meanwhile Elijah Robinson, who had come to Illinois one year earlier, was living in Flora Township near the DeKalb County line. Young John's stepmother died in Maine of consumption before they started west, and the party now consisted of the father, John and Andrew J., a seven-year-old son. Samuel Cochran bought a claim of eighty acres of Jonathan Young, and with his son John's help during the next year put up a log house, the first building on his property. The settlement was known as Blood's Point, it being named for Moses Blood, who had settled at the point of timber, although later he had sold out and moved away. This is now the northern limit of the edge of timber six miles north of the river. After building the house, a little land was broken for wheat and gradually the whole farm was cultivated. This log house was the family residence for seven years. To it, in March, 1844, John Cochran brought his bride, Miss Lois Russell, who had come to her brother from Lowell, Mass., where she had been a factory girl. This homestead became the property of their son, Ebenezer W. Cochran. The final years of John Cochran's life were spent among his children, and he died at Castlewood, S. D., aged ninety-seven years, having survived his wife six years. His children were: John, Andrew J., who settled in Guthrie County, Iowa, and died at the age of sixty-nine years; Asenath J., who married Willis Case, of Washington, D. C., a Civil War veteran and Clerk in the Treasury Department; Sarah, married Samuel Robinson, and both died young; Melvina, married Henderson Lee and now lives at Castlewood, S. D.

John Cochran, son of John above mentioned, remained at home until seventeen, helping his father, and then worked by the month until he was twenty-four, at different times in the lumber camps of Wisconsin. After the logs were made into lumber at Chippewa Falls, Wis., they were rafted down the river to St. Louis. He secured but little schooling and his life was a rough one, but he made more money than would have been possible by farming, but when he married he left the business. On September 29, 1853, he married Emily Whiting, a daughter of Leonard and Betsy (Hersey) Whiting, of Blood's Point. Mrs. Cochran was also born in Maine, and was brought to Boone County when a child. For a year Mr. Cochran worked on his father-in-law's farm, and then bought a farm of one hundred acres and improved it. Later on he bought the Whiting farm, and still later bought a farm at Graves' Corners, Flora Township. In 1898, Mr. Cochran sold his farm and came to Belvidere. In addition to his home in Belvidere, he owns a farm and is a man of substance. He has always been a Republican, but takes no prominent part in politics, and is connected with no church or fraternities. His hobby has been the raising of fine horses, and he was one of the officials of the Boone County Fair Association, acting as Superintendent of the Horse Department. For fifty years he has missed but one year as an exhibitor and has carried off first prizes a number of times.

Mr. and Mrs. Cochran have had the following named children: Marinda, who married Leroy Royal and died at thirty-five, leaving four children; Sarah, at home, is a dressmaker; Leslie C., is now a farmer in Flora Township, although an expert creamery operator; Odell J., is on the homestead; Lloyd E., is commercial traveler for the Eaton Shoe Company, a Brockton factory, with offices in Boston, his territory taking him from the Atlantic to the Pacific twice a year, during which he covers annually some 20,000 miles.

COHOON, Orville S., Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., has been, in turn, merchant, carpenter and builder, and farmer. His family name is the variation of a name long prominent in Great Britain and America. In a modern sense he is of that active and efficient old New York stock which is so important an element in the population of the Middle West and, indeed, of our whole country from ocean to ocean. His parents, John and Fannie (Wait) Cohoon, were both natives of the State of New York. In due time the family removed to Erie County, Pa., where, in Green Township, the subject of this sketch was born, October 29, 1833. He was educated in the public schools, passed his childhood days and his youth after the manner of country boys of his time and locality, and was early accustomed to useful work. In 1852, when nineteen years old, he accompanied his father and other members of the family to Porter County, Ind., but in August of the following year came to Boone County, Ill., his father arriving in January, 1854.

Settling at Belvidere, the elder Cohoon, with John Allen as a business partner, in 1854 bought forty acres of land now included in the southern part of the city. They proceeded immediately to lay it off into town lots, which they eventually sold at an advantage, thus evidencing their foresight and enterprise. In 1857, Mr. Cohoon located on a fine farm within the limits of Flora Township and about a mile south of Belvidere. There he achieved a considerable success and lived until 1895, when he died in the eighty-fourth year of his age. His wife died aged three-score and ten years of age in 1876. Of their three children, Orville S., was the eldest.

Soon after coming to Boone County, Orville S. engaged in merchandising at Belvidere as a member of the firm of P. P. Pierce & Co., which existed for two years. Afterward he turned his attention to carpentering and soon branched out as a builder. Houses erected on Second and Whitney Streets and Logan Avenue became monuments to his skill and enterprise. It was in the fall of 1856 that he settled finally on the farm which he has since owned and operated. It was at that time awaiting many improvements, which he made on it, one after another, until he brought it to a high state of cultivation, erecting thereon good buildings and otherwise making it one of the most convenient and attractive in its vicinity.

March 18, 1857, Mr. Cohoon married Miss Juliette Wooster, a native and resident of Beloit, Wis., who died in 1864. His present wife, whom he married January 25, 1865, was Miss Anna H. Field, a native of Niagara Falls, N. Y., born October 9, 1829. Though Mr. Cohoon had borne to him no children, he has reared several, giving them practical education and a creditable start in life. He is a man of public spirit, deeply interested in national affairs, in popular education and in the advancement of Christianity. He has been active in the management of the affairs of his township, and has filled with credit and ability several township offices. Politically he is an independent, ready at all times to support such men and measures as he believes will best serve the public interest. In his religious affiliations he is a Methodist. And now he and Mrs. C. eat, drink and sleep in the old home on the old farm, this 6th day of October, 1908.

COLEMAN, Frank.—After nearly a quarter of a century engaged in the same line of business, Mr. Frank Coleman of Capron, Ill., can lay claim to being one of the oldest manufacturers and merchants of his locality, and he enjoys a trade built up on honest work and good service. On February 8, 1876, Mr. Coleman succeeded to the business of S. J. Johnson, successor to Edward Funniss, harnessmaker, and with his brother, J. B. Coleman, formed the firm of Coleman Bros. Frank Coleman had learned the trade of carriage painting and trimming in Pennsylvania, where he was born at Ashbury, May 19, 1851. He remained in the place of his birth until he was seventeen and then went to Turbutville, Pa., and worked at his trade until 1874, when he came west to visit his brother, J. B. Coleman, who was a shoemaker and located in Capron. After a short stay, Mr. Coleman returned to Pennsylvania, but liking the West, he came back and finally located in Capron and learned the harnessmaking trade with S. J. Johnson. The partnership of the brothers continued eight years, and then Mr. Coleman became the sole proprietor and has continued alone ever since. His brother died in Capron, aged sixty.

Mr. Coleman has devoted himself to his business and has a good trade. He has kept free of politics, but is a very prominent Mason, being a member of Harvard Chapter, R. A. M.; the Woodstock Commandery, K. T., and the Tabella Temple Mystic Shriners. He has been a Mason for twenty-five years, and for twenty-one years has been treasurer of his lodge. In 1888 he attended the National Encampment of Knights Templar. On May 15, 1890, Mr. Coleman was married to N. E. Wilcox, daughter of George Wilcox, a carpenter, who now lives retired at Capron. Mrs. Coleman was one of the popular teachers of Capron and vicinity prior to her marriage, and she and her husband have many warm friends.

CONGER, Jefferson.—Retired from active participation in the agricultural industries which claimed his attention for so many years and won for him the comfortable income he now enjoys, Jefferson Conger is now making his home in Belvidere, and is one of its most respected citizens. He was born near Albany, N. Y., March 30, 1836, and in 1855 came to Belvidere with his parents, John and Eliza Ann Conger. They were both natives of New York, and the father was a carpenter by trade. After coming to Boone County they selected 160 acres just south of the village, paying $40 per acre for it. It had been improved and had on it a house 16x24 feet. In 1860 Mr. Conger erected a comfortable brick residence, the first in the neighborhood. He devoted himself to farming, and also owned and operated a 400-acre farm in Spring Township, seven miles away from his first one. Having exchanged a New York farm for 960 acres of pine land in Montcalm County, Mich., in 1865, the father, with his son Jefferson, went there to begin operations. When the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad was laid out, the route went through their land and Conger Station was named for them. The father and son had spent four winters prior to this lumbering, but with the coming of the railroad they built a saw mill, and for the next twelve years it was kept in operation night and day, employment being given to sixty men. This was a fine tract of timber and gave a splendid yield of first class lumber. In 1874 John Conger died at Belvidere, although to the time of his death he was the active manager of all these operations, he being only fifty-nine. Jefferson continued the lumber operations for a time, when he disposed of them and the land. He was also interested in lands in Adams County, Iowa, where he spent two years. John Conger had been a large stock-raiser, having at one time from 4,000 to 5,000 sheep and 200 to 300 head of cattle, all of his operations being on an extensive scale, and his son Jefferson was closely associated with him in all of them. The city of Belvidere reached out to the farm, and it now brings in a very handsome cash rent. Mr. Conger has been interested in various enterprises, is an extensive land owner in Kansas, and a very wealthy and successful citizen. He resides in a pleasant home near the homestead.

The family of John Conger was as follows: Catherine Ann, married John Van Wie, and died in Iowa in 1905; Caroline, married George D. Albright and died some years ago in Belvidere; Enoch, a farmer of Bonus Township, adjoining the old homestead; Jefferson; Almira, married Augustus Hunt and died in middle life; Adelia, married Amos Palmeteer of Oscar Grove, N. J., and Herod, a miller and farmer of Oregon.

When about forty years old Jefferson Conger married Susan Tripp, daughter of Charles Tripp of Spring Township, who was born in England and brought to this country when a child. Mr. and Mrs. Conger have children as follows: May and Jay at home, and both graduates of the Belvidere High School. Jay married Miss Moore, and is a civil engineer.

COVEY, Edwin A., formerly a prosperous farmer in the vicinity of Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., and a useful and highly respected citizen of Belvidere, was born in Boone Township, Boone County, May 29, 1843. He is a son of Stephen Covey, who was born at Chester, N. H., in 1801, and was reared in that State, Vermont and New York. The paternal grandfather, Theodore Covey, was also a native of New Hampshire. Stephen Covey moved from Chautauque County, N. Y., to Boone County, Ill., in 1829. He took up a land claim near Poplar Grove, but in 1850 changed his location to Caledonia Township, where his death occurred in 1885. The maiden name of his wife was Susan Jenner, who was born at Moriah, Essex County, N. Y., July 4, 1810, and died in August, 1882. Edwin A. Covey was reared on the home farm and received his education in the district schools. He was successfully engaged in farming until 1890, and after acquiring a handsome competency, withdrew from active pursuits, taking up his residence in Belvidere, where he still resides. The marriage of Edwin A. Covey took place September 12, 1862, on which date he was wedded to Elizabeth J. Dimond, born in Brantford, Ont., a daughter of Richard and Sarah (Luxton) Dimond. Richard Dimond was a native of Devonshire, England, and after his marriage, settled on Prince Edward Island, later going to Brantford, Ont., where he lived until 1850. Thence he moved to Illinois, settling in Caledonia Township, Boone County, where he died July 27, 1886, surviving his wife twenty-three years. Their family consists of four children, namely: Fred, Frank R., Ira J. and Arthur A.

Politically, Edwin A. Covey is a Republican, and always has taken a public-spirited citizen's interest in the welfare of the community.

Hon. Frank R. Covey, the second son of Edwin A. and Elizabeth J. (Dimond) Covey, a well known and able lawyer of Belvidere, Ill., was born in Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill., February 18, 1863. He received a good education in early life and commenced the practice of law in 1892. On October 19, 1899, he was united in marriage with Harriet Longcor, born in 1877, and a daughter of Leonard S. and Juliet Longcor, natives of Illinois and Alabama.

In politics, Frank R. Covey is a Republican. He has served as President of the North Side School Board in Belvidere, and is now a member of the lower house of the State Legislature, having been elected in 1904.

COVEY, Frank Richard.—The Hon. Frank Richard Covey has been for a number of years one of the representative men of Belvidere, Ill., and a man of considerable prominence in State politics, supporting the principles of the Republican party, and at all times advocating clean government. That his efforts along reform lines have been appreciated is shown in the fact that he has been a member of the House of Representatives (44th and 45th G. A.), and is also president of the Board of Education of North Belvidere. In many other ways Mr. Covey has given his services to his community and State and is projecting much needed reforms, which he proposes to carry out in the near future.

Mr. Covey was born in Caledonia Township, Boone County, February 18, 1836, a son of Edwin A. and Elizabeth Jane (Diamond) Covey. After graduating from the South Belvidere High School, Mr. Covey taught school one year between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-two, and then from 1858 to 1859 was in the hardware business at Poplar Grove, Ill., but all this time his ambition was leading him onward and upward, and he was devoting all of his leisure moments to study, and having decided to adopt the law as a profession, during 1859, 1860 and 1861, he studied law with Hon. C. E. Fuller. In 1861 he entered the Northwestern University Law Department, from which he was graduated in 1862, although he had been admitted to the bar in 1861. From 1862 to 1901 he practiced law in Peoria, but in the latter year returned to Belvidere, and locating at No. 228 W. Hurlbut Avenue, has made it his home ever since. He has commodious offices conveniently located at No. 138 N. State street, where he carries on a law and real estate business. The University has conferred upon him the degree of A. B. Mr. Covey is a Knight Templar and a member of the B. P. O. E., and is very popular in both orders.

On October 19, 1869, Mr. Covey was married to Harriet G. Longcor, at Belvidere, Ill. One child has been born to them, Juliet Covey.

COVEY, Simeon Levi, whose memory holds many of the incidents of the stirring days of pioneer life in Boone County, when all the people of the neighborhood were fearless strivers towards an ever advancing civilization; when dangers that now sound like romances were met with on every side; when great, sturdy men and women were developed from the toil and hardships of their every day life, is now one of the retired residents of Belvidere, Boone County, there making his home in the city he has honored as a conscientious public official and successful business man. Mr. Covey was born in Mayville, New York, February 1, 1834, a son of Stephen and Susan (Jenner) Covey, the former born in Chester, N. H., November 5, 1801, and the latter born in Moriah, Essex County, N. Y., July 4, 1810.

Stephen Covey made several changes of residence during his lifetime, before he finally located in Boone County, Ill. With his father, Theodore Covey, he went from New Hampshire to Vermont. In early manhood he moved to Lawrence County, N. Y.; thence in a few years to Chautauqua County, N. Y., and from there he came to Belvidere, Ill., in 1839. While residing in New York State he manufactured shingles, but in Illinois he was a farmer and trader in live stock. In 1841 Stephen Covey obtained from the Government a tract of land near Poplar Grove, Boone County, which he made his home, and afterwards sold to his son Simeon Levi, who still owns it. This property has always been free from mortgage, and is one of the most valuable farms in Boone County.

It has always been a matter of regret to Mr. Simeon Covey that he was afforded no opportunities to acquire an education in his youth, although he has repaid that lack to a considerable extent by close observation and natural ability. The only school in the neighborhood was held in a log house near his father's farm, and this he attended four or five weeks for two winters, learning to read and write. His mother's father, Stephen Jenner, wanted to send him to school at his expense, but the father could not spare the very valuable services of the lad. Those were strenuous times, when every pair of hands counted in the struggle against so many odds. The mother spun the flax and wool into thread and yarn, which she wove into cloth from which she made all the clothing worn by herself and family, and she had no machine to aid her.

The first time Mr. Covey was away from the farm, within his recollection, was when his father took him with him on a load of wheat to Chicago, then but a small trading town. This trip was followed by many others, and when he was only thirteen he was sent with a load of wheat, in company with other farmers. This wheat was sold for fifty cents per bushel, and six days were consumed in the trip. In speaking of these trips, Mr. Covey remembers most clearly one taken just after the election of Taylor to the Presidency. At that time the Northwestern Railroad was graded about three miles out of Chicago. For six miles out of the city the ground was covered with water from recent rains, and the cold had made a crust of ice over it about a quarter of an inch thick, not enough to bear the weight of the little company who were trudging along on foot driving cattle to market. They reached the city footsore and wet, but a great treat awaited them, especially Mr. Covey, for the first theatre had been opened and they all went to see the first play any of them had witnessed. The drama and music so overcame Mr. Covey and made such an impression on him, that although at the time he was made the object of some rough teasing from his companions, he has never forgotten the event or lost his love for both, and to this day thoroughly enjoys himself at the theatre, opera or concert. The manner of selling the live stock is interesting to those who know only of those days through the recollections of such men as Mr. Covey. The method was called the "five quarter plan." The beef was killed, and the hide, lard, and tallow went to the butcher, and the four quarters to the owner.

In 1863 Mr. Covey left the farm to embark in the lumber business in Belvidere for three years, when he established himself in the stock business, and thus continued until 1881, but in that year resumed his lumber operations which he continued until his retirement in 1898. Mr. Covey has always been a very strong Republican, and taken an exceedingly important part in local and County politics. He was the first city policeman, the first city marshal. For two years he served as deputy sheriff, and for six years was Sheriff of Boone County. For twenty-three years he was and is at present one of the Supervisors of Belvidere Township, and for five years he has been Poor Master. Fraternally he has been a Mason since 1860. In addition to owning 700 acres of fine farming land, Mr. Covey has interested himself in many public and private enterprises, and is Vice-President of The Farmers' Insurance Co.; Vice-President of the State Bank of Belvidere. He is also Vice-President of the Farmers' Institute.

In 1853 Mr. Covey married in Poplar Grove, Miss Eliza Webster, born in 1834 in Hamburg, N. Y., who died in 1873. She was a daughter of William and Katherine Webster, who settled in Boone County about 1849. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Covey were: George Harrison, who has one child; Cecelia, and one child, unnamed. In 1875 Mr. Covey married Miss Elizabeth Porter, daughter of Thomas Porter, who came to Boone County from Norfolk, England, in 1838. Mr. and Mrs. Covey have one daughter—Lottie Irene, now the wife of H. R. Dillon, of Oak Park, and they have one child—Elizabeth.

Mr. Covey is known to the people of Belvidere as a man always prompt and upright in his business dealings, very conscientious as a public official. He has always been conspicuous for the stand he has taken against graft of any kind. Showing his confidence in Illinois farming land, by investing largely in it, confident that the State has a wonderful future before it, he is satisfied with the part he has borne in its development, and those who know him best recognize in him a man of sound judgment, unquestioned integrity and reliability, a good manager and friend of progress, furthering and adopting any changes in process which he is convinced will improve the general welfare of the community and the unfortunates dependent upon the County's bounty, whose care is in his capable hands, and whose happiness and comfort are matters that often tax his sympathy.

COWAN, David C., merchant and Postmaster, and Supervisor of Caledonia Township; residence Poplar Grove, Boone County, Ill. Wherever the Scotchman casts his lot, he is pretty sure soon to grow into public favor as a useful and progressive citizen. In all parts of the civilized world this has been many times amply proven. In America, east and west, it has been found especially true. The prominent citizen of Boone County, whose name furnishes the title of this article, has reason to be proud no less of his origin than of the success which he has attained, chiefly because of the possession of those sterling traits of character in some sense peculiar to those in whose veins flows the blood of men and women of the "Land of the Thistle."

David C. Cowan was born at Fall River, Mass., on the first day of January, 1851. His father was Robert Cowan, a native of Buteshire, Scotland, and a descendant of an old family well and favorably known there. Robert Cowan came to the United States while still quite a young man, and, some time after his arrival, married Mary Carment, who was born at Glasgow, Scotland, a daughter of Alexander and Elizabeth Carment. He was employed in cotton mills at Fall River, Mass., and in Rhode Island, until 1848, when he came west as far as Illinois. He soon returned to Rhode Island, however, but in 1857 came back to Illinois, bringing his family with him. He bought new land in Boone Township upon which there was a small log house, in which he made his first home in the county. That humble building was, in due time, replaced by a more pretentious structure and he labored and prospered as a farmer until his death, which occurred October 4, 1877. His wife died February 3, 1900. They were the parents of seven children, all of whom are deceased except David C. and his brother, Robert A.

The immediate subject of this sketch grew to manhood near Poplar Grove. From early childhood it was apparent that he had a love for books. He took naturally to education, getting more than the usual amount of benefit from the common schools taught near his home, and when he was nineteen years old he was well equipped for the work of a teacher. After teaching three terms successfully, he entered the Illinois State Normal School at Normal, in which institution he completed a two years' course. Then for a time he taught school at Bulkley, Iroquois County, Ill. He began his business career with Willet S. Webster as his partner in the lumber trade at Poplar Grove. For some years he conducted a hardware store. Then in 1884 he went to Clark County, S. D., where in 1884-85 he secured some government land. Then returning to Poplar Grove, he engaged in the general merchandising trade, in which he has continued with good success until the present time. He has ably filled the office of Postmaster at Poplar Grove since 1897. As a Republican he takes an intelligent interest in national and local affairs. He is a member of the Republican County Central Committee and has taken an active part in conventions. For twenty-three years he has been Supervisor of Caledonia Township, and for five years has filled with signal ability the important office of County Superintendent of Public Schools of Boone County.

In 1872 Mr. Cowan married Miss Julia Webster, a daughter of Willet S. and Mary (Wheeler) Webster and a native of Boone Township. They have two children—Mabel A. and Frank C.—both of whom received a liberal education, Mabel A. being a graduate of the South Belvidere High School and Frank C. a graduate of Beloit College. Mabel A. is now the wife of Merle J. Briggs, an employe in the Chicago postoffice, and Frank C. is principal of the Public School in Poplar Grove, Ill.

DAVIS, Joel, a well known and much respected resident of the village of Herbert, Boone County, Ill., and the owner of a large amount of land in Spring Township, was born in Somerset, England, June 17, 1840, this likewise being the birth place of his parents, Joel and Eleanor (Howell) Davis, who came to the United States in 1850. In the early part of June of that year they settled in Illinois, locating in Spring Township, Boone County, where they passed the remainder of their lives. The father was born June 16, 1798, and died August 23, 1892, in his ninety-fifth year. The birth of his wife occurred June 4, 1802, and she passed away May 16, 1896, in her ninety-fourth year. Their family consisted of fourteen children, and Joel Davis, who was the eleventh of this number, was about ten years old when brought to the country and remained on the home farm until 1862, when he started out in life for himself, being engaged in various occupations for several years. Then he went to Colorado and Arizona where he followed mining for some time, returning finally to Boone County, and settling down in Spring Township. For several years he has been a resident of the village of Herbert and is largely interested in land in Spring Township, owning from three hundred to four hundred acres. He is one of the Directors of the Farmers' State Bank of Belvidere, Ill.

Mr. Davis was married, January 17, 1900, to Elva M. Clark, born in Kingston, DeKalb County, Ill., a daughter of Thomas M. and Susan (Gathercole) Clark, natives of England, born near Norfolk, but now residents of Boone County. Politically, Mr. Davis is a supporter of the Republican party, but votes for the men and measures he thinks will conserve the best interests of all the people. He is an active member of the Davis Methodist Episcopal Church. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

DAVIS, Samuel, formerly a successful farmer in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., where he still owns a farm and is now a prosperous merchant in the village of Herbert in the same county, was born in Somersetshire, England, November 12, 1842. A narrative of the life of his parents, together with full particulars concerning the family history, may be found in a sketch pertaining to the career of Joel Davis, which appears elsewhere in this connection. Of the fourteen children born to his father and mother, the subject of this biographical record was the twelfth. He was brought by them to the United States in 1850, and made his home chiefly with them until about the year 1879. In May, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, Fortieth Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, serving between four and five months, and on returning home followed farming and taught school several winters. In 1872 he went to Chicago, and was employed there as a conductor on the street cars for some time. Then going back to Boone County, he bought 160 acres of land in Spring and Flora Townships, which he farmed until the spring of 1891, when he located in the village of Herbert. Two years later he engaged in the coal, feed, flour and tile trade, in partnership with Fred A. Reed. The firm was dissolved two years later. Mr. Davis purchasing Mr. Reed's interest, and he has since conducted the business alone with successful results. He still owns about one hundred and fifty acres of land in Spring Township.

On June 4, 1879, Mr. Davis was married to Ada E. Shattuck, a daughter of F. H. Shattuck, of Belvidere, Ill., and their union resulted in one child, Cora B., who is the wife of W. H. Hill. Mr. Davis has always taken considerable interest in the public affairs of his locality. Politically he is a Republican, and for several years held the office of Township Clerk, having also served as Assessor and Highway Commissioner.

DeMUNN, Silas T., (deceased), Capron, Boone County, Ill. Too much cannot be said of the part which the State of New York has had in populating the country generally, more especially the middle West. Northern and Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan were settled very largely by New Yorkers; Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin received many original settlers from that State, and from this vast territory this stock has extended to the Pacific Ocean, bearing the light of education and planting religion and civilization. Boone County is justly proud of this element of her population, one of the most conspicuous representatives of which was the honorable gentleman whose name is mentioned above.

Silas T. De Munn was born at Alexander, Genesee County, N. Y., March 4, 1826, and died at his home in Boone County, July 1, 1907. He was reared and educated in his native county and there married Miss Miranda Palmer, February 12, 1850, at Batavia, the county seat, where Miss Palmer was born August 9, 1828. They lived on a farm in the town of Durien, in their native county, until 1866, when they came to Illinois and settled in Boone County, on a farm two miles north of Capron in LeRoy Township.

After farming there for a time, Mr. De Munn rented the place and removed with his family to Estherville, Ia., where he remained two years, improving a half-section of land, erecting buildings on it and putting it at least partially under cultivation. Returning to Boone County, he lived there during the remainder of his life except for one year, when he had a home on his farm of one hundred and eighty-eight acres in LeRoy Township. Eventually he sold both of his farms and, about the time of his retirement, helped each of his children to a good financial start in life.

Politically, Mr. De Munn was a Republican, thoroughly devoted to his party, its leaders and all that it stood for. He served his fellow townsmen as supervisor of LeRoy Township, and was several times elected township collector of taxes. Long identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, he was for years chairman of the board of trustees of the organization of that denomination at Capron.

To Silas T. and Miranda (Palmer) De Munn were born children named as follows in the sequence of their nativity: Jennie, Frank, Levant, Sumner, John A. and Fred. Jennie is the wife of Sylvester Day, of Capron; Frank is farming in LeRoy Township; Levant is an insurance agent at Capron; Sumner is a farmer in Belvidere Township. John A. and Fred are the proprietors of a meat market at Capron, and John, who is unmarried, lives with his mother, caring for and protecting her in her declining years.

DENSMORE, Clark and Willis H.—Clark Densmore was born at Warsaw, N. Y., February 14, 1823, and came west with his parents. He took up land from the Government, although his father had settled one mile north, prior to settling there. One brother, George, spent a few years in Boone Township, and then went to Iowa, locating near Red Oak, Montgomery County, where he was engaged in the lumber trade. Another brother, Lafayette, had a farm on the north of Clark's, and died there aged about seventy. A sister, Jane, came to Boone County as a girl, but later went to Michigan, where another sister had married and was living. Clark Densmore began his business life as a farmer, and remained on the farm until March, 1885. He added to his original one hundred and sixty acres until he had a large property, which he operated as a dairy farm.

His last days were spent in retirement at Sharon. He was a Republican in politics, and in the latter part of his life, was a Congregationalist in his religious associations. His sons were: Frank C., present Postmaster at Sharon, and Willis W.

Willis W. Densmore, son of Clark Densmore, was born August 12, 1860, on the farm where he has always made his home. He attended the Academy at Sharon for three terms, and then worked with his father until his marriage on March 5, 1884, to Ruby A. Parker, who was born in Walworth County, Wis. Her father was killed in the Civil War, and her mother later became the wife of Byron Wolcott, when Ruby was a child, and so she was reared in the Wolcott family. When the Wolcott family moved to LeRoy Township, Mrs. Densmore attended the same school as her future husband. When the elder Mr. Densmore retired to Sharon, the young couple located on the homestead where they have since resided, and they make dairying a feature of their business, milking twenty-five head of cattle. Mrs. Densmore died September 11, 1906, of consumption, after a lingering illness of two years. Of their children Alice was for four years teacher of the Burr Oak school, the district school of her home neighborhood; Ralph, at home; Olive, a student at the Sharon High School, and Claude, a pupil in school.

Mr. Densmore is a prominent Republican, and has taken an active part in party matters, having served as Assessor for nine years, is a member of the Republican County Central Committee, with which he has been connected for ten or eleven years, and is often called upon to serve as delegate to Congressional and Senatorial conventions. Fraternally, Mr. Densmore is a member of the Modern Woodmen, and is very prominent in that order. The Densmore family is one of the oldest in the county, and the name is highly respected.

DE WOLF, William C., Judge of the County Court of Boone County, Ill., was born on a farm, in Spring Township, Boone County, November 4, 1865, and is a son of William C. and Huldah J. (Strong) De Wolf. The father was born in a log house in Springfield, Erie County, Pa., February 8, 1830. The paternal grandfather, Hiram De Wolf, who was a native of the same county and State, died July 6, 1872. William C. De Wolf, seolor, was reared in Erie County, Pa., and graduated from the Pittsburg Commercial College, after which he taught school during winter months, from the age of nineteen years until about 1865. In 1853 he moved to Boone County, Ill., locating the next year on a farm in Spring Township on which he remained until 1883, having married Huldah J. Strong in the meantime. She was born February 16, 1832, at Girard, Pa., a daughter of Leonard R. and Jane (Silverthorn) Strong. In 1866 the father went back to Pennsylvania, and after spending a year there, returned to his farm in Spring Township where he remained until 1883, when he removed to Genoa, Ill., where he remained one year and then moved to a farm which he purchased near Kingston, DeKalb, Ill. In 1888 he moved to Bevidere, where he died February 11, 1904.

Mr. De Wolf and wife were the parents of five children, namely: Nancy E., who became the wife of Ernest L. Woodruff; Hiram S., who died at Coon Creek when eighteen years old; Frank L., who graduated from the Chicago Veterinary College and the Kansas City Medical College; Nettie, who became the wife of Frank Parker; and William C., a graduate of the Genoa High School, who was admitted to the bar in 1887, was afterwards associated in practice with Hon. Charles E. Fuller, and is now serving his third term as County Judge of Boone County. Judge De Wolf in boyhood attended the district school at Shattuck's Grove, and, as above indicated, graduated from the Genoa High School in 1885, subsequently reading law with Judge Chaucey B. Dean. Politically, the subject of this sketch has always been an active Republican, acting repeatedly as a delegate to conventions of his party, and serving two terms as City Attorney.

April 4, 1888, at Kirkland, Ill., Judge De Wolf was united in marriage to Miss Clara Moore, a daughter of Alexander and Susau (Kapple) Moore, and by this union they are the parents of two daughters—Blanche Lucile and Allegra Moore. Mrs. De Wolf's parents were prominent settlers near Kirkland, Ill., but both are now deceased.

DIMOND, Ernest W., dealer in lumber and hardware, Capron, Boone County, Ill., has within a comparatively few years advanced to a prominent position in the business circles of Northern Illinois, developing these various enterprises along conservative yet conspicuous lines which mark him as a man of affairs of more than common ability. His success is of the kind which demonstrates that the man of right ideas and proper equipment can almost as easily create extensive interests in a country community as in a great center of trade and commerce.

Ernest W. Dimond was born in Caledonia Township, a mile and a half southwest of Poplar Grove, May 5, 1868, a son of Stephen Dimond, a biographical sketch of whom is included in this work. He lived on his father's farm until he was twenty-one years old, acquiring a general education and a knowledge of farming and of the fundamental principles of business. For a year after having attained his majority, he rented and operated one of his father's farms. Then he bought a farm a mile east of Capron, which he managed successfully until 1895, when he took up his residence in that village. At that time he bought the agricultural implement trade of H. E. Kellogg. Three years afterward he purchased the Capron elevator, which he managed in connection with the implement business, taking as a partner E. R. Hyndman, to whom he sold the enterprise after they had carried on business together three years and he had been six years in the implement trade. In January, 1902, he became a partner with H. E. Kellogg in the old Capron Lumber Yard. The business was established by Barney Cornell and Edward Kellogg, who sold it to B. E. Cornell and H. E. Kellogg, their sons. About 1895 Mr. Kellogg bought Mr. Cornell's interest and was the sole manager of the enterprise until he was joined in it by Mr. Dimond, their partnership continuing three years. January, 1905, Mr. Kellogg sold his interest to Mr. Dimond and has since lived at Rockford, Ill. He takes no interest in politics which detracts at all from his devotion to these large and growing enterprises, and has no desire whatever for office. He is a Blue Lodge Mason and in Masonic business and social circles is alike popular.

On October 10, 1880, Mr. Dimond married Miss Sarah May Linderman, a daughter of Alonzo Linderman, of Boone Township, and she has borne her husband a daughter named Hazel, who is a student in the Capron High School.

DIMOND, Stephen, retired farmer, Poplar Grove, Boone County, Ill. It will be attempted now to tell briefly the essential facts in the life history of the prominent citizen of Boone Township whose name is the title of this article.

There are few men in the county who more richly deserve or more firmly hold the good opinion of their fellow citizens than does Mr. Dimond. As a farmer he has been a leader in his vicinity, always enterprising, always successful; as a man of affairs he has dealt with his neighbors in an honest and liberal spirit, which has never denied them their just share in the benefits of every transaction, and as a soldier he risked his life in the service of his country in those dark days of her deadly peril comprehended within the years of the Civil War (1861-65).

Stephen Dimond was born in the town of Norwich, about twelve miles from Brantford, Canada, April 3, 1841, a son of Richard and Sarah (Luxom) Dimond, both natives of England. In 1850 Richard Dimond brought his family from Canada to Boone County, Ill., and settled in Caledonia Township, where he improved a farm on which he and his excellent wife lived out the remainder of their days. She was born in 1801 and died in 1863; he died in June, 1886, aged eighty-four years. Of their family of eleven children, five lived to become men and women.

The subject of this sketch, who was one of the younger members of his parents' family, accompanied them from Canada to Boone County in 1850, when about nine years old and has ever since resided in Caledonia Township. He was actively engaged in farming until about 1890, when he retired. August 15, 1862, he enlisted in Company K, Ninety-fifth Regiment, Illinois, Volunteer Infantry, in which organization he served three years and two days, taking part in the Siege of Vicksburg, in the battle of Champion Hills, and in many lesser engagements, and participating in several of the most important campaigns of the war period.

March 17, 1867, he married Miss Mary J. Wicks, who was born in Boone Township, a daughter of Daniel D. and Jeannette (Peebles) Wicks, natives of New England, who were early settlers in Boone County. Mrs. Mary J. Dimond died in Caledonia Township, October 31, 1880, after having borne him six children; Ernest W., who is a leading business man at Capron; Jesse, who lives at Rockford, Ill.; Frank, a resident of Caledonia Township; Aldon, who is a citizen of Boone Township; Sarah Blanche, next in order of birth, and Perry, who is a resident of Capron. November 17, 1892, Mr. Dimond married his present wife, who was Miss Augusta Wellington. This lady was born at Paine's Point, Ogle County, Ill., June 17, 1844, a daughter of Sparoc and Joanna (Silverthorne) Wellington. Her parents settled in Manchester Township about 1856, and lived in Boone County until they died—he in Caledonia Township when he was seventy-five years old, and she at Poplar Grove, when she had attained the advanced age of eighty-eight years. Of their eleven children, Mrs. Dimond was the seventh in order of birth.

Mr. Dimond owns three hundred and forty-two acres of as good land as there is in Caledonia and Boone Townships, and Mrs. Dimond owns one hundred and sixty acres in Manchester and Caledonia Townships. Mr. Dimond is a member of Cornell Post No. 314, Grand Army of the Republic, which has been to him a welcome means of association with his old comrades-in-arms.

DU BOIS, Fred S., farmer, Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill. The history of some families is locally of more interest than the history of other families, not because of the mere events contained in it, but because those events have largely influenced the history of the locality. The history of a family, including pioneers and sons of pioneers, must of necessity be more edifying in work of the character of this than that of a family new to the soil. Fred S. Du Bois was born October 3, 1842, in a log house which stood on the site of his present residence, and in that fact lies his claim to special interest in this connection. His parents were Cornelius and Mary (Sheldon) Du Bois, both natives of New York, the former of Franklin County, the latter of Williamsville, near Buffalo. Her family removed from New York State to Michigan in 1838 and from Michigan to Illinois in 1839, she being at that time about sixteen years old. Her father and mother were Frederick and Harriet (Cushman) Sheldon. They located near Belvidere and were prominent there until they removed to Iowa, where they died, he in his ninetieth and she in her seventieth year. She was a descendant of Robert Cushman, a promoter of the emigration of the Pilgrims from England to America, who helped to plan the voyage of the Mayflower, but who did not himself come over until a year after its arrival, when, according to the annals of his family, he preached the first sermon in New England. His son, Thomas, was the progenitor of the American Cushman family. Harriet Cushman, daughter of Jabez N. Cushman, was of the seventh generation from Robert the immigrant.

Cornelius Du Bois came from the State of New York to Chicago in 1836. He had served an old-fashioned apprenticeship of seven years to the carpenter's trade. Three of his brothers also came to Illinois. Their parents were Lewis and Matilda (Irwin) Du Bois, who with others of their family died at about the same time. Burridge Du Bois, brother of Cornelius, came to Boone County in the fall of 1836, Cornelius came on from Chicago in February in 1837, and Thomas and Lewis came soon afterward. Lewis was for some years a stage-driver. He served in the Federal Army during the Civil War and died at Carthage, Mo. Thomas removed comparatively early to Iowa. Burridge removed to that State in 1867, and died there in 1878, aged eighty years. Soon after his arrival, Cornelius bought a land claim of J. K. Towner, and three years later (in 1849) received a government deed for his holding. The primitive house in which he first dwelt stood on the site of the present residence on the same farm. He married, April 3, 1838, and he and his bride began making a good home, and admirably succeeded. She was Mary Sheldon. Her parents and two of her sisters were charter members of the Presbyterian Church at Belvidere. Cornelius Du Bois was born April 3, 1813. His wife was born about four years later, and died November 2, 1849. Afterward he married Mrs. Julia (Briak) Watkins. He died May 5, 1883, his second wife dying January 10, 1884. Fred S. Du Bois was the only child born of his father's first marriage. Lewis A. Du Bois, now a contractor at Los Angeles, Cal., was the sole offspring of the second marriage. He was yet a young man when he left Boone County.

About 1852 Cornelius Du Bois built the present house on the Du Bois farm (which consisted of one hundred and forty-three acres), hauling most of the lumber which entered into its construction from Chicago by the wagon load. He lived on the place until 1867, when he removed to a smaller farm near Belvidere, which he owned and where he and his wife lived out their days. He was a man of good mental equipment, but of fragile constitution, and during many years of his life was not able to do a full day's work. Politically, he was until 1856 a Democrat; then, because he was a hater of human bondage, he allied himself with the newly formed Republican party, casting his vote for Fremont, its first presidential candidate, and acting with it consistently until his death. For many years he was a member of the First Baptist Church at Belvidere, but later allied himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church. A man of fine social qualities and of the friendliest instincts, he was always fond of entertaining his relatives and neighbors.

Fred S. Du Bois married Mary Celestia Gleason, April 25, 1867. She was born May 31, 1844, in Guilford, Winnebago County, Ill., a daughter of William and Eunice (Gilbert) Gleason. Her father was a native of Williamstown, Mass., and her mother of Troy, N. Y. In 1835 he came to Chicago and thence, in 1836, went to Winnebago County. In the early part of the year 1843 he married Eunice Gilbert in Vermont. Her uncles came in an early day to Galesburg, Ill., and helped to found Knox College, giving a portion of the land on which it stands, of which Dr. Bateman, the editor of the State History of this work, was president for so many years. Mr. Gleason acquired a section of land in Winnebago, of which he retained one-half. By trade he was a blacksmith, and he started a shop on his farm in which he did such work as came to him from the country round about, and incidentally taught the Indians, many of whom were his friends, how to shoe their horses, being the first to so instruct them. His smithy was long the only one in his vicinity. It was located for some time at old Newburg, where others had a sawmill. He is entitled, too, to the credit of having established the first wagon-shop in his part of the county, and in a general way he was prominent and influential as a citizen. He and his wife both died on their old farm, she in 1852, and he April 23, 1883. Besides Mrs. Du Bois, they had two other daughters, Harriet E., who is Mrs. J. H. Potter, of Santa Rosa, Cal., and Eunice A., who is Mrs. J. Alexander, of Rockford, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Du Bois have had one daughter and one son. Their daughter, Mary Eunice Du Bois, born September 9, 1873, a graduate of Rockford College, Class of 1895, married October 7, 1896, Frank M. Davis, of Guilford, Winnebago County, Ill., and has children named Irwin Frederick, born March 19, 1900, and Lester Thaddeus, born April 22, 1905. Their son, Jesse La Verne Du Bois, born March 15, 1878, died July 10, 1880.

About the time of his marriage, Mr. Du Bois bought his parents' old home farm on which he was born, and has repaired the house, rebuilt and enlarged the barns and otherwise improved the place. While giving attention to general farming, he makes a specialty of dairying, keeping from twenty to twenty-five Jersey cows. Another feature of his undertaking is the raising of hogs in which from time to time he has engaged quite extensively. While having pronounced opinions on all political questions, he has never known a political ambition and has persistently kept out of politics except as a conscientious voter. He has filled the office of elder in the Presbyterian Church at Belvidere continuously since 1888, was assistant Sunday school superintendent and has for twenty-one years been superintendent of the Pioneer Union Sunday school, which was organized in June, 1838, and except for three years has had a continuous existence. During nearly all the time for forty-one years, Mrs. Du Bois has been a Sunday school teacher and a large number of her neighbors of different generations have been under her instruction, at one time or another.

While always refusing official preferment, Mr. Du Bois has from early manhood taken a lively interest in everything pertaining to the welfare and advancement of the community with which his lot is cast, and no movement looking to the betterment of the condition of any large class of his fellow citizens has failed to receive his cordial and practical support.

EASTON, Fred M., farmer and stock raiser, Belvidere Township, postoffice, Belvidere, Boone County, Ill. Important as is the State of New York as one of the original and greater members of our historic Union of States, its importance as a factor in populating other parts of the country can never be lost sight of. Go where you will, north, south, or west, you are welcomed by some son of New York. Especially is this true throughout the Middle West. It is as true of Illinois as of any other State, and as true of Boone County as of any other part of Illinois. One of the best known natives of New York living in the vicinity of Belvidere is the prominent citizen whose name appears above.

Fred M. Easton was born in Onondaga County, N. Y., December 18, 1860, a son of Samuel H. and Patience (Mills) Easton. Samuel H. Easton was born in Oswego County, N. Y., and Patience Mills in Onondaga County. They were well-to-do farmers, highly respected in the community in which they lived. Edwin Easton, Fred M. Easton's grandfather in the paternal side, came to Illinois and settled at Marengo in 1864. He was a successful farmer and after his retirement from active life lived in Marengo until his death, which occurred in 1879. His wife was ninety-nine years and eleven months old when she died in December, 1902.

Fred M. Easton was fortunate enough to number among his relatives Mrs. William Tolyne, who was his aunt. He was married March 12, 1884, to Mary E. Higgins. Her mother was a daughter of James and Susan (Smith) Tolyne (mentioned elsewhere in this work), who left Canada in March, 1838, because of unpleasant conditions arising from the "Patriot War," all the troubles about which were happily adjusted about two years later. They made the entire journey with a team in a little more than a month, crossing the end of Lake Erie on the ice and bringing with them their cows and sheep. One of the cows which they drove from Canada was later driven by another member of the family half way across the continent to California. When they came, Permelia was nearing the end of her ninth year. She was married in 1865 to Demas Higgins, a native of Exeter, N. Y., who came to Illinois the previous year. They became the owners of the old Tolyne homestead where Mr. Higgins died March 5, 1891. Mrs. Higgins died January 22, 1908, in the home of her only child, Mrs. Easton, with whom she lived after the death of her husband. As has been noted on another page, James Tolyne was a native of Vermont, his wife a native of Massachusetts.

In 1893 Mr. Easton bought his present farm, which was formerly the homestead of Montgomery Smith, Susan (Smith) Tolyne's brother. Mr. Smith came to the county from Canada some years after the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Tolyne and their family, and settled a mile and a half northwest of Belyvidere, where he lived for many years. A brick house on the place erected by a Mr. Barker has been rebuilt and enlarged by Mr. Easton. The farm contains two hundred and twelve acres. Mr. Easton produces miscellaneous crops and gives much attention to the breeding of Holstein cattle, Percheron horses and hogs. He has on his farm several descendants of the old cow that was brought from Canada and later driven to California.

Mr. and Mrs. Easton have a son, Frank Demas

Easton, aged seven years. The family stands high in popular regard. Mr. and Mrs. Easton are helpful promoters of many good works, and Mr. Easton has demonstrated the possession of a public spirit which has made him a useful citizen.

EDGELL, F. Willis, farmer, Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. It will be here attempted briefly to outline the life-story of one of the busiest and most influential and highly respected citizens of Caledonia Township, a man who has won success as a farmer and has been prominent in connection with the affairs of his township and with those of the village of Poplar Grove.

F. Willis Edgell is a son of Stedman M. and Abigail Sage (French) Edgell, the one a native of Vermont, the other a native of Canada. Stedman M. Edgell came to Boone County, Ill., about 1842, located in Manchester Township and took up a land claim which he sold two years later, when he bought the farm now known as the Schelenger farm in that township. There he lived and prospered until 1854, when he sold the property to remove to Caledonia Township, to the farm north of Poplar Grove now owned by his son, F. Willis Edgell. He died on that farm December 27, 1884, in the seventy-second year of his age; his wife dying October 14, 1899, in her eighty-second year.

Stedman M. and Abigail Sage (French) Edgell were the parents of eight children, of whom Horace, Charles and Augusta are deceased. Susan M. is the wife of M. L. Head; Cella is Mrs. James Montgomery; Mary L. married G. E. Williett; Horace E. was the next in order of birth. F. Willis Edgell, the subject of this sketch, was born in Caledonia Township on the farm which is now his home, April 7, 1857, and has lived there all his life except during eight years, when he was connected with the creamery interest. January 12, 1882, he married in his native township, Miss Ella Willet, who was born in Racine County, Wis., October 24, 1856, a daughter of William and Christina (Vetter) Willet. Mr. Willet was a native of the State of New York and his wife was born in Germany. They came to Boone County from Racine County, Wis., in 1876, and settled in Caledonia Township. She died September 24, 1902, aged eighty-eight years; he died April 24, 1905, in his ninety-second year. Of their eleven children, all but three of whom lived to manhood or womanhood. Mrs. Edgell was the youngest.

Mr. Edgell was the first Mayor of Poplar Grove and served that municipality three years as Village Clerk, and for several years ably filled the office of Highway Commissioner. Independent and very liberal in his political views, he has very decided opinions concerning national questions and in local politics advocates and votes for the elevation of only the best men to official place. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and of the Knights of the Globe. He and his wife are active and consistent members of the Congregational Church. His farm, one of the finest in his vicinity, attests his knowledge and skill as a farmer. It is highly improved, is fitted up with good buildings of all kinds essential to its successful operation, and is very productive and profitable.

ELDRIDGE, Barnabas, President of the National Sewing Machine Company of Belvidere, Ill., and one of the most substantial and energetic business men of Boone County, was born in Geauga County, Ohio, June 19, 1843. His father was Franklin Eldredge, a native of Sharon Springs, New York State, where the family has been prominent for several generations. There he married Eliza M. Van Dyke, a descendant of Hendrick Van Dyke, who emigrated to the New World from Holland in 1636, and became a distinguished figure in Colonial history and the progenitor of an illustrious Knickerbocker family of New York. Franklin Eldredge settled on a farm in the Western Reserve of Ohio, and there young Barnabas was reared, receiving his early education in the district school and, at the same time, working on the farm, thus continuing until 1861, when he went to Cleveland to pursue an advanced course of study. Leaving the Cleveland High School a short time prior to graduation, he became connected with the shipyards of Stephens & Presley as book-keeper, at the same time continuing his studies, and taking a course in a commercial college from which he was graduated.

In 1865 Mr. Eldredge married Miss Marie A. Presley, daughter of the junior member of the firm with which he was connected, and soon thereafter engaged in hardware business in Cleveland as member of the firm of Van Tassel & Eldredge. It was while engaged in this business that his attention was first attracted towards the sewing machine business. He had a brother in Detroit, Mich., who was extensively engaged in handling sewing machines, and in 1866 this brother succeeded in interesting Mr. Eldredge to such an extent that he disposed of his hardware interests and removed to Detroit, where he became an active partner in the firm which the two brothers founded. Their trade extended over a large territory and they met with remarkable success in establishing the Domestic Sewing Machine, which was then being placed on the market. Remaining at Detroit until 1874, Mr. Eldredge then came to Chicago as general manager of the Domestic Sewing Machine Company, having under his control all the territory lying between the western line of Ohio and the Rocky Mountains, and all of the Southern States. This position he retained until he turned his attention towards the manufacture and sale of his own machine. The most vicious onslaughts were made upon him from the very outset. Infringement suits were brought against him whenever a pretext could be obtained, and to defend himself against them took money and time, and oftentimes resulted in serious embarrassment.

In this spirited and long-continued contest, Mr. Eldredge showed wonderful persistency and tenacity of purpose, and indomitable courage, as well. For some time the machine was manufactured by the June Manufacturing Company of Chicago, a small concern engaged in manufacturing the Singer patents; but in 1885 Mr. Eldredge had his affairs in such shape that he proposed a consolidation of interests, and a thorough re-organization took place, but it was scarcely effected when the labor troubles of that year were upon the new concern and the factory was closed. This created a new problem for Mr. Eldredge succeeded to the presidency, which he better to move the plant to some smaller place not so seriously affected by labor disturbances, and Belvidere was finally selected. Then the June Manufacturing Company was organized, under the laws of Illinois, with a capital stock of $250,000, of which $131,000 was paid in, Mr. June being President and Mr. Eldredge Vice-President. In 1890 Mr. June died and Mr. Eldredge succeeded to the presidency, which office he still holds, the company being conducted under the name of the National Sewing Machine Co. The plant is a large one, covering twenty acres, with a capacity of 1,200 machines daily. The excellent financial condition of the company is due to the conservative and yet enterprising methods of Mr. Eldredge, whose executive ability is unquestioned. He is a man of sterling business sagacity and his long contest with other concerns in the same line has developed his powers of perception, so that he is well able to meet and overcome any obstacles which may arise in the future, as well as to maintain the present high standard of production.

ELDRIDGE, Franklin P., Vice-President of the National Sewing Machine Company, of Belvidere, Ill., and a man of fine legal attainments and superior business capacity, was born in Cleveland, Ohio, January 26, 1867, a son of Barnabas and Marie A. (Presley) Eldredge, and in 1874 was taken to Chicago by his parents. In 1887 he graduated from the law school of Harvard University, and in the following year, located in Belvidere. In 1890 he was elected Vice-President of the National Sewing Machine Company. He is familiar with every detail of the sewing machine business, no one having more thoroughly mastered every phase of the manufacture and sale of sewing machines than he. A sketch of the development of the colossal establishment, of which he is Vice-President, will be found in connection with the history of Boone County, in another part of the work.

ELLINGSON, Elem, retired farmer, Capron, Boone Township, Boone County, Ill. During the last twenty-five to thirty years the number of Norwegians who have settled in the United States, principally in the West and in the Northwest, has been very considerable, and Norwegians have advanced to as high a plane of citizenship as immigrants of any other nationality. In coming to America they have, in a sense, come to their own; for it cannot be forgotten that Norsemen did much to populate Great Britain, our Mother Country, and that their blood flows in the veins of many Americans who consider themselves members of old American families. Among men of Norwegian birth who have attained prominence in Boone County, none is held in higher esteem than Elem Ellingson, a brief account of whose life it is intended to include in this work.

Born in Norway, April 25, 1835, Mr. Ellingson was brought to the United States by his parents in 1845, when he was little past ten years old.

Lasse Ellingson, his father, settled on a farm now owned by Ole Stines, in Boone County, one and a half miles south of Capron. He bought a claim to the land and eventually secured title to it from the Government Land Office. It was timber land on which clearing had been started and on which as yet there was no house. He made improvements as rapidly as was possible and lived there until 1865, when he removed to Minnesota. After living there for some time, he went to South Dakota, where he took up a government homestead and where he died aged seventy-six years.

Elem Ellingson learned farming under his father's instruction and acquired such education as was available in the common schools near his home. In 1859, when he was about twenty-four years old, he married Thorbe Johnson, of Norwegian birth, who had come to the United States in 1844, then aged about seven years. He was then the only one of his family living in Boone County. In 1859 he sold his father's old farm and made a new start on another not far away. On this farm the timber had been chopped down, but the stumps remained, and there was much pulling, grubbing and burning to be done before much of the place could be put under cultivation. But Mr. Ellingson was not one to be disheartened by obstacles, and he set to work with a will, improving a farm of one hundred and fifty-five acres, and lived on it until about three years ago, when he retired to Capron. There was a log house on the place which he used as the nucleus of a dwelling, improving it and building additions to it. He gave his attention to general farming. He still owns the farm which is operated by his son, Clarence. At Capron he built a slightly and comfortable residence, under whose roof he has one of the most cozy and attractive homes in the village.

Politically, Mr. Ellingson has usually acted with the Republican party, but always an advocate of temperance, during recent years has favored the Prohibition cause. He is a member of the United Lutheran Church, the house of worship of which is located not far from Capron. He has for many years taken a deep interest in vocal music and has done much to advance church singing in his church and in the community.

Mr. Ellingson is the father of five sons and five daughters: Jerena is the wife of J. F. Johnson, a farmer at Capron; Elizabeth is a practical nurse; Alfred died at the age of twenty-four years, while visiting his grandfather and his aunt in South Dakota; Anna is the wife of Oscar L. Chester, president of the Caprou Bank; John Henry is a merchant at Beloit, Wis.; Rachel Louise is a milliner; Clarence is farming on his father's homestead; Bertha Matilda is a teacher of music; Frank is a farmer in LeRoy Township; William Arthur died at the age of twenty-two years, while attending school at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill. Elsewhere in these pages will be found a biographical sketch of Oscar L. Chester.

ERWIN, William S., farmer and veteran of the Civil War, Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. To this prominent farmer belongs the credit not only of being a leader among his class in Boone County, but of being one of the few remaining citizens of the county who risked their lives in defense of their country in the never-to-be-forgotten conflict of the States in the years 1861-65. Though, perhaps, not one of the youngest, Mr. Erwin was certainly one of the younger soldiers from his part of the State, and his service was in every way patriotic and creditable. As a farmer he has kept up to the times, adopting new methods that have appealed to him as promising improved results and discarding such as, in his opinion, have served their time and become to a certain extent impracticable.

William S. Erwin was born in Caledonia Township, October 14, 1842. His father, John S. Erwin, a native of Canada, married Minerva Wright, also of Canadian birth, and they came to Boone County in 1838 and improved a farm in Caledonia Township, on which he died, aged about sixty-two years, she being about fifty years. The following brief notes concerning their children will be of interest in this connection. There were seven of them. Caroline married Orville Stevens and died in Caledonia Township. Hannah, who became the wife of Roswell Barmore, died in Kansas. George is living in Nebraska. Henry died at Leadville, Col. Elizabeth married Josiah Depew and died in Caledonia Township. William S. was the next in sequence of birth. Stephen is a citizen of Golden, Col.

William S. Erwin was reared in Caledonia Township, where he gained such education as was available in the common schools. He has lived in the township all his life except during his absence as a soldier and during a few years while he lived at Belvidere, and has devoted himself entirely to farming, except for a time while he was operating a mill on Big Thunder Creek, in Belvidere Township. In 1862 he enlisted in Company E, Sixty-fifth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which organization he served until June, 1865, during a period of more than three years, participating in the battles of Nashville, Knoxville, Franklin, Lost Mountain, and Atlanta, and in many minor engagements and skirmishes, taking part in several of the most important campaigns of the war. He was promoted successively to be second sergeant, second lieutenant and first lieutenant of his company, and it was with the rank of first lieutenant that he was mustered out of the service at the end of the war. He has kept alive memories of those days which tried men's souls by membership of Herbert Root Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Belvidere.

Mr. Erwin is the owner of two hundred and sixty-two acres of valuable and productive land, provided with a fine residence, ample barns and outhouses and the very best machinery and accessories of all kinds. He has taken much interest in township affairs and has held the offices of township assessor, school director, highway commissioner and thistle commissioner. While not active in a political sense, he never fails to advocate and support most liberally any proposition which, in his good judgment, promises to advance the interests of the community.

December 31, 1887, Mr. Erwin was married in Caledonia Township to Miss Amelia Bruce. Miss Bruce was a daughter of Timothy and Hannah (Gifford) Bruce, natives of the State of New York, who came to Boone County in 1840, settling in Belvidere Township, where Amelia was born. Mr. Bruce died at the age of sixty-six years. His wife, who survived him, lived to be seventy-nine years old. She bore him six children—Edwin, Amelia, Lucy, John, Charles, and Ella. Edwin died in Belvidere Township. Lucy married John Ham, of Belvidere Township, and has passed away. John is living at Belvidere, as is also Charles. Ella married Eugene Walker, of Belvidere Township.

William S. and Amelia (Bruce) Erwin have become the parents of eight children, three of whom they have buried. The five who are living are named Melvin J., Carrie, Fred G., Cora and Nettie. Carrie married John Dimond and Nettie is the wife of Lewis Covey.

FARLEY, Thomas, farmer and stockraiser, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., is of English descent. His father was born in a log cabin, near the line between Pennsylvania and Virginia (now West Virginia), and his mother was a native of Weigiu, near Manchester, England. In a marked degree he has in his career shown the sterling value of the blood which was passed down to him by his forefathers. A promoter of education and religious progress, of material prosperity and of civic patriotism, he takes rank among the leaders in his part of the country.

Mr. Farley was born in Center Township, Morgan County, Ohio, January 12, 1834, a son of James and Ellen (Taylor) Farley. His parents came to Illinois about 1852 or 1853 and settled in Winnebago County, not far from the Boone County line, in what is now Cherry Valley Township, but which was then known as Butler Township. There they farmed successfully until August, 1868, when they removed to Cherry Valley, where they spent their declining years. James Farley dying, aged eighty-five, his wife aged seventy-eight years. Of their children ten grew to manhood and womanhood. Thomas was the fourth in order of birth. He took to books naturally and, in the common schools and at the home fireside, gained a fair education for the time and place. Before his coming to Illinois he had served two terms as a school teacher in Ohio.

Mr. Farley has married three times. His first marriage, celebrated January 25, 1859, was to Miss Lottie E. Sprague, who died in Winnebago County, July 23, 1865. She bore him two children, one of whom died in infancy. The other—Uretta—died in Flora Township in 1887, in her twenty-seventh year. His second marriage, celebrated at Galva, Ill., September 3, 1868, was with Mrs. Jennie P. Houghton, widow of Auren Houghton, and a native of Fountain County, Ind., who died in Flora Township, November 5, 1879, having borne him twins, whom they named Eugenia C. and Charlotte E., the latter being the wife of C. W. Ferguson. His present wife, whom he married December 6, 1886, at Rockford, Ill., was Mrs. Mary L. (Bucklin) Tucker, widow of Pliny Tucker, and a native of Yates County, N. Y., born December 29, 1840.

To farming and stockraising Mr. Farley has devoted the active years of his life, and the success which he has achieved has been commensurate with his abilities and the effort that he has put forth. He is an active member of the Christian Church, and takes a deep and abiding interest in the general welfare of his community.

FASSETT, Adelbert C., clerk of the Circuit Court of Boone County, for nine years President of the Board of Education of North Belvidere, a veteran of the Civil War with rank of Second Lieutenant, and a man widely and favorably known, and greatly respected, was born at Hartwick, Otsego County, N. Y., March 18, 1845, a son of Joseph R. and Susanna (Ackerman) Fassett. One great-grandfather of Mr. Fassett served in the Revolution, so that he came very naturally by the martial spirit, which led to his enlistment on December 20, 1861, at Binghamton, N. Y., in the Sixteenth Battery of Light Artillery, New York State Volunteers, in which he served as private, Corporal, Quartermaster Sergeant and Second Lieutenant. He was mustered out of service July 8, 1865.

Mr. Fassett was educated in the common schools, and in 1859 clerked in a general store. In 1860 he was apprenticed to the jewelry trade, but in 1861 worked for six months on a farm and attended school for three months, when he enlisted. From 1865 to 1866 he was engaged in a general store, and then for nine years had charge of a cheese factory during the summer season, and in the winter worked in a general store at Edmeston, N. Y. In the winter of 1875-76 he came to Illinois, and in March of the latter year obtained employment in a general store at Garden Prairie, Boone County, where he remained until December, 1884, when he entered upon his duties as Clerk of the Circuit Court, which he still continues. Mr. Fassett is a Republican and while in the Town of Bonus served as Trustee and Justice of the Peace. He has been a member of the Board of Education of the North Belvidere schools for six terms; for nine years was its President, and has faithfully filled every obligation to the county and city. He has been Commander of his Post of the G. A. R. and very prominent in it. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Modern Woodmen, with which he has been connected for the past twenty years, and taken an active interest in lodge work. His religious affiliations are with the Methodist Church.

On January 14, 1866, Mr. Fassett and Arzella A. Hopkins were married at Edmeston,

J. H. Shattuck

MRS. F. H. SHATTUCK

N. Y., and they have one son, William J. Fassett. The family residence at No. 329 W. Perry Street, is a very pleasant, comfortable home, where Mr. and Mrs. Fassett entertain their many friends and those of their son.

FOOTE, John Crocker, was born in Hamilton, N. Y., September 20, 1841. His father was John Johnson Foote, later one of Belvidere's most honored citizens, and his mother was Mary Crocker Foote, a lady whose sweet disposition and quiet and unostentatious kindness made her indeed a ministering angel to a large circle in Belvidere. Mr. Foote's ancestors have always taken a prominent part in upholding the best traditions of the nation, and of the Colonies before they were an independent nation.

Among them were the following: Asst. Gov. John Howland, of Plymouth; Gov. John Carver, a Mayflower passenger and first signer of the Mayflower compact, and first Governor of Plymouth Colony; Quarter Master Nathaniel Foote, in King Philip's War; Capt. Nathaniel Foote of Colchester, Conn.; Lieutenant Samuel Smith, of Massachusetts Bay Colony; Capt. James Newton, of Connecticut Colony; Stephen Terry, of Windsor Troop of Horse, the first troop organized in Connecticut Colony; Lieutenant John Howland, Jr., of Plymouth, in 1678, in King Philip's war; Joseph Loomis, in King Philip's War from Connecticut; Lieutenant Josiah Beach of the Connecticut Troops; John Tilley, signer of compact on Mayflower in 1620, and in the "First Encounter, Great Meadow Creek, December 6, 1620"; Philip Groves, deputy of General Court of Connecticut for twelve sessions, in 1660 one of the Grand Jury for the Colony, Assistant Magistrate (1654-56), and in 1653 on the Committee on impending war with the Dutch; Judge Samuel Chapin, for many years Judge to govern Springfield, Mass. In the Revolutionary period were Judge Isaac Foote, who served from Connecticut through the Revolutionary War, was with Washington at Valley Forge; Daniel Foote, Deputy to General Court of Connecticut, twelve sessions, also a soldier in the Revolutionary War; and John Owen, a soldier in the Revolutionary War, who lost a leg in the battle of Saratoga.

Mr. Foote has taken a great deal of interest in research as to his ancestors, and is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Society of Founders and Patriots of America, and Society of Mayflower Descendants. He assisted materially in the composition of the Foote Genealogy, and has compiled a very complete list of his own ancestors along other branches. As a young man he attended Hamilton Academy and graduated at Colgate University with the degree of A. B. He married Helen Garvin, at New York City, April 24, 1867, and their pleasant home, with its beautiful lawn on East Lincoln Avenue, in Belvidere, is a center of culture and pleasant social and family life. Mrs. Foote is a prominent member of several women's clubs of the city. The family has for many years taken an important part in the Presbyterian Church of Belvidere. Both he and his father have been prosperous financially, and while his business is that of a druggist, most of his time is necessarily taken up in looking after financial interests of considerable magnitude. For accuracy, punctuality, and careful business management of all that he undertakes, he has no superior and few equals in Belvidere. His drug-store is situated at 508 South State Street, where he recently erected a business block, the top floor of which is occupied by several professional men and in which he has a very pleasant office facing State Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Foote have three children. Mary Helen, who married Rev. Harry E. Purinton, of Denver, Colorado; Maria Garvin, married Alfred A. Engstrom, of Rockford, Ill.; and Florence Annette, who married Ebenezer Washington Engstrom, Esq., of Rockford, Ill. Their only son, John Garvin Foote, a young man of promise, passed away May 17, 1903.

Mr. Foote, like his ancestors, has for many years always taken that valuable part in the labor for the common good which consists in doing effective work without noise or show, and relying only on results. Among the many positions he has held has been that of President of the Library Board for a long time. Without a doubt, John Crocker Foote and the Foote family, in culture and good citizenship, and all the sterling qualities which go to make up men and women, stand among the very first in Boone County.

FOOTE, John Johnson, was born at Hamilton, N. Y., February 11, 1816; he married September 24, 1839, Mary, daughter of Hon. Amos and Mary (Owen) Crocker, of Hamilton, N. Y.

She was born May 12, 1819, and died January 8, 1908. He was a prominent man in Central New York, and during the Civil War was very active in the raising and organization of regiments in that portion of the State. He was the first Central New Yorker to subscribe for Government bonds, and in every way an ardent patriot. He served as State Senator in 1858-59; was Auditor of the New York City Postoffice under Postmaster Thomas L. James; and was Acting Postmaster during Mr. James' absence in Europe. Mr. Foote's system of rules and regulations for the reorganization and reformation of that office have since been adopted by the United States Postoffice Department in the large postoffices in the country.

On Saturday night, April 15, 1905, just before the midnight hour, John J. Foote gave heed to the final summons, and folding his weary arms in token of his submission, passed to the Great Beyond. Long had his death been expected, for a well spent life had left its mark upon the forces which for years had been the admiration of men. Eighty-nine years had been his life allotment, while into it had been crowded more of the important things which are included in the making of the history of a nation than ordinarily falls to the lot of man.

The long and noble ancestry back of this man, fruitful in deeds accomplished, good impressions made upon the public life, and in assisting the settlement of questions which have greatly affected the history of our country, could not help but accurately foreshadow the life so closed. From DEER the line is unbroken and is closely identified with the stirring and important events of both England and America. This man's family and himself have become prominent figures in the national life of two continents. John J. Foote began life with the history of a good name. He could proudly point to men whose record was one of fidelity, the maintenance of great principles, and who, in the crisis of the nation's history, were willing to give their all to maintain the nation's integrity and welfare. His educational training was thorough, and though he did not pursue a full classical course, later in life he received his degree from Madison, (now Colgate) University. In his early career he took an active part in politics as a member of the Whig party, and by reason of his personal popularity and political sagacity was many times elected to various local offices, even when his party was largely in the minority. He counted as his friends the leaders of the Republican party, and was prominently identified with such men as Thurlow Weed, Roscoe Conkling and Henry Clay. When the war broke out, he gained additional prominence by doing all in his power to suppress the rebellion. When Fort Sumter was fired upon, he was called into a conference in New York City with Thurlow Weed, Governor Morgan, General Wool and others to consider the situation, and devise means for putting New York on a war-footing. The meeting was held on Saturday night, and the Legislature was to adjourn on the following Monday. It was imperative for the proposed adjournment to be postponed, and Mr. Foote was delegated to go to Albany for that purpose.

The four years of national turmoil furnishes many records of the toil and labor of Mr. Foote in behalf of the Union cause. In 1865, his health having become seriously impaired, he sold out his business in Hamilton, and removed with his family to Belvidere, Ill., where he settled on a large farm, giving attention mainly to agricultural pursuits. Shortly after Mr. James was made Postmaster in New York by President Grant, Mr. Foote was tendered the important office of Auditor, a position which had been newly created. He accepted the position with the understanding that, as soon as he had systematized the financial affairs of the postoffice, he should be allowed to retire. The task proved much greater than he had expected and occupied the next three years. His work there has passed into the history of the department. Under his administration, abuses were corrected, the rights of the Government preserved, and a system adopted for use which, for years afterward, placed that office at the very head of the Postal Department. More than once was he called upon to settle questions which involved the maintenance of his integrity and the preserving of those principles which had so distinguished his past life. To his superiors he would answer, "Very well, I have sworn to enforce these rules, and I shall do so. It is in your power to change the rules, but it is not in your power to otherwise change my obligations." Upon his return to Belvidere, Ill., he turned his attention again to private affairs, becoming interested in the various municipal, banking and other enterprises, and proved a skilled and able financier. Only in minor offices did he again enter politics, and then only because he was practically the unanimous choice of his fellow citizens.

As already stated, Mr. Foote's death occurred April 15, 1905, being survived by his wife and three children. The funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon, April 19, 1905, from the residence, on Lincoln Avenue, where he had lived many years. Rev. Dr. Pierce had charge of the service, assisted by the Rev. B. L. Brittin, of the Presbyterian Church. Interment was made in the family lot in the Belvidere cemetery.

Mr. Foote's children were: Mary Annette, born in Hamilton, N. Y., graduated from Hamilton Female Seminary and Troy Female Seminary, and married at Hamilton, N. Y., September 21, 1863; Hon. Enos Clark, graduate of Colgate University, and a prominent lawyer of St. Louis, Mo.; John Crocker, whose sketch is given on a preceding section; and Harriet, born in Hamilton, N. Y., was educated at Ingham University, Troy, N. Y., and Mary's Institute, St. Louis, Mo., is a woman of great executive ability, engaged prominently in Presbyterian Church work—married David D. Sablin of Belvidere, Ill., and is one of the leaders in Belvidere social matters and public affairs in which ladies take a part. The death of the widow, Mrs. Mary (Crocker) Foote, occurred at the Lincoln Avenue residence January 8, 1908, surrounded by her devoted children and grandchildren, her taking away being felt as a great loss, not only by her family and many intimate friends, but by many others less endowed by wealth, for whom, in her quiet way, she had done so many acts of kindness.

FULLER, Allen Curtis.—(See Historical Encyclopedia part, of this work, pp. 178-179; also Chapter XVI, Boone County History.)

FULLER, Hon. Charles E., of Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., member of Congress from the Twelfth Congressional District of Illinois, was born in Flora Township, Boone County, a son of Seymour Fuller, of Shaftsbury, Vt., the latter being a son of Solomon Fuller, who moved from that State to Wyoming County, N. Y., where he died. Solomon Fuller, in turn, was a son of Elijah Fuller, whose death took place in Shaftsbury. Seymour Fuller married Eliza A. Mordoff, of Wyoming County, N. Y., and came to Illinois via the lakes in 1844. He settled on government land in Flora Township, where he passed the remainder of his life, his wife having preceded him to the grave in 1882. Charles E. Fuller received his education in the district schools, the Belvidere High School and Wheaton College, afterwards reading law with Jesse S. Hildrup, and being admitted to the bar in 1870. He was married to Sarah A. Mackey, of Cherry Valley, Boone County.

Politically, Mr. Fuller is one of the most prominent Republicans of Illinois. In 1876 he was elected State's Attorney and, in 1878, State Senator, serving one term (1878-82), when he was elected Representative, there serving three consecutive terms (1882-88), when he was returned to the Senate for one term (1888-92.) In 1884 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention, and in 1897 was elected Circuit Judge for the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit. In 1902, before the expiration of his six year term upon the bench, he was elected Representative in the Fifty-eighth Congress, and has since been continuously re-elected (1904, 1906 and 1908), his last nomination being unanimous. In each successive position held by Judge Fuller since his entrance into public life, he has constantly maintained and enhanced his high reputation as an able, diligent and faithful servant of the people. He raised a regiment for the war with Spain and was commissioned Colonel of the same, but the war was over before the regiment was called into service.

GOODALL, Robert, a successful farmer and prominent resident of LeRoy Township, Boone County, Ill., was born in Scarbury, Lancashire, England, September 18, 1840, a son of William and Ann (Maw) Goodall. It is said that an uncle of Mrs. William Goodall, named Maw, was the first manufacturer of paper in Canada. In 1843 William Goodall and family landed in Boone Township, although they had landed in New York on September 18 of the preceding year. From there they went to Utica, where they visited with relatives, reaching Boone Township on June 12 of the year following. A friend of the family, named Wood, who visited in Utica, induced Mr. Goodall to go to Boone Township. When Mr. Goodall arrived he found that two brothers, Alfred and Harmon, had bought three hundred and twenty-eight acres of land, but had paid only one-half the debt, and so Mr. Goodall decided to purchase 320 acres for $1,250, including the crop then standing. The property had a fair barn on it and a log house, and into the latter he moved his family and harvested the crop. Robert Goodall has a very interesting pencil-drawing of the old house and barn, with a yoke of oxen hitched to a log which they were hauling to the saw-mill. For fourteen years this log house was the home, when in 1856 the present home was built. It is a brick structure and in good repair after fifty-two years of service. The brick used in its construction was made at Capron. The house had been reshingled but once, and yet is good for many years. Here William Goodall and his wife passed their lives, he dying in March, 1868, aged about eighty-one years, and his wife surviving until September, 1883, when she, too, passed away, aged eighty-five. The family of William Goodall and wife were: Elizabeth, who married Samuel Noble and while crossing the ocean died and was buried at sea; Diana married Samuel Noble, her brother-in-law, and died in 1893, aged seventy-one; William was a farmer in the vicinity of the homestead, where he died in 1889, aged sixty-eight; Jane died at the age of twenty-four; Robert, subject of this sketch; Thomas, a farmer on property adjoining the homestead, being the only member of the family born in America, the date of his birth being March 4, 1845. Before coming to America, William Goodall and wife were members of the Church of England, but after locating in Illinois, supported the Methodist Church. Although originally a Democrat, during the Civil War the family espoused the cause of the Union, and William Goodall became a Republican. While he did not try to place all of his land under cultivation, he had one of the best farms in his vicinity, and endured many hardships in the early days, hauling his wheat to Chicago. He was a man widely and favorably known and bore his full part in the development of the community.

Robert Goodall remained at home until attaining his majority, then worked for two seasons at $15 per month, when, in 1864, he engaged with Daniel Blodgett to care for the horses Mr. Blodgett was in the habit of taking across the plains. There were forty-five horses and he was paid $50 for his services during the trip, besides getting his passage. He remained in California until 1869, but, owing to sickness and scarcity of work, was not able to make much, although for a time he took charge of a farm of 1,000 acres. In 1869 he came home overland to join his mother and took charge of her farm. He expected to return to California, but having inherited eighty acres, he bought the other eighty from his sisters, and still later added forty acres more, and now owns two hundred acres of fine land, upon which he carries on dairying, milking twenty head of cows. He has improved the property, built a barn in 1904, and has put in much improved machinery.

On September 18, 1872, Mr. Goodall married Catherine Perring, who belongs to an old English family that came to America in 1867. The family born to Mr. and Mrs. Goodall is as follows: Joseph P., has been Township Clerk for nine years, operates the homestead, is married and has three children; Ernest W., unmarried, is at home; Edward R., an engineer of Beloit, Wis., is married and has one child; Christabel E., is a teacher and student at the Normal School, having taught two years in his home district.

GORMAN, William E., stock-dealer and retired farmer, and ex-Sheriff of Boone County, Ill., residing at Poplar Grove. The career of Mr. Gorman has all along been marked by evidence of the kind of character which makes a man trusted by his fellow-citizens. Not only has he been successful in business as men are successful who base their operations on the idea of the square deal, but he has been called to offices of trust and responsibility in the administration of which much of public importance has been at stake, and which he has filled with no less integrity than ability. In both lines of descent Mr. Gorman is of Irish blood. His parents, Philip and Mary (Riley) Gorman, were both born in Ireland, but they were married in Canada, and were the parents of ten children, of whom William E., is the youngest. They came to Belvidere in 1844, and Philip Gorman's house was the first residence erected in the part of the city now known as the "South Side." Some years later they removed to a farm in Caledonia Township, near Poplar Grove, where Mr. Gorman entered upon a successful career as a farmer, which was terminated by his death in his seventy-third year. His widow survived him until her ninetieth year.

The boyhood of ex-Sheriff Gorman was passed on his father's farm in Caledonia Township, and he obtained his education in the common schools near his home. His thorough knowledge of farming and stock-raising was acquired under his father's able instruction. He married Evangeline Pearsall, popularly known as Eva Pearsall, October 12, 1891. Mrs. Gorman is a member of an old Boone County family and a native of Poplar Grove, her relatives being mentioned in other biographical sketches in this work. Mr. Gorman lived several years at Belvidere, where he was a member of the police force, and while living on his farm in Boone County he served his fellow citizens in the office of Constable. In 1898 he was elected Sheriff of Boone County and removed again to Belvidere, where he lived four years. As Sheriff he made a record as a shrewd, dependable official of which any man might be justly proud. Since his retirement from official life, he has given his attention to farming and has dealt largely in live stock, being the leading buyer and shipper in that line at Poplar Grove. His son Sidney Eugene Gorman, was born December 8, 1892, and is a high school student.

GREENLEE, John, Jr.—During the making of American history there has drifted to the United States a race of people that have truly earned the name of being successful. They are recognized as being among our foremost citizens, who have by an inherent and indomitable will made their influence felt in every walk of life. On July 4, 1835, a son was born at Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, of sturdy, hardworking parents, plain but honest and industrious, who belong to this same race that has given us so many of our most representative people. The name of this boy was John Greenlee, Jr., and his father bore the same name. He was born amid the green hills of Argyleshire, in the Parish of South-end, August 16, 1791, and soon afterwards he was consecrated to the Lord in baptism, as the records of the Presbyterian Church of that parish will show. The first breath he drew was of the air of that sea-girt island, and with it he imbibed those sterling qualities of heart and soul which have made Scotchmen noted the world over. His early advantages in school were limited, but what he did know, he improved upon and never forgot anything. He lived in the days of few books, but what he possessed were read thoroughly and digested well.

John Greenlee was ever eager for knowledge and thoroughly believed that through it he could attain to power, and even in early childhood he was often found eagerly devouring the pages of such standard works as Harvey's "Meditations on the Starry Heavens," and "Among the Tombs," Young's "Night Thoughts," Milton's "Paradise Lost and Regained," Doddridge's "Rise and Progress on Religion in the Soul," and various works on the Prophecies, together with the Westminster Catechism. He had a wonderfully retentive memory, and what he had read was ever before him like an unlocked treasure house, from which he drew at will. Only a few weeks before his death, he was heard to repeat whole passages from these books.

At the age of thirty-two he married Helen Brown, a daughter of a neighboring farmer, and as years went by, in that same land in which the parents first drew breath, three sons and three daughters were born to them. In time, too, crops began to fail and rents became oppressive, and tales of the wealth and opportunities of the new western world began to waft across the expanse of water to the sea-girt isle. They were repeated on the hills of Argyleshire, and mothers with their babes in their arms listened and wondered. A tide of emigration swept across this land of Robert Burns, and with it carried John Greenlee, Sr., with his wife and family across the stormy Atlantic and on to the Valley of the Mississippi. It was in the harvest month of August, in 1836, that the weary travelers reached Ottawa, Ill., where they remained until December of that year, when John Greenlee took a claim in Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill., near the center of what is now known as the "Scotch Settlement." The following spring he moved his family from Ottawa to the claim, and there, and near the spot, he resided for a period of forty years. He was the pioneer Scotchman of the great settlement and one of the pioneers of Boone County. In time he gathered about him 200 Scotch families, and he was also the pioneer in the establishment of the Willow Creek Presbyterian Church of the settlement, which has developed until it is the largest country church in America.

To Mr. and Mrs. John Greenlee, Sr., were born eight children: Martha, Eliza, George, Charles, Janette, John, Jr., Helen and Ann, and of these all are still living except Martha, George and Charles. The father of this large and industrious family was called to his final resting place at the age of ninety-one years and four months. During the years he spent in the United States, wonderful changes took place, marvelous inventions were made and the whole system of life was changed. During such times, and under the stimulant of such surroundings, the character of men was developed, and their worth proven.

Amid such surroundings John Greenlee, Jr., was reared, and while his educational advantages were better than those accorded his father, perhaps he imbibed less real knowledge, for the elder Mr. Greenlee was a very remarkable man. The younger John went to the district school in Harlem Township, and then to a select school at Marengo, where he took up the higher branches, but instead of going any further he decided it was better to prepare himself for a business career, as his tastes were in that direction.

In 1864 he married Miss Elizabeth Brown, who died in 1870, survived by her husband and two daughters, Helen and Elizabeth Brown, who reside with their father at No. 805 North State Street, Belvidere, Ill., in a large and commodious residence.

After leaving the farm, Mr. Greenlee moved to Belvidere, and entered the hardware business in partnership with his brother, Charles Greenlee, and brother-in-law, James O. Gregory. Later the partnership was dissolved and another formed with his brother, George Greenlee, and Robert Harvey, which continued until 1889. Then he, together with several others, organized the People's Bank, and he was appointed to the position of cashier and became one of the Board of Directors, which place he held until 1908. He assisted in the organization of the Belvidere Telephone Company and until recently was one of its Board of Directors. He was a stockholder of the National Sewing Machine Company, and has ever taken an active part in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the public. In 1886 he was elected County Treasurer and served one term, and he has held various other offices, including that of Supervisor and member of the North Side School Board. Until June 18, 1897, when attacked by a stroke of paralysis, his life has been full and active. Always genial, he has won a host of friends wherever he has been. While now he is seen frequently upon the street in his wheel chair, his genial face and active mind are sadly missed from business circles and social life.

HEATH, Stanley T., farmer and thresher, Capron, Boone Township, Boone County, Ill. Those who know the prominent citizen just mentioned are aware that he has won a very creditable success in life, and all agree that he has achieved it by the exercise of all those personal qualities which make for stalwart manhood and praiseworthy citizenship. Though he did not come into the world without some financial prospects already provided for him, he is, in the truest sense of the phrase, a self-made man who has carefully marked out his own career and persistently walked very near to the line.

Stanley T. Heath was born in Bonus Township, October 17, 1857, a son of Clarkson Wright and Cynthia (Stevenson) Heath, his father a native of New Jersey, his mother a native of Ohio. Clarkson W. Heath was born March 31, 1824. He was brought early in life to Ohio, where he grew to manhood. He came to Illinois in 1845, reaching Boone County, October 12. He settled first in Bonus Township, later removing to Boone Township, three miles south of Capron, to which village he removed some years before his death. From the organization of the Republican party he advocated and voted for its principles. Taking a prominent part in local affairs, he served four years as Supervisor of his township and held other township offices. The temperance question early attracted his attention and, from his early manhood until his death, he was decidedly a temperance man. Though not a member of any church, he was from time to time an attendant upon the services of different churches in his vicinity and helped to support them all.

In 1847 Clarkson Wright Heath married Miss Jane Miller, who died seven years later, leaving two children—Clara, who is Mrs. Charles Frothingham, and Lella, who is the widow of Seymour Van Epps, late of Belvidere, and the mother of Arthur J. and Walter S. Van Epps, who are represented by biographical sketches elsewhere in this volume. April 12, 1856, Mr. Heath married Cynthia Stephenson, who bore him children as follows: Stanley T., the eldest, who receives attention below; Ina, Mrs. Elmer Andrews, whose husband is a contractor at Oak Park, Ill.; William R., is an official of the Larkin Soap Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Heath, who is a daughter of Edward and Sarah (Watson) Stephenson, was born in Lebanon, Warren County, Ohio, October 11, 1830, and was brought to Boone County in 1836, when she was about six years old, thus becoming a pioneer in that part of the State. The Stevensons were the first family to locate in the northern part of Bonus Township. They lived in a tent until the father could erect a log cabin, which, in time, gave place to a modern dwelling. There Mr. Stevenson died, aged eighty-four years, and his wife aged seventy-eight years. Of their family of eleven children, eight lived to manhood and womanhood, and only two are now living; Mrs. Heath and her sister Emily, who is the widow of Marvin Robbins and a resident of Capron. The names of those who died after reaching maturity were Silas, John, Milton, Robert, William and Elizabeth. All of Mrs. Heath's brothers settled in Boone County. Elizabeth married John Robbins, half-brother of the late Marvin Robbins, and died in Idaho.

Stanley T. Heath lived in Bonus Township until he was about nine years old, when he was brought to Boone Township, to a home three miles south of Capron, where he lived until he was thirty-three years old. October 21, 1885, he married Miss Nellie Sands, daughter of William Sands, a sketch of whose life will be found elsewhere in this volume. Five years later, he removed to a farm in Boone Township, half a mile north of Capron, and since March, 1892, he has lived in that village. He attends to two farms, one of eighty acres in LeRoy Township, and the old Heath homestead, three miles south of Capron. For thirty years he has been the leading thresher in his part of the county and during much of that time the only one. He had worked on a threshing machine three years before he engaged in business for himself, thus extending his connection with that industry to a third of a century. He has worn out three threshing machines and is now using his fourth. His first machine was an old Minnesota Chief horse-power thresher. His next one was a Nichols & Shepherd steam-power machine. His last and his present machines are and have been Advance threshers. He was the first man in the northern part of the county to use a steam-thresher. He was also one of the pioneers in the use of the best corn-shellers, shredders, clover-hullers and other machines of their class. On November 3, 1906, he lost his left hand while operating a corn-shredder.

Mr. Heath is a director of the Boone County Fire Insurance Company and handles its local business at and in the vicinity of Capron. He has built three residences in Capron and the house in which he now lives is an attractive one, modern in all its appointments. He has from his youth been a Republican, takes an active interest in political matters and has been a member of the Boone County Central Committee. A member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, he has passed all the chairs of his lodge and has sat in the Grand Lodge; is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He states that he has never been sick a day in his life, but seems to be peculiarly subject to accident. Mrs. Heath, who was formerly a teacher of music, is still an ardent devotee to the musical art.

Stanley T. and Nellie (Sands) Heath have three children. Their son, William C., is a student at the Lewis Institute, Chicago; Hazel is studying music at Buffalo, and Ina is a student in the high school at Capron.

HERBERT, Benjamin Strong.—In Boone Township, Boone County, may be seen a beautiful farm, adorned with a large and comfortable residence and first class farm-buildings, which is the property of Benjamin S. Herbert, now living on Lincoln Avenue in Belvidere. Mr. Herbert, one of a family of eight children, was born in Bonus Township, January 12, 1847. He was the son of John Henry and Mary (Jones) Herbert. In 1879 he married Matilda E. McMaster, the fifth child of David William and Phoebe (Green) McMaster. Mr. McMaster was one of the early pioneers of Boone County. He died July 3, 1899, leaving to each of his children a comfortable inheritance. In 1873, Mr. Herbert, with his brother, William R., bought the homestead from their father, which they jointly owned until 1883. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert increased their holdings, now owning 630 acres of highly productive land in Bonus Township.

In politics, Mr. Herbert is a Republican, and while in no ways seeking official honors, he has served ten years on the Board of Education in Belvidere, a position he still holds. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order, belonging to the Crusade Commandery No. 17 of Rockford, and the Freeport Consistory, S. P. R. S. His intelligence, enterprise and integrity have made him prominent in business and social circles.

HERBERT, John Henry.—Pioneer life in Illinois during the State's early history meant hardships of which the rising generation know nothing, for those sturdy forerunners of civilization had to haul all the grain and stock, as well as wool from their sheep, with their own wagone and teams over almost impassable roads to Chicago. Prices were very low for farm products, and extremely high for manufactured commodities, while sugar, coffee and other like goods were then luxuries indeed.

Among those pioneers who will always be closely associated with the development of Boone County, is the late John Henry Herbert, who was born in New York City, March 12, 1805, and there followed the trade of a cabinet maker. He was united in marriage with Mary Jones, December 22, 1830. Six years later, coming to Illinois with his wife and three children, he took up a claim of 640 acres in Bonus Township, Boone County, which he purchased from the Government for $1.25 per acre, as soon as the survey was completed. He built the first frame house in Bonus, where five of his eight children were born, and during the fifty years it served as the home for the different members of the family not a death occurred within its walls.

Mr. Herbert's chief pleasure was in his sheep, although he was likewise fond of horticulture, growing many choice varieties of fruit, especially apples, in his orchard and garden. As he watched the city of his birth develop into the great metropolis, Mr. Herbert was fond of relating that he obtained his first experience in farming in New York City. There he kept quite a drove of swine, which roamed at large, unmolested, and obtained most of their forage from the fruit vendors and grocers of Broadway.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Herbert were consistent members of the First Baptist Church of Belvidere, which they helped to found. As their daughters grew up and returned from Rockford College, where they were educated, their home became the center for gatherings of their friends, and noted for its hospitality, in which both friends and strangers were always cordially welcome.

In 1873, selling his farm to his two sons, Benjamin and William, Mr. Herbert removed to Belvidere with his wife and two unmarried daughters, and purchased a home on Lincoln Avenue, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1891. In politics Mr. Herbert was a Republican, holding several offices. A man of strong moral character, he had great influence upon the community and nobly bore his part in its development.

HEWER, Frank, a thorough and thrifty farmer, owning two hundred acres of fine land in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., entirely cultivated and well improved, was born in Wiltshire, England, January 19, 1848. His parents were William and Mary (Smith) Hewer, who spent their whole lives in that country. Of their children, seven lived to years of maturity, six of whom were sons. Frank, who was the fourth son, was reared in Wiltshire, England, where he remained until 1874, following agricultural pursuits. In July of that year he came to the United States, locating in Boone County, Ill., where he lived with his brother Joseph in Spring Township about a year; then in company with his brother Henry he purchased a farm in Kane County, Ill., on which he followed farming until about 1877, when they sold the property, and, in 1879, Mr. Hewer bought the place which is now his home. It consists of two hundred acres, is improved with good buildings and is all under cultivation.

On July 10, 1879, in Spring Township, Boone County, Mr. Hewer was married to Anna Wieglow, born near Baraboo, Wis., November 22, 1860, a daughter of Frederick and Barbara (Keitel) Wieglow. Three children were the offspring of this union: Elizabeth A., William R. and Frederick W. The mother of this family died in Spring Township, March 18, 1906.

Mr. Hewer attends faithfully to his duties as a citizen and is respected by his fellow townsmen, to whom he has been favorably known for nearly thirty years. His political connection is with the Republican party.

HOLLEMBEAK, George L., was born in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., December 5, 1850, and has lived in the same locality ever since. His father was William H. Hollembeak, and the maiden name of his mother was Maria Shattuck, the former being a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio. For years their home was in Spring Township, where William Hollembeak carried on farming. He finally sold his farm, which was located in Shattuck's Grove, and took up his residence in Sycamore, Ill., living in retirement until his death, in July, 1905, at the age of eighty-three years. His widow still survives. Three sons composed their family: George L., Frank and Abraham. The subject of this sketch has always devoted his attention to farming and stockraising and is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of land.

On December 21, 1876, Mr. Hollembeak was married to Belvina Goff, who was born in DeKalb County, Ill., July 5, 1855, and is a daughter of William Goff, formerly a resident of that county. Three children were born to this union: Adelbert W., Edward and Ida M., wife of Ralph Dove. Politically, Mr. Hollembeak is a supporter of the Democratic party. He has taken considerable interest in township affairs and has creditably discharged the duties of highway commissioner.

HYNDMAN, Robert H., retired farmer, police magistrate, Capron, Boone County, Ill. There is no reason why a good Irishman should not become a good American citizen; in fact, there are many reasons why he should do so, and experience teaches that usually he does. Of all the truly civilized peoples on the face of the globe, the Irish have perhaps more cause than any others to wish to improve their condition. With the example of other subjects of Great Britain before them, they naturally look to America for opportunities for development which are denied them in their own Green Isle. They are pre-eminently a liberty loving people and, above all, they are lovers of justice; and, from pre-revolutionary times to the present, Irishmen in America have shown themselves to be patriotic, risking their lives for the flag under which they have found protection and an open way for advancement along all lines of human endeavor. Illinois has had reason to be proud of her Irish citizens, and in this pride Boone County has a share.

Robert H. Hyndman is of Irish parentage and was born in Sherbrooke, Quebec, Canada, September 11, 1842. His parents, George and Ann Hyndman, natives of County Sligo, Ireland, but in some lines of English ancestry, came to Canada many years ago. From Canada they came in April, 1859, to Forreston, Ogle County, Ill. Settling on a farm near that town, they made improvements and prospered, but eventually removed to Hampton, Iowa, where they died. Robert H. Hyndman was a little more than sixteen years old when his parents settled in Ogle County, and he had just entered his twenty-sixth year when, May 29, 1869, he married Margaret Jane Campbell. Miss Campbell, who was a native of Ontario, Canada, had been brought to the United States in 1858, by her parents, Andrew and Belinda Campbell, who settled in Forreston Township, Ogle County, Ill., and in 1870 moved from there to Grundy County, Iowa, locating at Parkersburg, where they are buried. Mrs. Hyndman is a sister of John T. Campbell, the well known banker of Forreston, and of Mrs. Arthur Hyndman, of Belvidere. Mr. Hyndman has a brother, George C. Hyndman, in Chicago, who was during all his active life a farmer, except in the time of the Civil War, when he was a member of the Ninety-second Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

From 1869 to 1898, during a period of twenty-nine years, Robert H. Hyndman lived on his farm in LeRoy Township. That farm, comprising two hundred and fifty acres, is divided by the highway and has two sets of improvements. For many years it was devoted to dairying and general farming. A part of it is operated by his son-in-law, Frank T. Ellingson, who keeps thirty cows and makes use of a power milking-machine, which has proven quite satisfactory. Mr. Hyndman left the farm in 1898, since when he has lived practically retired from active life. He is known throughout Boone County as one of the "old threshermen," having threshed very extensively for many years. He has a fine home at Capron.

Politically, Mr. Hyndman is a Republican and, as a member of that party, takes a helpful interest in all public affairs and has served in different township offices, notably as school director for twenty-four years and as police magistrate at Capron for seven years. At the same time, it should be stated that he is not in the ordinary sense of the phrase an active politician. He is a Modern Woodman, devoted to all interests of his order. A born sportsman, he is a lover of open-air life and keeps a summer house on Devil's Lake, Wis., where he annually passes considerable time fishing and hunting. Mr. and Mrs. Hyndman are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Capron, of which Mr. Hyndman is a trustee and steward.

Robert H. and Margaret Jane (Campbell) Hyndman have children named Edward Robert, Ada Belle and Gertrude Blanche. Edward R., of Capron, is a dealer in grain, agricultural implements, automobiles, buggies and coal. Ada B. is the wife of Montgomery Yates, who is a farmer in Bonus Township. Gertrude B. married Frank T. Ellingson, a farmer in LeRoy Township.

IVERSON, John.—One of the most energetic, thrifty and prosperous of the pioneer farmers of Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., was born in Norway, June 8, 1833, and on coming to the United States in 1853 spent fourteen years in Chicago, working in the yards of a wholesale and retail lumber firm, where he gained a good position. In 1867 he located on his present farm, having bought one hundred and forty acres at $25 per acre, to which he has since added eighty acres. In 1886, he built the residence in which he lives, and now has one of the best improved farms in the locality, situated in the center of Boone Township. He is engaged in mixed farming, devoting his attention principally to dairying, milking 25 cows, and raising hogs. His place is in all respects equal to any in the township.

On May 21, 1861, Mr. Iverson was married, in Boone Township, to Christe Wange, who was born in Norway and was brought to the United States at the age of one year, her parents, Ingebert and Betsy Johnson (Nelson) Wange, settling in Boone Township in 1844. But one of the old residents had preceded them, who arrived in 1843. Several other Norwegian families came about the year 1844, and all located near what is now the village of Capron. While in Chicago Mr. Iverson had visited some of his countrymen who had settled in this region, and the impressions made by the visit induced him to move to Boone County. To Mr. and Mrs. Iverson were born seven children, as follows: Julia Augusta, wife of Hans Fardell, of Hamilton County, Iowa, deceased at the age of twenty-seven years; Ingebert, who operated a canning factory in Dane County, Iowa, and died at the same age; Irving, whose home is in Ward County, N. D.; Nels, a farmer in Emmet County, Iowa; Bertha, wife of John Seaver, Boone Township; Samuel, who is conducting the home farm, and Justine, who resides at Normal, Ill., and is engaged in the practice of dentistry.

Politically, John Iverson is an old time Republican, and cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. He has rendered good public service in the office of School Trustee, and is a member of the Capron Lutheran Church, whose place of worship his wife's family helped to erect.

JACKSON, Nathan D., Justice of the Peace residing in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., and one of the best known men in his section of the country, was born in the same township, April 2, 1845, a son of Charles D. and Mary Ann (Stow) Jackson, the former a native of Newton, Mass., and the latter of New York State, where her birth occurred in Broome County. The paternal grandfather, Charles Jackson, was a Massachusetts man, who, together with his wife, Ann (Hagar) Jackson, settled in McHenry County, Ill., during the '40s and there both died. Charles Jackson was the eldest of a family of eight children. Mary Ann Stow was brought by her parents to Peru, Ill., in 1836 and her marriage to Charles D. Jackson took place in Boone Township, immediately after their nuptials they located in Bonus Township, where the father followed farming for the remainder of his life. He died March 9, 1891, his widow surviving him until January 27, 1894. They had two children, Nathan D., and Lucy A., wife of William D. McCabe, her husband dying in Belvidere.

The subject of this sketch was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the district schools, and has passed his whole life in the township where he was born. He is a man of sterling character and enjoys the respect and confidence of all classes in the community, of which he has been a useful member more than three score years. He is the owner of three hundred and twenty-three acres of land, all improved.

On September 3, 1879, Mr. Jackson was married to Ellen E. Ward, a native of Manchester Township, Boone County, Ill., where she was born, November 11, 1857. Her father was Christopher Ward, and the maiden name of her mother was Jeannette Milligan. Christopher Ward was born in Yorkshire, England, and his wife in Glasgow, Scotland. They came to the United States and, proceeding at once to Illinois, settled in Manchester Township, Boone County, about the year 1850. Mr. Ward departed this life February 21, 1887, his wife passing away June 16, 1895. They had two children: Alfred, who is a farmer in Manchester Township, and Ellen E. Six children have resulted from the union of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, as follows: Alfred B.; Lottie H., wife of R. M. Porter; Charles C.; Mary A. J., wife of R. S. Fleming; Neal D., and Ethel E. The eldest son, Alfred, died in his thirteenth year.

Politically, Mr. Jackson is a Republican, with an influential voice in the local councils of his party. He was first appointed Justice of the Peace by Gov. Yates, and was reappointed by Gov. Deneen. For fifteen years he has held the office of school director and has served several years as highway commissioner.

JOHNSON, Henry S., a successful farmer residing on Section 12, Boone Township, was born in Norway, March 24, 1840, and in 1844 was brought to Illinois by his parents Lars and Randa Johnson. At the same time the Johnsons came to America, Ives Shureson and Ole Johnson came with their families, and the Johnsons settled on the farm now owned by Henry S. Johnson, four miles east of Capron. The little party had been eight weeks on the ocean, and had suffered much on the trip overland. It had been the intention to push on to the Rock River with the yoke of oxen and wagon secured at Chicago, but all were tired out, and the location selected pleased them. Lars Johnson secured eighty acres of government land, paying for it $1.25 per acre, and he had but little means left when he had paid for it. In conjunction they built a log house and lived together for a time, until the others secured land for themselves. Lars worked hard and added to his real estate until he owned another eighty acres, and was able to build a second house in 1854, which is now standing. In time he bought land adjoining his one hundred and sixty acres, but which was in McHenry County. Lars Johnson prospered and died in 1884, aged 81 years, his wife having died a few years before him. They were consistent members of the Lutheran Church and in politics he was a Republican. Their children were: John, who owned a part of the old farm, but removed to Wisconsin where he died aged sixty; Betsy, who married John Happerstead and died past sixty; Ole, unmarried, on the farm adjoining his brother, Henry S.; Henry S., subject of this sketch; Elling, who entered a homestead in North Dakota, but died in South Dakota; Andrew, unmarried and living on the old homestead.

Henry S. Johnson was reared on the homestead where he has resided for sixty-four years, and always lived with his father, although he owned and improved a farm of one hundred and seventy acres in McHenry County, which he operates in conjunction with his home place of sixty-five acres, devoting his attention to mixed farming and dairying, keeping 25 cows, having devoted himself to this work all his life.

When twenty-four years old, he married Margaret Thompson, also born in Norway, who was twelve years old when she came to this country. She was a daughter of Thomas Thompson who died in Norway. Her mother, Laura Thompson, was a widow with four children when she came to the New World. Margaret worked in Chicago until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have had children, as follows: Theodore, operating the farm of his uncle Ole; Robert, a commercial salesman and proprietor of the R. V. Johnson general store at Capron; Frank, operating the home farm, married Emma Matilda Thompson, and they have two children—Henry and Johnnie; Lewis, manager of his brother Robert's store; Louise, who married a farmer of Boone Township. The family are all members of the Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Johnson has been a life-long member, and Trustee for many years. The house in which they live was erected by Mr. Johnson twenty-six years ago, while his excellent bank barn, 36x96 feet, was built by him in 1906. The family stands very high in the community, and the success which Mr. Johnson has attained has been well merited.

JOHNSON, Imbert A., an energetic and prosperous young farmer, who carries on one of the largest dairy businesses in Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., was born on the farm where he now lives, July 9, 1873. He is a son of Ole Johnson, a native of Norway, who came to the United States when a young man, locating in Boone County, where he married Carrie Wange, born in the same county, a daughter of Imbert Wange and sister of Mrs. John Iverson, mention of whom is made elsewhere in this volume. Soon after his marriage, Ole Johnson began to live on the present Johnson homestead, which had been the property of Mr. Olsen, from whom the father bought it in installments until he ultimately acquired two hundred and two acres, one hundred and eighty acres of which now belong to his son, Imbert. On this farm Ole Johnson remained until 1903, when he moved to a small place a short distance away, and is now living in retirement. He and his wife reared a family of three sons and two daughters, as follows: Hannah, wife of William L. Williams, a farmer of Lee County, Ill.; Bertha, wife of Thomas Hanson, who occupies the Eggleston farm in Boone Township; Imbert A.; Clarence, who owns the old Lemphe farm in Boone Township; and William A., a student in the DeKalb Normal School. Imbert A. Johnson has spent his life on the farm. He has good barns and keeps from forty to fifty cows, having installed a milking outfit. As stated before, he is one of the most extensive dairymen in his locality. He feeds his stock on the grain raised by him, and, besides this, purchases bran, oil and meal for feeding purposes. His work requires the services of two helpers.

On October 11, 1899, Mr. Johnson was married to Ida Carlson, formerly a milliner at Capron, Boone County, and they have two children: Owen Maynard, aged six years, and Evelyn Cleona, aged four. Mr. Johnson is a director of the Capron Telephone Company. Politically, he is a supporter of the Republican party.

KEITH, Lewis, who is now living retired, at Rockford, Ill., was for many years well known throughout this part of the State as a dealer in stock, and also as the owner of large tracts of land. Born May 2, 1826, in Morgan County, Ohio, the son of Lewis and Mary (Spencer) Keith. Mr. Keith was taken, when six years old, to Licking County, Ohio, by his grandparents, Elisha and Elizabeth (Wagoner) Spencer, of Huntingdon County, Pa., his mother having died when he was twenty-three days old. After three years spent in Licking County, the family removed to LaPorte County, Ind., and March 1, 1837, they came to Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., where the mother died. Young Keith was thus reared by his grandfather, Elisha Spencer, who died in 1838, being buried in Flora Cemetery, as were also the paternal grandparents of Lewis, who died at the age of eighty-one years. Lewis Keith then went to live with his maternal grandmother until he was twenty-three years old, at which time she went to Iowa, where her death occurred. Joseph Keith, a brother of Lewis, eight years his senior, went to Washington as a young man, and his death occurred there about ten years ago, while another brother, Peter Keith, who is two years older, now resides in San Jose, Cal. Lewis Keith as a young man purchased forty acres of land for the sum of $50, and this he later sold for $80, considering that he had made a good bargain. After his grandmother's death, he secured her old place, and started stock-raising and dealing, becoming one of the best-known traders in the county, and often paying as high as 3 per cent per month for the use of money with which to buy stock. Early in life he began buying land, paying all the way from $1.25 to $45 an acre for it, and at one time owned 1,500 acres, nearly all of which was in Flora Township. His old home place, where he resided until 1896, is now the site of the Flora church. Mr. Keith was also engaged in mercantile enterprises for some time, for fifteen years being the owner of a store at Cherry Valley, which his son managed for him. He also owned a store at Fairdale for some years, and owned valuable land in Kansas, Dakota, Minnesota, and other sections. In all his enterprises he proved himself a shrewd, capable business man, but he still found time to serve his community in numerous ways, and as a public-spirited and upright citizen, had the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

On May 2, 1849, Lewis Keith was married to Catherine Brown, who died in 1863, leaving three children: Wesley, on the old home farm; Luther, a contractor of California; and Roswell, who operates a part of the old home farm. Mr. Keith's second marriage was to Louisa Farley, who survives and makes her home with him at Rockford. There were three children born of this union, namely: Florence, the wife of E. D. Reynolds, an attorney of Rockford, and a Republican member of the State Legislature; Estella, at home; and Mabel, who married LeRoy Burt, an electrician of Bedford, Iowa.

KELLY, Duncan S., farmer, director of the Boone County Fire Insurance Company and director of the Boone County Telephone Company, Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. This well known citizen has made his way in the world by sheer force of character. Perhaps his success is due in no small measure to the fact that he is of Scotch blood and of Scotch birth. Find him wherever you will, you will usually find in the Scotchman a man of native wit, much industry, commendable frugality and many other good traits which go toward the making of good citizenship. Mr. Kelly was born in Argyleshire, May 8, 1836, a son of John and Mary (Kelly) Kelly. In 1852, when he was about thirteen years old, his parents came to America and located at Cincinnati, Ohio. There the father soon died, and, in 1855, the mother brought her children to Boone County, Ill., and settled in

Oliver Stetling. E. W. Stetling

Caledonia Township, where she lived until her death, which was March 22, 1875, when she was more than seventy years old. Of her four sons and five daughters, Duncan S. was the seventh child in order of birth. He has lived in Caledonia Township continuously since 1855 and has given all his active years to the work of farming. He is the owner of a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres of well improved land, provided with good buildings and all modern appliances and machinery essential to successful farming. He retired from active life in 1904. As has been stated, he is actively identified with the management of local insurance and telephone interests. For more than a quarter of a century he has held the office of School Director. He and Mrs. Kelly are faithful members of the Argyle Presbyterian church, whose house of worship is just over the county line in Winnebago County.

February 9, 1871, Mr. Kelly married in Caledonia Township, Miss Helen Greenlee, like himself a native of Argyleshire, Scotland. She was a daughter of Robert and Mary (Mitchell) Greenlee, and was born October 16, 1847. The father and mother, who were born in Argyleshire, came to the United States in 1850, and settled in Caledonia Township, where he died aged sixty-seven years, she dying, aged eighty years. They had five sons and five daughters, and Mrs. Kelly was their youngest child. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly have children named John S., Robert G., Duncan M., James T. and Ethel.

KENNEDY, Peter R., is one of those remarkable men who have made their way in life with a limited education to start with, but who as business men, have few equals. Mr. Kennedy's career has been almost phenomenal, when it is realized that all his successes have been crowded into twenty years. He has handled as much as $250,000 worth of property in a single week. His transactions cover everything from a broken-down horse to a department store, and no matter what the magnitude of the transaction, he has shown the same fearless honesty of purpose and keenness of judgment that assured his success from the first. He was born in the North of Ireland, May 11, 1852, a son of Roger and Winnie (Scanlan) Kennedy, and one of a family of seven children, three boys and four girls. One sister is now living in Connecticut and one in Belvidere, Ill.

Mr. Kennedy came to the United States when a young man, and in 1872 engaged as traveling salesman for five years, his ready wit and keen judgment making him an excellent salesman from the start. In 1877 he resigned his position as salesman to engage in various enterprises, principally farming. At one time he owned and operated a saloon, but he has never taken a drop of liquor, and he conducted his bar strictly according to law. He was also engaged in the mercantile trade for some time; was very successful in a livery business, but he found his true vocation when in 1887 he embarked in a real estate and loan business in Belvidere. Since then he has done an enormous business, and handles properties of all kinds and values, and his grasp of finances is nothing less than remarkable. His personal holdings are very large. He owns eight fine farms in Boone County, and is co-partner with J. L. Witbeck in a highly improved ranch of 960 acres in South Dakota. Mr. Kennedy conducts his real estate business under the firm style of Kennedy & Parker, the junior member having been taken into partnership in 1905. This firm is the largest real estate and insurance concern in this part of the State.

Mr. Kennedy has also been very prominent in civic life. He was Alderman from the Third Ward of Belvidere for six years and from the Second Ward for two years, during which time he did yeoman service in developing and improving the city. While a member of the Council he was Chairman of the Street and Alley Committee, and also of the Purchasing Committee, being chosen because of his strong financial and executive ability. In political faith he is a staunch Republican. He was one of the ten that organized and established the Belvidere Gas Light and Fuel Company and was its Secretary for four years. He was one of the stockholders of the Columbia Heating Company when it was organized at Belvidere, Ill., in 1902. Mr. Kennedy was part owner of the "Riverside" subdivision of Belvidere. At present he is a director of the First National Bank of Belvidere, having been appointed to fill the vacancy left by the death of the late John M. Glassner. His religious affiliations are with the Catholic Church. Fraternally he has been very prominent as a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Royal Arcanum and Knights of Columbus.

On September 2, 1875, Mr. Kennedy was married to Katherine Campbell, at St. James Church, Belvidere. Four children have been born to them: Mamie A., Katie, Roger and Peter J., and of these Katie is married to a Mr. Court.

Public-spirited, energetic, progressive, upright, Mr. Kennedy is one of the very best citizens Belvidere possesses, and it is almost impossible to over-rate what he has done for Boone County or the debt of gratitude the people owe him. Not only has he done so much personally, but he has stimulated others to join him in various enterprises that have for their ultimate object the advancement of the city, and he is ever to be found at the head of affairs. Personally he is genial, courteous and pleasing, a good conversationalist, and a speaker of considerable force; and to say that his friends number legion but faintly expresses the truth.

KING, Francis.—While Belvidere is not a metropolis, it is located in the center of a large and compact district, and consequently supports an amount of business proportionately large for the number of its inhabitants. Because of this there have been attracted to it some very able business men, who have made the city their headquarters and directed large interests from within its confines. Of such is Francis King, secretary of the Columbia Heating Company, formerly a stockholder of the June Manufacturing Company, an extensive realty holder and a man of wide business connections and interests. Mr. King was born in Tioga County, N. Y., February 19, 1842, and is a son of Leander and Lucy Ann (Hovey) King. The boyhood days of Mr. King were spent working upon his father's homestead and attending the district school, but to the information he obtained within the schoolroom he added the results of close observation, keen judgment and broad knowledge of men, until he is now a well educated and well read man, whose opinion upon almost any subject is much valued by those who really appreciate him.

Coming to Illinois in 1848, Mr. King remained on the farm until he was twenty-one, when he started out in business for himself, choosing lumbering as his field of operation, and so intimate a knowledge did he obtain of the entire subject that he built up one of the largest enterprises in this line in the State. For fifteen years he continued in this business, but then a favorable opening occurring, he embarked as a hardware merchant, but fifteen years later sold out his interests and since then has been devoting himself to his own affairs. Mr. King is one of the heaviest realty owners in Boone County, and, among other holdings, owns six farms in this county. Earlier in life he invested largely in western farming land, but experience taught him the expediency of keeping his property together so he could superintend it himself. When the June Manufacturing Company was organized in Belvidere, Mr. King was active in its establishment, and became a heavy stockholder, and was equally active in promoting the shoe company. In 1902, when the Columbia Heating Company came into existence, Mr. King was made its secretary, and he is always ready to advance any enterprise he sees will prove beneficial to the community.

In 1867 Mr. King married Miss Annie R. Dean, at No. 722 South State Street, Belvidere, where they have since resided. Two children have been born to them. Cora C., who is married and lives in California, is a fine business woman, and is owner and manager of a theatre and playing the leading role in a theatrical troupe of her own in which she is widely known throughout the West. Miss Veva E., the second daughter, is at home. She was highly educated at the South Belvidere High School, and the Evanston University. Mr. King has lived in Belvidere for many years, and was the city's first marshal, filling those duties creditably and honorably. He was appointed in 1885 and reappointed in 1889. In 1894 he was elected alderman and was on the board of education for one term, and has always supported the principles of the Republican party. Although he has been honored with several elective offices, he has never sought them. In fact, he has been somewhat averse to public life, although well fitted for it. Still, when once he has accepted an office, he has devoted himself to carrying out its obligations to the very best of his power. He is a man of wide sympathies, broad views and is certainly recognized as of the best type of the energetic and successful business men of the Middle West.

KING, William H., a highly respected farmer of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., owning two hundred and eighty-three acres of thoroughly improved land, has been very successful in his agricultural operations and one of the most prominent citizens of the township in connection with public affairs. His father was William B. King and the maiden name of his mother was Matilda Hulme, both natives of England, where the father's birth occurred in Wiltshire, May 11, 1822, and that of the mother, in Staffordshire, July 30, 1830. Their marriage took place March 11, 1856.

On coming to the United States in 1846, William B. King proceeded to Illinois, locating in Spring Township, Boone County, where he died March 25, 1891, his wife surviving him until October 19, 1905. Their family numbered four children, as follows: Mary Ann, widow of Augustus Schlensker; William H.; Ellen, wife of Robert Atkinson, and Emma, who died in infancy.

William H. King, the only son, was born on the old home farm in Spring Township, October 18, 1859. He was reared to farm life and received his education in the common school, remaining at home until 1890, when he went to California, and there spent one year. Aside from this short absence he has always lived in Spring Township, engaged in farming and stockraising.

The marriage of Mr. King took place in Spring Township, August 28, 1884, Elizabeth Rogers then becoming his wife. Mrs. King was born in Wales, November 23, 1867, a daughter of John F. and Emma (Popel) Rogers, natives of Somersetshire, England. Mr. Rogers located in Boone County late in the '60s. Emma Rogers, his wife, came in 1871, her family settling on a farm in Spring Township, where the mother passed away February 3, 1874, her husband dying March 12, 1889. Their children were four in number: Emma; Mary, wife of Abraham L. Abbott; Samuel; and a daughter, who died in infancy.

In politics, Mr. King is a strong Republican and influential in local party affairs. He has filled the office of township clerk, collector, and highway commissioner, and served as school director for twelve years. Mrs. King has always taken a very active part in church and Sunday school work, and both husband and wife are greatly esteemed throughout the community.

LAMPERT, Mrs. Clara (Lampert), is fortunate in her birth and the heritage she enjoys from her parents. Descended from that hardy and vigorous race which has given so many noble men and women to our country, she was early trained to habits of industry, and taught to honor all high ideals and the rights of others. She was taught by her German parents that all honest work is honorable and to depend upon herself, and she has worked out in her life the fullness of their teachings. Mrs. Lampert was born in Forrester, Ogle County, Ill., February 7, 1870, a daughter of Frank Philip and Christine (Pape) Lampert. The father was born April 18, 1832, in the family home erected in 1443 in Eppingen, Baden, Germany, while the mother was born June 20, 1839, in Hanover, Germany. By occupation the father was a carpenter, and emigrated to America by boat down the Rhine, by way of Rotterdam, taking there a steamer to London, and from London he shipped to America. His trip on the ocean lasted thirty-six days, and he finally reached West Milton, New York, in May, 1848, and there lived for a time. He then moved to Virginia, in 1853; to Pennsylvania in 1855, and there learned the carpenter trade, and came to the town of Belvidere in 1855. In April, 1857, he was admitted to citizenship in the United States, by the April term of Boone County Circuit Court. From 1857 to 1859 he lived in Kansas and Missouri, and in December, 1859, he located at Forrester, Ogle County, Ill., where he still resides.

On May 24, 1861, like so many of his countrymen, whose bravery and loyalty were of such vital assistance to the country during the great war struggle, he enlisted, in Company H, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was wounded at Shiloh in April, 1862, but recovered in time to participate in the siege of Vicksburg, and was mustered out May 24, 1864, after which he returned to Forrester, Ill. On February 21, 1867, he was married at Mt. Morris, Ill., to Christine Pape, who had come to America in 1841, lived in Erie, Pa., until the early '50s, and then came to Illinois by way of the Great Lakes. She lived at Mt. Morris and Rockvale, Ogle County, until her marriage. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Lampert settled in Forrester, Ogle County, where they reside in the same house she entered as a bride.

Mrs. Lampert was educated at Forrester, Ill., entering the common school in 1878, and being graduated from the High School in 1887. She taught a country school in Ogle County, Ill., during 1888, when she commenced working in the abstract office in Belvidere, Boone County. Mrs. Lampert has had a very happy and useful career, for her ability and peculiar fitness for the work being recognized, she was appointed on February 2, 1900, by Adelbert C. Fassett, Clerk of the Circuit Court and Recorder of Boone County.

Deputy Clerk, which responsible position she still holds. She is very much interested in her work and gives a faithful, conscientious service not often found in the position she occupies.

On April 15, 1891, Clara Lampert married at Madison, Wis., Philip C. Lampert, who was born March 25, 1859, in Forreston, Ill., but removed to Belvidere, Ill., in 1866. Mr. Lampert had a common school education, which he had supplemented by wide reading and study. In 1875 he commenced teaching school, and taught in the grammar room in North Belvidere. Later he read law with C. B. Dean and was admitted to the Bar in 1883. In 1888-89 he worked in Hadlock, Valette & Rickord's abstract office in Chicago, but returning to Belvidere in 1889, established a law and abstract office there. His death occurred December 5, 1899. One daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lampert, Muriel, born March 28, 1892, in Belvidere, Ill. She entered North Belvidere public school in 1900, and the High School in 1906.

Mrs. Lampert and her daughter united with the First Presbyterian Church of Belvidere, Ill., in March, 1901.

LANDER, Edward P., an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic, who has long taken an active and influential part in the public affairs of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., his place of residence, and is now discharging the functions of Supervisor of the Township with marked acceptability to his constituents, was born at Mere, Wiltshire, England, February 2, 1843, son of Edwin and Mary (Skittery) Lander, natives of England, where the father's birth occurred in Wiltshire and that of the mother in Somersetshire. They came to the United States in 1849, proceeding to Illinois and settling in Spring Township, Boone County, where the greater part of their subsequent lives was spent. Edwin Lander died October 30, 1900, in his eighty-sixth year, his wife having passed away January 9, 1893, when nearly eighty-one years old. Five sons and four daughters composed their family.

Edward P. Lander, who was the fourth of the number, was six years of age when brought to this country, and was reared on his father's farm in Spring Township, which has ever since been his home, except during about three years of residence in Iowa. On September 12, 1861, Mr. Lander enlisted in Company 1, Ninth Illinois

Volunteer Cavalry, serving until December 9, 1864. He was re-enlisted at Chicago, and went first to St. Louis, from there to Pilot Knob, Mo., and thence to Jackson Fort, Ark. He next was sent under General Steel to Helena, Ark., thence to Memphis, Tenn., and was there under Gen. Stephen A. Hurlbut. The regiment then moved to La Grange, Tenn., and he was in the battles of Tupelo, Jackson Fort, Waddell Farm, Stuart's Plantation, Cold Water, Salem, Wyatt, West Point, Moscow, Tishamingo Creek, Hurricane Creek, Old Town Creek, Franklin and Nashville, taking part in nearly all the engagements of the Army of the Tennessee, finally being mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., December 9, 1864. During all his term of service he was a bugler.

After being mustered out, he returned to Spring Township, where he has since been successfully engaged in farming. He and his wife own forty acres of well improved land, upon which they make their home. On December 31, 1874, Mr. Lander was married in Spring Township, to Mary E. Atkinson, born near Prescott, in Ontario, Canada, September 30, 1848, a daughter of James and Margaret (McLachie) Atkinson, the former a native of England, and the latter of Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Lander are the parents of the following children: Francis H., who married Ruby C. Gardner of Winnebago County, and they reside in Spring Township, having had three children; Harriet E. and James E.

In politics Mr. Lander has always been an active and prominent Republican. He has creditably filled the offices of Township Collector, Assessor, Clerk and School Trustee, and has officiated as Justice of the Peace. In the spring of 1905 he was elected Supervisor of Spring Township. Socially he is a member of Hurlbut Post, No. 164, Grand Army of the Republic.

LANDON, Daniel, a familiar figure throughout LeRoy Township, Boone County, Ill., where for many years he was a prosperous farmer, was born on the farm where he now resides, October 1, 1847. His parents were John and Sally (Locke) Landon, who moved to Boone County, from Tioga County, Pa., in the fall of 1844, and secured a tract of government land by deed dated February, 1845, and signed by James K. Polk. A log cabin stood on the place until 1857, when a new house was built which was the home of John Landon during the rest of his life, although he had other landed property. He died in 1887 at the age of seventy-four years, his widow passing away in 1891, when eighty years old. In the later years of his life, the father lived in retirement. He was a Republican in politics, and held the office of justice of the peace. When he moved from Pennsylvania to Boone County, he made the journey by team. He and his wife had a family of eight children, of whom all are living but one. Their names are as follows: Charity, who married James Maxwell, lived at Harvard, Ill., and died in 1899; Samuel, a farmer and carpenter, at Syracuse, Neb.; Margaret, wife of Loren Curtis, of Caledonia Township, Boone County; John S., a carpenter, of Harvard, Ill.; James, a farmer, of Cameron, Wis.; Daniel; Levi, of Chicago; and Mary, who became the wife of Horatio Cure, of that city. John S. and James served in the army throughout the Civil War, the latter being a member of Company K, Ninety-fifth Illinois Regiment, the former of Company C, Thirteenth Wisconsin.

Daniel Landon remained on the paternal farm until 1874, being the last one of the family to leave home. He secured a tract of government land in Ottawa County, Kan., on which he spent about seven years, his father, in the meantime, having the home farm rented. Since then he has operated the homestead acres for a period of thirteen years ending in 1896, when he rented it out and worked at the carpenter's trade.

On August 19, 1874, Mr. Landon was married to Emma Connable, of Sharon, Walworth County, Wis. Mrs. Landon died at Sharon, January 19, 1902. This union was without issue, but the husband and wife made a home for Florence Trimble, now the wife of Frank Chester, who now operates the Landon farm. Mr. Landon living with them. Mr. and Mrs. Chester have three children: Viola, Althea and Ervan. The main feature of Mr. Chester's farming operations is dairying, and he keeps from twenty to twenty-five cows.

Politically, Mr. Landon is a Republican, and has been a member of the county board of review. His first vote, however, was cast for Horace Greeley. He served as assessor for three years and succeeded his father in the office of justice of the peace.

LANE, Charles L., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. The State of Maine, often affectionately called the Pine Tree State, originally settled by seafarers, has given to the interior of our country many of its best citizens and, in all periods of our national history, has been prominent in the promotion of all our great interests. One of the earliest Illinois pioneers from Maine was the Rev. Elkannah Lane, who came to Boone County about 1844 and died there, aged about eighty years. Samuel P. Lane was his son, Thomas E. Lane his grandson and Charles L. and Luther P. Lane are his great-grandsons. In a biographical sketch of Thomas E. Lane, which has a place in these pages, some interesting items of the family history are set forth.

Charles L. Lane was born in Flora Township, April 25, 1867, and was there reared on his father's farm. He gained his education in the common schools and at the Belvidere High School. Except during a few years when he lived with his parents in DeKalb County, he has been a resident of this township and farming has been and is the chief business of his life. He prepared for his life-work under his father's able instruction, and has developed into a skillful and successful farmer who has few equals in his vicinity.

Mr. Lane married Miss Maud Sprague, December 5, 1888. Miss Sprague was born in Flora Township, Boone County, November 6, 1870, a daughter of John and Martha (Swain) Sprague. Mr. Sprague, who was born in the State of New York, died in Flora Township March 6, 1885. Mrs. Sprague was a native of Illinois. Of their five children, Mrs. Lane was the eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Lane have four children, named Verna V., Leon J., Madge M., and Thomas E. Lane, Jr. Mr. Lane is helpfully interested in public affairs, national, State and local, and accords special consideration to the cause of education. While holding decided opinions upon all questions of public moment, he is not strongly partisan, and in local elections is inclined to vote for the man who, in his opinion, will be the best official, regardless of party affiliation.

LANE, Luther P., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., is a son of Thomas E. Lane, and a brother of Charles L. Lane, sketches of whom appear in this volume. He was born in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, Ill., December 19, 1868, but was reared chiefly in Flora Township, where he attended public schools and gained a practical knowledge of farming, which has been the business of his life. He is the owner of eighty acres of well improved land. His interest in local affairs has always been great and he has, to the extent of his ability, furthered all measures tending to the public good. For a time he creditably filled the office of Township Collector.

Mr. Lane married Miss Bernice L. Neff, at Belvidere, Ill., December 16, 1891, and they have children named Clifford M., born December 19, 1896, and Mildred L., born October 29, 1901. Mrs. Lane was born in Flora Township, September 16, 1871, a daughter of Martin B. and Martha (McKee) Neff. Her parents, natives of Pennsylvania, came to Boone County when they were quite young and were married here. Of their seven children Mrs. Lane was the third born. They are living in Belvidere.

The attention of the reader is directed to biographical sketches under the names of Charles L. Lane and Thomas E. Lane, which appear in this volume.

LANE, Thomas E., retired farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. The family of Lane has long been prominent in Boone County. Its first local representative was the Rev. Elkanah Lane, who came about 1844 and died in Flora Township when he was about eighty years old. He was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and many who were early settlers, long remembered and often spoke of his preaching. He was the father of Samuel P. Lane, the grandfather of Thomas E. Lane, and the great-grandfather of Charles L. and Luther P. Lane. Samuel P. Lane, son of the Rev. Elkanah Lane, the pioneer preacher, was a native of Maine. He acquired a good education and early in life became a teacher and, for about twenty years, taught winter schools in Maine and in Boone County, Ill. He married, October 5, 1839, Miss Mary Jane Smith, who was born in Aroostook County, Maine, June 30, 1821. They emigrated to Boone County, Ill., in 1845, settling in Flora Township where they improved a farm. Mr. Lane died at Belvidere, September 3, 1893, aged seventy-seven years; she died in that city December 25, 1901, aged eighty years. They were the parents of nine children, who are here mentioned in the order of their birth: Keziah, Thomas E., Sarah F., Eliza A., Melvina, Belinda B., Ellen E., Freeland H. and Hattie B.

Thomas E. Lane was born in Maine, March 10, 1843, and was about two and a half years old when his parents came to Boone County. He passed most of the days of his childhood and youth in Flora Township, where later, until his retirement in 1901, he was a successful farmer. He married Miss Celinda E. Sergeant, at Belvidere, October 11, 1865. She was born in Gaines, Orleans County, N. Y., March 5, 1849, a daughter of Eli and Hannah (Hogle) Sergeant. Her father was a native of the State of Vermont. Mrs. Lane bore her husband sons named Charles L. and Luther P., who are represented by biographical sketches in this work, and died at Belvidere, June 8, 1904. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Lane settled in Flora Township, and Mr. Lane is recognized as one of its most honored citizens. He has always taken a helpful interest in public affairs, and has had much to do with the management of township interests. His success in life has been notable, and those who know him best know that it has been well and deservedly won.

LAWRENCE, Edwin C., one of the oldest of the few surviving pioneer residents of Boone County, Ill., and for forty years a prominent and highly respected farmer of Bonns Township, now passing the sunset period of his useful career in comfortable leisure in Belvidere, was born in Cuba, Allegany County, N. Y., October 23, 1826. Eleven years afterwards he was brought by his parents, John and Lydia (Sweet) Lawrence, to Boone County, Ill., then a pioneer settlement. John Lawrence, the father, was born in Ashby, Mass., a son of Isaac Lawrence, whose original ancestor in America, John Lawrence, came from England to the Massachusetts Colony, not long after the landing of the Mayflower. His descendants in that colony settled at Watertown, near Groton, Mass. Isaac Lawrence settled in Onondago County, N. Y., when John was a lad of twelve years, and the latter afterwards settled in Allegany County, N. Y. Isaac, who was called "Captain Lawrence," and his brother John, took part in the battle of Bunker Hill, in which the latter was killed, his name appearing on the tablet erected to the memory of the slain.

John Lawrence, father of the subject of this sketch, was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was born March 8, 1788, and died in his eighty-ninth year. His two sons, Luther W., and Daniel W. Lawrence, both married, walked from

H. S. TOBYNE AND WIFE

Cuba to Dunkirk, N. Y., where they took a steamboat to Toledo, walking from that place to Boone County, Ill., which their relations there had reported to be a fine country. They located claims in Bonus Township, returning east in the same manner as they came. In the spring of 1837, John, the father, with his son, John S., a lad of fifteen years old, and another son, Daniel, came to Illinois and began to improve the claims, consisting of a quarter-section of raw prairie for each, putting up one big log house. Daniel soon sold his claim and returned to New York. After John, Sr., had built the house, he left his son John S. in the care of a family, and went back to York State. In the same fall (1837) he and his son Luther, fitted up one large wagon and brought the family of twelve persons to Boone County, reaching the claim October 27, of that year. The family left in the house on the claim had two children, and altogether the number of occupants of the rude abode, for that winter, was seventeen, all in one room, 18 by 22 feet, with a garret or loft of hewed rails above. Somewhat later, Austin Spencer Lawrence, a brother of Luther, his wife and three children, returned finally, in 1844, settling at Marengo. About 1854 Austin S. Lawrence and his family moved to Iowa and the parents finally died at Tampa, Fla., their daughter, Lydia, becoming a teacher among the colored people in the line of industrial instruction, in which she has done a noble work for twenty years. In 1883 Daniel Lawrence died at Marengo, Ill. Luther W. Lawrence was ordained to preach the gospel and organized a Baptist Church. He was a man of fine natural ability and served three terms as Representative in the State Legislature (1854-58 and 1862-64), also being a member of the State constitutional convention of 1862, although in a Democratic district. Originally a Whig, he became a Republican on the organization of that party, and was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln. While in the Legislature, he continued to live on his farm in Bonus Township. He was instrumental in raising troops during the Civil War, and after the war held the office of County Judge about twelve years. He died July 25, 1886.

Austin S. Lawrence became a warden in Benton Barracks, St. Louis, and had two sons in the Union Army, his elder brother, Luther, also having two sons in the service, while others of the family were soldiers in the same cause. John S. Lawrence, the brother, died in 1861. One of the brothers of Edwin C. Lawrence, Albert, went to New York City, where he practiced law. He also practiced in Cleveland, and spent his old age in Boone County. He went to California in 1849, remaining six years. He held a government position in Washington during the Civil War, and later was connected with the postoffice at Salt Lake City, being transferred there to San Francisco, as Mail Route agent. He died at Belvidere in 1893, having had a notable public career.

John Lawrence had these daughters: Lydia Emily married Zina Druse, had two sons in the army and, after her first husband's death, married Charles Dana and moved to Roscoe, Minn., and from there to the State of Washington, where Charles Dana died in 1906, aged eighty-six years; Enratta became the wife of Uriah Lanning and lived in Spring Township, although both died in Belvidere; Lucinda married Daniel Chambers, and moved to Iowa, where both died. Lydia (Sweet) Lawrence, the mother of this family, was one of the twenty children born to her mother, Deborah Sweet. She had eighty-one grandchildren, and when she died at the age of seventy-five years, her great-grandchildren numbered fifty-one.

Edwin C. Lawrence was reared on the home farm, where he remained until the time of his first marriage, on October 26, 1856, when Charlotte B. Hurd became his wife. Four years later she died and on February 7, 1867, he married Sarah J. Bennett, sister of Charles Bennett, born in Groton, Mass., April 12, 1838, and taken by her parents to Boone County, Ill., the next year. She grew to womanhood in Belvidere, where she was partly educated, completing her studies at Rockford College. She then spent seven years in teaching school, mainly in Belvidere, relinquishing this occupation at the time of her marriage. Two sons and two daughters were the issue of this union, as follows: John S., in charge of the old homestead; Charlotte M., and Mary Louise, who are at home, and James B., a mail carrier on the rural free delivery service of Belvidere, Ill. Both of the daughters have been teachers in the Belvidere schools, and Charlotte M. acted in the capacity of deputy county clerk for eight years. Edwin C. Lawrence left the farm in 1895, his present home being just west of Belvidere, where he lives in comfortable and contented retirement. In politics, the father and sons are strong Republicans.

LEACH, Chester C., farmer and stock-raiser. Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. Wherever the name of Leach is known, it is borne by men of sturdy character whose rank in good citizenship is never disputed. The family is numerous in New England and in New York State, and has many worthy representatives in the West and South. In Illinois, Leaches are found in nearly every walk of life and in nearly every avocation. In Boone County the family name has gained high favor, largely because of the character of Chester C. Leach and his son, Frank M. Leach, a brief account of whose busy and useful careers to the present time it will be attempted here to present.

Chester C. Leach was born in Vermont and learned the stonemason's trade in some of the celebrated granite quarries of that State. He came to Boone County in 1845 and married Cynthia Smith, a daughter of Joseph Smith, a pioneer of 1837, who settled in Belvidere Township, five miles north of Belvidere, when his daughter was nine years old. Mr. Smith, who was from Cheungo County, N. Y., died on his homestead aged seventy-four years. His widow lived out the remainder of her days as a member of her daughter's household.

When Chester C. Leach and Cynthia Smith were married, they settled on the Colonel Walker farm, but later removed to the Dr. Stone farm, where in the course of events their son, Frank M. Leach, was born. In 1855 they located on a farm which is now the latter's residence. Their first home on this place was a little log cabin. In 1863 the main part of the present residence was built and additions have been made to it from time to time. The first barn of any size on the farm was burned and a large one built in 1889, the present one being erected by Frank M. Leach. Chester C. Leach left the farm in 1893 and has since lived in retirement. In 1879 he began boarding the county poor, keeping from six to thirteen each year under contract with the County Board. So satisfactorily has this service been performed on the Leach farm, that it has been continued by Frank H., to the present time, from the beginning covering a period of nearly thirty years. The farm consists of two hundred and seventy acres, and to its development Mr. Leach devoted the best years of his life. He is now more than eighty-eight years old, he having been born February 28, 1820. At the organization of the Republican party he became an active and enthusiastic worker for its principles, and still retains his interest in it and for what it stands. His wife bore him three children: Frank M., Fred G. and Grant S. Fred G. died at the age of twenty-three years, and Grant S., aged seventeen years.

Frank M. Leach was born in Belvidere Township, north of Belvidere, July 15, 1850. He grew up on his father's farm, acquiring a knowledge of practical farming and obtaining in the common schools such education as was available, which he supplemented by a year's attendance at a school in Belvidere. About the time he was twenty years old he went to Iowa, where he remained five years, returning to give his attention to the home farm. He married Susan Fuller, January 26, 1879. Miss Fuller, who was born in Massachusetts, was a daughter of Lemuel ad Sophronia (Moore) Fuller, who were also natives of that State. She was but an infant when brought by her parents to Winnebago County, where they settled on a farm in Guilford Township. When she was about sixteen years old, they removed to Caledonia Township, Boone County. Mr. Fuller died near Caledonia village, aged seventy-two years, his widow surviving him twenty-one years, and ending her days as a member of the household of her daughter, Mrs. Leach. Mr. Fuller was born January 22, 1814, and died January 11, 1886; Mrs. Fuller was born September 14, 1813, and died June 15, 1907, in her ninety-fourth year.

Mrs. Leach, who is the only member of her parents' family living in Boone County, has borne Mr. Leach three children, Vernon, the eldest, was born November 14, 1881, and died December 16, 1907, aged about twenty-six years, of lockjaw, which was induced by the amputation of one of his hands, which had been crushed in a corn-shredder two weeks before. His whole life, with the exception of a year spent at school in Belvidere, was passed on his father's farm, to all the interests of which he was devoted heart and soul. Grace, the second in order of birth, who lives with her grandparents, has taken a college course and is employed as bookkeeper in a store. Norman, who is a natural musician and has only recently attained his majority, still has a home with his parents.

Mr. Leach, following in his father's footsteps, is a Republican and is influential in the local councils of his party, and is often seen at Republican conventions. He is an Odd Fellow and Mason, holding membership in bodies of these orders at Belvidere. In the work of Odd Fellowship he is especially proficient and has advanced far in the order. He and Mrs. Leach are members of the Rebekah Lodge.

LE VITT, Clarence H., Superintendent of the South Belvidere schools, a young man whose fame as an educator is wide-spread and whose various methods and systems have in a measure almost revolutionized pedagogy, was born at Apple River, Jo Daviess County, Ill., February 15, 1874, a son of Thomas H. and Fidelia (Wollam) Le Vitt. The elder Mrs. Le Vitt was for more than thirty years one of the leading educators of Jo Daviess County, and doubtless influenced by his home surroundings, Mr. Le Vitt early determined to fit himself for the life of a teacher, and after completing his studies in the public schools made every kind of sacrifice to enter the University of Chicago. Upon taking up his studies in that institution he became interested in neurological work and was made one of the assistants in that department. He also made histological drawings by means of which he helped to make his way through the University, from which he was graduated with honors.

After having done work at Columbia University during his vacations, he taught at Apple River from 1896 to 1899, when he was engaged as Principal of Schools at Scales Mound, Ill., remaining there until 1901, when he was called upon to take charge of the South Belvidere schools. He has proven himself an able educator and has done a very great work for schools through the establishment of the department of manual training and the systematizing of the fire drills. In his handling of teachers and pupils, Mr. Le Vitt has always been masterful and resourceful, and discharges his various duties with dignity and reserve force. He is imbued with the true educational spirit and is always seeking new methods, trying to individualize the work as much as possible and give each child a due amount of attention. He has written papers for various educational magazines. Mr. Le Vitt is prominent in social circles and fraternally is a member of the Masonic Order, is a Knight Templar, a Mystic Shriner, and belongs to the Educational Association and the National Superintendents' Association, and has often been called upon to address different clubs and sociological societies. His religious affiliations are with the Presbyterian Church. In politics he is an active Republican. On August 28, 1901, Mr. Le Vitt was married to Miss Effie A. Atkinson.

LINCOLN, Edgar N., an honored veteran of the Civil War, for many years a successful farmer and dairyman of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., and since 1905 a greatly respected resident of Belvidere, was born in Bonus Township, a mile and a half east of Belvidere, July 12, 1842. His parents, Jedediah and Mary (Nichols) Lincoln, were natives of Middleton, Conn., and Fredonia, N. Y., respectively, and their marriage took place in Ohio, September 26, 1836. The father and mother of Mary Nichols settled at Perry, Lake County, Ohio, whither Jedediah Lincoln had gone when a young man. Soon after their marriage the latter, who was a tanner by trade, came to Illinois for the purpose of securing land. His father-in-law, Phineas Nichols, also came to the same locality and bought a tract of land for $1.25 per acre. He was an extensive farmer in Ohio and his object in making this trip was to secure farming land for his children. He still retained his Ohio farms, but was accustomed to visit the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill., at intervals and continued to make land purchases until he had acquired one thousand acres. He gave each of his children farms in Boone County, and Beloit, Wis., and to two of them, Mary and Elvira Nichols, he presented farms in the vicinity of Belvidere. The latter taught school for several years and afterwards married Loren Payne, who lived near Big Thunder, where his death occurred some time later. His widow subsequently became the wife of Harry Doolittle, a merchant of Belvidere, and after his death, married again in Beloit, Wis., where she spent her last days. Besides those who received farms in this region, were three other children to whom Mr. Nichols donated land in Iowa. Later, he moved from Ohio to Belvidere and thence to Beloit. He died when nearly ninety years old. It was in 1839 that Jedediah Lincoln and his wife took possession of the land given to the latter, who then had one child. Their first dwelling was a log cabin, and after living in it some time, they moved to Flora Township, two miles southeast of Belvidere, the place being known as "Lincoln's Corners." There the father made better improvements, building a stone house in 1859, which was then the best residence of stone in Flora Township, and in it occurred the death of his father-in-law.

Jedediah Lincoln was born October 28, 1805, and died October 26, 1888, being buried on his 83d birthday. His wife, Mary (Nichols) Lincoln, was born July 6, 1812, and passed away at Walker, Ia., October 17, 1889, while making her home with her daughter. Jedediah Lincoln's brother, John, and two maiden sisters, Phoebe and Abiah, lived for a number of years on the farm in Bonus Township, spending their last days on the place. Phoebe, who lived with them for a while, died in Belvidere. After the death of John and Abiah, William Lincoln came to the same locality and spent his last days in Belvidere.

The children of Jedediah and Mary (Nichols) Lincoln were as follows: Phoebe E.; Oscar J., a farmer, who died at Belvidere, April 20, 1903, at the age of sixty-three years; Edgar N.; Alice N., who married H. Sisam, at Palo, Ia., and died in 1906 when sixty-one years old; and William P., of Tama County, Ia., where he settled when a young man, becoming a farmer and stockraiser. The farm purchased for the father and mother of the above named family by Phineas Nichols, at $1.25 per acre, was sold at $140.00 per acre sixty-six years afterwards.

Edgar N. Lincoln remained at home until 1862, when he enlisted on September 24th in Company G, Ninety-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving until February, 1863, when, through a special act of Congress, he was enabled to join Ellett's Marine Brigade, made up from various regiments. This brigade was placed on board of six boats, fitted with special casements for protection against bullets. It consisted of four companies of cavalry, a battery and a regiment of infantry. Its service was mainly confined to the Mississippi River between Memphis and Natchez, and continued for two years, the force picking up small parties of the enemy crossing the river and scouting back twenty-five miles from its banks. In one instance, with but ten men, it surrounded a Confederate paymaster with his body-guard eating melons in the canebrake, capturing the group without the discharge of a gun. On this occasion, in addition to a quantity of provisions, $1,200,000 in Confederate bills were seized. They were worth 10 cents on the dollar in the banks of Vicksburg. This kind of military service was greatly to the liking of Edgar N. Lincoln, who captured, single-handed, five of the enemy at different times, although he had many narrow escapes. Among Mr. Lincoln's comrades was Henry M. Conden, the present chaplain of the Congressional House of Representatives, at Washington, D. C., who lost his eyesight in the campaign. The captain of Mr. Lincoln's company was shot while serving by his side in a raid, and about a year later, the second lieutenant was killed in the same manner. Mr. Lincoln was discharged on January 22, 1865, after thirty months of this service, the river then being entirely cleared. Reunions of this brigade are regularly held, and Mr. Lincoln thus keeps in touch with his comrades, he being the only member of his original company who served on this marine force. Its major was the father of Dr. Tallyday, of Belvidere.

On November 15, 1866, Mr. Lincoln was married to Ellen H. Moss, a daughter of Asa and Alvira (Stewart) Moss, born in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., August 11, 1845. Her father was a native of Washington County, N. Y., where his birth occurred in 1818. From 1820 to 1836 his youth was spent in Chautauqua County, N. Y., and in the last named year he came to Boone County, Ill., in company with his parents, Asa and Sally (Sherwood) Moss, who located in Spring Township. They afterwards moved to Belvidere Township, where the remainder of their lives was spent. Asa Moss, Jr., and Alvira Stewart were married in Spring Township, the latter being one of the early school teachers of Boone County. She came with her brother, Matthew Stewart, from Collins, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and lived with him until her marriage, September 24, 1844. The life of Mr. Moss was mainly spent on the Spring Township farm, although his last days were passed in Belvidere, where he died November 1, 1888, less than one week after attending the funeral of Mr. Lincoln's father. His widow survived until April 1, 1900, when she died, aged seventy-eight, her birth having occurred February 17, 1822.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln occupied a portion of the old Lincoln homestead in Flora Township until 1905, when Mr. Lincoln disposed of it, and they took up their residence in Belvidere, where they have a pleasant home. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, four of whom are living, as follows: Carrie A., wife of Fred Mc-Coy, a farmer of Belvidere; Rosa N., Mrs. William P. Hill, of Otto, Ill.; Grace E., Mrs. Fred Eldridge, of Wapakoneta, Ohio, and Walter E., of Belvidere, Ill., who married Emma Critchet, of Mason, Mich. Charles, now deceased, was a teacher and, at the time of his death, was just about to enter college. He died September 6, 1890, and was buried on his twentieth birthday. Besides their own children, Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln have made a home for one of their nieces, Cora F., a daughter of Oscar Lincoln, who is a high school student.

Politically, Mr. Lincoln is identified with the Prohibition party, and served three years as assessor of Flora Township. He and his excellent wife are members of the South Side Baptist Church in Belvidere, in which he has officiated as deacon.

LIVINGSTON, Elisha W., retired farmer, teacher and merchant. Justice of the Peace and Notary Public, Capron, Ill. Of the teacher, with as much pertinence as of a man in any other avocation, it may be said that his good works live after him. To a considerable extent, especially during an earlier period of our history, the labor of the teacher was a labor of love; for, if it was not altogether gratuitous, it was in a financial way poorly requited. But there are rewards other than those of money, and the conscientious and successful teacher who lives long in a community sees them all about him. More intimately than almost any other, has he laid the foundation for general advancement, and he has the satisfaction of knowing that he has had a part in it, and that indirectly it is in no small sense the result of his own labors. These thoughts have been suggested by a consideration of the busy and useful career of the gentleman whose name appears above.

Elisha W. Livingston was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., April 14, 1840, a son of Jacob J. and Susannah (Guernsey) Livingston, and in the paternal line is of Scotch ancestry. His parents removed to Illinois in 1845, when he was about five years old. They came by the way of the lakes to Wankegan (then Southport), Ill., whence they pushed on to Beloit, Wis., their motor power being an ox-team. From Beloit, they came to Caledonia Township, Boone County, where Jacob J. Livingston homesteaded land. He was by trade a carpenter and mason, and busied himself with building operations until he saw his way clear to devote his time entirely to farming. He secured two hundred and forty acres of land, much of it heavily timbered, and with the aid of his sons cleared it and put it under cultivation. He erected a house which was his residence during his life time, and which is now owned by D. S. Kelley. It is a landmark three miles north of Caledonia near the township line. Mr. Livingston was a methodical man who observed much and thought deeply, and he kept a diary during all of his active life in which he recorded much material that would be invaluable for a history of the community in which he lived. Late in life he sold his property and removed to Arkansas, but soon returned to Illinois and became a member of the household of his son, Elisha W. Livingston. He was born in the State of New York, November 22, 1804, and died in Boone Township, January 26, 1883. His wife, who was Susannah Guernsey, was born in 1809 and died December 11, 1881, aged about seventy-two years. Of their children, eight sons and two daughters grew to manhood and womanhood. Elmira, who is the widow of George Ham, lives at Minneapolis, Minn.; Eri settled in Arkansas after the Civil War and died in 1899, aged sixty-eight years; Seth is living at Milo, Mo.; Rice, who is retired from active life, lives at Hot Springs, Ark.; Lucy Ann married William Conable, and is living in Kansas, aged about seventy-one years; Elisha W. was the next in order of birth; Abel F. (deceased) was the editor and publisher of a newspaper at Morrilton, Ark.; Matthew lives at Charles City, Iowa; John, of Axtell, Kan., has been a merchant there and has filled the offices of Postmaster and County Treasurer; Asher went to Arkansas soon after the Civil War and is a merchant at Conway, in that State. Eri, Rice, Abel, Matthew and John all served their country as soldiers in the War of the States, and John fought through the entire struggle, first as an infantryman and then as a cavalryman.

Elisha W. Livingston grew to manhood on his father's farm and November 22, 1862, when he was in his twenty-third year, married Miss Mary A. Hanson, daughter of N. E. Hanson, of Caledonia Township. Four years before that, in 1858, he had begun his career as a teacher at Beaverton, Boone County. In 1859 he went to Christian County, Ill., and there taught during the school years of 1859-60 and 1860-61. Returning to Boone County in 1861, he began farming and, in 1863, bought a farm in Manchester Township, not far from his father's homestead. There he remained until 1868, farming in season, threshing and hauling wood in the fall, and teaching during the winter months. From 1868 to 1872 he busied himself largely in taking a course at the Normal University and graduated with the class of the year last mentioned. After that he finished his classical studies at Beloit College, Wis. He then took up teaching, with assistant teachers under him, in graded schools. After he had taught thus in the Durand High School and the High School at Rockland, his health failed and he was obliged to retire to the farm, but he afterward taught winter schools until 1887. In that year he bought a hardware store at Capron and removed to that village. After a successful career there as a merchant, which extended through a period of sixteen years, he sold his store to his son Edwin M. Livingston, who had assisted him from the beginning and had for some years been his partner. The business was managed by the younger Livingston until quite recently, when he disposed of it. In the meantime Mr. Livingston had given necessary attention to his farming interests and had bought the old homestead of his wife's parents in Caledonia Township, known as the N. E. Hanson farm, which he still operates. He is in accord with the prohibition idea and wherever he has lived, has always been an active Sunday school worker. At one time he was Superintendent of two Sunday schools, and he still regularly teaches his Sunday school class.

Elisha W. and Mary A. (Hanson) Livingston have had children named as follows in the order of their nativity: Edwin M. was his father's partner and succeeded him in the hardware trade. Myrtle is the wife of Alexander McLaren, a wholesale merchant at Rockford, Ill. Lee A. is a railroad agent and telegraph operator.

Mr. Livingston, besides ably filling the offices of justice of the peace and notary public, has for many years been a school trustee at Capron.

LOOP, Albert E., cashier of the First National Bank of Belvidere, Ill., which position he has held since 1893, is one of the financial bulwarks of Boone County, and is one in whose hands the affairs of so great a moneyed institution are well placed. Mr. Loop was born in Belvidere, Ill.,

January 19, 1861, a son of Charles B. and Maria (Pierce) Loop. Major Charles B. Loop is the distinguished officer of the Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, who was specially detailed to accompany General Sherman in his famous march upon Atlanta. Major Loop distinguished himself upon this march and during the siege of Vicksburg, and was a brave and fearless soldier. Upon his return home his fellow citizens loaded him with honors. He was county clerk for twelve years, for twelve years was postmaster, for nine years was chief clerk in the grain inspection department and for two years was doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, at all times performing every service expected of him and proving himself a loyal, true and honorable citizen and gentleman.

Albert E. Loop was carefully educated in the public schools, graduating from North Belvidere High School, and later took a special course at Lake Forest University. In 1893 he was called upon to assume the office of cashier of the First National Bank of Belvidere, at No. 818 North State Street, which onerous position he has filled ever since, carefully guarding the interests of the stockholders and patrons, and placing the bank among the sound, reliable financial institutions of the State.

On January 18, 1894, Mr. Loop married Kate Lawrence, and two children have been born to them: Gertrude and Edwin A. Mr. Loop is a Republican and is now serving as chairman of the county central committee. He has always taken a lively interest in local and State politics, and while conservative, is much interested in all reasonable reforms, and furthers everything he believes will conserve the interests and promote the future advancement of Belvidere.

LUCAS, Oscar F., secretary of the Belvidere Farmers' Mutual Fire & Lightning Insurance Company, of Boone County, Ill., and a leading citizen of Belvidere, was born in Franklin, DeKalb County, Ill., eight miles south of Belvidere, November 9, 1840. His parents were Horace and Elizabeth (Hinkson) Lucas, of Connersville, Ind., the latter being a native of that village, and the former of New York State. Their marriage took place in Connersville, and they moved to Boone County, Ill., in 1838, locating at Blood's Point, Flora Township. Not long afterwards they changed their location to DeKalb County, and after living there about four years, returned to a farm at Blood's Point, which became the present Lucas homestead. On this place the father died in 1852, at the age of thirty-six years, the mother continuing to conduct the farming operations, for the purpose of rearing the family, the youngest of her seven children being only one year old, and the eldest but thirteen, at the time of their father's decease. The latter had a brother, Albert Lucas, who settled in the same locality a few years later, and after remaining there twenty years, went back to Indiana. The boys ultimately carried on the farm, the mother spending her last days in Belvidere, where she passed away in 1884. One of the seven children, Horace, died at the age of fifteen years. The others were as follows: Walter; Oscar; Mila Ann, who became the wife of Charles Gibbs and died in 1863; Catherine, who married Hawley Main, and died at Boone, Iowa, in 1897; Olive, wife of Josiah Tilson, a resident of that town, and Moses, a flour and feed dealer of Belvidere, where he has lived since boyhood.

Oscar Lucas still owns a part of the old homestead. He was twelve years old at the time of his father's death, and remained at home until 1862. In 1865 he located on a farm which he had bought adjoining the homestead, adding his share of the latter to it, and making one hundred and forty acres in all. It contained no improvements except a log house and stable, and he built a basement barn and two houses. After nearly fifty years of association with the home place, he left it in 1900, taking up his residence in Belvidere. In the meantime he had also become a carpenter and contractor, and for several years he followed his trade. For thirty-five years he was occupied largely in the settlement of estates in Boone and DeKalb Counties, attending to this matter in connection with the demise of many of the old settlers of Flora Township. He also acted in the capacity of guardian for a number of orphan children. He was a charter member of the Blood's Point Creamery, an establishment still in operation, which meant a great deal for the farmers of the vicinity, and for eighteen years was its secretary and salesman. His farm is now operated by his son, W. H. Lucas, the present supervisor of Flora Township.

On January 13, 1862, Mr. Lucas was married to Almira Lawton, of Fort Scott, Kan., where he went at that time. One son, Wilmer II., before mentioned, resulted from this union. The latter married Bessie Iles, and they have two children: Glen F. and Wyla. Almira (Lawton) Lucas died December 27, 1894. She came with her parents, when fourteen years old, from Pennsylvania to Illinois, from whence they moved, four years later, to Kansas. On June 10, 1897, at Kingston, DeKalb County, Ill., Mr. Lucas was married a second time, wedding Alice Taylor Fellows, born and reared in De Kalb County. A Republican, he takes an active part in affairs of his party. He served as assessor four years in Flora Township, and held the office of supervisor of Flora Township for six years, and is now in his fifth year as supervisor of Belvidere Township and is chairman of the board. He has been connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church for forty years, being one of the original members of the Charter Oak M. E. Church, which is located near his farm.

LUCAS, Wilmer H., the present efficient and highly esteemed supervisor of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., and one of the most prominent men of his locality, was born in the same township, July 15, 1863. Full particulars in regard to his parentage and family history may be found in a biographical record of his father, Oscar F. Lucas, of Belvidere, immediately preceding. The subject of this sketch, who is the only child of his parents, was reared on the paternal farm in Flora Township, receiving his education in the district schools in the vicinity of his home and in those of Kirkland, De Kalb County. In 1887 he located on the old homestead, where he has since successfully devoted his attention to general farming and raising stock.

On September 10, 1889, at Beloit, Wis., Mr. Lucas was united in marriage with Bessie Iles, born December 18, 1860, and a daughter of Richard and Eliza (Edwards) Iles, natives of England. The father and mother of Mrs. Lucas passed their last days in Flora Township, both dying at the age of fifty-eight years. Eleven children were born to them, of whom the wife of Mr. Lucas was the seventh. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas are the parents of two children: Glenn F. and Wyla A.

Politically, Mr. Lucas has always been an active Republican, exercising a marked influence in local affairs. He has held the offices of highway commissioner, township assessor and school director, and was elected supervisor of Flora Township in the spring of 1907, and the duties of that position are being fulfilled by him with commendable efficiency and fidelity. He is one of the most popular men in Boone County.

LUHMOM, Simon H., whose excellent farm of 160 acres, situated in Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., testifies to his ability as an agriculturist, is also known as one of the most enthusiastic Prohibitionists of his section. Mr. Luhmon is a son of Simon and Minnie (Staas) Luhmon, natives of Germany, who emigrated to the United States about 1867 and, for a short time, lived in Stephenson County, Ill., but later removed to Boone County, settling in Bonus Township, where the father died February 20, 1904, at an advanced age, the mother still surviving. They had nine children who lived to maturity, namely: Carrie, the wife of F. A. Mensenkamp; Louisa, the wife of August Kraft; Henry and John, of Belvidere; Christopher; Simon H.; Minnie, the wife of Henry Herbert; Anna, who married Charles Fill; and Sophia, who married Franz Tripp.

Simon H. Luhmon was born in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., October 9, 1870, and received his primary education in the common schools of this locality, later taking a course at the Metropolitan Business College, Chicago. After his return he engaged in farming, for the first two years renting land in Bonus Township, and then purchasing his present fine farm of 160 acres. On November 28, 1894, he was married to Miss Lillie Nixon, who was born in Bonus Township, December 8, 1875, daughter of Aniel and Julia (Hart) Nixon, the latter of whom died in Chicago, August 25, 1904, while the former survives. Mr. and Mrs. Nixon had six children, namely: Noah; Theresa, who died in Bonus Township at the age of thirteen years; Ezra and Elmer, both of whom died young; Nellie, the wife of Percy Hills; and Lillie B., the wife of Mr. Luhmon. After his marriage, Mr. Luhmon settled on the farm on which he now resides, and on which he has erected one of the finest country residences in Boone County. He has devoted most of his attention to dairy farming, keeping an average of thirty cows, and his success in his undertakings has been well merited. He and his wife are the parents of two children: Sidney E. and Donald R.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Luhmon is a Prohibitionist, and he has been a hard worker in behalf of his party. His ability has been recognized by his election to the office of School Director, and he takes a great interest in all township matters. He and Mrs. Luhmon are active members of the First Baptist Church of Belvidere, of which he has been for several years a Trustee, and formerly Superintendent of the Sunday school.

MANNING, George N., M. D., a skillful and highly esteemed physician of Garden Prairie, Boone County, Ill., was born in Carroll County, Ill., April 12, 1870, a son of Nelson W. and Melvina J. (Shaffer) Manning, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of Carroll County, Ill., where both parents spent their last days. Their family consisted of three sons and two daughters, George N. Manning, the third born of this number, was reared on the home farm in Carroll County up to the age of fourteen years, and then attended school at Naperville, Ill., for four years. At the end of this period he entered the medical department of Northwestern University, and after remaining there two years, spent a like period in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which institution he was graduated with the class of '94. He began the practice of medicine at Clarke City, Ill., continuing thus about one year, then locating at Garden Prairie, where he established his office in the fall of 1896. Since then he has been very successful, acquiring a large practice and gaining an enviable reputation. He is a member of the Boone County Medical Society.

On September 30, 1896, Dr. Manning was married at Lanark, Carroll County, Ill., to Mae Schriener, who was born in that county. The doctor and his wife have one son, El Donne. In fraternal circles, Dr. Manning is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Modern Woodmen of America.

MAREAN, William M., the popular and efficient superintendent of the municipal waterworks at Belvidere, Ill., and formerly, as well as now, prominently connected with other important enterprises, was born in Broome County, N. Y., May 16, 1853, a son of Marvin Clark and Olive A. (Howard) Marean, natives of New York, who settled in Belvidere in 1854. Marvin Clark Marean was born in Broome County, N. Y., June 8, 1827. One of his ancestors, Dorman Manrean, came from Normandy to America in 1636. In 1786, Norman Marean, grandfather of Marvin C. settled at Canaan, N. Y. His son, Henry, born in 1777, married Chloe Delano, of Kent, Conn., a descendant of Philip Delano, who crossed the ocean from Holland to Plymouth in the ship "Fortune," in 1636. In 1851 Marvin C. Marean married Olive Howard, born in Union, Broome County, N. Y., in 1854 commenced operating a stone quarry in Flora Township, continuing thus for two years. Then he followed farming in the same township until 1868, when he took up his residence in Belvidere, where for thirty years he has officiated as justice of the peace. Judge Marean is one of the most conspicuous and familiar figures in Belvidere, his commanding presence being the envy of many much younger men. In bearing he is dignified and courteous, and, in manner and speech, affable and genial. Two children were born to him and his wife, the subject of this sketch and another son named Harry. Politically, Judge Marean was a Whig in early life and became a Republican on the organization of that party. He has acted in the capacity of chairman of the Republican county committee of Boone County.

William M. Marean was one year old when his parents located in Belvidere, and has been a resident of Boone County ever since. Up to the age of sixteen years he remained on the home farm, going then to Belvidere and learning the trade of a carpenter, which he followed for twenty years throughout the country as a contractor and builder, also operating a planing mill several years. During most of this period he was in partnership with William H. Connell, under the firm name of Marean & Connell. In 1892 he sold out his interest in this business, becoming superintendent and manager of the Belvidere Electric Light Company, in which he was one of the original stockholders, acting as secretary for five years, until he assumed the latter position. On July 1, 1897, he became superintendent of the water works in Belvidere, under Mayor Moore, and has continued to act in that capacity up to the present time, the works being a municipal plant, installed during the administration of Mayor Heribert, in 1891. The plant now includes twenty-three miles of water main, with 193 hydrants, 1,065 meters and 1,504 service pipes. The entire cost of the plant, up to date, is $129,497.63; the operating expenses for 1907 being $7,579.40; and the total income, $10,987.28, making a self-sustaining enterprise, besides affording fire protection to the city. Seventy pounds is the normal standpipe pressure, the fire pressure being 100 pounds.

Mr. Marean was one of the promoters of the Belvidere Telephone Company, of which he is now secretary, having acted as treasurer for some time. Notwithstanding the cares and responsibilities involved in these various public and private duties, he is fond of outdoor sports, and finds some leisure for wholesome recreation, making occasional trips to the Wisconsin woods for hunting and fishing. He has some interesting trophies of his skill with gun and rod, among which is a fine deer head, mounted in his office.

On May 14, 1879, Mr. Marean was united in marriage with Alice Wood, of Manchester Township, Boone County, a daughter of William and Sarah A. Wood, her father being a well known farmer in that township. Three children resulted from this union as follows: Llewellyn M., a toolmaker for the National Machine Company, of Belvidere; Blanche E., office assistant of her father; Olive S., who died at the age of six years.

Politically, Mr. Marean is a Republican, and in fraternal circles he is identified with the A. F. & A. M., being a Knight Templar and a Shriner.

MARKLEY, Andrew J., M. D., physician and surgeon, of Belvidere, Ill., and one of the most prominent men of Boone County, was born on a farm near Archbold, Ohio, May 3, 1858, and is a son of Andrew L. Markley, a Pennsylvania German, who married Juliette Lingle. Dr. Markley worked his way through high school, and then through the Bennett Medical College, from which he was graduated with the degree of M. D. In 1881 he moved to Poplar Grove, Boone County, where he worked in a drug store and practised medicine, gaining a very valuable experience. In 1882 he located in Garden Prairie, where he remained in active practice until 1890, when he removed to Belvidere and still makes it his home with residence at No. 917 South State Street, and offices at No. 511 South State Street. During the eighteen years he has been located here, Dr. Markley has built up a valuable practice and is recognized as one of the leading members of the Boone County medical fraternity.

Not only has Dr. Markley been active in his profession, but has taken an equal interest in business affairs, is vice-president of the Second National Bank of Belvidere and treasurer of the Illinois Mutual Fire Underwriters. Through his energetic efforts St. Anthony Hospital was built at Rockford in 1899 and St. Joseph Hospital in Belvidere one year later. Dr. Markley is attending physician and surgeon of both. He has taken a very active part in his home politics as a member of the Republican party, and has been prominent in the school board, in which he has served for several years as member and president. He has also been coroner of Boone County, and in every office exhibited the same consideration and interest in the affairs of the people as though they pertained to his private business. Fraternally he is a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight Templar, Mystic Shriner, member of the Order of Elks and professionally is a member of the Boone and Winnebago County Medical Societies, and the American Medical Association. Three brothers of Dr. Markley are also practising physicians located in nearby cities.

On June 21, 1887, Dr. Markley married Belle B. Bills, at Fairbury, Neb., and they have one daughter, Hazel S. Markley. Few men stand higher in the esteem of their fellow citizens than Dr. Markley, and the confidence he inspires is of the kind to win and hold the friendship of the very best people of the community.

MARRIETT, Woodman R., M. D., a member of the medical fraternity at Capron, Boone County, Ill., was born in Wayne County, Pa., November 23, 1858, a son of Robert and Elizabeth Marriett, natives of Lincolnshire, England. The parents were friends in England and, coming over on the same sailing vessel, during their six weeks' voyage, were thrown much together, and were married soon after landing, and then lived in Wayne County, Pa., until 1859, when they came to Boone County, Ill., the son Woodman then being an infant. In Boone County they settled on the farm the father still occupies at the age of seventy-seven. Although advanced in years, he manages his property, his youngest son, Frank, attending to the actual work. Robert Marriett had served an apprenticeship to the trade of farming as it is taught in England, and understood it in every detail. He was very poor upon coming to Boone and had to work exceedingly hard. He made a first payment upon his land, intending to pay for it by degrees, but the heavy frosts during the first season cut off his crops, so the next year he chopped wood at three shillings per cord. The following year he had a fine crop and was able to meet his payments promptly. Understanding, as he did, the science of farming, he was enabled to make of his land one of the best pieces of farm property in the county. He added to his original holding until he had five hundred acres, all in Caledonia Township. His homestead one mile west of Poplar Grove is on the line of the Northwestern Railroad, and it is well stocked with high grade cattle and horses. The buildings are excellent and all put up by him. He has not been a public man, but while devoting himself to farming, always votes the Republican ticket and supports its candidates. He and his wife had a family of nine children, seven still living.

Dr. Marriett remained upon his father's farm until he reached his majority, later attending the Illinois State University, from which he was graduated in the class of 1880. After graduation, he was principal of schools at Port Byron, Ill., and while teaching read medicine, taking a medical course at Rush Medical College, Chicago, from which he was graduated in 1886, with the degree of M. D., which he secured through numberless sacrifices, as he had to work his way through the university and medical college. Immediately after graduation, he settled in Capron, Boone County, and there began a practice which he has since successfully prosecuted. He is a member of the Boone County Medical Society and the Illinois State Medical Association.

Dr. Marriett owns a fine 120-acre farm, seven miles from Capron, which he has farmed by a tenant on shares. This land is very valuable and Dr. Marriett has redeemed forty acres of it from the swamp by tiling, the value of which he learned through his father, who was one of the pioneers in tiling in Boone County. He is a director and vice-president of the Capron Bank, which is one of the first State banks in Boone County. While a strong Republican, he has not aspired to public office, although he has served as delegate to various State conventions and was a member of the noted convention of 1904.

On December 8, 1886, Dr. Marriett married at Hennepin, Ill., Annie R. Speer, who had been a student in the Illinois State University at the same time he was. They have one son, Speer, aged fourteen. They are members of the Congregational Church, but attend the Methodist Church at Capron, and take an active part in it.

Dr. Marriett is one of the representative physicians of Boone County and one who is universally respected and honored.

MARSHALL, George M.—Sound, conservative policies, directed by keen judgment and wide knowledge of values and men, are necessary attributes of those who control our great financial institutions. In Belvidere, the First National Bank is one of the leading institutions of this character, and its head, Mr. George M. Marshall, is one of the men in whom the people of Boone County have full confidence. Mr. Marshall, who has been connected with various business institutions in the State for many years, was born upon a farm near Sycamore, Ill., October 18, 1861. Ten years prior to his birth his father, Thomas Marshall, came from England to Kane County, Ill., when he was only eighteen years of age, and after living in Kane County three years, removed to DeKalb County, where, in 1856, he married Rachal Siglin, at Sycamore, Ill. They remained on the same farm for forty-nine years, but on March 1, 1907, they retired to Sycamore, since making their home in that city. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, namely: George M.; Taylor Z., who is a resident of Belvidere, associated with his brother George in sheep feeding, and having the largest sheep feeding yards in the county; Edwin O., a resident of Kirkland, Ill., who is engaged in coal and grain business; Leslie, a resident of Byron, Ill., engaged in the elevator business; and two daughters.

Until he was fifteen, George M. Marshall attended the common schools, after which he went to the Sycamore High School for two years, completing his education with a complete course at a Chicago business college. Soon after his marriage, Mr. Marshall, who had received very excellent training under his father, a thrifty and successful business man, embarked in the grain business at Charter Grove, Ill., where he continued until he moved to Belvidere in 1891, to enter the coal and grain business there. At the organization of the Columbia Heating Company in 1902, Mr. Marshall was one of its incorporators and stockholders, and remained connected with it until the interests of the Belvidere stockholders were purchased by the Pope Manufacturing Company, a Chicago concern. In 1904, Mr. Richard V. Carpenter organized the Boone County Abstract Company, with Mr. Marshall as president. During the years of prosperity and close application to business, Mr. Marshall amply demonstrated his fitness to handle important transactions, and since his election to the presidency of the First National Bank, on January 1, 1906, has displayed executive ability of high order, and skillfully guided the affairs of the institution with which he is connected through the crisis produced by the late panic in a manner to excite earnest commendation. Those who know Mr. Marshall best, believe that, in the following remark with which he is credited, he reveals his life principle: "Whatever cultivates care, close observation, exactness, patience and method, must be valuable training and preparation for all pursuits and duties."

On February 3, 1886, Mr. Marshall married Miss Susan S. Cottrell, at Sycamore, Ill., and three children have been born to them: Florence L., a sophomore at the State University at Madison, Wis.; Gilbert, a junior of the South Belvidere High School, and Thomas, yet in the eighth grade. Mr. Marshall is a Republican, but does not aspire to political honor, believing that the interests he represents are too weighty for him to give any of his attention to public affairs. However, he has always been interested in educational matters and has served as president of the board of education since 1901. He is equally prominent in church and charitable organizations, and is a man whose benevolence is measured only by his means. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are delightfully located at No. 703 Pearl Street, while his offices are at No. 204 North State Street. The family are all Methodists in religious faith.

McCLUSKY, Robert W., farmer, Capron, Boone Township, Boone County, Ill. During recent years, dairying has become of considerable importance in Northern Illinois. Here the conditions for feeding cattle and producing milk and milk products are ideal. The market is one of the best in the world, transportation facilities are favorable and good prices are obtainable. Therefore, many farmers, while giving attention to miscellaneous crops, devote considerable labor and capital to this industry. One of the farmers of Boone County who has achieved considerable success in this line is Robert W. McClusky, who was born in Boone Township, June 25, 1853, a son of John and Agnes (Parkhill) McClusky. His father was born in the North of Ireland, but of Scotch parentage, and grew to manhood in Scotland. In early life he learned the weaver's trade and, in his young manhood, crossed the ocean and found employment in one of the great spinning mills in Massachusetts. At Providence, R. I., he met and married Agnes Parkhill, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, who had been brought to America by her parents. About 1852—perhaps a year before the birth of Robert W. McClusky—Mr. and Mrs. McClusky and Mrs. McClusky's brothers, John and Robert Parkhill, came to Illinois, and the three men all bought land in Boone Township. About two years later the Parkhills removed to Rockford, Ill., and in 1860 John Parkhill went to North Adams, Mass., then to Fitchburg, Mass., where he finally died. Later Robert again lived in Boone Township, but he has long been a citizen of Belvidere, where he retired only recently, after forty years' success as a coal dealer. Soon after his arrival in Boone Township, John McClusky sold his land claim to his brother-in-law and bought a farm on Beaver Creek, on which he lived forty years and which is now owned by Alvin Dimond. He also acquired other farms in Boone Township. Since his retirement from active life, he has lived at Roscoe, Winnebago County. He was successful both as a farmer and stockman. A lover of good horses, he made a specialty of buying, selling and trading horses. Without being in the ordinary sense a politician, he is remembered by those whose neighbor he formerly was, as one who took a lively interest in public affairs and was prominent in all movements tending to the betterment of his fellow townsmen.

John and Agnes (Parkhill) McClusky became the parents of sons named: Robert W., George W. and John A. George W. and John A. have never married. The three brothers acquired the family homestead and two years later Robert W. sold his interest in it to George W. and John A., who have since owned and managed it, though they accompanied their father to Roscoe and have since lived with him there.

Robert W. McClusky was brought up on his father's farm and educated in the public schools. April 7, 1878, shortly before he was twenty-five years old, he married Miss Geunie Goodrich, a daughter of Nathan and Margaret (Kimball) Goodrich. Miss Goodrich was born at Chemung, Ill., but was early brought by her parents to Capron, where her father was successful as a tailor, and where she was reared to womanhood.

Her parents were natives of New York, and died in Capron, the mother in 1896 and the father in 1899. At the time of her marriage, Mrs. McClusky was in her nineteenth year. After his marriage Mr. McClusky located on his present farm, half a mile west of Caprou, and about a year later he bought it. Originally it contained 120 acres. He has added forty acres to it, making it a 160-acre farm, and he is the owner also of forty acres near the old McClusky homestead. Since 1880 he has devoted his farm to mixed crops, but cows have been his principal dependence, he having milked generally about twenty. He has been more than ordinarily successful in his special line. As a citizen he has won the respect of all who have known him. Politically, he is a member of the Republican party, but he is not an active politician and has never accepted any public office except such local offices as have been urged upon him by his fellow townsmen, notably that of Township Assessor, which he filled with great ability and fidelity for nine years. Robert W. and Gennie (Goodrich) McClusky have five children: Agnes M. is the wife of John Robinson, a farmer in Boone Township, and they have one son, Robert John; Margaret F. and Bessie have won success as school teachers in Boone County; Ida G. is a member of her parents' household; John R. is assisting his father in the management of his agricultural and general business interests.

McINNES, R. W., M. D.—In nearly every great crisis some one is raised up to lead the chosen people out of bondage, and in the case of Belvidere's necessity in 1896, it was Dr. R. W. McInnes who came to her rescue. The city had been growing beyond her improvements, and a man of thorough understanding was required at the head of affairs. For years Dr. McInnes had been strongly advocating a sanitary sewer system, water works extension, street and sidewalk renewals and a thousand and one other improvements which had to be made in order to attract new people and hold those already in the city. At this juncture, Dr. McInnes was nominated for mayor and elected without opposition. During his term of office he not only did all he proposed, but also gave the people a clean, business administration and placed Belvidere among the foremost cities of her size in the State. The work he accomplished will live as a lasting memorial to his efficiency and public spirit.

Dr. McInnes was born in Rockford, Ill., in 1857. After attendance on the public schools he took a four years' course at Beloit College, and still later entering the Northwestern University, was graduated from the medical department of that institution in 1884. Prior to entering the University, he had studied with Dr. D. S. Clark, then the leading medical practitioner of Winnebago County, and after his graduation became associated with Dr. Charles Scott, of Belvidere. When the latter died, his large practice naturally reverted to his young associate, Dr. McInnes, and it has since steadily advanced until he now occupies an enviable position in his profession. He now enjoys probably the most extensive practice of any physician in the county, and his time is so occupied that his beautiful home on North State Street sees but little of him. In 1886, Dr. McInnes married Emma E. Plane. Dr. and Mrs. McInnes are socially very popular, and politically Dr. McInnes is a powerful factor.

McINTYRE, Donald, for more than forty years a successful dairy farmer and stock-raiser in Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., and one of the most useful and respected members of the community, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, January 19, 1837. When twenty years of age he came to the United States and was employed by Charles Brown of Caledonia, Winnebago County, Ill., until his parents and his brother Peter joined him in the following year, and they rented land near Cherry Valley. In 1866 the family located on the present McIntyre farm in Boone Township, and Donald McIntyre is still living on the old homestead, where he and his brother Peter carried on farming together for twelve years. The marriage of Donald McIntyre took place January 23, 1879, when he was united to Ettie Arlington, a native of Boone Township and a daughter of John and Ellen (Twimcy) Arlington. She died March 26, 1886, leaving four children, as follows: Effie May, wife of Edward Thornton of Manchester Township, Boone County; John William and Donald George, both farming on the home place; and Duett, born about the time of his mother's death, and reared by his aunt, Mrs. Janet Robinson, for whom he is now manager. For seven years Mrs. Mary J. Nash, widow of Charles Nash, and her daughter, Minnie A., have been housekeepers at the McIntyre home. The farm consists of 160 acres, and has first-class improvements. About thirty cows are kept on the farm, dairying being the main work, together with raising hogs. Mr. McIntyre has also bred high-grade stock. In political matters he has taken an independent course, considering the qualities of the candidate rather than his party connection. Religiously he was reared in the Free Church of Scotland, and is now a member of the Congregational Church. In fraternal circles, he is identified with the Knights of the Globe.

Every year there is a re-union of the McIntyre family, and at the last re-union over one hundred descendants were present. The next gathering will be held at the home of Mrs. Watson. The first one was at the home of Mrs. Patterson, and the second was held at the home of Mrs. McCallum, and they all have been productive of much pleasure.

McINTYRE, Peter, an old resident of Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., one of its most successful dairy and stock farmers and a citizen greatly respected throughout the township, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, October 20, 1842. His parents were John and Barbara (McEachan) McIntyre, natives of that shire who crossed the ocean in 1858, coming directly to Illinois, and locating near Cherry Valley, where their younger son, Donald McIntyre, was living, the latter having come to this country during the preceding year. The family moved into a log house on the farm of Charles Brown, Donald's employer, where they remained a few months, and then moved to a farm belonging to Alexander Smith. Subsequently they rented a farm for five years in Winnebago County, Ill., just north of Cherry Valley, and still later, for two years, occupied the Larkin farm in the same vicinity. On leaving this place Peter McIntyre bought his present farm. For a number of years he carried on farming in partnership with his father and brother, and together they purchased land. In 1866 the McIntyre brothers bought at $22.50 per acre, two hundred and eighty acres which was covered with timber, except a small portion containing a house. This property is located in Boone Township, three and one-half miles west, and half a mile north of Capron, and three miles northeast of Poplar Grove. Here they continued as partners until 1875, having bought an additional forty acres, making three hundred and twenty in all. The farm is now divided, Peter having two hundred acres and Donald, one hundred and sixty, including the improvements. Peter started to develop another farm out of the original timber tract, of which but thirty acres was cleared. The parents remained on the old homestead, where the mother died in January, 1877, at the age of seventy-four years, and the father in October, 1887, when eighty-seven years old. The latter was living with Donald at the time of his death. Peter McIntyre has been on his present place forty-two years. It is nearly all under cultivation, only a small amount of timber remaining. The timber cut has paid for the clearing and breaking, the wood being worth $2.00 to $2.50 per cord on the farm, from $4 to $6 at Belvidere, and $2.50 to $3.50 at Capron. Aside from the breeding of Shorthorn cattle, the farm is principally devoted to dairy purposes, from thirty to thirty-five cows being kept. It has a good residence and other buildings, the bank barn, having been built in 1890. Mr. McIntyre had two brothers and six sisters, of whom one brother and one sister remained in Scotland but are now deceased. One sister is Mrs. Angus McLean; another, Katie, married David Watson, of Belvidere Township, and Janet, the last, is the widow of John Robison, and lives on a farm adjoining that of her brother Donald. Margarette, wife of Archibald Patterson, resides in Poplar Grove. Mary, deceased, married Archie McCallum.

On February 18, 1875, Peter McIntyre was married to Mary Silcox, and their union resulted in seven children, as follows: Mamie, wife of Charles Maitland, of Leroy Township, Boone County; John; Daniel; Peter; Barbara, a teacher at Hunter, Ill.; Robert, a student in the Rockford Business College; and Charles, who is attending school. John is the owner of farming land situated in Todd County, Minn.

Politically, Mr. McIntyre is a Republican. His religious connection is with the Congregational Church at Poplar Grove. Fraternally, he is affiliated with the M. W. A. A biographical record of his brother, Donald McIntyre, may be found elsewhere in this volume.

McKISKI, Joseph, farmer and stock-raiser, a stock-holder in the Farmers' State Bank at Belvidere, Boone County, Ill. There are probably more truly self-made men in the German element of our population than in almost any other that can be mentioned. The trouble with many men who would succeed, but overlook their opportunities, is that they have too little respect for the day of small things. In fact, many men fail to see chances for successful endeavor that lie all about them. In looking for large and spectacular beginnings, they overlook small ones full of promise. The native German is a man of thrift, who has learned to economize in small things and to plan for and count small savings. While ambitious to have everything of the best quality, he is willing to wait for costly improvements and conveniences until he can afford them. The writer has before him the pleasant task of briefly recording the facts in the life of an Austrian, who began life in America most modestly and, by hard work and the exercise of frugality, has advanced to a proud position among his fellow townsmen.

Joseph McKiski was born in Laudscreun, Austria, September 30, 1863, a son of Anton and Anna McKiski. He was brought to America in 1867, when about four years old, by his father, who settled on a farm four miles northwest of Belvidere, where he is still living, aged sixty-eight years. W. Gritzbauch, his mother's uncle, a tailor by trade, had come to Belvidere soon after 1840. His father had been a cooper in his native land, but here gave his attention entirely to farming. His mother died about three years ago.

Following are the names of the children of Anton and Anna McKiski: Joseph, who is the immediate subject of this sketch; Rose, who married David Graham, of De Kalb County; Lena, who is the wife of John Henninger, a farmer near Belvidere; William, who is living with his father; Frank, a farmer near Belvidere; Edward, who is farming his father's old homestead. Joseph McKiski was brought up not only to a knowledge of the farm, but to a knowledge of farm work, gained by hard practical experience. He obtained a common school education and assisted his father until February 8, 1886, when he was between twenty-two and twenty-three years old. He married Sarah Henninger, a daughter of George and Sarah Henninger. Miss Henninger was born in Alsace-Lorraine in 1863, and was brought by her parents to America when she was about three years old. The family lived for a time in Cook and Kane Counties, Ill. She and a brother, who is also a resident of Boone County, are the only members of the family now living. She has borne her husband four children who are here mentioned in the sequence of their birth, and all of whom are living under their parents' roof: Iva Belle, Lillie, Ray Walter and Florence.

After his marriage Mr. McKiski operated rented farms for eight years, living on one farm four years and on another the succeeding four years. He then bought the Barker farm three miles north of Belvidere. It contained about one hundred and fifty acres. By later purchases of eight, two, twelve, thirty-two, four, and ten and one-fourth acres respectively, he has increased his holding to two hundred and eighteen and one-fourth acres. The bulk of his land was bought for about forty dollars an acre, but for some of it he has paid as high as one hundred and fifty dollars an acre. When he took the original place in hand, both land and buildings were in bad condition. He devoted himself persistently and systematically not only to the enlargement but to the improvement of the farm. The soil is now of excellent quality for productiveness, the buildings are as good as any in that part of the county, and the place is supplied with a windmill and three water tanks. While giving considerable attention to miscellaneous crops, Mr. McKiski makes a specialty of his dairy department, keeping forty cows and selling about twenty-five hundred dollars' worth of milk every year. He also grows hogs and other stock.

When Mr. McKiski began farming on his own land he had about two thousand dollars to invest, having as a renter doubled the one thousand dollars capital with which he had entered upon his married life. Not only has he paid for his land and improvements, but he is now the possessor of a snug little fortune, with considerable money invested in real estate here and there, and in the stock of the Farmers' State Bank of Belvidere. From time to time he has dealt quite largely in cows, buying when he could do so to advantage, and selling when he was certain of a satisfactory profit. Politically he is a member of the Republican party, ever alert for the success of its men and measures, no less than for the progress and prosperity of his township and county. He fully agrees with the late President McKinley in the statement that business is politics and politics is business. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Belvidere.

McMASTER, Cephas H.—Agricultural interests are occupying the time and attention of many of our most progressive men, who are more and more realizing that there is money and position to be gained from the land. In Illinois, one of the greatest agricultural States in the Union, especially is this true; and, among those who have proven this for themselves is Cephas M. McMaster, of Bonus Township, Boone County, a son of David McMaster who was born in Sherburne Village, Chenango County, N. Y. He came west in 1838, settling in Boone County, Ill., and taking up a Government claim of eighty acres, for which he paid $1.25 per acre, in Section 29, Bonus Township. On it he began making a substantial home, first building on it a good log house. Here he followed farming until his death in July, 1899. His wife had died on the same farm in August, 1869. Their family numbered seven children, of whom two died in infancy. The others were: Alfred F.; Clara E., who died on the home farm; Matilda E., wife of Benjamin S. Herbert; Cephas H., and Phosa L. The mother of Cephas H. McMaster was Phoebe (Green) McMaster, a native of Oswego, N. Y., where she was born a daughter of Horace and Orrinda (Farmer) Green, and granddaughter of Silas and Deborah (Brown) Green. Silas Green was a soldier in the Revolution, and was severely wounded in the battle of Narragansett Bay. He was a cousin of General Nathaniel Green, and also cousin of Colonel Christopher Green, the Green family having always been prominent in the country's history.

Cephas H. McMaster was born June 5, 1859, and reared in Bonus Township, receiving his education in the common schools and remaining at home until June, 1894, when he moved to the farm he now occupies. He has always been engaged in farming and stock-raising, and owns four hundred acres of excellent land. On February 14, 1883, Mr. McMaster was married to Florence A. Reed, born in Dorsetshire, England, January 23, 1858, a daughter of George W. and Patience (Loveridge) Reed, whose nativity was also English. They came to the United States in 1871, continuing on to Illinois, and locating in Boone County, near Garden Prairie, where they died, the mother in October, 1892, and the father, September 10, 1903. For more than twenty years George W. Reed served as Township Clerk of Bonus Township. One son, Alva H., was born to Mr. and Mrs. McMaster. Politically. Mr. McMaster is a Republican, and served on the Board of Thistle Commissioners one year. He is one of the Trustees of the Congregational Church at Garden Prairie, of which Mrs. McMaster and their son are active members. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being a member of Belvidere Encampment.

MERRIMAN, Eugene D., Superintendent of Schools of North Belvidere, and one of the leading educators of Boone County, is a young man of wide experience, scholarly attainments and special ability for the profession he has followed for the past twenty years. Prof. Merriman was born August 8, 1871, at Huntington, Ind., a son of H. T. and Angeline (Broughman) Merriman. After completing a public school course in Huntington County, Ind., Mr. Merriman attended the Indiana State Normal School, and after several years of study in that institution, was one of the teachers of Huntington County. Removing from Huntington County he was placed in charge of schools at East Chicago, Ind., and remained in that responsible position until 1900, when he entered Cornell University, from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1905. He is at present a student of Chicago University, from which institution he soon expects to receive his Master degree. Since 1905 he has been superintendent of schools of North Belvidere, and under his able management many reforms have been effected and innovations instituted which have resulted advantageously to his pupils. Prof. Merriman is thoroughly versed in the science of pedagogy and introduces all the newest ideas into his work. His teachers are very efficient and the schools of his charge have never been in as good a condition as now.

A Republican in politics, Prof. Merriman comes of loyal people on both sides of the house, his grandfathers having both been Union soldiers. He is a member of the National Educational Association, the Northern Illinois Educational Association and a fellow of the Masonic order. His religious affiliations are with the Methodist Church. In 1898 Prof. Merriman was married to Lucinda E. Stout, at Huntington, Ind., and one child has been born to them—Merrill V. The pleasant home of Prof. and Mrs. Merriman is located at No. 215 W. Perry Street, where they are surrounded by an atmosphere of literary refinement which is much appreciated by those privileged to visit them.

METGE, Charles, an energetic, thorough and thriving farmer of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., and a man of reliable character and blameless life, was born in the Province of Brunswick, Germany, January 24, 1854, a son of Charles and Caroline (Fiehler) Metge, who emigrated to the United States in 1867, settling in Calumet County, Wis., where they passed the remainder of their lives, the father dying in 1896. Their family consisted of three sons and two daughters. Charles Metge, who was the fourth child, accompanied his parents to this country and lived in Calumet County, Wis., until 1892. He was married in that county on January 6, 1880, to Mary Luckow, who was born in Waukesha, Wis., May 25, 1861, a daughter of Christian and Sophia (Hagen) Luckow. Her parents spent their last years in Calumet County, Wis., the mother dying in 1895, and the father in 1901. Four of their children reached maturity, of whom Mary was the youngest.

After his marriage, Mr. Metge settled down on a farm in the above named county, where he lived until 1892, when he moved to Boone County, Ill., residing one year in Belvidere. He then purchased the farm on which he now lives, containing one hundred and sixty acres, with good buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Metge are the parents of twelve children, as follows: Laura C., wife of William E. Glender; Fred W.; Lena, wife of William Wolcott; Henry, Telma E., Anna F., Bertha, Marie, William, Millie, and Freda. Five of their children died in infancy. Politically, Mr. Metge is a zealous supporter of his party, and has filled the office of School Director. He and his wife are members of the German Lutheran Church.

MEYERS, Charles G., President of the Farmers' State Bank of Belvidere, Ill., and one of the most prominent citizens of his locality, was born in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., March 28, 1858, a son of George and Julia (Huber) Myers, early settlers in Boone County. The parents passed their closing years in Boone County.

Mr. Meyers was reared on the paternal farm in Spring Township, receiving his education in the common schools. He was trained to the life of a farmer, and has followed agricultural pursuits as his principal occupation ever since. On the organization of the Farmers' State Bank of Belvidere, he was chosen its first president and has since filled that responsible position. He is regarded as a safe, conservative and sound financier, and in connection with matters of investment and speculation, enjoys the confidence of the community. He is the owner of a very desirable farm, well improved, and containing about five hundred acres of land.

On April 11, 1883, in Genoa, DeKalb County, Ill., Mr. Meyers was united in marriage with Addie Eichler, born in that county, and a daughter of George and Sophia Eichler. Mr. and Mrs. Meyers have five children, namely: Albert C., Frank G., George E., and Harvey E. and Charlotte S., twins. Mr. Meyers is identified with the Republican party in political action, and has rendered creditable public service in the offices of highway commissioner and school director. He and his wife have taken an active part in church and Sunday school work, and he is the superintendent of the Davis Methodist Church Sunday School.

Mr. Meyers has been a breeder and raiser of horses for many years, and has also dealt in them extensively, meeting with marked success in this line of business, as in all others to which he has turned his attention.

MEYERS, Daniel, a thrifty, worthy and highly respected farmer of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., where his farming operations have been attended by profitable results, a son of George and Julia (Huber) Meyers, natives of Baden, Germany, who had a family of eight children. On coming to the United States they settled in Spring Township, Boone County. Daniel, who was the fourth child, was born on the Meyers homestead in Spring Township, October 28, 1865, and remained at home until he was twenty-two years old, when he rented land and began farming for himself, continuing this five years. He then purchased the eighty acres where he now lives, and two years afterwards bought another eighty-acre tract, so that his farm now comprises one hundred and sixty acres, the greater part of which is improved. The first buildings erected by him were destroyed by fire on the evening of August 3, 1905, having been struck by lightning. These he at once replaced with more modern structures.

On September 17, 1890, Mr. Meyers was married in Flora Township, Boone County, to Mary

G. Groves, born at Groves' Corners in the same township, October 12, 1868. Her father was the late Andrew J. Groves, a native of Maine, the birthplace of her mother, Lydia (Rice) Groves, being Towanda, N. Y. They settled in Flora Township at an early period. Mr. Groves' death occurred in his seventieth year, while he was on a visit to his son, Eugene, early in November, 1901. His widow still survives. Those of their children who reached maturity are five in number, of whom Mrs. Meyers was the fourth. Mr. and Mrs. Meyers have four children, namely: Arthur H., Gertrude S., Carlton D., and Robert E. Mr. Meyers and wife are active members of the Davis Methodist Episcopal Church of Spring Township.

MEYERS, Edgar, a worthy representative of the younger element of the agricultural class in Boone County, Ill., was born on the old Meyers homestead in Spring Township, Boone County, July 10, 1872. Of the eight children who constituted the family of his parents, George and Julia (Huber) Meyers, he was the seventh. He was reared on the paternal farm, received his education in the common schools, and began farming for himself in 1898. Up to the age of twenty-three years he had lived with his parents, and then, for three years, was employed by his brother, John F. Meyers, on the latter's farm. At the end of this period he rented land, on which he farmed six years, and in 1904 returned to the homestead property, where he has since lived. He is the owner of one hundred and fifteen acres, which he has cultivated with profitable results.

On September 5, 1900, Mr. Meyers was united in marriage with Lena Hook, who was born in Baden, Germany, January 24, 1879, and is a daughter of Christian and Caroline (Sexauer) Hook, natives of Baden. Mrs. Hook's father died in Germany; her mother still survives. Their family consisted of eight children, of whom Lena was the fourth. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Meyers.—Walter G. and Allie C. J. Mr. Meyers and his wife are members of Zion Evangelical Church.

MEYERS, George W.—Success in any line of industrial activity means constant, persistent endeavor directed along legitimate channels. Boone County is peculiarly well adapted for farming, and many of the best farms in Illinois he within its confines, and its farmers rank among the best in the State. George William Meyers of Belvidere is recognized as a good, up-to-date farmer and breeder of carriage horses, and a representative citizen who has served his township well both as a public official and as a private citizen. He was born in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., January 3, 1863, a son of George Meyers and Julia (Huber) Meyers. The father was born in Baden, Germany, October 19, 1831, and the mother at Eppinger, Germany, May 28, 1832. George Meyers was a soldier in the German army, who in 1855 came to the United States in a sailing vessel, the voyage consuming forty-one days. He settled in Pennsylvania, but later he and a brother drove an ox-team to Belvidere, Ill., at an early day becoming pioneers of this locality.

George W. Meyers attended the Davis School in the town of Spring, worked upon the farm, and when ready to begin life for himself, was assisted by his father, as were the other seven children of this staunch old German thoroughly Americanized. For eight years Mr. Meyers rented a farm, then purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, where the family resided for fifteen years, afterward moving to Belvidere, where they now reside. Mr. Meyers has always been a strong Republican, and in April, 1897, was honored by his party by election to the office of Tax Collector, in which capacity he discharged his duties faithfully and acceptably. He has been associated with the Bell Telephone Company, the Genoa Bank, and is now a Director of the Farmers State Bank of Belvidere. In religious belief he is a member of the Evangelical Methodist Church.

On December 29, 1892, Mr. Meyers was married to Madeline Murphy, born in the town of Spring, November 10, 1865. Mrs. Meyers attended school at Blood's Point, and later in the old brick school house in Belvidere, under Professor Gibson and E. E. Brown, and at the age of seventeen obtained a certificate, and at that remarkably early age began teaching school, thus continuing for two and one-half years. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Meyers: John Boyd, born November 8, 1893; Marguerite, born April 27, 1895; Grace Marjorie, born March 20, 1897; Mary Collins, born March 5, 1899; Mabelle, born December 6, 1900; and George Murphy, born October 22, 1903. Mr. Meyers is a very conscientious man and possessed of a strong will; what he determines to do, he accomplishes. He possesses a social disposition and is never happier than when entertaining a house full of guests. His love for his home is very strong, and he is regarded as an excellent neighbor and true friend, the kind of a man that Boone County is proud to own.

MEYERS, John F., a worthy, substantial and extensive farmer of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., whose name has always been a synonym for honesty and reliability among his neighbors, was born on the old Meyers homestead in Spring Township, November 21, 1860. His parents, a history of whom is given in another sketch in this connection, were George and Julia (Huber) Meyers, natives of Baden, Germany, who had a family of eight children. John F. Meyers, who was the second of this number, received his education in the common schools and remained at home until he reached the age of nineteen years. He was then employed for about two years in Belvidere, Ill., returning to the farm in the fall of 1881, where he has since been engaged in farming and dealing in live-stock. He is the owner of about four hundred acres of land, on which he has erected good buildings.

On December 28, 1882, Mr. Meyers was married to Minnie Sexauer, who was born in Baden, Germany, a daughter of John Jacob and Magdelaine (Kneiser) Sexauer, both of whom spent their entire lives in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Meyers have two children,—Frederick W. and Julia K.

Mr. Meyers has always taken a good citizen's interest in township affairs. In his political relations he is a Republican. He and his wife are members of the Zion Evangelical Church of Kingston, DeKalb County. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America.

MILLIKEN, George S., one of the most substantial and highly respected farmers of Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., was born on the old Milliken homestead in the same township, December 20, 1850. He is a son of James S. Milliken, deceased, who was born in Jaffrey, N. H., October 9, 1816, and died February 2, 1880, his marriage having taken place in Illinois, January 4, 1843. The latter's father, John Milliken, was born in the same place, February 26, 1790, and died at the age of eighty-four years. Jaffrey was also the birthplace of John

Isaac G. Witbeck

Milliken's wife, Dolly (Stevens) Milliken, who was born March 25, 1793, and died in her ninety-fifth year. They located in Marengo, Ill., about the year 1838, and in 1842 James S. and his brother, Charles (born in Jaffrey, October 12, 1820), worked together with their father, having secured a tract of nearly three hundred acres of government land in Boone Township. This they started operating upon as one farm in partnership. Their first dwelling was built of logs, and the stone house on the farm was built in 1855, the date being marked on the building. The father, who died at the age of eighty-five years, made his home with his son Charles, his wife passing away when ninety-one years old. The house where Charles then lived was built about 1850, and there the two boys were reared. Another son, George, died at the age of seventeen years.

James married Rachael Mitchell, who was born in Pennsylvania July 16, 1826, a daughter of Thomas and Hester Mitchell, neighbors there. Rachael came to Illinois with her two brothers, Samuel and Alexander, in 1837, when eleven years old. The next winter her father came, and in the succeeding fall her mother joined them. Soon Samuel went to Sugar River, Wis., Alexander farmed in the vicinity until 1859, when he started for Pike's Peak, dying en route. Rachael was the only one of the family to remain in Boone County. Her parents were among the first settlers on the prairie. They sold out and moved away, the father dying in Kansas and the mother passing away near Lake Superior. Rachael still lives in the stone house, in her eighty-second year. She well remembers the early conditions of the place. Wolves howled about the early home and large droves of deer were often seen. Prairie fires were frequent. A band of Indians camped in the woods near Capron all of one winter, and the Indian trail passed by her father's house, but the family was never molested.

Charles Milliken married Sarah Gardner, and, in 1885, they sold their farm and moved to California, where both died, he at the age of eighty-six years. Two of their grandchildren are the sole survivors of the family. John and Charles were partners for nearly forty years, and in early days the two brothers conducted a band and orchestra. James Milliken taught dancing schools at Woodstock, Ill., and elsewhere in the vicinity, and all were widely known, remaining active until they reached an advanced age. While Prof. Orris J. Milliken was lecturing at Rockford, Ill., he was handed an invitation to a dance, which took place at Chenuing, Ill., on July 4, 1854, the music being furnished by the Milliken band.

In 1885, George and Orris J. Milliken, sons of James Milliken, bought the Charles Milliken farm. James Milliken occupied the old stone house until his death, at the age of sixty-two years. Besides his two sons, the family consisted of three daughters, the succession being as follows: Arvilda, who has always remained with her mother; George; Vienna, wife of Frank Walters, a farmer of Rockwell City, Ia.; Parthenia, who died unmarried when twenty-two years old; and Orris J. The sons were Republicans in politics, and Charles served as township assessor for several years. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1886 George S. Milliken bought one hundred and eighty acres of land, which was a part of the original farm of his brother. He carried on mixed farming, and formerly kept many cows.

George S. Milliken has passed nearly all his life on the home place, going away at intervals, but always returning. On September 14, 1885, he was married to Ellen Eggleston, a daughter of W. F. and Sarah A. Eggleston, born in New York State, near Lancaster, Erie County. When five years of age, Mrs. Milliken was brought to Boone County by her parents, who were pioneer settlers in their locality, both dying when eighty-two years old. Mr. and Mrs. Milliken have no children of their own, but have cared for two boys—Paul Henry, whom they took when he was ten years old, and who was a member of their family for twelve years, and William Binkley, who came to them at the age of sixteen years and remained until he was twenty. Mr. Milliken is fond of recreation and a lover of good horses, usually keeping a few speedy "drivers."

MONTGOMERY, James, farmer. Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. The Montgomery family is one of the most honorable in America. Did space permit, the names of many of its representatives, from the time of the historic General Montgomery, might be introduced here. However, such assurance of the worth of the Montgomeries in general will not be required by citizens of Boone County who are personally acquainted with the subject of this sketch, in whose admirable character are combined many of those traits which have given others of the name high standing among their fellow men.

James Montgomery was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, July 4, 1834, and his birthday alone would seem to entitle him to American citizenship. His parents were James and Jane (Caldwell) Montgomery, both of whom were born in the Land of the Thistle. In 1842, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, with their family, emigrated to America and located on a farm in Winnebago County, Ill., near the dividing line between that county and Boone County. There they lived, labored and prospered until death called them from the world's activities. Mrs. Montgomery died aged only thirty-nine years, in the spring of 1843. Mr. Montgomery survived her until August, 1871, when he was seventy-four years old. They had seven children, of whom their son James was the fourth in order of birth.

The younger James Montgomery was eight years old when he came with his parents from Scotland to the United States. He lived with his father in the edge of Winnebago County, going to school and acquiring a practical knowledge of farming until 1861, when he settled on a farm in Guilford Township, Winnebago County, which his father had given him as a financial start in life. There he lived until 1870. In March of that year he sold that farm and bought the farm in Caledonia Township on which he has since lived, and which comprises one hundred and sixty acres of rich land, most of which is highly improved.

Mr. Montgomery has, during all his active years, been deeply interested in the progress and prosperity of his township and its people. He has held the office of supervisor, has been assessor, has served his fellow citizens as school director for more than a quarter of a century, and has ably performed the duties of school trustee. He and his wife are active and helpful members of the Congregational Church, warmly devoted to all its interests, and he has for more than thirty years filled the office of deacon.

November 20, 1860, Mr. Montgomery married Miss Lavinia A. Tofflemire, a native of Canada. Mrs. Montgomery bore her husband five children, namely: Albert F., A. Clark, J. Ernest, Jennie E., and Allen R. She died in Caledonia Township, March 10, 1877, aged forty-one years. Her son, Albert F., and her daughter, Jennie E., are also deceased. December 12, 1879, he married at Rockford, Ill., Miss Celia M. Edgell, a native of Manchester Township, Boone County, born October 26, 1847, a daughter of Stedman M. and Abigail Sage (French) Edgell, more detailed mention of whom will be found in a biographical sketch of their son F. Willis Edgell, which appears on another page of this work. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery have two sons named Robert E. and George E. Montgomery.

MOORE, William H., in point of duration of service, the oldest man connected with the National Sewing Machine Company, of Belvidere, Ill., and one of the most prominent citizens of the community, was born in Germany, April 26, 1817, a son of William H. Moore. He moved from Chicago to Belvidere in 1886, with the June Manufacturing Company, and has since been identified with every phase of sewing machine manufacture, and being familiar with all departments of the work. The Moore family residence on East Lincoln Street, Belvidere, is one of the city's pleasantest modern homes, known to all for its good cheer and hospitality.

In politics, Mr. Moore is an old time Republican. He was elected to the City Council in 1892, serving two years and making an enviable record. In 1895 the people of his ward insisted on his becoming their representative for another term, and he was again elected without opposition. He was foremost in advocating reforms, and active in promoting the needed sewer system, as well as in establishing a fire department, being made chairman of the fire and water committee. Fraternally, he is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M., being a member of the Freeport Consistory of the Scottish Rites; the Crusade Commandery, at Rockford, and Tebala Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

MORAN, Frank T., the present efficient postmaster of Belvidere, Ill., and editor and proprietor of the "Belvidere Daily Republican," was born in Shirland, Winnebago County, Ill., May 12, 1872. In early youth, Mr. Moran received his primary education in the public schools, and after attending the Rockford Academy, taught school for several terms and then devoted his attention to newspaper work, beginning as a reporter and subsequently becoming a city editor of the "Rockford Republican." In 1892 he established "The Belvidere Republican," the first successful daily paper in Belvidere. In February, 1902, he was appointed by President Roosevelt postmaster for the city of Belvidere, and was re-appointed March 5, 1906.

Mr. Moran was married April 3, 1894, to Edna Galey, of Rockford, Ill. He and his excellent wife stand high in the esteem of all classes in the community.

MORSE, Byron J., a man of fine traits of character and an upright citizen, who is the owner of considerable real estate in Belvidere, Ill., his place of residence, besides his extensive property interests elsewhere, was born in Vermont, December 2, 1852, a son of William Sprague Arnold Morse, deceased, a merchant, manufacturer and farmer by occupation. The latter was born in Windsor County, Vt., February 24, 1816, and there, in 1836, married Eliza Cady. In 1856 he came to Baileyville, just south of Freeport, Ill., and thence moved in 1859 to Boone County, becoming a manufacturer of agricultural implements at Belvidere. He did a good business in making grain seeders and horse hay rakes, continuing in this line until 1866. In that year he located on an improved farm in Squaw Prairie, two and a half miles north of Belvidere, where he remained twenty years. In 1874, he bought nearly one thousand acres of land in Grundy County, Iowa, hiring men to operate it, but giving it his supervision. In 1885 he removed to Iowa, following farming there near Grundy Center until the time of his death, March 8, 1897. His wife died in Chicago, January 21, 1902, and she and her husband are buried at Belvidere. Although not a church member, he was a Bible student, and enjoyed arguments with his neighbors on scriptural matters, especially with one of his friends (Deacon Tripp), often taking the side of a question which was contrary to his, in order to bring out the best presentation of views on the opposite side from the worthy deacon. In politics he was a Republican. He and his wife had two children, namely: Harriet Lavina, wife of C. H. Peck of Chicago, and Byron J. At the age of twenty-five years the latter went to Iowa with his father and spent four years on the paternal farm. Afterwards he spent much of his time on the Iowa farm, until 1882. After his father's death the estate was sold, and Byron J. remained at Grundy Center, where he was engaged in the furniture business about five years.

In 1900 he decided to return to Illinois, his wife's people being residents of Belvidere. He invested in Belvidere real estate, at the same time acquiring farming land in the cotton section of Oklahoma, near Hastings. His income is largely from rentals.

The marriage of Mr. Morse took place March 16, 1882, on which date he wedded Sarah A. Gray, a daughter of Hartwell and Adaline (Giles) Gray, who moved from Bangor, Me., to Boone County, in 1866. Mrs. Morse was born in Bangor June 27, 1855. Her father was a farmer on Squaw Prairie, and also a produce dealer in Belvidere, where, after living in retirement several years, he died at the age of eighty-one years. His widow survived him until May, 1907, passing away when eighty-three years old. Mr. Gray held the office of street commissioner in Belvidere. Mr. and Mrs. Morse have three children, namely: Erle Raymond; Nellie Blanche, Mrs. Robert B. Blain, with Nelson Morris & Co., Chicago; and Adaline Eliza, a student in the Belvidere High School. Erle R. Morse received a high school education, and was then employed in connection with the St. Louis Exposition, subsequently securing a place in the wholesale grocery establishment of Franklin McVeagh & Co., Chicago. In that concern he has risen from the grade of an office boy to that of assistant superintendent of a manufacturing department.

Politically, Byron J. Morse has always been a strong Republican, but averse to seeking public office. In fraternal circles, he is affiliated with the M. W. A., and the K. of P. He is a close and discriminating reader of general literature and a man of pronounced home inclinations. Mrs. Morse is a member of the Domestic Science Club of Belvidere. Both are highly esteemed by all who know them.

MURCH, George W.—Every community has certain progressive men to whom its people look whenever any crisis in civic or business life occurs. Upon such men much devolves, and to them all credit is due for the flourishing condition of the several communities they have so materially assisted. The history of Boone County would not be complete without special mention of George W. Murch, the venerable financier and business man of Belvidere, who was born at Cortland, N. Y., January 19, 1830, a son of Martin and Polly Murch, who resided in New York until they removed to Belvidere with their son George W., where they died some years later.

As early as 1849 Mr. Murch left the homestead in New York and with so many others sought fortune in the West. He first settled in Putnam County, Ill., and there applied himself to teaching for a year. However, in 1850, he with other young men, started for California. They walked to St. Joseph, Mo., and there joining a party, proceeded across the plains with ox-teams and prairie schooners. It took one hundred and sixteen days to make the journey, but when they reached their destination they immediately commenced mining. After two years, however, Mr. Murch decided that he preferred the slower but surer industrial methods of Illinois, and returning to Belvidere via Panama and New York, settled down as a private citizen and business partner with his brother, L. H. Murch, in a harness shop. Later he embarked in the clothing business, carrying a line of clothing, boots and shoes in the same building used for the harness business. In 1857, when the south side of Belvidere began to show signs of becoming a good locality for the centering of trade, Mr. Murch had the foresight to build a block on that side of the city and conducted his business from two stores, thus continuing until 1874. At that time the two stocks were consolidated, the harness shop closed, and Mr. Murch continued in the clothing business alone until his retirement in 1893. However, a man of his good business judgment was not to be left alone, and his services were required in 1901, when he was called upon to assume the presidency of the Peoples Bank of Belvidere. In 1885 when the proposed removal of the June Manufacturing Company of Chicago to Belvidere was before the people of this city for consideration, Mr. Murch was appointed chairman of the citizens committee having the matter in charge. The soliciting of subscriptions to stock and donations involved much hard work, and Mr. Murch labored strenuously, meeting with unqualified success, the extensive plant known as the present National Sewing Machine Company being located in Belvidere through his efforts. He was made director of the original company, and has ever held the complete confidence of the people. Mr. Murch has also been called upon to give his services to the people of his community as township trustee, city treasurer and member of the board of supervisors, and has faithfully and efficiently discharged the onerous duties pertaining to each. He has always been open and fair in all his dealings, has been active in public affairs and has ever striven to establish a high standard of citizenship for himself, as well as for others to follow. In 1854 Mr. Murch joined the Odd Fellows at Belvidere, the lodge then having fifty-four members, of whom Mr. Murch is the only one now living.

In 1857 Mr. Murch married Miss A. L. Amsden, at Belvidere, and they have two children: Mrs. J. F. C. Dick, of California, and Mrs. A. W. Burton, wife of the Rev. A. W. Burton, at home.

MURPHY, John Williamson (deceased), formerly one of the most energetic, progressive, and successful of the early farmers of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., and an extensive landholder in other parts of the country, was born in Dunmanway, County Cork, Ireland, June 15, 1822. His boyhood was spent on a farm, where he remained until 1847, when, having saved a small amount of money, he crossed the ocean, landing in Boston. He there worked two years for a Mr. Fisher, which enabled him to get a recommendation, securing employment in a large wholesale store, where he worked for the next five years. During the gold excitement in Australia, about the year 1851, he went to that country, sailing via Cape Horn, and was busy for three years in the gold fields. After passing through many hardships and privations, going without food and sleeping in a tree, to which he had tied himself, he came back to this country with considerable gold, returning by way of London and his old home in Ireland. Arriving in Boston in 1855, he continued on to Chicago, intending to get land. Thence he went to Iowa, and succeeded in getting government land warrants for 160 acres there and 240 acres in Minnesota, securing possession only after great difficulty and persistence in enforcing his claims. Hearing subsequently that Northern Illinois was a desirable region for investment, he journeyed thither, and in Boone County casually met Garrett Winne, of Spring Township, accompanying him to his home and hiring out to him for farm labor. A few weeks later he bought 210 acres in the same township, five miles southeast of Belvidere, paying $27 per acre. Subsequently he went to Boston, where, on October 16, 1856, he was married to Margaret Collins, born in his native village in Ireland, but not known to him until he met her before going to Australia. Returning to his Spring Township farm he followed farming thereon until 1901, about forty-five years. In the meantime he had sold his Iowa and Minnesota land. He also owned another farm, of 180 acres, adjoining his home farm in Spring Township. All his farms were improved. He was for a number of years the largest taxpayer in Boone County. The home in Belvidere which he bought in 1901 is now occupied by his daughter, and his home farm is also her property. His wife died March 23, 1898, on the old homestead, where she had lived forty-two years. For twenty years, his sons John and Jerome operated this farm, although both had farms of their own. John died in 1894 at the age of thirty-four years. Jerome died July 12, 1901, having always lived on the old homestead. Neither was married. Their father died January 20, 1907. His first born son, Bernard C., died at the age of thirteen years. The only surviving member of the family is Madeline, who married George W. Meyers, a director in the Farmer's State Bank.

George W. Meyers was born in Spring Township, Boone County, January 3, 1863. His parents, George and Julla (Huber) Meyers, were natives of Germany, the former born in Baden Baden, and the latter in Heppemngn. Their marriage took place in Belvidere. The father settled in Boone County in 1856. He first spent a year in Pennsylvania, and then in company with his sister and her husband, John Bleiler, drove to Illinois. Later, Mr. Bleiler went to Green County, Wis., where he remained. Mr. Meyers worked out for a while, but soon after his marriage bought twenty acres of land, and later acquired the Meyers homestead in Spring Township near the present village of Herbert, where he cultivated 120 acres until his death, May 29, 1907, at the age of seventy-six years. His first wife had passed away in 1892, and, in 1893, he had married Anna Mary Meyers, widow of Fred Meyers, whose maiden name was Senner. The main feature of the farming operations of George Meyers was horse-breeding, in which he was very successful.

In politics, George Meyers was a Republican and took an active part in local party contests. For nine years he held the office of Road Commissioner. He was one of the organizers of the Zion Evangelical Church in Kingston, DeKalb County, Ill., and continued an active member during his entire life. His family consisted of six sons and two daughters, as follows: Charles, President of the Farmers' Bank of Belvidere, and who resides on his farm in Spring Township; John, a farmer in the same township; George W., of Belvidere; Daniel, who follows farming in Spring Township; Samuel, a farmer and horse dealer of Independence, Iowa; Lizzie, wife of Malvin Buck, a farmer in Spring Township; and Mary, who married John Blackledge, also a farmer in Spring Township. Mrs. Anna Mary Meyers still makes her home on the old farm. George W. Meyers was formerly engaged in farming on his farm in Spring Township, and took up his residence in Belvidere in December, 1907. On December 29, 1892, his marriage to Madeline Murphy took place. They have six children, namely: John Boyd, Marguerite, Grace, Mary, Mabel and George.

NEWELL, George, (deceased), for a number of years a prosperous merchant at Garden Prairie, Ill., and also a successful farmer in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., as well as a prominent member of the community, was born in Tioga County, N. Y., June 16, 1838. His parents were George W. and Louisa (Brown) Newell, natives of that State and county, who came to McHenry County, Ill., in 1858, settling on a farm in Marengo Township. In 1867 they left the farm, locating at Garden Prairie, Ill., where both spent the remainder of their lives, the father dying at the age of seventy-five years and the mother when eighty-six years old. Their family consisted of twelve children. George Newell was reared in Tioga County, N. Y., and there received a common school education. He assisted his father in operating the home farm until he reached the age of seventeen years, and was then employed as salesman in a store up to the time when the family moved to Illinois. In 1859 he secured a position as clerk in a store at Belvidere, Ill., owned by George Solvett, and afterwards did similar work for John Glassner. Later still he was employed by Ira Wilson, continuing in this connection until 1861, when he went to the Pacific Coast, spending six years in California and Nevada, where he was chiefly engaged in mining and lumbering. On returning to Illinois he devoted his attention to farming in the vicinity of Garden Prairie, where he remained until 1881. In that year he went into the lumber business, which he carried on until April, 1885, when he formed a partnership with A. Gates White, in the same line, together with general merchandising, which lasted until 1901, being then dissolved. Mr. Newell was the owner of one hundred and twenty acres of farming land in Bonus Township.

On January 2, 1868, Mr. Newell was married, at Roscoe, Winnebago County, Ill., to Helen M. Tripp, born in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., October 30, 1843, a daughter of Nathan and Lydia (Guest) Tripp, old settlers of Bonus Township. Nathan and Lydia Tripp were natives of New York State, and settled in Boone County, Ill., about the year 1837, locating in Bonus Township, where the remainder of their lives was spent. Nathan Tripp died December 17, 1855, and his wife on May 5, 1874. He was forty-seven years old, and she sixty-five, at the time of their decease. They had nine children of whom Mrs. Newell was the sixth. Mr. and Mrs. Newell became the parents of four children, namely: Emmet W.; Alice L., who is the wife of Richard S. Rosekrans; Lloyd W.; and Marcy L., who married Rev. Ernest C. Lumsden, at present pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Cherry Valley.

Politically Mr. Newell was a Democrat, and took quite an active part in township affairs, having served three years on the Boone County Board of Review. He was an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which his widow belongs. His death occurred July 19, 1908.

O'DONNELL, Patrick H.—Possessed of great intellectual force, and profound legal learning, Patrick H. O'Donnell, State's Attorney of Boone County, has moved from consideration of one phase of the law to another, the criminal, civil, chancery, admiralty or patent law, that has made him such a power in legal circles, and his fame as a public prosecutor so great. Born in Belvidere, Boone County, Mr. O'Donnell was reared in Boone County, and carefully educated by his parents, Michael and Margaret (Cunningham) O'Donnell, both natives of County Donegal, Ireland. Michael O'Donnell came to the United States in 1866, and Margaret Cunningham came in the same year, but she remained in New York while he came on to Chicago, where they met and married in 1870. They removed to Belvidere after their marriage, and have resided there ever since, the father now being an employe in the Gossard Corset factory, working as a machinist. They had seven children.

Patrick O'Donnell obtained his preparatory education in the public and high school of Belvidere, later attending the University of Michigan, and being graduated from the law department of that institution in the Class of 1898. After graduation he entered the office of Judge Robert W. Wright. At once he began to take an active part in politics, and in 1900 was elected City Attorney of Belvidere, and re-elected to that office in 1902. In 1904 he was honored by election to the office of State's Attorney of Boone County, which he still holds. Fraternally he is a member of the Brotherhood of Protective Order of Elks of Rockford, a member of the Knights of Columbus, of the Belvidere Modern Woodmen of America and Royal Arcanum. His religious affiliations are with the Catholic Church. Mr. O'Donnell has established a record which is recognized and admired by almost every lawyer in Illinois. His administration of office has distinguished him as a man of more than ordinary ability and attracted the attention of legal circles everywhere. As a prosecutor he has been relentless and fearless, but at all times just, and no one can say of him that he was ever influenced by prejudice, nor can anyone point to a single instance where personal favor has been shown. For some years Mr. O'Donnell has been recognized as one of the Republican leaders in this part of the State.

OLSEN, Henry P., a prosperous dairy farmer, of Boone Township, Boone County, Ill., and one of the most reliable and useful members of the community, was born in LaSalle County, Ill., February 5, 1855, his parents being Hele and Ellen (Sollar) Olsen, natives of Norway. The former came to the United States in 1837, and the latter in 1838, both being then single, and their marriage took place in LaSalle County. In 1867 they moved to DeKalb County, Ill., and thence, early in the '80s, to Davidson County, S. Dak., where the father acquired a homestead on which he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives.

Henry P. Olsen was twelve years old when the family moved to DeKalb County, and on reaching his majority located in Boone County, where, on January 15, 1878, he was married to Lena Hansen. Her parents, who were natives of Norway, settled in Boone County in 1843, taking up a tract of government land where they lived for some years, and where Lena was born in 1854. Finally, her father and mother moved to Capron, Ill., where both died—he being past seventy years old and she at the age of ninety-four. Mrs. Olsen is the only one of the four children born to her parents now living in Boone County, and the Hansen homestead is still her place of residence. It consists of one hundred acres, on which the present improvements were made by Mr. Olsen, the house having been built in 1889, and the barn in 1901. Mr. Olsen was one of the organizers, and successively a director, vice-president and president, of the Capron Co-operative Creamery, which was started to secure a better market for the dairy product of the vicinity, and was operated successfully for several years. Mr. Olsen formerly rented land in addition to the homestead, and kept thirty cows. Dairying is still the principal feature of his farming, and the number of cows milked by him is about twenty. On the farm he keeps an imported Percheron stallion. Mr. and Mrs. Olsen are the parents of four children, namely: George Harvey, manager of the Capron Home Telephone Company; Arthur H., who is in the hardware and furniture business, at Mt. Vernon, S. Dak., and Lavina and Oscar Hurlburt, who are at home.

In politics Mr. Olsen is a Republican, and has served two terms as highway commissioner.

PARKER, Edward, (deceased), Manchester Township, Boone County, Ill. This once well known citizen of Northern Illinois was the father of Edward Parker, a prominent farmer of the township just mentioned. The name and family of Parker have been conspicuous in England for many generations. There for centuries Parkers have held high place, both as civilians and military men. Men of the name of Parker became prominent in America during colonial days and in every generation to the present many men of that name have stood high in the esteem of their fellow citizens, the name having been borne by jurists, legislators, generals, clergymen and others who were leaders in different departments of human endeavor.

The late Edward Parker was born near Goffstown, N. H., May 20, 1823. He was reared in that State and remained there until about 1846, when about twenty-three years old. Then coming to Boone County, Ill., he acquired one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Section 35, in Manchester Township. He cleared this land and put it under cultivation, making upon it all improvements essential to good farming, and lived upon it until the end of his days except for about two years in the early '50s, spent in mining in California. A most enterprising man, the stories of wealth in that then far away land, seemingly only awaiting the coming of the taker, appealed strongly to him; but experience taught him, as it has taught others, that, in the long run, mining for crops on the rich prairies of Illinois was more profitable than gold-seeking on the Pacific Coast. Giving his attention to farming and dairying, he prospered even beyond his expectations.

Mr. Parker married in Boone County, February 3, 1849, Miss Elizabeth Stockwell, who was born near Brantford, Canada, May 21, 1832, a daughter of Isaac and Christina Stockwell, natives of the State of New York, who were domiciled for a time beyond the Canadian border. Mr. Stockwell brought his family from Canada to Boone County, Ill., in 1845, and there lived out the years that had been allotted to him. Immediately after his marriage, Mr. Parker settled with his bride on his farm in Manchester Township, already referred to. He died September 17, 1899, at the home of his son, Eyrion L. Parker, in Buena Vista County, Ia. His widow still survives. They had ten children, seven of whom attained to manhood and womanhood: Byron L.; Ellen, who married John Vickers and died in Caledonia Township, January 29, 1876, aged twenty-one years; Maria, who is the wife of S. J. Burlingame; Charles H.; George H.; Commodore P., and Edward.

Edward Parker, son of the Edward Parker, Sr., a brief account of whose life is given above, was born March 7, 1873, on the old Parker homestead, where he still lives, was educated in the common schools and reared to an intimate knowledge of farm work of all kinds, and of the fundamental principles of practical agriculture as it is exemplified in the Middle West. After the death of his father he and his mother removed to Belvidere, Ill., where they lived until the spring of 1908, when they returned to the Parker farm in Manchester Township. Mr. Parker is an unassuming citizen who eschews public life and gives his attention entirely to his business, but has in many ways manifested a public spirit which has made him well known throughout his township, to the advancement and improvement of which he is much devoted.

PATTON, David, secretary of the National Sewing Machine Company, Belvidere, Ill., and a man of high order of business ability, was born in Glaslough, near Belfast, Ireland, February 8, 1861, and in childhood came to this country with his parents, who located in Chicago in 1868, where he received his education in the public schools. In 1876 he was employed by Barnabas Eldredge in the sewing machine line, and in 1890, on the death of Frank T. June, president of the National Sewing Machine Company, whom Mr. Eldredge succeeded, Mr. Patton became secretary of that corporation. He is one of the enterprising members of the company, the details of all the office work of this great concern devolving upon him. The arduous duties of this important position have been discharged by him in such a manner as to give him an enviable reputation in industrial circles.

Politically, Mr. Patton is a supporter of the Republican party, and fraternally is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M., and the Royal Arcanum.

PEARSALL, Samuel M., (deceased), Poplar Grove, Boone County, Ill. The sturdy and admirable character which always succeeds in life, was simply evidenced in the useful and blameless career of the subject of this sketch. Samuel M. Pearsall was born in Greene, Chenango County, N. Y., December 24, 1832, and died December 9, 1893, in his sixty-first year. His parents were John and Clarinda (Walker) Pearsall, who had six children. In 1839, John Pearsall removed from New York to Illinois, buying land in Belvidere Township, where he developed a farm on which he lived out his days, dying in March, 1865. His wife was one of seventeen children of Samuel Walker. It is worthy of note that every member of this large family lived to become a father or mother. Samuel M. Pearsall had one brother, Albert L. Pearsall, and two sisters, Martha and Mary.

Samuel M. Pearsall attended school in a log school house and, in other ways, experienced the hardships and discomforts of pioneer life. When he was seventeen years old he drove an ox-team to Iowa, where he operated a threshing machine in the threshing season of that year. Then acquiring a practical knowledge of the carpenter trade, he was employed in Independence, Iowa, seven years, and in Boone County, Ill., two years. On September 26, 1859, he married Anna Candy, who was born at Brantford, Ontario, Canada, June 27, 1838, a daughter of William V. and Elizabeth (Clark) Candy. Her parents were married at Albany, N. Y., January 28, 1836, and removed immediately thereafter to Canada, where Mr. Candy died about two years later. His widow married Robert Dymond and died April 2, 1898, Mr. Dymond surviving her until October 8, 1902. Mrs. Dymond was a daughter of Charles Clark, who came from England to America in 1835 and after ten years in Canada, where he acquired a farm and a saw mill, which he operated, he removed to Boone County, Ill., where he passed the remainder of his life. His wife was Elizabeth Porter.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall settled on land adjacent to the village of Poplar Grove, where he developed a farm on which he prospered until his death. His widow now lives in Poplar Grove. They had three children: Eva is Mrs. W. E. Gorman; James A. died at the age of nineteen, May 6, 1883, and Charles is a bookkeeper in the office of the Pinkerton Detective Agency in Chicago. His only son, George E. Pearsall, was born December 1, 1906.

PIERCE, Rev. George R., a retired Presbyterian minister of Belvidere, Ill., greatly respected throughout the community, was born at Homer, Cortland County, N. Y., January 16, 1836. His father, Justin M. Pierce, was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and a man whose education and old-fashioned gentility reflected much credit upon that official position. Rev. George R. Pierce was reared in accordance with the creed of the Presbyterian Church, but afterwards lived several years with a family of Baptists, experiencing religion during this period and uniting with the Baptist denomination, although never wholly free from the influence of his early Presbyterian training.

Dr. Pierce received his literary education in Madison (now Colgate) University, at Hamilton, N. Y., graduating in the class of 1859, when he entered the Baptist Theological Seminary at Hamilton, from which he graduated in 1861. The autumn of that year he entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J. He was ordained to the ministry in Mexico, N. Y., and from there was called successively to Fulton and to Oneida.

In 1879 he was called to the First Baptist Church of Evanston. While in Evanston, deciding to return to the church of his upbringing, Dr. Pierce resigned his charge at the close of the year 1883, joined the Chicago Presbytery in February, and immediately thereafter was called to the pulpit of the Central Presbyterian Church of Terre Haute, Ind. Called to the First Presbyterian Church of Belvidere, Ill., in May, 1894, he ministered to that people till the autumn of 1902. For forty years Dr. Pierce has preached the Gospel and labored with zeal and energy. He has been a faithful and influential exponent of Christian doctrine, which he has also illustrated in his pure, upright, and exemplary life. The degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater after his removal to the West. In 1879, while a pastor at Oneida, N. Y., Dr. Pierce was made a Mason, and is now a Royal Arch Mason.

On October 29, 1869, at Fulton, Oswego County, N. Y., Dr. Pierce was married to Miss Elizabeth Cummings, a native of New York, and daughter of De Witt Clinton and Harriet (Perkins) Cummings, natives of New York and of distinguished Rhode Island ancestry. Mrs. Pierce's grandfather, Levi Cummings, was given two grants of land in Illinois for meritorious service in the War of 1812. Her great-grandfather, James Cummings, received a grant of land in New York for service to that State during the Revolution. Under her maiden name, "Elizabeth Cummings," Mrs. Pierce has been a contributor to the "Outlook," "Independent," "Harper's Weekly," "Advance," "Interior" and "St. Nicholas." Special articles of hers have been published by the leading magazines. "A Happy Discipline," published by the Congregational Publishing Company, and "Miss Matilda Archambeau Van Dorn," published by Lothrop and Company, are her books. She is also an artist of rare ability in both oil and water colors.

PORTER, Thomas, W.—More and more is the farmer becoming a business man of no mean ability who conducts his farm as a commercial undertaking from which he procures a regular revenue, not simply to get his living from it. The farmers of Illinois are particularly progressive in this respect, and among them may be mentioned Thomas W. Porter, of Bonus Township, Boone County, who was born on the farm where he now resides, April 10, 1868, and is a son of Henry and Anna (Roper) Porter, old settlers of the Township, who retired from the farm in January, 1893, and now make their home in Belvidere. They had children as follows: Frank, who died in Bonus Township when about twenty-nine years old; Spencer who died in childhood; Fred; Thomas W., and Leslie J.

Thomas W. Porter was reared upon the fine 263-acre farm he now owns, and has spent his life farming and stock-feeding. His farm is well cultivated, his buildings in excellent condition and he takes a pride in keeping everything thoroughly up-to-date. In politics he is a Republican, has been Township Assessor and now is President of the School Board. Ever since coming to man's estate he has taken a deep interest in township affairs, and is rightly regarded as a representative man. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. On December 16, 1891, he was married to Mary E. Edgecomb, born in Belvidere, March 27, 1868, a daughter of De Witt and Irene (Hedges) Edgecomb. Mr. and Mrs. Porter are the parents of children as follows: Harry G., Gladys E., Spencer and Gertrude I. Mr. Porter has a very pleasant home, which is the abode of complete domestic felicity as well as of a genuine hospitality.

POWELL, Samuel E., Postmaster of Herbert, Boone County, Ill., and a man who has occupied that office since December 22, 1898, is one of the leading merchants of the place and a man of sterling traits of character. Mr. Powell was born in Belvidere August 2, 1858, a son of Samuel and Nancy (Caswell) Powell, natives of England and Pennsylvania, respectively. They came to Boone County at an early date and became pioneers of this region. Settling in Belvidere, Mr. Powell opened a grocery business there which was successfully carried on for a number of years. There the father died, about forty-five years of age. The mother survives, having attained to an advanced age. They had four children, three sons and one daughter, Samuel E. Powell being the youngest of the family.

Until he was about twenty-two Mr. Powell remained at home, and received an excellent education in the schools of his native city. At that age he began to learn the blacksmith's trade with Woodruff and Danson, and followed it in Belvidere until he went to Chicago and was employed in the Deering Harvester Works, remaining there for ten years. He then returned to Boone County and resumed his trade, thus continuing for some years, when he embarked in a general mercantile business. Mr. Powell carries a full line of general merchandise and enjoys a good trade as his stock is always fresh and up-to-date and his methods strictly honorable.

Mr. Powell was married in Belvidere, Ill., to Hattie A. Carroll. Mrs. Powell is a native of Boone County and a daughter of Lyman Cornell, an old settler of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Powell are the parents of three sons: H. Guy, Earl L. and Harry E.

PRATT, Frederick K.—The business life of the farmer of today has become so complex that he lives in a broader way than if he were one of the many atoms of a great city, and certainly is much more independent. Boone County has within its confines many men of this class, among whom is Frederick K. Pratt, of Spring Township, who was born in Cheshire County, N. H., May 25, 1843, a son of Moses K. and Louisa (Daggett) Pratt, both natives of New Hampshire, who came to Boone County in 1855, locating in Spring Township on the farm now owned by Frederick K. Pratt, on Section 7. Here they both died. Mr. Pratt in 1881, aged seventy-one, and his wife in 1889, aged eighty-seven. Frederick K. was their only child and was twelve years of age when he came with his parents to Boone County, where he has since resided and borne his part in the upbuilding of the township's prosperity. He owns the homestead, a fine property of 160 acres, all under cultivation and amply provided with good buildings and improved machinery.

Mr. Pratt was married in Bonus Township, January 20, 1875, to Miss Marion Turnure, who was born in Bonus Township, February 17, 1855, a daughter of Uriah and Laura (Cline) Turnure, natives of Allegany and Washington Counties, N. Y., respectively. Prior to their marriage they came to Boone County, Ill., in 1844 and 1840, respectively, and were married in Belvidere Township in 1850. In 1889 they removed to Iowa, and the father died in Cerro Gordo County, that State, in 1890, when seventy-six. His widow survives. They had ten children, of whom Mrs. Pratt was third. She was reared in Bonus, and there lived until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt have two sons—Frank H. and Ralph T. Mrs. Pratt is a member of the Baptist Church, to which Mr. Pratt is a liberal contributor.

PULS, Alfred.—One of the most energetic, thorough and prosperous farmers in the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill., is Alfred Puls, who devotes his attention mainly to dairy work, although also engaged in breeding a good grade of horses and hogs. He was born at Kingston, DeKalb County, Ill., January 24, 1865. His parents, William and Hannah (Stonemieler) Puls, were natives of Germany, the father's birth occurring in Mecklenberg, and that of the mother in Pomerania. On coming separately to the United States both went to Wisconsin, where, in course of time, their marriage took place. Thence in 1862 they moved to Kingston, Ill., which was their home for twenty years. In 1883 they located in the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill., buying the farm now occupied by their son Alfred, three miles west of the city. William Puls lived on this farm five years, in the meantime purchasing a farm adjoining, to which he afterwards moved, and on which he continued six years. At the end of this period he took up his residence in Belvidere, where he died June 19, 1897, at the age of fifty-seven years, and where his widow is still living. The first property bought by William Puls in the neighborhood was the "Frank Rate" special dairy farm, containing one hundred and fifty-two acres, and extending across the Kishwaukee River, and the second was sixty acres, known as the "Sylvester Tripp farm." Coming to Illinois empty handed, he acquired property in DeKalb County, amounting in value to $13,000 and, at the time of his death, was worth $25,000. He was a Republican in politics, and served the public as school director. His religious connection was with the Zion Evangelical Association. He and his wife had four children, namely: Alfred; Anna, who married Charles Huber, a farmer of Belvidere Township; Henry, of Belvidere; and Ida (Mrs. Channey Starr).

Alfred Puls worked with his father until he was twenty-three years old, and then until the death of the latter, rented both farms before mentioned. On the settlement of the paternal estate the one hundred and fifty-two acre farm (since conducted by him) became his share. Subsequently he acquired the sixty acre property, but sold it. The improvements on his place are of the best kind. He milks about thirty cows, and breeds horses, hogs, etc.

On March 1, 1888, Mr. Puls was married to Louise Koenke, a daughter of Philip and Sophia (Stass) Koenke, natives of Germany, the father born in Hessen and the mother in Lippe-Deimold. The marriage of the parents took place in Freeport, Ill., and in 1868 they settled in Bonus Township, Boone County, where Louise Koenke was born September 2, 1879. She has a sister, Carrie M. (Mrs. George Hicks), also born in Boone County. When Mrs. Puls was seven years old, her parents moved to DeKalb County, and there her father died in Kingston. Three children resulted from the union of Mr. and Mrs. Puls, namely: Willard Garfield, who has received a business education; Wilda Minnie, and Stanley LeRoy.

Politically, Mr. Puls is a Republican, and has served as school director. He and his wife were reared in the faith of the Evangelical Association, but are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

RALSTON, George P., farmer, Caledonia Township, Boone County, Ill. In all that part of Boone County settled by Scotchmen and peopled very largely by their descendants, there is not a man better or more favorably known than the subject of this brief notice. Mr. Ralston has witnessed the development of his township and county during the last half century. This development has been effected by the simultaneous and the continuous efforts of citizens to better their own condition. No man who does his best honestly and fairly to such an end can be accused of selfishness, and, collectively, men who do so may well be called patriotic. In every enlightened and progressive community the words, "the interest of one is the interest of all," has become axiomatic. While taking a lively and helpful interest in the general prosperity, Mr. Ralston has for many years been very busy in developing a good farm and making it pay.

John Ralston, father of George P., married Elizabeth Picken, in Boone County, though they were both natives of Argyleshire, Scotland. They lived out their days and died in Caledonia Township—he when about fifty-nine years old and she when about sixty-six. Of their eleven children the eight here mentioned grew to manhood and womanhood: Jane, George P., Peter A., Martha, Nettie E., Lizzie M., Charles W., and Maggie. Martha is the wife of James McMillen; Nettie E. married John R. McEachran; Lizzie M. is Mrs. Samuel Scudder, and Maggie married John Graham.

George P. Ralston was born in Caledonia Township, March 6, 1856, and has lived there continuously to the present time, devoted heart and soul since boyhood to farming. He is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of well improved and highly productive land, with fine buildings, the most modern machinery and all accessories necessary to its successful cultivation. He has held several township offices, among them that of highway commissioner, and has many times declined nomination. He and Mrs. Ralston are consistent and helpful members of the Presbyterian Church, to all the interests of which they are earnestly devoted.

Mr. Ralston married March 15, 1883, Miss Jane Ralston in Caledonia Township, where she was born, June 17, 1858, a daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Andrew) Ralston, natives of Argyleshire, Scotland. Robert and Elizabeth Ralston, who were married in Caledonia Township and have lived there ever since, became the parents of six children, named as follows: Jane, Mary, Lizzie, Nettie, John A. married Agie Sellars, and Maggie B. Lizzie married George Brown; Nettie is the wife of Robert Greenlee; Maggie B. is Mrs. James C. Greenlee. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Ralston have children named Elizabeth O., John A. and Robert E. Ralston.

RALSTON, Matthew, farmer and stockman, Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill. All that is usually said of the value of the "Canny Scot" as a citizen, applies most unmistakably to Matthew Ralston, who is a self-made man in the best sense of that much used term. In him are combined the thrift, industry, enterprise, patriotism, solicitude for public education, and love of law which make the Scotchman a power in the community wherever he may cast his lot. Born in Argyleshire, Scotland, January 9, 1843, a son of John and Catherine (Brown) Ralston, natives of Rintyre, Scotland, where they died, having had eight children. Mr. Ralston came to the United States in 1868, when he was twenty-five years old, and made his way directly to Rockford, where some of his uncles and cousins had already located. He had learned to farm in Scotland, in the Scotch way, and he had now to learn to farm in America in the American way, but he was not slow in the ac-quision of knowledge. He rented a farm in Harlan, Winnebago County, as a beginning, and cultivated rented land until 1881, when he bought his present farm on Section 18, Belvidere Township, five miles northwest of Belvidere, in the historic "Mile Strip," which was long contended for by Boone and Winnebago Counties. This farm of one hundred and sixteen acres, owned at that time by the DuBois brothers, cost him $40 an acre. He set about improving it in every way possible, studied it thoroughly and lost no opportunity to add to its productiveness, and, sanguine of success as he was when he took it in hand, the results of his enterprise have far exceeded his expectations. In addition to general farming, he keeps several cows and every year breeds a considerable number of hogs. He erected his present residence in 1893.

Mr. Ralston was married in Scotland to Miss Jeanette Lighthbody, who has borne him seven children, namely: John W., who is farming in Caledonia Township; Matthew L., in Winnebago County; Kate, Thomas and Jane, members of their parents' household; Ellen, who died aged eighteen years, and Maggie, who is aged thirteen years. Politically, Mr. Ralston is a Democrat, but beyond taking an intelligent interest in public affairs and casting his vote according to the approval of his conscience, he has no political aspirations. He is a believer, however, in good local government and his influence for the upbuilding of his township has always been strong. He was reared in the Presbyterian faith and is a member of the Willow Creek Church in Argyle Township, Winnebago County.

RAMSAY, Wallace G., a farmer of Caledonia Township, Boone County, has achieved success and honor in his community by the exercise of those sterling traits of character, industry, honesty and patriotism, which are at the foundation of the best of human nature. The Scotch blood which he inherited has undoubtedly been a factor in his favor. His parents were James and Hannah (Richardson) Ramsay. James Ramsay, a native of Hamilton, Scotland, left home at the age of fifteen years and became a drummer in the British army. About 1812 he came to Canada, and later from there to the United States. He married in Ohio and removed from his home in that State to La Porte, Ind., making the journey with an ox-team. In 1838, after having lived two years in Indiana, he moved to Boone County, Ill., bringing his family and household goods by ox-team and wagon. He settled in Manchester Township on a squatter's claim, which he eventually sold in order to buy one hundred and twenty acres of land in the northern part of Caledonia Township. There he died about 1858, aged, perhaps, about sixty-five years, his widow surviving until 1889, when she died aged nearly ninety. Of their ten children—six sons, and four daughters—the five here mentioned are living: Thomas, a retired farmer, in Belvidere; Cynthia Ann, the wife of George Hinton, residing at New Lisbon, Wis.; William, living in retirement at Belvidere; Wallace G., and Allen, Mrs. T. J. Hinton, who resides in Rockford, although she has a home at New Lisbon, Wis.

Wallace G. Ramsay was born on his father's farm in Caledonia Township, February 2, 1842, and received a common school education, gaining, in the meanwhile, a thorough knowledge of farming. With the exception of the time he spent in the army, he has farmed all his life. Enlisting December 7, 1861, he entered Company A, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, and was in continuous service until May 29, 1866. He was sent to Chicago, then to Springfield and guarded the prisoners of Fort Donelson. From there he was sent to Martinsburg, where he joined the Army of the Potomac, scouted in the Shenandoah Valley for a few months, when, on September 7, 1862, he first experienced the horrors of battle at Dartsville, near Winchester, Va. They next went to Harper's Ferry, where the cavalry cut their way through the night before the surrender. They went on to Greencastle, Pa., and captured General Longstreet's wagon train of eighty wagons. In April, 1863, his regiment went on what was known as the Stoneman raid. They pursued the enemy, cutting off communication, and on to Yorktown, returning in time for the battle of Gettysburg, his brigade opening that famous battle. In November, 1863, he came home to Illinois, and re-enlisted, and recruited in a veteran regiment. In the spring of 1864 they were sent to New Orleans, then up the Red River with General Banks, and participated in his famous campaigns. They then saw service through Louisiana, Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas. In August, 1865, they again went up the Red River with General Custer, marched across to Houston, Texas, as the saying went—"To really shake their fists at France across the border of Mexico"—and remained there until May 29, 1866, when Mr. Ramsay was mustered out and came home once more, June 16, 1866, receiving an honorable discharge at Springfield, Ill.

William and Nathaniel Ramsay were also soldiers, both as members of the First Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry. Nathaniel's service was only of a few months' duration, William's covered a period of three years. William participated with the Army of the Potomac in many of its hard-fought battles, and he was one of only seven members of his company who escaped death, injury or capture at Gettysburg; Wallace was promoted to Commissary Sergeant and held that office until the close of the war. Nathaniel died in Manchester Township.

After his return from the war, Mr. Ramsay bought eighty acres of land which, with forty acres bought later, constitute his present farm. The place was heavily timbered and he was obliged to clear it before he could put it under cultivation. He has erected upon it good buildings and has improved it in every way until it is a very valuable property. He is a man of much public spirit, and as a Republican, takes an intelligent interest in all questions touching our general welfare. He is a member of Cornell Post, G. A. R., of Capron, Ill., and he and Mrs. Ramsay are identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Although prominent in party councils, he has never aspired to office.

On October 17, 1870, Mr. Ramsay married in Caledonia Township, Miss Henrietta Peters, born in Belvidere on December 25, 1852. Her parents, Henry and Elizabeth (Blatchford) Peters, natives of Somersetshire and Hampshire, England, were comparatively early settlers of Boone County. Henry Peters owned the hotel in Belvidere now known as the Julian Hotel, and there Mrs. Peters died in 1856, while still a young woman. Mr. Peters has made his home with his sons ever since. She bore her husband children as follows: Mary Ann, Henry, Henrietta and Thomas, all living. Mary Ann is the wife of William Gilkerson, who resides at Topeka, Kans., and they have three children living. Henry and Thomas are in business at Prescott, Ariz. The extended sketch of the Blatchford family can be found in connection with the record of Francis Blatchford, the father of Elizabeth (Blatchford) Peters, and also in the sketch of Stephen D. Blatchford, both of whom are mentioned elsewhere in this volume.

Wallace G. and Henrietta (Peters) Ramsay became the parents of seven children: Blanche Ellen, born December 9, 1872; Mary Olive, born July 19, 1874; Ida Matilda, born October 16, 1876; Earl Thomas, born March 4, 1878, died in September, 1884; Jessie, born April 1, 1883; Glenn Henry, born September 26, 1889, and Charlotte, born January 19, 1892. Blanche Ellen was married at home September 9, 1896, to William Klaas of Belvidere, Ill., where they now reside. They have two children—Vera Lucille and William Wallace. Olive and Ida were married at home on the same date, January 24, 1900, Olive to Francis Michael, and they reside on a farm one mile north of her father's. They have one child—Marie Henrietta. Ida married A. J. McKay, and they reside two miles north of Harvard, Ill., and have three children: Raymond James, Irwin Burdette and Myrtle Irene. Jessie married, on November 21, 1904, Edward Farmer, and they reside at Blaine, Ill., and have one child, Henrietta Charlotte.

RAY, George, merchant and ex-postmaster of Poplar Grove and Boone County, Ill., a prominent citizen of Boone County, is one of the few active business men of Boone County still surviving who saw service in the Civil War. The ranks of the veterans are being rapidly depleted by death. Most of those who remain went into the struggle when comparatively young, and most of them near its end. With feelings of peculiar sadness which can be understood by none but veterans, they note the smallness of the Grand Army parades of today, as compared with their size two decades, and even one decade, ago. Those who remain are cherished by their patriotic fellow citizens, who cannot forget the national obligation to them. The time is fast approaching when one will not need to have been an officer of high rank or to have had unusual military experiences, in order to be regarded with deep interest by men who know what our Civil War was and what it stands for in history.

George Ray was born at Fall River, Mass., September 15, 1845. His parents were named Cruickshank, and being orphaned in infancy, was adopted into the family of his uncle and aunt, John and Agnes (Marshall) Ray, whose surname he inherited. Of Scotch descent, he inherited many of the characteristics of that race of admirable men and women. In 1849 he was brought to Boone County to a farm about a mile east of Poplar Grove. He was practically a member of his uncle's household until he attained his majority, but before that, in the spring of 1864, he enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Forty-second Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until the following October, participating in operations against General Sterling Price, C. S. A., in the latter's raid through Missouri. Returning to Boone County, he bought a farm near his old home and operated it until 1879, when he removed to Poplar Grove and opened a general store, which he has conducted continuously for nearly thirty years. His present store building—a double store, forty by fifty feet in area—erected in 1886, has on its second floor the only hall in Poplar Grove. Mr. Ray carries a large and comprehensive stock, understands merchandising thoroughly, and from the first has done an increasing business, the volume of which is now very satisfactory. For some years he dealt in lumber and coal, having yards and tracks extensive for a town like Poplar Grove, but for some time past has devoted himself exclusively to the management of his store. He is also the owner of a fine tract of land.

Mr. Ray is an earnest Republican, but with no political ambition to gratify. For seven or eight years, a portion of the time through a Democratic administration, he was Poplar Grove's efficient and popular postmaster. A member of Cornell Post No. 314, Grand Army of the Republic, he has several times been a delegate to the department encampment of that order. He is an Odd Fellow and a Modern Woodman of America. In November, 1866, he married Miss Mary S. Ball, a native of Massachusetts, who was brought to Boone County in her infancy by her father, Edward Ball. Mr. and Mrs. Ray have three children: their elder son, Edgar J., is manager for a lumber company at Bookings, S. Dak.; their second son, Oliver E., sometimes says that he grew up in his father's store, in which he has always been a very useful helper and in which he has been a partner since he became of age; their daughter, Agnes, died aged seventeen years.

REED, Franklin P., an intelligent, substantial and thoroughly reliable farmer, of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., was born in the same township, November 9, 1852, a son of the late Hon. George Reed, whose biography appears on another page in this volume. Franklin P. Reed was reared on the old homestead, and his education was obtained in the district schools of the neighborhood. Since reaching mature years he has always followed farming in Spring Township, his labors being attended by profitable results. He has taken a considerable interest in the public affairs of the county.

Politically he is a firm supporter of the Republican party.

REED, Hon. George (deceased), formerly one of the most extensive farmers and prominent citizens of Boone County, Ill., who died in his home July 3, 1906, was born in Westfield, Mass., May 26, 1824, a son of Samuel F. and Patience (Silby) Reed, natives of Mansfield, Conn., of whom the former died in Massachusetts at the age of seventy-seven years, and the latter, whose birth-place was Willington, Conn., passed away at the home of her son, George, when eighty-eight years old. Three sons and six daughters were the offspring of their union. George Reed remained at home until he was twenty-one years old, and then went to Hinsdale, Mass., where he worked by the month until 1847, journeying then to Boone County, Ill., where his brother Charles lived. After a short visit he went to the northern part of Winnebago County, where he remained two years, working by the month or by the day. In 1849 he returned to Boone County, having purchased one hundred and twenty acres of government land in Spring Township. To this he afterwards added at intervals until his acquisitions comprised five hundred and twenty-five acres. He owned and operated a creamery plant near the center of the township, handling a large product, and also managed the Butter and Cheese Manufacturing Company in Belvidere. In 1886, he was elected Vice-President of the State Board of Agriculture for his Congressional District, being re-elected in 1888. In 1890 he was chosen a Director of the Illinois State Dairymen's Association, and during a period of twenty years was a Director of the Boone County Agricultural Society. For a number of years he was President of the Belvidere Farmer's Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance Company, which he, with others, organized in 1876. At first this company operated in but four townships, but later included the entire county. To him is largely due the successful development of this enterprise. He was also a stockholder and Director of the People's Bank.

The subject of this memoir was married October 10, 1849, to Eliza A. Wait, born in Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y., August 23, 1828, a daughter of Henry and Polly (Warren) Wait. The furniture with which the young people started housekeeping was the work of the husband's hands. He was what is commonly termed a self-made man, being the architect of his own fortunes. His circumstances at the outset of his farming career were void of much encouragement, and he often hauled wheat from his farm to Chicago with an ox-team, selling it at fifty cents per bushel. The children born to him and his wife were four in number: Fanny E., Franklin P., Frederick A. and Albert E. The mother of this family died February 18, 1907.

In politics, Mr. Reed was a strong Republican, and held nearly all the township offices in succession. In 1890 he was elected to the State Legislature. He served in the Thirty-seventh, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth General Assemblies, and was on several of the more important committees.

REID, James (deceased), formerly one of the most successful farmers and worthy and reliable citizens in the vicinity of Belvidere, Ill., was born in Argyshire, Scotland, March 27, 1850, and died at his home south of Belvidere, May 18, 1902. He was a son of James and Agnes Reid, natives of Argyshire. James Reid, Sr., was a tailor by occupation, having begun to learn his trade at the age of twelve years. Together with five of his brothers—Hugh, Alexander, John, David and William—he preceded the subject of this sketch to this country, and had been living for several years in Winnebago County, Ill., where all had met with success. On coming to the United States, James Reid, Sr., worked at his trade in Winnebago County for twelve years, then moving to a farm in Caledonia Township, Boone County, a little more than a mile east of Argyle, where he still followed his trade, James, Jr., John and Alexander attending to the farm work. He remained on this farm until his death, at the age of sixty-two years, his wife long surviving him and passing away when eighty-two years old. They also had five daughters. James, the son, remained on the old farm and died in 1902, at the age of fifty-two years. Alexander is a resident of Rockford; John, born May 24, 1852, went to the farm when seventeen years old and remained at home until he reached the age of thirty-two years, being in charge of the work. The mother afterwards sold out her interests to her son James.

John Reid was married in November, 1888, to Sarah M. Smith, born in Belvidere, a daughter of William and Mary Jane (Telford) Smith, her father being a farmer near Belvidere, and her mother having come from the North of Ireland. The father died on the farm at the age of eighty-three years, having just acquired it from the government. The mother passed away on the same place when sixty-one years old. Their children were four in number, namely: Frederick, of Jamestown, N. Dak., superintendent of the North Dakota Insane Asylum; Martha Jane (Mrs. John Hill), of Allen County, Kan.; James Henry, a farmer on the old homestead, and Sarah M.

Shortly after his marriage Mr. Reid engaged in farming in Caledonia Township, where he had one hundred and sixty-nine acres, known as the old Tuffmeir farm, which he operated for fourteen years. Then having sold out, he moved to Bonus Township, and finally took up his residence in Belvidere in 1907, where he is now living in retirement. He and his wife have six children as follows: Fred A.; William A.; Clara J., and Clarence J. (twins); Elmer John, and Myrtle Emma. In politics Mr. Reid is a Republican.

The marriage of James Reid, who was brought to this country at the age of nine years, took place June 12, 1865, when he wedded Mary Cummings, a daughter of Angus and Isabella (Sonekran) Cummings, born in Caledonia Township, Boone County. Her parents were among the Scotch pioneer settlers of this locality. Her father, now at the age of eighty-six years, and her mother, now seventy-nine years old, are still living on the farm where Mary was born, a mile and a half northwest of Caledonia village, which her brother Angus operates. After his marriage James Reid lived five years on the old Reid homestead, which was then sold, and he bought from Henry Ellick eighty acres a little southeast of Belvidere, which he cultivated until seized with the five months' sickness which preceded his death. One son, Angus Irving Reid, now a school boy, eleven years old, blessed the union of James Reid and Mary Cummings.

Politically, James Reid was a strong Republican. Both families were active in the Presbyterian Church at Argyle known as the Willow Creek Church. Fraternally, James Reid was affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America.

RHODE, John.—Boone County has reason to be proud of her citizens of German nativity. Wherever he settles, the man from the Fatherland brings with him a love of education, a respect for law and a patriotism which he is as willing to expend for the benefit of his adopted country as he would have been for the land of his birth. Always industrious and frugal, almost invariably honest, usually liberal in his views on all subjects, conceding to others all the rights which he claims for himself, he naturally and inevitably develops into such a fine citizen as would be the pride of any land. Of such nativity and of such citizenship is John Rhode, one of the prosperous farmers of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill.

John Rhode was born in Germany, September 11, 1858, the second of the four children of John and Christina Rhode, both of whom died in their native land. The son John remained in the Fatherland until 1882, when with his wife and two children, he emigrated to America, landing at New York. From New York he came west, locating at Racine, Wis., where he lived for six years, and gained the highest esteem of his fellow citizens. Then, coming to Boone County, Ill., he rented land until 1902, when he bought the fine 160-acre farm which is his present home. He is constantly improving the property and will make it eventually one of the best in its vicinity. While giving his attention largely to general farming, he has developed a good stock-raising business. In politics he is a Republican, and in religious matters is a member of the Evangelical Church.

Mr. Rhode married in Germany, in November, 1880, Miss Minnie Krusea, a native of that country, who bore him six children, namely: John, William, Charles, Herman, Ida and Mary. Mrs. Rhode died July 2, 1906, aged fifty-six years.

On February 25, 1908, Mr. Rhode married Agatha Wambach, born in Germany, a daughter of Nicholas and Anna (Eisenbart) Wambach, also natives of Germany. The father of Mrs. Rhode is now deceased, but his widow survives and lives in Germany.

RIDGE, Robert, retired merchant, Capron, Boone Township, Boone County, Ill. In all parts of the United States the veteran of the Civil War is held in high and increasing consideration. The number of veterans is rapidly decreasing, and it will not be many years before the last of them is laid to rest in the soil for which he risked his life. It is a fact somewhat remarkable, though perhaps easily accounted for, that the men who took the lead in public and private life in the period immediately succeeding the war, had most of them taken an active part in the conflict. This was true in the South as well as in the East and West. One of the citizens of Boone County, who had been a soldier and came to the front at that time, and was active and influential for many years afterward, is Robert Ridge, who was born near Bailaboro, County Cavan, Ireland, June 4, 1838. His parents were George and Eliza (Crozier) Ridge. His infancy and boyhood were spent under the roof of his maternal grandparents. In 1850, when the boy was about fourteen years old, his father came to the United States and located at Lawyersville, Schoharie County, N. Y. Two years later he sent back to Ireland for his five children, his wife having died a short time previously. His sister, Margaret, his mother and his five children, of whom Robert was the second born, joined him in New York State, and his daughter, Sarah, then about sixteen years of age, assumed the management of the household, which she retained until her death, which occurred when she was about twenty-eight years old. When the family came to this country Robert was about fourteen years old. Of his brothers, Samuel died at the age of five years; Thomas lives at New Haven, Conn., and James is a farmer near Cromwell, Conn.

Before he had been long on this side of the ocean, Robert Ridge found a home in the family of a Yankee farmer, Horace Wakeman, who treated him very well, permitting him to attend school every winter. In 1858, in company with a companion named Robert Harper, he came to McHenry County, Ill., and for a short time visited with some relatives at Chemung. Early in the same year he arrived at Belvidere, and there met a young man named John Conn, whom he had known in the State of New York. Robert worked during the spring, summer and fall months, in the winter months attending school. Then such education as he had been enabled to acquire was supplemented by attendance at the Belvidere school during one term. Until about the middle of the year 1862 he was employed by the month at twelve and one-half to fifteen dollars and board.

August 12, 1862, Robert Ridge enlisted in Company B, Ninety-fifth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which company was under command of Captain Charles Loop. He saw service with his regiment in events leading up to the siege of Vicksburg, and before Vicksburg lay in trenches near Fort Hill, where his regiment was under command of General McPherson. During the time of the Red River Expedition he was in the McPherson Hospital at Vicksburg, thus missing participation in that movement. He also missed being in action at Guntown, where his regiment was cut to pieces. Later his regiment formed a part of the Western Army, and for a time he and other convalescents were separated from it, but they took part in memorable service under General Sherman, whose command they joined at Big Shanty, being assigned to McPherson's corps. Mr. Ridge fought in all the engagements of the Atlanta campaign and before the capture of Atlanta worked many nights in assisting to dig twenty-two lines of trenches and throw up the breastworks by which they were protected. His corps was on the extreme left of the Federal army when General McPherson was killed by Confederate sharpshooters. He stood in line of battle at the time and assisted in repelling five desperate charges of the enemy. After the fall of Atlanta, he took part in the pursuit of Hood and fought in the battle of Nashville. There his regiment, the Ninety-fifth Illinois, rejoined the army with which he had remained during its absence. He spent that winter at Eastport, Tenn., and later saw service at New Orleans, at Dauphin Island and at Cedar Point, Mobile Bay. He participated in the capture of Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely and was at Fort Blakely when he received the intelligence of the surrender of General Lee and of the probable early termination of the war. He marched with his regiment to Montgomery, Ala.,

and thence to Opelika, where his service ended. He returned home via Vicksburg and the Mississippi River and was mustered out of service at Springfield, Ill., August 17, 1865. He was fortunate in never having been captured or wounded, though part of the rim was shot off his hat before Vicksburg, and a ball passed through the top of his hat at Spanish Fort.

After his return from the war Mr. Ridge became a clerk in the store of Stow & Lambert, at Capron, Ill. Not long afterward this firm failed and Mr. Ridge was employed to close out the store. In the fall of 1867 he engaged in merchandising on his own account. He admitted as a partner in his enterprise William Andrews, who had done a soldier's duty as a member of Company E, Ninety-fifth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and who is now a citizen of Rockford. They were associated in business for eighteen years. Early in their venture they began to handle grain, building an elevator which, in connection with another, was later managed by Mr. Ridge until his retirement from active business after a successful business career of thirty-five years at Capron.

Mr. Ridge has always taken a helpful interest in village and township affairs, and for sixteen years he filled the office of township school trustee. He was one of the original members of the Christian Church at Capron, organized in March, 1867, was also treasurer of the Bible society for twenty-three years; is one of the church deacons and for twenty-five years has been its clerk. A charter member of Cornell Post No. 314, Grand Army of the Republic, he has passed all its chairs and is its present adjutant. He has attended reunions of four regiments that were mustered into the service of the United States at Rockford, Ill., two of which were held at Capron. He has also attended National Encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic held at Milwaukee, Wis.; Washington, D. C.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.; Boston, Mass.; and Saratoga, N. Y., and thus has kept in touch with his comrades of the days of 1861-65. The Capron Tile Works is an enterprise of which Mr. Ridge was one of the organizers. He is the owner of a fine farm a mile east of Capron. For some time past he has taken little part in public affairs, living in retirement from active life and giving his attention exclusively to personal matters, enjoying a comfortable income from local property.

On March 24, 1867, Mr. Ridge married Miss Hattie A. Scott, a daughter of Francis and Mary Scott. Mrs. Scott died in Canada, but Mr. Scott brought his family to Capron in 1857. He was a general farmer until his retirement, after which he was a resident of Capron until he died, aged eighty-three years. Mr. and Mrs. Ridge had four children. Their first born died at the age of three years. George died in 1892, aged eighteen years; Benjamin Harrison Ridge, who was born June 26, 1890, the day on which General Harrison was nominated for the presidency, and was named in his honor, is a student at the Rockford Business College; Clara Belle is the wife of William Lascelles, and they have lived with Mr. Ridge since the death of Mrs. Ridge, which occurred in February, 1895. Mr. Lascelles is a stock buyer and the owner of a farm of three hundred acres in Foulk County, S. Dak. Mr. and Mrs. Lascelles have two sons—Robert, aged fourteen, and John, aged six years. Mr. Ridge's father died in 1891, aged eighty-three years, having been for seventeen years a member of Mr. Ridge's household. Politically, Mr. Ridge is a Republican, but has always been too busy to become, in the ordinary sense, a practical politician, though the patriotism which impelled him to fight for his country in his young manhood has caused him consistently to vote for its best interests in all his later years.

RIX, Chester, for more than two score years one of the most reliable and favorably known farmers of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill., and, since withdrawing from active business life, a highly esteemed citizen of Belvidere, was born in Fairfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., April 9, 1828. His parents were Theophilus and Mary (Hutchinson) Rix, natives of Connecticut, from which State his uncle, Nathan Rix, served in the Revolutionary War. Theophilus Rix settled in New York about the year 1825, and his brother Nathan spent his last years with him, dying at the age of eighty-six years. In 1857, the family moved to Belvidere, Ill., Theophilus being then over eighty years old. He died in Belvidere in his ninety-ninth year. The other members of the family who came west were Ralph, Lydia (Mrs. Heywood), and Sarah (Mrs. Wilcox). Another sister, Mrs. D. W. Allen, had located in Illinois about the year 1854. Ralph Rix, who was a shoemaker by occupation, died in Belvidere at the age of seventy-five years. Another brother, Nathan, spent his entire life in New York. Of the twelve children, but one besides Chester is living, namely: Harriet M. (Mrs. Lee), of Belvidere.

Chester Rix remained on the home farm in New York until he was thirty years old. After arriving in Boone County, Ill., he devoted his attentions to farming in Flora Township, continuing thus until 1900. He still retains his farm of one hundred and sixty acres near Flora Center, six miles southwest of Belvidere. It is well improved and compares favorably with any farming property in the vicinity. Since taking up his residence in Belvidere he has lived in comfortable retirement.

The marriage of Mr. Rix took place at Fairfield, N. Y., on June 25, 1857, on which date he was wedded to Helen E. Lawton, a native of that town. Three children were born to their union, namely: Charles A., of Belvidere; Mary L., who is at home; and Warren L., who operates the paternal farm.

Politically, Chester Rix is a Prohibitionist. Mrs. Rix is a member of the Baptist Church and deeply respected by all who know her, as is also her venerable husband.

ROBENSON, William H., Assistant Supervisor of Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill., and well and favorably known throughout the city and its environs, has been engaged for thirty-four years in the general blacksmithing and carriage jobbing business, conducting a flourishing concern on North State Street, in Belvidere. For five years previously he had been employed in the same line with Capt. William Heywood, with whom he lived in the winter and spring of 1869, and whose shop he finally bought. Mr. Robenson was born in Sheerness, England, on the Thames, March 3, 1850, coming to the United States in the following year with his parents, Ephraim R. and Eliza (Brenchly) Robenson, who located at Belvidere in the fall of 1853. His father was a farmer, and his mother was the daughter of an engineer at the Navy Yards in Sheerness, England. The former died in July, 1891, at the age of seventy-nine years, having lived in retirement at Belvidere for a considerable period. His widow passed away March 17, 1907, when ninety-one years old. Both were zealous members of the Methodist Church, in which they were active workers. Two others of their children are residents of Belvidere, namely: Mrs. John Powell, and George W. Robenson, of the National Sewing Machine Company. A son, Robert, is a retired meat market proprietor at El Paso, Woodford County, Ill.; Carrie lived at Rockford, Ill., and Anna, another daughter, is the wife of John Greenway, a merchant of Esmond, Ill. The subject of this sketch never married, having been devoted to the care of his mother.

In politics, Mr. Robenson is a Republican. He served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff A. T. Ames, and has held the office of alderman which he still retains. Fraternally, he has been affiliated with the I. O. O. F. for thirty years, and has passed all the chairs in Big Thunder Lodge No. 28, of that order, having served also as representative to the Grand Lodge and passed all the chairs in the Encampment.

RUDOLPH, Julius.—Among the many substantial citizens of Boone County who have retired to the pleasant town of Belvidere to pass their declining years, after a long period of activity on a farm, is Julius Rudolph, who was born in Kriebwisch, near Altenberg, Germany, September 14, 1836. He accompanied his parents when they emigrated to America, in 1852. He attended the public schools until he was fourteen years of age, and was sixteen years of age when he found work in Chicago, in August, 1852. He was yet a boy when he went from Chicago to Genoa, DeKalb County, and from there to Sycamore, in 1868, and in 1875 to a 360-acre farm in Spring Township, Boone County. When Mr. Rudolph acquired this farm it was valued at $40 per acre, and when he left it, February 28, 1902, to become a resident of Belvidere, $75 an acre could scarcely have purchased it. He carried on general farming on his land and, at the same time, made so many improvements that the value of the property increased every year. He was considered one of Spring Township's best managers and most successful farmers, and he owned two other farms of 240 acres, and he has all of this property yet.

In 1866 Mr. Rudolph was married to Sophia D. Naker, who was born in January, 1850, at Wayne, DuPage County. Her parents were born in Germany and emigrated to America in 1848. They have had the following children: Alvin, who is a machinist in Milwaukee, and married Henrietta Jones, August 18, 1901, who died June 6, 1902; George, a farmer of Spring Township, who married Ellen Carlson; Lillian, who married Bert Lucas, a florist of Belvidere; Edward married Mary Bender, and operates the home farm; Charles, an employe at the National Works and who married Minnie Taylor; William, who is an employe of the Elgin Watch Factory; Albert, a farmer on a part of the homestead and who married Lulu Oaks of Genoa; Eva, the wife of Merton Taylor, a farmer on one of the Rudolph farms; Fred, who operates one of his father's farms; Frank, who conducts a livery in Genoa; Mabel, who lives with her father; Lila, a student at the Belvidere High School; Edna, who died May 22, 1905, being the wife of Cleveland A. Godding of Genoa, and three children who died in childhood.

Mr. Rudolph was an active citizen of Spring Township and was greatly interested in local educational matters, for a time served as President of the School Board, and also has served in the office of Overseer of Highways. In politics he is independent and votes for the man rather than according to party lines. In addition to a pleasant home, he owns and rents property in Belvidere and Genoa.

SABIN, David D.—To thoroughly succeed in any line requires perseverance, industry and a comprehensive mastery of all details. The growing activity in all branches of commercial industry is reflected in the business houses of any community that keeps abreast of the times, and this is especially true of the old-established house of Sabin Bros., of Belvidere, founded in February, 1860, by David D. Sabin, now retired. The firm carry a full line of merchandise, and their stock is at all times thoroughly up-to-date, while they are enabled to offer their patrons particularly desirable inducements as to quality and price, owing to their extensive connections and the immense volume of their business. The present store building was erected in 1876 by the founder, who, in 1867, took H. B. Sykes into partnership to fill the vacancy caused by the withdrawal of P. R. Sabin. In 1884 David D. Sabin retired, and, in 1889, his son, Sidney A. Sabin, became a member of the firm. In 1894, Sidney A. and Eugene F., his brother, became sole proprietors of the business, and have since conducted it along the lines which have proven so satisfactory and profitable.

SACKETT, Clarence E., the present efficient and popular postmaster at Garden Prairie, Boone County, Ill., was born in Bonus Township, Boone County, March 4, 1848. His parents, David H. and Caroline (Ames) Sackett, were born in Colchester, Vt. In 1831 they came West to Michigan, whence, in 1835, they moved to Dundee, Kane County, Ill., and thence in 1836 to Boone County, settling in Bonus Township, where the father died in 1880 upwards of 75 years of age. The mother still survives. Their family numbered four children, namely: Eliza J., who became the wife of T. G. Catchpool, and died at Garden Prairie in 1899; George W.; Emma P., who married Myron W. Poyer, of Marengo, Ill., and Clarence E. The subject of this sketch was reared on the home farm in Bonus Township, where he has continued to live ever since. In youth he learned the trade of a printer, which he has followed for many years. On September 30, 1878, at Brookville, Ont., Mr. Sackett was married to Henrietta Atkinson, a native of Brookville, and a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Dyer) Atkinson, who lived just north of Garden Prairie from 1856 to 1865.

Politically, Mr. Sackett has always been a Republican, taking an active interest in township affairs. For several terms he has held the office of township clerk of Bonus Township, and has officiated as notary public for a number of years. In 1885 he was appointed postmaster of Garden Prairie, serving until the second Cleveland administration. He was again appointed to this office by President McKinley, and has since continued to hold it to the complete satisfaction of his fellow townsmen.

With the exception of the period of the Cleveland administration referred to, Mr. Sackett has been practically in charge of the Garden Prairie postoffice since December 1, 1862. In the latter year, Charles Burnside, who had been postmaster, sold out and went to Iowa, the office then being removed to the home of D. H. Sackett, his son, Charles E., a lad of fourteen, taking charge as deputy of his father. The forty-six years which have since elapsed have seen great changes and growth in the mail service. The Garden Prairie postoffice was first established as the Amesville office June 13, 1838, but took its present name February 23, 1853.

David H. Sackett, the father of C. E., was a millwright by trade, and built and assisted in building many of the flour mills in Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin between 1834 and 1855. At this time a millwright had to be competent to design and construct all the machinery needed in the customary flouring mill, from the water-wheel to the bolting reels.

The Ames family, from whom Mrs. Caroline (Ames) Sackett was descended, were early emigrants from England, settling in what is now West Bridgewater, Mass., in 1657.

SANDS, William, retired farmer, Capron, Boone County, Ill., enjoys the distinction of having been one of the comparatively few farmers of foreign birth in this country, who paid money to learn the mysteries of farming, and at the same time gave to their teachers their work as farm hands. It is not probable that either of them would argue that the American system is not better than that under which they were inducted into the ranks of tillers of the soil in their native land. William Sands was born in Arbroath, Forfarshire, Scotland, January 28, 1828. When he was thirteen years old he began his active life in a dry goods store, where he was employed until he was twenty. Then occurred his costly apprenticeship to farming. In 1851 in company with John Sands, a brother older than himself, he came to the United States. They made the voyage on a sailing vessel, landing at New York thirty days from Glasgow, and from New York they came west to Chicago by lake and rail via Detroit. New Buffalo, in Berrien County, Mich., was then temporarily the western terminus of the Michigan Central Railway. Reaching the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, they embarked by water for the future metropolis of the West and landed just before daylight at the foot of South Water Street, and Mr. Sands remembers that, as he stepped ashore, he tripped over a cow that had been enjoying a morning nap in his path. He bought a farm in Wheeling Township, Cook County, Ill., twenty-two miles from the center of Chicago at the point now known as Arlington Heights. There he remained two years, keeping house for himself and making his start in America as a farmer. His brother John had a college education and had been a lawyer in Scotland, and farming came so far from suiting his taste that he soon sold out his interest in Cook County and went back to his native land. Subsequently he came again to America, locating in Michigan. His stay was brief, however, and soon he was back in Scotland, whence he later wandered to distant parts of the world, notably to South America, writing articles descriptive of his travels and adventures which were gladly accepted by publishers. Later he published several books, most of them books of travel, one of them, "Saint Hilda, Its History and Its People," descriptive of the island of Saint Hilda, near Scotland. In addition to his marked literary ability, he possessed artistic talent and achieved fame on "Punch," the great London comic journal, as a caricaturist. He died in Scotland aged seventy-three years.

After laboring two years at his original location, William Sands operated the farm of James Milne, in Niles, Cook County, until 1860, April 9th, of that year, he married Miss Helen Milne, James Milne's daughter. Miss Milne, who like himself was a native of Scotland, had come to America in 1845, when she was eleven years old, her voyage in a sailing vessel from Perth to Quebec, Canada, consuming seven weeks. In 1858, two years before his marriage, Mr. Sands had bought the farm which afterward became his homestead. The railroad through Capron had just been graded and the Capron village line crossed one side of his land, although the part of Capron now known as "Sands' Addition" comprises about twenty-four acres cut off from his farm, which originally contained one hundred and twenty acres. The land was wild and there were no buildings on it, and he had bought all of it for eleven hundred and fifty dollars. In 1862 he moved onto this farm and began to improve it and for twenty-one years thereafter devoted himself to its development and cultivation, in the meantime laying off and putting on the market Sands' Addition to Capron. In 1883 he moved to a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Manchester Township. There he remained, farming successfully until 1903, when he returned to Capron and bought a lot which had been included in his addition to the town, on which he established a pleasant village home. He has since lived in retirement from active business. He acknowledges indebtedness to his paid instructor in Scotland for information which he found valuable to him in farming operations in Illinois. He took a genuine pride in his work as a farmer and passed by no opportunity to make it more and more efficient and profitable.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Sands has from the organization of his party been a strong advocate of the principles that it has represented. For a time he filled the office of school director. He has long been an active worker against the liquor interests, and he and members of his family were long identified with the Order of Good Templars. Mrs. Sands was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, but was one of the organizers of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Capron, of which Mr. Sands has been treasurer and trustee. They have both taken much interest in Sunday School work.

William and Helen (Milne) Sands have become the parents of children who are here named in the order of their birth: William is a horse-shoer at Spencer, Iowa; Nellie is the wife of Stanley T. Heath of Capron, who is represented in a biographical sketch which appears on another page; Jane Elizabeth is Mrs. Edward Baldwin of Roscoe, Ill.; Rudolph H. is a merchant at Murdough, S. Dak.; Mary Alice married Bert Welsh who is a blacksmith at Dexter, Iowa.

SCRIVEN, Harry, who is well known to the people of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., his place of residence, as a worthy citizen and thrifty farmer, was born in the same township, October 14, 1863. His father, James Scriven, a native of Somersetshire, England, first came to this country in 1848, remaining a few years in Boone County, Ill., and then returning to England, where he was married to Elizabeth Scriven, also born in Somersetshire. Soon afterwards, bringing his wife to the United States, he settled in his former location, where the parents made their home during the rest of their lives. The father died the last of May, 1905, the mother having passed away in July, 1896. Two children composed their family.—John and Harry.

Harry Scriven was reared in the locality where his birth occurred, receiving his education in the common schools, and following farming up to the present time. He owns ninety-seven acres of land, which is well improved, and contains good buildings.

On February 12, 1896, at Beloit, Wis., Mr. Scriven was united in marriage with Tillie Dummer, born in Ogle County, Ill., May 3, 1874, a daughter of August and Wilhelmina Dummer, natives of Germany. Three children have resulted from the union of Mr. and Mrs. Scriven, namely: Hester M., Dorothy E. and Willis J.

Mr. Scriven has served his township as School

Director, and fraternally, is affiliated with the M. W. A.

SEARS, Theron M., whose entire life of 58 years has been passed in his present location, in the vicinity of Belvidere, where he has earned the reputation of being one of the most successful farmers and reliable citizens, was born on the old Sears homestead in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., April 7, 1851. He is a son of Horace Oscar and Harriet (Ames) Sears, the former a native of Bristol, Ontario County, N. Y., where his birth took place October 1, 1819, and the latter born in the State of Vermont. The father located in Boone County, Ill., in 1838, and his marriage to Harriet Ames took place May 12, 1842. They settled on what is still the Sears farm, living on it for the remainder of their lives, the father dying June 19, 1897, and the mother December 6, 1877. Four sons composed their family, namely: Henry, who died when thirteen years old; Edward C., of LaGrange, Ill.; Charles A., of Bonus Township, and Theron M. The last named was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the district schools. He has always followed farming on the place of his birth, which is his property, and for twenty years has made a specialty of breeding Duroc-Jersey hogs, and in this line has been very successful, as well as in his general farming operations. The farm consists of two hundred and sixty acres, all of which is improved, and it is considered one of the most desirable places in the township.

On March 1, 1870, in Spring Township, Boone County, Mr. Sears was married to Sarah E. Culbertson, born in North Pelham, Ontario County, N. Y., February 25, 1852, a daughter of Andrew J. and Eliza M. (Mettler) Culbertson. The father of Mrs. Sears was a native of Pennsylvania, and her mother, of Canada. They came to Illinois in 1858, and for four years lived in Elgin, whence they moved to Boone County, settling at Garden Prairie, where both died. Their family numbered four children, namely: Mary A.; George A., a member of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, who died at Bridgeport, Ala., in 1861; Marcus L., and Sarah E. Mrs. Sears is the sole surviving member of this family. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Sears, as follows: Frank G.; Nora M.

wife or Horace Porter, of McHenry County, Ill.; Howard O., Ray M., Ralph M., Mary B., Elliott C., Perry W., Sidney E., and Ruth E.

Politically, Mr. Sears is Republican and takes a good citizen's interest in township affairs. He and his excellent wife are active members of the Congregational Church.

SERGEANT, George E., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. Little of chance enters into the farming of today. The work has been developed along scientific lines until it requires special knowledge as definite as that demanded by any other vocation or profession. In their way farmers like George E. Sergeant are scientists, so far as the soil and its products are to be considered. They are by no means book farmers, but while learning the fundamentals of their business by actual experience, they are eager to glean the experiences of others wherever they find them recorded on the printed page. This is especially true of farmers who have had much to do with stock-raising.

George E. Sergeant was born in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, Ill., March 15, 1864, a son of Horton W. and Mary J. (Sleezer) Sergeant, natives of the State of New York, who came to Illinois many years ago, remaining in De Kalb County until 1871, when they removed to Flora Township, where Mr. Sergeant died August 3, 1900, aged sixty-three years. His widow, who survives him, bore him four children, namely: Kittie, who married Howard A. Shannon, and died in Flora Township about 1878; Arissa, became the wife of Seth C. Sleezer and died in Kendall County, Ill., in February, 1891; Edith H., is Mrs. Frank Houk.

George E. Sergeant, the only son of Horton W. and Mary J. Sergeant, was seven years old when his parents settled in Flora Township. He made his home with them until his marriage with Miss Dora Heyward, which occurred February 18, 1891. Miss Heyward was born in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, December 2, 1872, a daughter of Thomas and Anne (Brown) Heyward. Mr. and Mrs. Heyward were natives of Devonshire and Rigate, Surrey, England, respectively. The father died in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, October 6, 1869, and she died in Ogle County, September 30, 1905. Of their eight children, Mrs. Sergeant was the sixth in order of birth.

After his marriage Mr. Sergeant began farming on his own account, which he continued ten years on rented land in Flora Township. Meantime, in 1899, he bought his present farm of one hundred and fifty acres, which is well improved, provided with good buildings and supplied with modern machinery and accessories of all kinds necessary to successful farming. He is a well informed stockman and has given much attention to stock-raising. Essentially a home man, he has no political ambition but takes an intelligent interest in all questions of public moment and is of such pronounced public spirit that he is in the best sense of the phrase, "a good man for his town." Mr. and Mrs. Sergeant are the parents of a son, Floy T. Sergeant.

SHATTUCK, Foster H., for seventy-two years a resident of Boone County, Ill., and since 1890 a citizen of Belvidere, where he lives in comfortable retirement, was long a prominent representative of the agricultural element in Spring Township. Mr. Shattuck was born in Concord, Geauga County, Ohio, June 22, 1823, a son of Alfred and Olive (Orton) Shattuck, natives of Connecticut, whose ancestors came from England. They came from Ohio to Boone County in 1836, settling in Spring Township, where the father followed farming. During that season and in 1837 several other families joined the settlement, among which was that of William Brett, father of Harriet Brett, afterwards Mr. Shattuck's wife, then ten years old. They spent their lives in Spring Township, one of Harriet's brothers dying young, and her half-sister surviving until 1904. Stephen Blatchford located in Spring Township in 1836, living opposite Mr. Shattuck's place, and dying at the age of ninety-four years. In the winter of 1835-36 Mr. Shattuck's elder brother, Harlyn Shattuck, began to make improvements on his land and the parents assisted him in putting up a log house, in the building of which not a nail was used. It had a shaker roof held on with poles, a puncheon floor, doors hung with wooden hinges, and was for a considerable period the Shattuck home. At that time the only other families in Spring Township were those of Erastus Shattuck and John Handy, both living in one log house built in the fall of 1835. Erastus was a brother of Alfred, and lived at what was known as Reid's Crossing. When over eighty-four years old he fell from an apple tree, breaking both legs.

William Brett died in 1875, at the age of eighty-three years. Alfred Shattuck lived to be nearly ninety years old, and his widow was past ninety-six at the time of her death. Of their eight children, but one besides the subject of this sketch is living, namely: Maria, widow of William Hollenbeck, of Sycamore, De Kalb County. Harlyn Shattuck spent his life mainly in Spring Township, dying at an advanced age. The first year of Foster H. Shattuck's life in Illinois was mostly spent in DuPage County, Ill., and the change of location to Boone County occurred in 1836. He acquired a farm in Spring Township, to the improvement and operation of which he devoted his energies for many years. While a member of that community he took a deep interest in all that pertained to the general welfare, contributing liberally to the building of churches and schoolhouse and the betterment of the public roads. He still retains the ownership of his farm in Spring Township. Mr. Shattuck indulges in many reminiscences of the pioneer period, among which his recollection of seeing "Big Thunder," the Indian chief, sitting dead where the court house now stands. The body was enclosed in a pen about five feet square, made of slabs cut from trees, and placed upright in the ground. The chief's head had fallen off.

The marriage of Mr. Shattuck to Harriet Brett, before alluded to, took place August 30, 1847. Mrs. Shattuck was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, November 6, 1827, and died January 30, 1907. Their family consisted of five children, namely: William L. and Laru, both of Spring Township; Albert J., of Belvidere; Ada (Mrs. Davs), of Herbert, Ill.; and Julia (Mrs. Chamberlain), of Belvidere.

In early life the political connection of Mr. Shattuck was with the Democratic party, but he has long been a Republican, having been repeatedly elected to office on that ticket. He has served as road commissioner, township collector and as school treasurer, director and trustee. For more than forty years he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SHAW, William H., a retired farmer of Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., is widely recognized as a man of strong character, strict integrity and abundant financial resources. He is the proprietor of the Edgewood stock farm, situated four and a half miles west of Belvidere and half a mile north of Newburgh, and has the distinction of owning there one of the oldest landmarks in Northern Illinois, a residence, the erection of which dates back to the 'forties. Originally built of heavy timbers covered with walnut weather boarding, about forty years after its construction, it was encased with brick. For seventeen years it has been the home of Mr. Shaw, who has been engaged in the breeding of Percheron and Shire horses, Shorthorn cattle and thoroughbred hogs. Although he has discontinued this work, he still takes considerable interest in horses, especially from the speed standpoint, owning a number of valuable and well known light harness horses, with which, in the proper season, he is generally found making the recognized racing circuits of Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa. He is a popular member of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Chicago, his pride being to develop speed rather than to secure financial returns. He owns two fine farms of three hundred and seventy acres, which are operated by tenants, with whom he is in partnership co-operating in the general management. All the stock is held jointly, particularly that devoted to dairy purposes, to which the place is especially adapted.

William H. Shaw was born in Chicago, July 9, 1858, and is the only son of William Walden and Mary Ann (Harrison) Shaw, of English nativity, the old ancestral mansion being situated in Boston, one of England's historic cities. At the age of twenty-one years William W. Shaw came to America in 1876, and was married to Mary Ann Harrison in Chicago. He was a teamster by occupation, but she urged him to secure an education, which he did by attending night schools and pursuing a course in Bell's Commercial College. He then secured a position as book-keeper in a mechanical baking concern, and remained with its successor, the well known "Dake Bakery," his salary being advanced from $9 per week to $2,000 per annum. In 1890, on the organization of the American Biscuit Company, he became a stock-holder in that corporation, and was chosen its treasurer. Thenceforth, he was one of the influential managers of that great enterprise, accumulating a fortune. He died in February, 1905, his wife having passed away in 1859.

While a babe the subject of this sketch was taken to England and there baptized in the old church of his father, as William Walden Harrison Shaw. Romantic circumstances attended the marriage of his father. Soon after he located in Chicago, the cholera broke out there and he was stricken with the dread disease, his name and old-country residence being published. His future wife saw this notice, and noting the fact that he came from the vicinity of her former home in England, called at the hospital where he was, and after pleading with those in charge, was permitted to nurse him. Recovering under her kindly ministrations, he fell in love with her, and she became the guiding star that led him on to a successful career. One of the associates of William W. Shaw in the American Biscuit Company, was Samuel B. Walker, whose stage coaches were once the principal means of conveyance from Chicago across the State to Galena. The projected, but now-vanished, city of Newburgh, before alluded to, was the half-way stopping point on the line, and it was near this place that the son of the old stage-owner's partner ultimately secured a delightful home.

As a young man, William H. Shaw began his life in Boone County, and for about four years was in the employ of the late Eli Bogardus, who is remembered as the great broom-corn raiser of this region. Mr. Shaw was also employed to establish the first creamery route in his locality, at a time when cream was only bought by the well-to-do classes; and, while the idea was a novel one to the producers, and it was a difficult task at the outset to convince them of the fairness of the scheme, he succeeded in establishing twelve cream routes, and is still patronized by many citizens in that connection.

Besides his extensive interests in Boone County, Mr. Shaw owns a stock and grain farm comprising a whole section of land near Plankinton, S. D., which he has developed into a valuable property.

At Fairbury, Ill., on March 4, 1886, Mr. Shaw was united in marriage with Nettie Flora Sharp, of that city, the daughter of David and Mary Ann (Barber) Sharp, natives of England, whose nuptials took place at Painesville, Ohio, where Mrs. Shaw was born June 19, 1861. From the age of five years she was reared at Fairbury. In girlhood, she became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which she has always been an active, influential and effective worker. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, namely, Mary Ann and William Walden, both high school students; Annette, attending school at Belvidere, and Robert David, who died in infancy. Mr. Shaw is a Republican in politics.

SHEARMAN, Willette Helm.—The Shearman family is one of the most distinguished in the history of the New World. Representatives of it came from England in 1633, and served in all of the Indian conflicts and the Revolutionary War. The first American ancestor of Mr. Shearman settled on Rhode Island in March, 1638, and through the advice of Roger Williams purchased the island from the Indians. He was the first secretary of the government formed there at that time, and held various public offices. He added the "a" to his name and his descendants have continued to write it that way. General Tecumseh Sherman and Hon. John Sherman are descendants from another branch of the family. An uncle, R. U. Sherman, was speaker of the lower house of Congress at Washington for several years. His son, James S. Sherman, is now a Congressman from New York and candidate for vice-president on the Republican ticket in 1908. Grandfather Willette H. was a lawyer.

On the maternal side of the house, the Mann family came of English stock and held important positions of trust under King James I. They emigrated to the colonies in 1650 and settled near Boston. The grandfather of Mr. Shearman came to Elgin in 1838. A few years later he was appointed surveyor and surveyed nearly all of Kane County. During the Civil War he was a gallant soldier and held the rank of major. After the capture of Vicksburg he was appointed civil engineer, and after the war went into the business of making maps of several of the states. Major Mann was a very remarkable old gentleman, for at the time of his death he was holding the position of city engineer at Elgin, Ill., although then eighty-six years of age.

Willette H. Shearman was born at Batavia, Ill., May 28, 1874, a son of Eben Brown and Mary Wright (Mann) Shearman. Eben Brown Shearman is a watchmaker located at Elgin and for three terms was alderman of the city. Mr. Shearman was educated in the public schools of Elgin, and later he took a course in English and manual training in the Elgin Academy, being graduated from the business department of that institution. In 1890 he entered the employ of the American Gas Company at Elgin, and two years later, at the age of eighteen, was sent to Portage, Wis., to take charge of the gas business there for that company. A year later he returned to Elgin, when he entered upon his business course at the academy. Having thus fitted himself for a better position, in 1894 Mr. Shearman entered the employ of the Borden Condensed Milk Company as timekeeper. When the plant at Belvidere was built in 1895, he was transferred here as bookkeeper and on July 1, 1899, he was promoted to the position of superintendent, which responsible office he now holds, faithfully and efficiently discharging the duties of his charge. Under his management the business has increased very materially and he has affairs well in hand. He thoroughly understands every detail and gives his personal attention to the works.

On May 17, 1898, Mr. Shearman was married to Elizabeth Jane Fair of Belvidere, and two children have been born to them: Mary Lucille and Willette Fair, two bright little ones. In politics Mr. Shearman is a Republican, and served as alderman of Belvidere from 1905 to 1907. In religious belief he is a Protestant. In 1905 Mr. Shearman assisted in the organization of the Belvidere Chautauqua Assembly, and has been its secretary since that date. His work in this association is of such a nature as to reflect much credit upon him. As a business man and executive, Mr. Shearman is almost without a peer along his lines, and his employers, as well as the community at large, have every confidence in him.

SHIRLEY, Lewis, farmer and stock raiser, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. It is probable that no man ever lived who was brought up to till the soil and eventually drifted away to some other field of endeavor who did not return to the soil or sometime acknowledge a longing to do so. Mother Earth is always calling her own and in time and, in a purely literal sense, she always gets her own; but we are referring now to her call to the farmer. The truth of these remarks is illustrated in the career of Lewis Shirley, who left the farm to become a miner, and later turned his back on the mines to become a farmer.

Mr. Shirley was born on a farm in Laporte County, Ind., January 12, 1833, a son of Lewis and Julia (Keith) Shirley, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Ohio. In 1835 the elder Shirley removed with his family from Laporte County to Winnebago County, Ill., where he settled and where he and his good wife lived out their allotted days, he surviving to an advanced age. Of their children seven grew to manhood and womanhood. The subject of this sketch was one of the younger members of the family and was only three years old when his parents brought him to Illinois. He was brought up on his father's farm, gaining an education in public schools near his home. In early life he went to Nevada, where he put in about five years as a miner, but, as has been stated, eventually returned to the farm. He married at Hampshire, Ill., November 13, 1864, Miss Leah Ream, who died February 28, 1876, having borne him six children, named as follows: Celestia E. is the wife of Herman J. Bennett; Flora E. died January 2, 1881, aged thirteen years; Carrie A. died July 18, 1903, aged thirty-five years; Roswell R. was the next in order of birth; Gertrude died March 23, 1881, aged seven years; Delbert W. is the last in order of birth. Mr. Shirley married for his second wife Miss Sophia Smith, a native of Ohio, born July 21, 1841, who died September 17, 1907, having borne him a son whom they named James L.

As a farmer and stock-raiser Mr. Shirley has won distinguishing success. He is the owner now of about six hundred acres of land in Boone and Winnebago Counties, improved and productive, fitted out with good buildings and with all essentials to profitable operation. In township affairs he has taken an active and helpful interest and, from time to time, has been called to fill different township offices. Politically he is a Republican, devoted heart and soul to prohibition. As a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church he has done much to advance the local organization of that denomination, and his wife, recently deceased, was an active worker for church and Sunday School interests. His success in life has been honestly won and most worthily does he enjoy it, always in full recognition of the rights of his fellow men and always with an earnest desire for their advancement in every worthy way.

SMEDLEY, Nathan.—The venerable Nathan Smedley, formerly of Belvidere, Ill., but now of Chicago, is probably one of the oldest living settlers of Boone County, born June 6, 1831, in Northeast, Erie County, Pa., whence he came west in 1843 with his father, Dr. Ephraim Smedley. The Smedley family history is of interest, there being a complete genealogy of the same in the Newberry and other libraries; Mr. Smedley also owning one of these precious volumes, as well as a large framed coat of arms. Some three hundred years ago the family settled at Litchfield, Conn., where some of its members of a later period participated in the Indian and Revolutionary wars, ever proving themselves brave, devoted patriots. One of the ancestors, Admiral Smedley, captured an English battle-ship from King George. Another relative, Smedley D. Butler, was one of the first of the allied forces upon the Chinese Wall at Tien-Tsin, China, in the first action during the Boxer uprising. Dr. Lyman Dwight Smedley, a brother of Nathan, is mentioned in this history as a surgeon in the War of the Rebellion, and in charge of the Federal Camp in Chicago during that conflict. Many others are also referred to, but space forbids further account of them.

The Smedley homestead, all of which has been destroyed except the doorsill, which has been preserved in a museum built on the spot where the family residence once stood, sheltered many of the family, and there Dr. Ephraim Smedley was born, reared, and whence he went to Yale Medical College, from which he was graduated. There, too, his children were born, and yet as they multiplied he felt the need to go further west, and in 1843 took his little family in one of the canvas-covered wagons drawn by oxen, and set out on the long trip across country. Nathan and his brother, Lyman Dwight Smedley, who died in Nashua, Iowa, in 1906, walked to Belvidere from Chicago, where they had landed from a sailing vessel. At the time the family passed through Chicago, there was but little to recommend it or to foreshadow its future greatness. Indeed, at that time Belvidere was the larger place and much better situated. Reaching Belvidere the family settled on the farm still owned by Mr. Smedley, which had been deeded by the Government to Seth B. Whitman, and purchased by Dr. Ephraim Smedley.

Nathan Smedley soon recognized the possibilities of the new home and, when still a boy, began contracting and building and became one of the most extensive contractors in Boone County. He purchased a farm bearing Niagara Limestone, which was being used extensively for building purposes, and erected a residence on the north bank of the Kishwaukee River, besides several smaller stone buildings on the same property, which is now marked by the Smedley Place which towers above other buildings, and can be seen for miles around. For fifty years Mr. Smedley was identified with extensive building operations in Belvidere and Boone County, and for that period there was scarcely a building put up that did not contain some of his work. After the death of his wife in 1893, Mr. Smedley removed to Chicago, first living at No. 138 Wells Street, in order to be near his sons, Dr. James E. and Dr. Nathan J., but after thirteen years he decided to go into one of the suburbs, and he and his daughter now live with his niece, Dr. Emma J. Warren, No. 985 LeMoine Street, corner of St. Louis Avenue. As this is adjacent to Humboldt Park, the active old gentleman has been able to take sufficient exercise along its walks. When he first came to Chicago he enjoyed riding about on his bicycle, but increasing years and infirmities made this mode of locomotion unsafe.

When President Lincoln issued the first call for troops many responded, but they were but raw recruits, and Nathan Smedley can relate many amusing and interesting experiences during his two periods of enlistment. Finally he was discharged on account of disability. In 1861, not satisfied, this patriot started on a tour with General Haribut to raise a regiment. He has never sought a pension, although eligible for one, because he personally does not believe in the practice of granting them. He has always been a Republican, but never would accept public preferment. During the exciting times prior to the war he bore his part in the Abolitionist movement and assisted many negroes to escape. Sturdy, energetic and strong, he enjoyed swimming and diving and saved many persons from drowning. While he never seemed to mind any amount of work, the strain he often put upon himself has told upon his heart, which is now weak in its action. Fraternally he was a Royal Arch Mason from young manhood, joining the Masonic fraternity in Belvidere.

In July, 1854, Mr. Smedley married Adeline Dorothy Warren, a resident of Charlotte, Mich., on the lawn in front of his home. She was born in Andes County, N. Y., a descendant of General Joseph Warren, of Revolutionary fame. Her death occurred in 1893 in the residence where she had spent her married life. Seven children were born of this marriage: Frank Elmer was an attorney at Dundee, Ill., but died at the homestead; Frederick Warren was a professor in the Chicago University for many years and also Director of the Department of Child Study of the Chicago Public Schools, became a world-famed educator and lecturer on psychology, died in Chicago in 1903 and is buried at Belvidere; Dr. Nathan J.; Dr. James E.; one daughter, who resides with her father; Mattie Adeline, who was killed in childhood, and Charles Chester of the Northwestern University, who was injured in an athletic exhibition and died soon thereafter. Mr. Smedley has always been very proud of his children and given them every advantage.

Naturally Mr. Smedley has friends without number all through the State. In the old days his home was the center of attraction and he delighted in a house full of guests whom, being a violinist and vocalist, he would entertain with music and with pleasant stories. His type is passing away. The present generation have no time to cultivate the many courtesies which have always been so natural to him, and those who know this revered old gentleman honor him and are proud of him and what he has accomplished in his great work of developing Illinois and securing her supremacy among the Central States.

SMITH, Bion B., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. If it could be given in its entirety, the family history of Mr. Smith would be most interesting and doubtless of considerable historical importance. He was born in Morgan County, Ohio, January 15, 1859, his parents being Matthew and Isabella (Early) Smith, natives of Ohio, the latter of whom died in 1862. The father of Matthew Smith was Adam Smith, who, when quite a young man, emigrated from Germany with his parents and settled in the vicinity of the present site of Pittsburg, Pa. But little is known of that somewhat remote ancestor of the subject of this sketch—Adam Smith's father—except that he is reputed to have built the first cabin where the city of Pittsburg now stands. It is supposed that he died there. He left four children who, at his death, were thrown upon their own resources. He is believed to have been at that time in the prime of life. His son Adam died in Morgan County, Ohio, at the advanced age of ninety-five years, and his wife, who was Miss Isabella Patterson, died there aged eighty-nine years. Bion B. Smith's ancestors in both lines would seem to have been people of marked longevity.

Matthew and Isabella (Early) Smith had two children—Bion B. and Mary L. Bion B., the eldest child and only son, was reared on his father's farm in Center Township, Morgan County, Ohio, and was a member of his father's household until he attained his majority. He obtained his elementary education in common schools near his home, and then spent a year at the Mansfield Normal College, Mansfield, Ohio. After finishing his studies at that institution he came to DeKalb County, Ill., and for two years after his arrival found employment as a school teacher. Later he accepted a place in the creamery of Jefferson Colvin in Kingston Township, in the county mentioned, where he remained three years. He married at Waverly, Iowa, October 23, 1884, Miss Isa M. Yontz, a daughter of Henry and Josephine (White) Yontz, who was born in Flora Township, Boone County, July 31, 1863. Mr. Yontz came to Boone County from Ravenna, Ohio, in 1855. He had learned and had been employed at the blacksmith's trade, at which he worked altogether about twenty-seven years, excepting during one year when he lived at Flora, which was the year succeeding his marriage to Miss White, which was celebrated at Belvidere. In 1877 he removed to Iowa, where he lived until 1888, during which time he was engaged in farming. Returning to Belvidere in the year last mentioned, he entered the employ of the National Sewing Machine Company. His wife bore him three children: Isa M., Edgar E. and Daisy A.

After his marriage, Bion B. Smith farmed for a year in Kingston Township, DeKalb County, Ill. Then for twelve years he was superintendent of the creamery of the Blood's Point Creamery Company in Flora Township. His next employment was with the National Sewing Machine Company of Belvidere, where he remained three years. In April, 1902, he located on his farm of one hundred acres in Flora Township. While giving attention to general farming, he makes a specialty of fine stock, in the raising and handling of which he has been quite successful. Of great public spirit, he is much interested in township affairs. While in no sense a practical politician, he is intellectually alert to the progress of events throughout the country, and may be safely relied on to vote for the best candidates for office.

SMITH, William (deceased), machinist and farmer, Capron, Leroy Township, Boone County, Ill. For reasons over which editors have no control, works of the character of this inevitably appear to deal more largely with the living than with the dead. It is scarcely necessary to assure the reader that such is never the deliberate intention. Of most citizens who have passed away it is almost impossible to obtain connected biographical notes, hence they are represented only incidentally, often not very full. In the case of the once prominent citizen whose name appears above, conditions were, happily, found very different. He died at a comparatively recent date and his widow, a woman of unusual intelligence, deeply devoted to his memory, was able and glad to furnish for use in these pages very complete biographical material concerning her late husband. Many to whom he was once a neighbor have been glad also to testify to his ability and high character.

William Smith was born at Care-Muir, Forfarshire, Scotland, March 18, 1832, and died at his home in Boone County, August 11, 1905. Born on a farm in his native land, he was brought up to a knowledge of all the mysteries of farming and devoted himself to it until he was twenty-five years old. After that, during a somewhat protracted period, he was identified with mechanical interests, but though his new career was by no means unsuccessful in this line, he was compelled by the call of the soil to return to farming, in which he achieved results which demonstrated that he was not only a born farmer but born to manage business affairs of importance. It should be added in this connection that from his youth he had always earnestly desired to acquire and own land.

June 15, 1854, Mr. Smith married Jane Melville, also a native of Forfarshire, a daughter of John Melville, who was superintendent of a linen factory, and at the time of her marriage she was between seventeen and eighteen years old. About three years later Mr. and Mrs. Smith came to the United States and in August, 1857, arrived at Chicago, where Mr. Smith entered the shops of the Northwestern Railroad Company to learn the machinists' trade. Thus he spent seven years, at the expiration of which he moved to a farm in Cook County, about fifteen miles from Chicago. There he labored and prospered for about eleven years, when he came to Boone County, and there was destined to achieve a success that, of its kind, was more than noteworthy. In 1872 he bought a farm in Leroy Township, two miles north of Capron. At the onset it was only a farm of eighty acres, but he added to it by subsequent purchases of land until it embraced three hundred and seventy acres, and in the meantime he bought other land until he owned two other farms in Leroy Township, which, with his home farm, aggregated five hundred and forty acres. He paid for this land prices ranging from thirty to sixty dollars an acre, and improved it until it was as valuable as any land in its vicinity. It may be said of his homestead in particular, that it would compare very favorably with any farm in Northern Illinois. He rebuilt the house on it and erected one of the finest barns in the county. To the end of his life he attended diligently to every detail of his business, and the fact that he never sold any portion of his holdings clearly indicated that his ambition to be an extensive land owner did not weaken as he advanced in years. Politically he was a staunch Republican, but was not active as a politician, though he was deeply interested in every movement that tended to the advancement of the interests of his township and county. During the period of the Civil War he bought horses for the United States Government. Religiously he was reared in the Scotch Presbyterian faith, but on coming to Boone County he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Capron, of the official board of which he was long a member.

William and Jane (Melville) Smith had eleven children, three daughters and seven sons of whom are living: John, long a master mechanic in the employ of the Great Northern Railroad Company at Saint Cloud, Minn., has now been retired by that corporation on a pension; Mary married James Douglass of Capron; Helen is living with her mother at Capron; James lives on the old Smith homestead; Jane married James Plumey and lives at Harvard, Ill.; George, Robert, Albert and Charles operate different farms, which were originally parts of their late father's estate; Alexander died at the age of two years. Besides her own children, Mrs. Smith has reared two foster children. One of her daughters-in-law died leaving a son named Ellis D. Smith, then about a year old, to whom Mrs.

Smith gave a mother's care and who is now a farmer in Leroy Township. She adopted a little girl of seven years named Margaret Dickenson, who is now the wife of James Harmon of Rockton, Ill.

STARR, Frank Wicker, one of the extensive real estate dealers of Belvidere, to whose efforts and enterprise are due many of the fine improvements which have made Belvidere so beautiful a city, has laid out Hinsdale & Starr's Addition, F. W. Starr's First Addition, F. W. Starr's subdivision, F. W. Starr's Second Addition and Homedale, and his name is known throughout Boone County in connection with large realty transactions. Mr. Starr is a native of Illinois, having been born at Freeport, January 27, 1864, a son of Humphrey George and Harriet (Wicker) Starr. After finishing a public school course, Mr. Starr embarked in a wholesale and retail oil business, which he conducted successfully for twelve years, or from the time he was twenty until he was thirty-two. At that time he sold his business to the Standard Oil Company and launched into a hardware business, which after nine years, he sold to go into the realty business extensively. He also conducts a loan and insurance business and his interests are many and widespread. His offices are located at No. 406 South State Street, Belvidere, while his delightful home is at No. 1519 Pearl Street.

Mr. Starr married Mary Rohl and they have two children, namely: Sidney Keller, born April 2, 1897, and Pauline Wicker, born March 19, 1903. In politics Mr. Starr is a Republican, but takes no active part in local affairs aside from heartily supporting the candidates of his party. In religious matters he is a Methodist and is a member of the official board of the church of that denomination at Belvidere. Fraternally he is a Mason and a member of the Modern Woodmen. Mr. Starr comes of an old family on both sides of the house, his mother's ancestors having fought with distinction during the Revolutionary War. Mr. Starr is without doubt one of the most public spirited men of Belvidere, and the remarkable success which has attended his efforts demonstrates that he understands the requirements of this locality and the best way to meet them. In addition to his other large interests, Mr. Starr was one of the incorporators of the Columbia Heating Company and of the Boone County Abstract Company.

STARR, John Cambridge, for many years a prosperous merchant and prominent citizen of Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., was born in Whitehall, Washington County, N. Y., March 16, 1830, and since 1855, has been engaged in the harness trade in Belvidere, bearing the distinction of present of being the oldest business man in the town. He had served his apprenticeship in this line in Whitehall, and came to Boone County with his father, George Humphrey Starr, and his stepmother, Harriet (Wicker) Starr, in the early '40s. The father died in Belvidere at the age of eighty-four years, having lived several years in retirement. John C. Starr was married at Crystal Lake, Ill., November 26, 1863, to Angeline Pendleton, a daughter of Commodore Chauncey McDowell Pendleton, of Ticonderoga, N. Y., who, in 1842, settled at Crystal Lake, Ill., where Mrs. Starr was born in 1846. The maiden name of her mother, who was born in Springfield, Vt., was Eliza Tagley. The parents died at Crystal Lake at the ages of eighty-four and eighty-three years, respectively.

The subject of this sketch has dealt exclusively in harness, and in company with Dr. Whitman erected the central store in Belvidere, a double brick building, of which he occupies one half. Mr. and Mrs. Starr reared four children, as follows: Channcey Pendleton Starr, who is in the store with his father; Mary E.; William Taylor, who is a chemist in the Walker-Gordon Modified Milk Company, Chicago; and John Irving, who died September 12, 1903, at the age of twenty-four years. Mary E. graduated from the high school, and the Normal School at Normal, Ill., and taught in the Belvidere schools ten years. She is the widow of Edgar J. R. Granger, formerly connected with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, who died November 15, 1896. He was born in Toronto, Canada, and was at one time superintendent of a Canadian railroad. His death was the result of an accident which occurred less than one year after his marriage. His widow has since resided with her mother, the latter having been an invalid for some years. Mrs. Granger is a worker in the Belvidere Literary Club, and for two years has been Vice-President of the Twelfth Congressional District Association of the Illinois Federation of Women.

Politically, Mr. Starr is an old time Republican, and held the office of Supervisor several years. He also served six years as alderman, and was a member of the School Board.

STERLING, George W., farmer and stock-raiser, and Hiram S. Tobyne, retired, of Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill. The two subjects of this sketch bear to each other the relationship of father-in-law and son-in-law. Each man is noteworthy in his way, and they are among the prominent citizens of their part of the county.

Hiram S. Tobyne was born near Chatham, Canada West, January 18, 1830, a son of James and Susan (Smith) Tobyne, natives of the United States, Susan Smith having been born in Massachusetts. James Tobyne lived early in his life in Vermont near Lake Champlain. In the War of 1812-14 he served the cause of his country as a soldier. Some time after the war he removed to Canada, locating not far from Lake Erie. At the outbreak of the Canadian insurrection of 1837, which has passed into history as "The Patriot War," because of his birth below the Canadian line he was believed to be out of sympathy with the Colonial Government and was several times annoyed by detachments of Canadian militia. On one occasion a considerable number of Canadian soldiers visited his house during his absence and intimidated his wife, compelling her to provide them with a meal of victuals. Of course his life was at no time threatened, but his associations were so distasteful to him that he decided to return to the United States. Selling his stock at less than its value and winding up his affairs as well as he could, he left Canada in March, 1837, about a month later arriving in Boone County, Ill. He had determined to come to Illinois, but had decided upon no particular point for settlement. He made the journey by horse and wagon, crossing the end of Lake Erie on the ice, and meeting with other adventures as interesting as they were perilous. The country round about Belvidere looked good to him, and he soon took up some government land on Beaver Creek in Belvidere Township, five miles northwest of the then future city. Naturally, one of the first things that he did was to erect a little log house, which sheltered his family until he could build a better residence. In time the brick house now standing on his farm came into existence. In that house he died April 15, 1865, the day of the death of President Lincoln, and there, too, his widow died in June, 1879. He attained the age of seventy-two years, and his wife that of eighty years. Of their children, only one, Hiram S. Tolyne, the subject of a part of this article, is living.

Hiram S. Tolyne was a little more than seven years old when his parents brought him from Canada to Boone County. His boyhood and youth were passed in obtaining such an education as was afforded in the schools near his home and in gaining, under his father's able instruction, a practical knowledge of farming. He married Sarah E. Murphy, May 29, 1853, when he was well advanced in his twenty-fourth year. Miss Murphy, who was born in St. Joseph County, Ind., June 29, 1835, was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Murphy. Early in 1850 he moved into Boone County, locating on Beaver Creek, where they secured land and improved a farm. They died at Belvidere. Nearly all of the active life of Mr. Tolyne was spent in the neighborhood in which his father settled on coming from Canada. Eventually, he retired to Belvidere in 1893, and there his wife died in 1904. Their daughter, Eliza V., was born in Winnebago County, Ill., January 16, 1855, who on January 27, 1874, became the wife of George W. Sterling. George W. Sterling came to Illinois when he was about thirteen years old. The father had gone to California in 1849, the year of the boy's birth, and died there. From the time of his arrival in the State until he was married, George was a member of the family of Joshua Heath, in Winnebago County. Such education as he was able to obtain he gained by attendance during short winter terms at common schools. He was married at the age of twenty-three years, and lived in Guilford, Winnebago County, until 1893, when he bought his present home, which was included in the original James Tolyne purchase. He owns also eighty acres of the Tolyne land, and has in his possession papers for it issued to Mr. Tolyne by the United States Government. The Sterling farm is on the famous "Mile Strip," which was a bone of contention between Moore and Winnebago Counties for some years. Mr. Sterling gives his attention to general farming and keeps from eighteen to twenty cows and breeds hogs.

George W. and Eliza V. (Tolyne) Sterling have become the parents of children, named as follows, in their order of birth: Daisy A., is the wife of Arthur J. Van Epps, a biographical sketch of whom appears elsewhere in these pages; Eva L., married Frank Pierce, who is an expert mechanic at Belvidere; S. Millis, is the wife of Bernard F. Speirling, who operates her father's old homestead in Winnebago County; Mabel C., is a teacher in the Boone County Schools; Mrs. Van Epps was also a teacher before her marriage. He and all the members of his family are identified with the Baptist Church at Belvidere. All four of Mrs. Sterling's grandparents were members of the Baptist Church, and the Tolyne's were among the organizers of bodies of that denomination in this part of Illinois. Mr. Sterling is a liberal supporter of every interest of the church.

STEURER, Fred J., who, beginning his life in this country as a day laborer without friends or money, has by his own industry, perseverance and economy become the owner of one of the best farms in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., as well as a prominent citizen of the community, was born in Baden, Germany, near the River Rhine, November 7, 1861. He is a son of George Steurer, who died in Germany in 1872. His mother, Katharina (Fidder) Steurer, came from her native land to this country in 1886, and has since made her home with the subject of this sketch. She and her husband had four children, of whom George, Jacob, and Fred J. reached the years of maturity.

Fred J. Steurer remained in Germany until he was nearly twenty-one years of age, when he crossed the ocean to the United States. In the fatherland he learned the baker's trade, and also worked at farm labor. On coming to this country he first went to Altoona, Pa., where he was employed in the foundry of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. After working there a few months, he followed his trade of baker a short time in Altoona, and then went to Northern Wisconsin, where he spent eighteen months in labor. In April, 1884, he located in De Kalb County, Ill., hiring out two years as a farm laborer. At the end of this period he rented a farm for five years and then bought one hundred and twenty acres of land in Spring Township, Boone County, where he now lives. To this he added sixty acres more three years later, and his present farm of one hundred and eighty acres is well improved, having upon it substantial and convenient buildings. In connection with his farming operations, he has been engaged in buying and shipping live stock for several years, with profitable results. He is one of the directors of the Farmers' State Bank of Belvidere.

On February 25, 1886, Mr. Steurer was married to Mary Schandelmeyer, born in Baden, Germany, May 14, 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Steurer are the parents of five children, as follows: Walter F., born December 3, 1887; Harry T., born October 29, 1894; Clarence H., born November 26, 1898; Irving C., born March 29, 1900; and Ross W., born May 28, 1902.

Politically Mr. Steurer is a Republican and has held the office of school director. He and his excellent wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

STEVENSON, Hugh Blair, attorney-at-law, Capron, Boone County, Ill. In any community a lawyer who has a proper appreciation of his duty to courts, to the public and to himself is a useful citizen. From the very nature of his profession he becomes, in a purely social way, the adviser of his neighbors in many important matters, and before the courts and otherwise he adjusts their misunderstandings, settles their disputes and acts as a peacemaker in many exigencies in which he might even more easily be a promoter of dissension and confusion, and in the course of events he safeguards the property of the living, equitably divides the property left by the dead and protects widows and orphans in their rights. In these statements will be recognized a brief description of the Christian lawyer, and there are many such in all parts of our land. A notable proof of this last assertion will appear in the consideration of the career of the prominent citizen of Capron whose name is above.

Hugh Blair Stevenson was born in Dunham, McHenry County, Ill., May 6, 1851, a son of Anchrom and Jane Stevenson, both of whom have passed to their reward. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson came to McHenry County soon after the year 1840, and invested there in government land. Of Scotch and French ancestry, respectively, they were born in County Armagh, Ireland, and were there married not many years before they came to the United States. Mr. Stevenson learned the weaver's trade and devoted his earlier years to it. He died at the age of eighty-five years, his wife dying less than five years later, aged eighty-three years. Until his death there had not been a death in his family in half a century. They had four sons who grew to maturity: James, who lives at Belvidere, Ill.; D. A., who was a chief clerk in the employ of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company at Pittsburg, Pa., and died there; Thomas J. lives on the old family homestead in McHenry County; Hugh Blair remained under the paternal roof until his admission to the bar, except while he was pursuing his studies at Sharon Academy, the Northwestern University, the Chicago University and the Union Law School.

From the last named institution Hugh B. Stevenson was graduated with the class of 1875. The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by Nashville (Tenn.) College. He began the practice of his profession at Capron in 1875, and has continued it there without a break for a third of a century. In such a community his practice has necessarily been general and much of it has been in the probate court. He has acted as administrator of estates, as executor of wills and as guardian of several children. He practices in all the courts of Illinois and his success has been very satisfactory. He is not of the class of lawyers who make their profession a stepping-stone to political advancement, and he has generally refused offices when they have been urged upon his consideration, though his interest in the local welfare led him to accept the presidency of the village board of Capron. On August 8, 1908, he received the nomination for state's attorney of Boone County, and if elected, his friends believe he will make an efficient officer. He is a Royal Arch Mason, and has passed all the chairs in lodge and encampment in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and holds membership in the Order of Mystic Workers, Court of Honor, Knights of the Globe, and Modern Woodmen, at the present time (1908) being Venerable Consul of the latter order. A member of the Christian Church, he has been Superintendent of the local Sunday School of that denomination several years, and is Vice-President of the Boone County Sunday School Association.

On April 3, 1878, Mr. Stevenson married Miss Ida Stow, daughter of John D. and Mary J. (Wagar) Stow. Mr. Stow was a son of Hiram Stow, who came to Boone County from Broome County, N. Y., and settled in Bonus Township. At a comparatively early date he had a store at Russellville, Boone County, Ill., for some years, and when the railroad was constructed through Capron, he opened the first store there. For a time during the period of the Civil War he was Supervisor of Boone Township. He died in 1865, aged thirty-nine years, and his widow is still living at Capron. Mrs. Stevenson was their only child. Formerly she was a successful teacher of music, and by practice has maintained her efficiency as a musician. She was one of the charter members of the Christian Church at Capron. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have a son, Claude A. Stevenson, now aged twenty-six years, who is a telegraph operator at Capron.

STIMEES, Ole O., one of the large stockmen and successful farmers of Boone Township, was born in Norway, February 18, 1838, a son of Ole Stimees. In 1851 he came to the United States on a sailing vessel that took eight and one-half weeks on the voyage. From New York he came by rail to Elgin, and there bought an ox-team with which he made the last stage of his trip to this township, where Ender Stimees and Lewis Johnson had already settled. They, with probably two dozen other families, formed a little settlement. The elder Ole Stimees settled in this vicinity, about one-half mile from Ole O. Stimees' present farm, but the father died about six years after coming to America, when he was sixty-two. His wife died at fifty-two. The parents had these children: Emily, who married Elias Deming, a railroad conductor of Chicago; Ole; Betsey married Charles Wilkins of Oak Park; Henry died at the age of twenty-one; another son, who died at the age of fifty-five, was a railroad conductor, and Alfred, who is a farmer in Brown County, S. D.

Ole O. Stimees when still a boy went to Chicago, and two years later returned home and worked for his father until the latter's death, when he took charge of the farm. He now owns four hundred and seventy-eight acres of land in three farms, operated by himself and sons. He has devoted himself to stock-raising and dairying, and milks 35 cows. In 1900 he erected a fine house, and his large barn was built in 1888.

In 1860 Mr. Stimes was married to Lena Benson, a sister of John and Ben Benson, and who as a child crossed the ocean on the same vessel as her future husband. She worked in Chicago prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Stimees have had children as follows: Tena, married Albert Heimanson and died at the age of thirty-nine; Otis, a painter in Chicago; Levi, of North Dakota; David, one of his father's farmers; Henry, at home; Severt, a conductor on the Chicago & St. Louis Railroad; Joseph, a conductor on the same line; Cora, Frank, Julius, Mamie and Amos, at home; Hattie, a teacher in the home school; Alfred, a student of Beloit College. Mr. Stimees is a Republican, and has kept himself free from mere partisan affairs. He is a member of the Lutheran Church of Capron. Mr. Stimees is an excellent farmer, a good citizen and a thoroughly representative man of his township.

SWIFT, Arthur Wesley, M. D., of Belvidere, Ill., whose reputation as a competent and faithful medical practitioner extends beyond the borders of Boone County, was born in Nunda, Livingston County, N. Y., July 10, 1860, a son of Prosper and Mary A. (Cleveland) Swift, who were also natives of New York. The father, who was a carpenter by trade in Nunda, during the Civil War enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirtieth New York Volunteer Infantry, later was a member of the First New York Dragoons, and on August 5, 1862, at Portage, N. Y., was mustered in as a Sergeant in Company I, same organization, was promoted to First Sergeant April 1, 1864, and to First Lieutenant August 1st of the same year. On October 19, 1864, he was killed in the battle of Cedar Creek, Va. Lieut. Prosper Swift was a Republican in politics, and a strict member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by his union with Mary A. Cleveland, became the father of two children—the subject of this sketch and a brother who died at nine years of age. In 1866 the family removed west, settling at Belvidere, Ill., where the son, Arthur Wesley, received a good literary education, and later read medicine with Dr. Whitman of that place. Subsequently entering the Chicago Homeopathic Medical College, he was graduated from that institution, when he at once came to Belvidere and spent the first eleven years of his professional career in partnership with his former tutor, Dr. Whitman. In 1896 this partnership was dissolved, and during the same year Dr. Swift became associated with

Dr. R. B. Andrews, this relation continuing until 1905, and since the latter date, Dr. Swift has been engaged in practice alone.

In 1885, Dr. Swift was married at Belvidere, Ill., to Jessie Curtis, a daughter of Charles and Mary Ann (Mounsey) Curtis, the former a pioneer settler of Boone County, and of this union there have been two children, Harold Arthur and Helen Louise. Politically, Dr. Swift is a Republican; in 1900 was elected Alderman of the city of Belvidere, serving one year, when in 1901, he was elected Mayor, continuing in this office until 1903. He has also served as a member of the Board of Health seven years, for eight years has been Precinct Committeeman, and for four years member of the Senatorial Committee for Boone County. In his professional relations, he is a member of the Boone County Medical Society, the Northwestern Homeopathic Medical Association, the American Institute of Homeopathy, and the Illinois State Medical Society. He is also Medical Examiner for a number of Societies and Life Insurance Companies, and Secretary of the United States Board of Pension Examiners at Belvidere. His religious associations are with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he holds the office of Trustee, and fraternally is identified with the Masonic Order as a member of Belvidere Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M.; Kishwaukee Chapter R. A. M. No. 90; K. T. Crusader Commandery No. 17, Rockford, Ill.; and Tebala Lodge, Mystic Shrine, of Rockford.

Dr. Swift has had a successful career in his profession, and socially is regarded as an affable and pleasant gentleman.

THOMPSON, Ole, (deceased).—The late Ole Thompson was born in Norway, October 14, 1837, and died September 28, 1898, on his farm four miles northwest of Capron in LeRoy Township, Boone County. In 1841 Mr. Thompson was brought to America and remained at home until he attained his majority, when he went to California, where he engaged in mining for seven years, but returned home in 1866 and on July 6th of that year, married Margaret Bean. Mrs. Thompson was born in Norway in 1841 and was three years of age when brought by her parents to Illinois. The Norse spelling of the family name bothered his American neighbors, so Mrs. Thompson was born in Norway in 1841, and was settled in Capron, where he died of consumption at the age of thirty-two, when his daughter was eight years old. Margaret Bean had a brother, Knute, and a sister, Elizabeth. Knute was only ten years old when his father died, and he had to take charge of affairs. The widow had nothing but the wild land her husband has secured and they all worked very hard, but the mother lived to see her children happily married. Elizabeth married Lewis Goodsell, but died of consumption at thirty-two. Knute is a prosperous farmer on the farm adjoining the homestead. On the latter the cabin in which they made their brave fight against poverty is still standing.

After marriage Mr. Thompson took a position with his brother-in-law, Lewis Goodsell, and operated a gristmill, in time replacing the old mill with a new one. After ten years he exchanged his share for a farm of 57 acres in LeRoy Township, to which he added, until at the time of his death the property was a very valuable one. He put up a good house, barn and other buildings, and he and his wife were very comfortable there. Mr. Thompson embarked in other lines and made a success of whatever he undertook. Kind-hearted, genial, always ready to look on the bright side of life, he naturally made many friends and his loss was sincerely mourned. He was not a politician, although a good Republican, and he served as School Director. He was a member of the Lutheran Church of Capron, in which he was Deacon and Church Treasurer. Mr. Thompson was never called upon in vain for financial aid when any church affair was in mind, for he gave liberally and generously and was greatly interested in its advancement. People grew to depend upon him and what he said, and if he endorsed anyone it was sufficient, for he was known to support only those who were honest and worked for the best good of humanity.

One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, William, born February 24, 1867. He has always lived at home. By trade he is a painter, but he conducts a photograph gallery. Ten years ago Mrs. Thompson left the farm, and building a pleasant home in Capron, now resides there with her son and rents the farm property.

TILLERSON, Ole R.—No one is to be more complimented on the perfect method and order with which their agricultural affairs are conducted than he whose name is given above.

He was a farmer and one of the most successful in the county, and although of foreign birth, he has ever taken a deep interest in the progress and development of his adopted country.

Mr. Tillerson was born in Voss, Norway, on a farm named Rong, about nine miles from Bergen, on the 29th day of August, 1823, and his father, Troud Tillerson, who was a carpenter by trade, was also a native of that country.

The elder Mr. Tillerson was married in Norway to Miss Tilda Tillerson, and they became the parents of six children, one daughter, who departed this life while in Norway, and yet a small child. Three sons and two daughters grew to adult years and came to America.

In 1848, two years after our subject came to America, the parents crossed the ocean with their son, Ole Tillerson, and both died on this side of the Atlantic when about seventy-three years of age. All the children are now deceased.

After Ole R. Tillerson's marriage, which occurred in Norway, to Miss Martha Nyre, in 1845, he, with his bride, took passage on a sailing vessel at Bergen, and after an ocean voyage of forty-six days, reached New York City. From there they went to Milwaukee, by river, canal and the lakes, and were about two weeks making the trip.

After reaching that city, they went with ox-team to their present home, and the following year Mr. Tillerson bought one hundred and sixty acres of government land. He had but eighty dollars in money and one cow, and his claim costing one hundred and sixty dollars, he had to borrow the balance, paying fifty per cent interest. (Will say here, for a moral lesson, that the man who charged this high rate of interest died in the poor house.)

Mr. Tillerson erected a rude log-house and resided in it for about two years, when he was joined by his parents, and he and his father bought forty acres of land, upon which they both resided for some time.

Our subject lost his wife on the ninth day of July, 1863. Their union had been blessed by the birth of eleven children, five daughters and six sons. One son died in infancy, and in the fall of 1853 they buried two little girls, Carrie and Emeline; both died within two weeks of each other with typhoid fever. There were six persons prostrated in the same house at one time by the same disease.

On the fifteenth of September, 1868, Mr. Tillerson married Miss Christie Steen, from Voss, Norway, who came over from Norway in 1866, and the fruits of this union have been nine children. They lost one daughter, Emma, who was a student of Rockford Seminary. She was a young lady of more than usual promise. She passed away on the twenty-sixth of January, 1892, and the following spring would have graduated at the seminary. Her sunny and pleasant disposition won her a large host of friends that have missed her congenial associations.

On September twenty-first, 1893, Miss Carrie Tillerson was married at her home to Peter O. Hynning, of Chicago, who owned a gentlemen's furnishing store in that city. All the brothers and sisters that were living at that time were at home, and sixteen children were gathered around the marriage feast. But her beautiful life was ended on December 18, 1899, after much patient suffering.

At this writing there remain living Martin, Andrew, Ella, Anna, Sarah, Kanute, Dena, Henry (a hardware merchant of Chicago), Tilda, Thomas N., a ranchman in New Mexico; Lewis, a real estate man in Chicago; Martha; Ellis, a sheep ranch owner in Dakota; Betsy, of Chicago, and Frank, a carpenter, who is married and lives in Beloit, Wisconsin. The latter eight are children from his former marriage.

At the decease of Mr. Tillerson, he owned five hundred and sixty acres of well improved agricultural land and forty acres of second growth timber land.

He was a very thrifty and industrious farmer, cultivating nearly all the products adapted to this part of the country. He also kept a large dairy during his lifetime and considered it an excellent investment.

He always voted the Republic ticket, and was once elected Supervisor. He administered estates, running into many thousands of dollars, and at one time was guardian of six minors in one estate and two in another.

He was the leader, and his home the headquarters of the Norwegians that came from the old country to this locality. As he was a broad-minded man and familiar with the alien laws, his country-men naturally sought him as a counselor. He was highly esteemed in the community, and his honesty and uprightness are unquestioned.

Honorable and upright in all his dealings, he was intrusted with the finances of several large estates, and proved that he was ever worthy of the trust placed in him.

He and Mrs. Tillerson were members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church at Norway, and were the founders of the church in the northern part of the township. Although they brought but little of the world's goods to this country, they respect the word of God and place their faith and trust in God, and have been prosperous and happy.

Mrs. Tillerson's aged mother, now ninety years of age, while she has been here with her daughter since 1891, and loves her grandchildren and her daughter, still longs for the beautiful home among the mountains of Norway.

Although Mrs. Tillerson is not what one would call an educated lady, she is still more intelligent than many college-bred ladies, and has taught her children the Norwegian tongue, besides instructing them in other useful ways.

Mr. and Mrs. Tillerson's greatest and most earnest wish is that their children will always respect the word of God, and be considerate of the poor and suffering. Since the early death of their daughter, which was a sad blow to bear, they still think that the cloud has its silver lining and that "A good God reigns over all." Her funeral was one long to be remembered on account of the large number of friends who paid their last respects to the dear departed one.

Mrs. Tillerson still lives on the old homestead, enjoying excellent health, but misses Mr. Tillerson, who departed this life June 9, 1897.

TOBYNE, William, (deceased), who for many years was one of the prominent figures in agricultural circles in Boone County and who left behind him an honorable record for thrift, hard work and energetic action, was born February 21, 1823, in Ontario, Canada, and died October 21, 1885. He was married May 14, 1852, to Fidelia Melvin, who died. On September 14, 1864, he married Augusta Easton, who survives him and is living at Debeque, Col. Of the children born to his first marriage, two reached maturity: Hiram W., who died October 27, 1897, owner of the old Tobyne homestead, where his widow now resides; Laura, born September 5, 1853, died March 23, 1888. The children of the second family were: Flora, who married Samuel K. Walker, of Debeque, Col.; Della J. married Joy H. Cross, of Colorado Springs, Col.; Fred E., born January 18, 1871, married January 12, 1898. Blanche I. Bounds, of Poplar Grove, born December 1, 1876, and they have three children; Flora Alice, born December 12, 1898; Anna May, born April 28, 1900, and Mildred Blanche, born June 22, 1903.

In 1836 William Tobyne, then a lad of thirteen, came with his parents, James and Susan Tobyne, to Illinois, and he remained at home until his marriage in 1852, when he settled on a farm adjoining that of his father in Belle Prairie Township. In the latter '60s he sold this property and bought the farm where his son, Fred, now resides. In 1876 he erected the pleasant home, and there he spent the remainder of his life and there died. In politics he was a Republican, and he was Deacon of the Baptist Church of Belvidere, of which he was one of the founders and liberal supporters. He was a man of strictest integrity, and won for himself the confidence and respect of all with whom he came in contact. His loss was severely felt, not only in his family, but throughout the community where for so many years he had lived and worked.

Fred Tobyne remained at home, taking charge of the farm for his father, and bought out the interests of the other heirs after the latter's death. The farm consists of one hundred and sixty-seven acres of fine land, and he has made some very extensive improvements, including the erection of a large block barn, 32x86 feet. He carries on general farming, dairying and stock raising, milking 20 cows. He keeps a good breed of all kinds of stock. He is a Baptist and takes an active part in its good work. In politics he is a Republican, with strong Prohibition sentiments. Mr. Tobyne has devoted his life to his farm, having left school to work upon it for his father, and his success is certainly well merited.

TRIPP, John G.—The prosperity of every community depends very largely upon the acumen and enterprise of its leading business men, through whose endeavors new undertakings are started and old concerns give new life. Especially is this true of Belvidere, Ill., which, although an old place, is one of the most wide awake in the State, and is the home for many flourishing enterprises headed by men of substance and public spirit. Such a man is John G. Tripp, retailer of lumber and coal, located at No. 205 South State Street, who has been in this line of business for the past sixteen years, and who has also contributed toward the general industrial prosperity by the organization of The Belvidere Telephone Company, in the spring of 1888, of which he was made Vice-president, and of The Electric Stone Company, on July 12, 1900, of which he is still President.

Mr. Tripp was born in Bonus Township, Boone County, Ill., March 28, 1854, a son of James D. and Angelina (Maxon) Tripp, who were married October 4, 1829, and had thirteen children. James D. Tripp held various Township offices, and was a man greatly respected in his community. One of Mr. Tripp's great-grandfathers was a Revolutionary soldier. After completing the course at the Belvidere High School, Mr. Tripp, when twenty years old began farming, but two years later was employed by M. G. Leonard in buying grain and wool with a working interest in the business. After being in the employ of Mr. Leonard for thirteen years, he again engaged in farming for three years, then spent two years in shipping live-stock, after which he embarked in the lumber and coal business with O. H. Wright & Company. In 1898 he bought out the firm of Witbeck & Wheeland at his present place of business, and since then has built up a very large trade.

On February 4, 1880, Mr. Tripp married Belle C. Chamberlain, at Belvidere, Ill., and the following children have been born to them: Helen N., Belle C., Jennie L., Ruth E. and Maxon, who is deceased. The family reside at No. 907 Pearl Street, Belvidere. In politics Mr. Tripp is a Republican, while fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Order of Elks. His religious belief associates him with the Protestant faith. Public-spirited, enterprising, a man of strictest integrity, Mr. Tripp has steadily advanced in the confidence of his fellow townsmen, and may be counted upon to support anything he believes will eventually conserve the best interest of the majority.

TUTTLE, Ransom F., farmer and stockman. Manchester township, Boone County, Ill. The farmer of today could be no more justly likened to the farmer of a half-century ago, than could the general business man of today to his prototype of the '40s and '50s. In the former period farming was unsystematic and, with many, it was a makeshift occupation. Perhaps the latter fact accounts in no small measure for the apparently larger number of failures among farmers of those days than among farmers of the twentieth century. Not only has farming been reduced to a practical science, but is a great industry involving the investment of immense capital and producing a very large percentage of the world's wealth. Stock-raising and other auxiliary features of farming have kept pace with farming itself. Boone County has many first class farmers, Manchester township has its proportion of them, and Ransom F. Tuttle is one of the best known of that number.

Mr. Tuttle was born in LeRoy Township, September 12, 1857, a son of Lorin Tuttle, whose wife was Caroline Powell. Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle were both natives of St. Lawrence County, N. Y., which is known as one of the most picturesque regions of America. They came to La Salle County, Ill., in 1852, and, in 1854, removed to Boone County, settling in LeRoy Township. There, and in Boone Township, they lived and labored during the remainder of their lives. Mr. Tuttle died at Capron, late in the '80s, when he was fifty-seven years old; his widow survived him until January, 1904, when she died at the age of seventy-six years. They were the parents of five children, who are named in the order of their nativity: Ransom F., Horace F., Emma, Mary and Anna.

Ransom F. Tuttle was reared and educated in Boone County and learned farming under his father's instruction. He has lived in the county all his life, with the exception of one year which he spent in California, and, save for a few years during which he operated meat markets at Capron and Poplar Grove, he has devoted himself entirely to farming and stock-raising. He is the owner of one hundred and fifty acres of land, all of which is well improved, provided with modern buildings and up-to-date machinery and appliances. He has lived on his present farm since the spring of 1901.

October 22, 1879, Ransom F. Tuttle married Miss Belle Scougall, a native of Boone County and a daughter of Loughin Scougall, a Scotchman, who first saw the light of day in Edinburgh. Mrs. Tuttle has borne her husband children named George, Arthur and Ella. Wherever he has lived Mr. Tuttle has been much interested in everything pertaining to township and municipal progress and prosperity. While he is not a politician in the usual ac-ception of the term, there is no question of public economy which does not receive his intelligent consideration. Above all, he is a believer in the great destiny of the American people and in the absolute necessity for good and still better government. In order to carry out some ideas of his own with respect to local government, he has, from time to time, consented to fill village and township offices, and for some years while he lived in Capron he was a member of the Village Board. He is an Odd Fellow and a Modern Woodman of America.

VANCE, Alexander, Postmaster, undertaker and furniture dealer at Capron, Boone County, Ill. The name of Vance has long been well known in the United States. Representatives of the family have been prominent in business, in the sciences, in literature and in the professions. Boone County has not a citizen who in his line stands higher than does Alexander Vance, and it is not probable that Capron has a business man better known for integrity, fair dealing and efficiency than Mr. Vance, who has proved himself not only a model official, but an undertaker thoroughly trained in all details of his rather difficult profession. He is widely known also as one of the most popular secret society men in the northern tier of Illinois counties.

Alexander Vance was born in Chester, Pa., September 20, 1857, a son of Thomas and Mary (Sinton) Vance, both natives of County Armagh, Ireland. Thomas Vance came to the United States when he was twenty-one years old. His wife came while she was yet a very young woman, and they became acquainted and were married in Pennsylvania. A cotton weaver by trade, Thomas worked in the Joseph Riddle Mills at Chester. In time he came to an understanding that the cheap lands of the new West offered to the comparatively poor man the very best opportunities for labor and investment. He came to Illinois in 1861 and secured a farm three miles south of Capron. His elder brother, John, had lived on the same land four or five years, but had not succeeded in weaning himself away from the cotton-mills, and he was glad to sell out and return to Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Vance improved a good farm, on which they lived the remainder of their days. He died February 17, 1883, aged sixty-two years, his wife surviving until March 4, 1890, when she died aged about sixty-four years. Their youngest daughter, Jennie, wife of Finley Stow, now owns their old homestead, the improvements on which were made, chiefly, by Mr. Vance. Politically he was a Republican and, as such, took an active interest in township affairs.

Thomas and Mary (Sinton) Vance had several children, five of whom grew to maturity: J. W., Alexander, Margaret, Richard and Jennie. J. W. became a school teacher, but later went east and, as a helper in steel mills, studied steel manufacture, with which he was connected as secretary to the Superintendent of the Carnegie Steel Works—a good position from which he was gradually elevated to that of Secretary and Manager of the St. Louis Plate Glass Works, St. Louis, Mo., and Pittsburg, Pa., with headquarters at Pittsburg. Alexander receives detailed notice below. Margaret is the wife of Walter Fry, of Boone Township, Richard is farming near Capron, and Jennie (Mrs. Stow) is mentioned above.

Alexander Vance was a member of his father's household until he attained his majority, and then he removed to Capron, where he was variously employed, a part of the time as a clerk in the store of Thomas R. Thornton. In March, 1882, he engaged in the furniture trade, in which he has continued to the present time, through a period of twenty-six years. He has an undertaking department and holds a State license as an embalmer. He is popular as a business man and has a large and constantly increasing trade, which extends throughout all the territory tributary to Capron.

As a Republican Mr. Vance takes an intelligent interest in National, State, county and local affairs. He has been for some time a member of the Village Board of Capron. He was appointed Postmaster in 1884, under the administration of President Arthur, and held the office for about eight years, through President Cleveland's first administration and through President Harrison's administration. In 1897 he was again appointed to that office, which he has held continuously ever since, with his last term not yet very near its end. He has served all together nineteen years, and since he first came to the office its work has increased very materially. Three rural free-delivery routes, centering at Capron, have been established during the past three years. Mr. Vance attends conventions of his party and does every thing in his power to promote the election of its nominees and the triumph of its principles. He is a member of Capron Lodge No. 575, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; of Howard Chapter No. 91, Royal Arch Masons; of Woodstock Commandery, No. 25, Knights Templar, and of Tebala Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Rockford, and has often been a delegate to the Grand Lodge. Mr. Vance is an enthusiastic sportsman and greatly enjoys trap shooting. He is a member of the Capron Gun Club, and holds the championship for Boone County and the L. C. Smith Cup for Illinois as champion double shot.

February 8, 1881, Mr. Vance married Nellie, an adopted daughter of Thomas R. Thornton, formerly a merchant at Capron, but now a citizen of Belvidere.

Mr. Vance was nominated for Coroner of Boone County, in August, 1908, and so popular is he that his election is considered a settled matter.

VAN EPPS, Arthur J., one of the owners of the Belvidere Brick Manufacturing Company, Belvidere Township, Boone County, Ill. The family of Van Epps is of Hollandic extraction and was early represented among the burghers of New York. In all periods of the history of New York State and city, this family name has been prominent. Branches of the family have been established in different parts of the West, notably in Illinois, where its best known representatives are the Van Epps of Boone County. Seymour Van Epps was born in the State of New York, and at the age of six years was brought to Boone County by his parents, Everett and Electa Van Epps. That was in the year 1846. His father secured land and improved a farm north of Belvidere. There he lived out his days, and there his widow lived for a time after his death, though eventually she removed to Iowa, but returned to Belvidere, where she died. Seymour Van Epps became the owner of the family homestead. On December 15, 1868, he married Lella M. Heath at Belvidere, Ill., and they have had three sons and two daughters: Herbert H., Arthur J., Walter S., Ida M., and Florence I.

Arthur J. Van Epps was born on the Van Epps homestead near Belvidere, December 27, 1872, and married Miss Daisy Sterling, February 23, 1898. In politics Mr. Van Epps is a Republican. Walter Van Epps, of the Belvidere Brick Company, was married September 19, 1906, to Miss Ina Chamberlain, of Manchester, Iowa. The Van Epps family are members of the First Baptist Church of Belvidere.

Mr. Van Epps began his business career as a farmer, but after five years joined his brother, Walter S., in the manufacture of brick. The history of the Belvidere Brick Manufacturing Company begins with the establishment of the brick yard of Rudolph Fritz, about ten years ago. The enterprise was operated by Mr. Fritz until 1900, when it was bought by the Van Epps Brothers. Mr. Fritz had previously operated the yard in the city of Belvidere. The works occupy about five acres of a tract of twenty-five acres, about two and a quarter miles north of Belvidere, on the State road. Three kilns are utilized, each with a capacity of 350,000 brick. The kilns are strongly constructed with twelve-inch brick walls, and the machinery and appliances throughout are the best and latest procurable. During the working season fifteen to sixteen men are employed.

VAN EPPS, Walter Stanley, stockholder of the Belvidere Brick Manufacturing Company, Belvidere, Boone County, Ill. In a biographical sketch of Arthur J. Van Epps, brother of the subject of this article, will be found much of interest concerning the history of this old Holland Dutch family, and much in detail of the Belvidere Brick Manufacturing Company, of which Arthur J. and Walter Stanley Van Epps are the owners. These enterprising business men are sons of Seymour Van Epps, who at the age of six years, was in 1846 brought to Boone County by Everett and Electa Van Epps, his parents. Everett Van Epps was a notable man in the pioneer days and later. His old homestead became the property of his son Seymour and is now the home of his grandson, Walter S. Van Epps. It contains eighty-six and one-half acres and is situated about a mile north of Belvidere. The primitive house built on it in 1846 is still standing, though for residential purposes it gave place years ago to a more modern structure erected by Seymour Van Epps.

Walter Stanley Van Epps was born in the house in which he now lives, October 17, 1876. He was brought up to the work of the farm, but became interested in brick manufacture and gained a practical knowledge of the business in brick yards in his vicinity. For a time he and his brother owned and operated a brick yard at Belvidere. They have controlled and managed their present enterprise since 1900.

September 19, 1906, Mr. Van Epps married Miss Ina Chamberlain, a daughter of David and Ella Chamberlain. The Chamberlains formerly lived in Winnebago County, Ill., but later removed to Delaware County, Iowa, leaving numerous relatives round about Belvidere. Miss Chamberlain was graduated from the Manchester, Iowa, High School and taught in the schools of that town until her marriage. Politically Mr. Van Epps is a Republican. He is a member of Belvidere Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His wife is a member of the Baptist Church. It should be noted in this connection that the Van Epps Brothers operate in season a thresher, a corn-sheller and other similar machinery. Mr. Van Epps is a sportsman and enjoys hunting and fishing whenever he can separate himself from his business long enough to indulge his liking for them.

WAIT, Clark M.—A successful business man and one who has faithfully discharged his duty in every walk of life in which he has borne his part, Clark M. Wait is a thoroughly representative exponent of the commercial life of Belvidere, where he conducts a large creamery and butter business. Mr. Wait was born near Genoa, DeKalb County, Ill., May 17, 1854, a son of Mason C. and Harriet (Merchant) Wait. The father was born April 26, 1808, at Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y.; while the mother was born March 11, 1815, at Warsaw. Early in life Mason C. Wait was a shoemaker and carpenter, but after locating in Illinois he took up government land and was a farmer until 1884, then moving to Belvidere where he remained until his death in January, 1886. His widow survives and makes her home in Belvidere. The family moved from New York State to Ohio, thence to Illinois, where they settled near Genoa, DeKalb County, about 1850. In 1865 they moved to Boone County and in 1884 to Belvidere.

Clark M. Wait attended the district schools during the winter terms, later the Belvidere High School, and still later took a course at the Rockford Business College. From 1874 to 1889 Mr. Wait farmed in Spring Township, and still owns a very valuable farm there of one hundred and sixty acres, and well improved. In 1889 he located in Belvidere and engaged in creamery business with the Elgin Creamery Company, later establishing his creamery and butter business, which has since expanded to very generous proportions, and in which he controls a large trade, and also superintends his farm. Always a Republican, Mr. Wait has been called to fill more than one public office, and has served very acceptably as Town Clerk, Township School Treasurer and Supervisor while a resident of Spring Township. Fraternally he is a member of the Royal Arcanum and Knights and Ladies of Security. On December 23, 1880, Mr. Wait was married in Spring Township to Malvina Stone, born October 13, 1856, at Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Wait have one daughter, Dawn, born January 30, 1884, wife of Captain Evan E. Young, American Consul at Harput, Asiatic Turkey. Captain Young has been promoted to the office of Consul at Salonika, European Turkey, and will take his new position about January 1, 1909.

WATERMAN, George E., the efficient Superintendent of the Cornell Brothers Condensing Factory, at Garden Prairie, Boone County, Ill., was born in Darr, McHenry County, Ill., May 12, 1857. His father was Nathan K. Waterman, a farmer by occupation, who came to Illinois from Cattaraugus County, N. Y., in 1844, settling in Darr Township, McHenry County, Ill. He died near Union, McHenry County, Ill., in 1891, when fifty-six years old. The mother of the subject of this sketch was Cordella Ann (Boone) Waterman, who was also born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., and died at Beloit, Wis., in February, 1907, in her seventy-seventh year. George E., Waterman was the third of five children born to his parents. He was reared on the old Waterman homestead in McHenry County, where he lived until he reached the age of twenty-five years, meanwhile receiving his education in the district schools, and at the Woodstock High School. After finishing his studies he devoted his attention to farming for four years, after which he was engaged in different creameries until 1885, when he moved to Boone County and became manager of the creamery at Shattuck's Grove, where he remained two years and eight months. He then located at Garden Prairie and, in 1887, entered the employ of the Elgin Creamery there, continuing thus until the spring of 1904, when he was made manager of the factory which is leased and operated by Cornell Brothers of Elgin.

On September 16, 1884, Mr. Waterman was married to Anna Kremer, born in Dundee, Ill., a daughter of Charles L. and Mary (Rohl) Kremer. Politically Mr. Waterman is a supporter of the Republican party, and has been a member of the County Central Committee for the past eight years, being re-elected in the spring of 1908. In fraternal circles he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the Belvidere Encampment; and is also connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Mystic Workers.

WEBSTER, Warren M., grain-dealer and President of the Poplar Grove Bank, Poplar Grove, Boone County, Ill. The same kind of ability upon which men build success in large cities is requisite to success in small towns. Indeed, it is sometimes much more difficult and exacting work to build up a stable business in a country village than to establish an enterprise of the same kind in a commercial center. The labor is often greater and the returns are always smaller. In the country town a man wins success largely by his own unaided efforts; in the city he is always assisted in a great measure by the special knowledge of men who are made responsible for the conduct of different departments of his enterprise. One of the best known business men in Boone County, and one of the most highly regarded wherever he is known, is Warren M. Webster, founder of the enterprise at Poplar Grove to which reference has been made, but latterly a citizen of Belvidere.

Warren M. Webster was born December 17, 1862, on the farm north of Poplar Grove, and is of western New York stock. His parents, Willet S. and Mary J. (Wheeler) Webster, from East Hamburg, Erie County, N. Y., came to Illinois in 1845 and secured a half-section of land in Boone Township, a mile north of the site of Poplar Grove. There they developed a farm on which they lived and labored successfully until 1864, when they moved to the new village of Poplar Grove, which had grown up because of the construction in 1857 of a railroad through its site. At Poplar Grove, Mr. Webster engaged in the lumber and grain trade, in which he continued until 1881, after which date he lived in retirement until July 28, 1885, when he died in the sixty-seventh year of his life. His widow survives him, and is still living in the old family home at Poplar Grove. As a Republican he took an active and helpful interest in local affairs, serving his fellow townsmen as Supervisor and in other official capacities. Mr. and Mrs. Webster were the parents of nine children, seven of whom were living in 1908. Mrs. Webster had then attained to the advanced age of eighty-four years.

It was at Poplar Grove that Warren M. Webster passed the days of his youth and obtained the basis of the practical business education which has enabled him to make his way in the world with notable success. He assisted his father until 1881, when he bought both the grain and lumber enterprises which the latter had established. These he conducted until 1895, when he sold his lumber interest but continued in the grain trade and still owns the elevator built by the elder Webster in 1870. In 1890 he established a private bank, which has since become the Poplar Grove Bank. July 1, 1903, it was incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, and he was elected its President, R. H. Herbert its Vice-President, and W. C. Ellet its cashier. From 1887 to 1891 he conducted a general store. He is the owner of his father's old home at Poplar Grove, where his mother still lives. In 1904, he removed to Belvidere, but still retains active management of his business interests at Poplar Grove.

On April 7, 1886, Mr. Webster married Miss Edyth C. Clark, who was born April 6, 1865, at Shepard, Isabella County, Mich., a daughter of Sutherland Clark, who was brought to Illinois by her parents when she was four years old. Her father, a carpenter and builder, is living in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Webster have one child, born November 23, 1898, named Ester L. Mr. Webster is a Republican in politics and, while having no personal political aspirations, takes an active interest in everything that pertains to our national welfare and development. His public spirit has led him to identify himself most helpfully with every measure which, in his judgment, has tended to benefit his fellow citizens.

WELD, Frank Arthur, D. D. S., one of the rising young dentists of Belvidere, who enjoys a large practice among the very best people of the city, and is recognized as a skillful operator, is conveniently located at No. 140 North State Street, in that city. Dr. Weld was born at Pecatonica, Ill., August 29, 1870, a son of Arthur E. and Alma Jane (Martin) Weld. Arthur E. Weld served through the Civil War as a member of Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was a prisoner for some time at Andersonville, and endured untold suffering there.

Dr. Weld completed a course at the Pecatonica High School, and was later graduated from the Chicago College of Dental Surgery with the degree of D. D. S., and on May 15, 1896, opened his office in Belvidere, since which time he has risen steadily in his profession and firmly established himself in the confidence of his patients. In politics, he is a Republican, and has been almost continuously a member of the School Board since locating in Belvidere. Fraternally, he is a member of the order of Elks. On June 6, 1900, Dr. Weld was married to Bertha Agnes Sanborn at Pecatonica, and they have two children: Frank Arthur Weld, Jr., and Robert Sanborn Weld. The Weld residence is pleasantly located at No. 810 North State Street, Belvidere.

WHEELER, George G., farmer, Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. Western New York, has given directly and indirectly to Illinois, and to the Middle West generally, a factor of citizenship which has made progressively for patriotism, enlightenment and general advancement. Especially should Illinoisans of this class be proud of nativity in Chautauqua County, which has achieved world-wide fame as a center of educational and religious influence. There Mr. Wheeler was born August 19, 1832, a son of Lyman and Sabra (Wright) Wheeler.

Lyman Wheeler was a native of New Hampshire, while his wife was born in the State of New York. They had four children, named in the order of their birth as follows: Sarah S., George G., Susan S., and Callista A. Sarah S. married C. F. Brett, and died at Kingsly, Mich.; Susan S. died in Flora Township; Callista A. is the widow of A. A. Mecker. In 1842, when George G., the only son, was about ten years old, the family moved from Chautauqua County, N. Y., to Winnebago County, Ill., where they lived until the spring of 1844. From Winnebago County they removed to Boone County, settling in Belvidere, where they lived about two years. Then Mr. Wheeler took up government land in Spring Township, on which he settled and made some improvements. There the family remained until 1853, when he sold his farm and removed to Flora Township, settling on the farm now owned and occupied by George G. Wheeler. There Lyman Wheeler lived out his days and died at the age of sixty-six years. His wife survived him until she attained the age of seventy-eight years.

George C. Wheeler came to Illinois with his parents in 1842 and to Boone County in 1844. He was educated in common schools and early learned the carpenter's trade, to which he devoted his time exclusively for several years. Eventually he became interested in farming and stock-raising and has become well known as an exponent of those interests. He married at Cherry Valley, Ill., November 3, 1862, Miss Helen M. Foster, a daughter of Silas H. and Fannie (Smith) Foster. Mrs. Wheeler was born in Warsaw, Wyoming County, N. Y., December 17, 1841, where her father died. Her mother came to Illinois and died at Rockford. Of their ten children, Mrs. Wheeler was the ninth in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wheeler have had five children: Arthur E., Charles O., Robert B., Herbert and Hettie Grace, of whom Robert B. and Herbert are deceased. Hettie Grace is the wife of Nelson Burton. Since his early manhood, Mr. Wheeler has taken an active interest in the affairs of his township. He has several times filled the office of Supervisor, has been Township Assessor and Highway Commissioner and has been elected to different school offices, in all of these positions serving ably and faithfully. His farm is one of the best improved and most attractive in his part of the township, embracing one hundred and sixty acres fitted out with modern buildings, accessories and implements. Mrs. Wheeler is a devout and active member of the Cherry Valley Methodist Episcopal Church, and for several years was president of the Ladies' Aid Society of that organization.

Mr. Wheeler's career plainly demonstrates the value of character in the success of every-day life. Early trained to habits of industry and taught that in everything honesty is the best policy, he has succeeded because he has deserved success and won the respect of his fellow citizens in a very marked degree.

WHITMAN, Frank Spencer, M. D., physician and surgeon, of Belvidere, with residence at No. 218 South State Street, and offices at No. 429 South State Street, was born in Belvidere Township, Boone County, September 27, 1849, a son of Hiram and Clarinda (Hanchet) Whitman, the former of whom was an officer in the New York State Militia. Until he entered the University of Chicago in 1866, Dr. Whitman was educated in the Belvidere public schools and under a private tutor. He entered the Freshman class for the classical course. During his junior year he left the University and commenced teaching a district school in Belvidere Township in the winter of 1868, and was principal of Roscoe High School (Winnebago County) in 1869. The following year he commenced studying medicine with Dr. James K. Soule, of Belvidere, and in 1872 was graduated from Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, with the degree of M. D., and received the addendum degree of M. D., from the Chicago Homeopathic College in 1879. In 1872 Dr. Whitman commenced the practice of medicine at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but on account of severe and protracted sickness in his family, was obliged to return to Belvidere, where he has resided ever since, successfully engaged in the practice of his profession, with the exception of the period between January 12, 1899, to July 1, 1906, during which time he was Superintendent of the Illinois Northern Hospital for the Insane at Elgin, Ill.

He has been for eight years associate professor of mental diseases in Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago.

Dr. Whitman enlisted in the Thirteenth Illinois, Fuller's Provisional Regiment, for Spanish-American War, and was appointed Surgeon-Major of the same. The regiment was never called into service. Politically he is a Republican and has done yeoman service for his party, serving as Alderman of the city of Belvidere for two terms, and was elected Mayor for two consecutive terms, but was forced to resign the office during his last term on account of ill health. For six years he was coroner of Boone County, and for the past twenty years has been a member from Boone County of the Congressional Committee, and is now chairman of the same. He was alternate delegate to the National Republican Convention of 1893, and many times has been delegate to State and Congress-sional conventions. For eight years he was a member of the Board of Education of South Belvidere, and for four years president of the same. Socially he is a member of the Marquette Club of Chicago, and the Century Club of Elgin. In addition to other public services, Dr. Whitman assisted in the organization of the People's Bank of Belvidere, and has been a director and vice-president of the same ever since its organization in 1880. As physician, public official and private citizen, Dr. Whitman has lived up to the highest ideals and is a man of sterling worth, thoroughly proficient in his profession and one whom his fellow-citizens delight to honor. On January 20, 1875, Dr. Whitman married in Bonus, Ill., Frances C. Pier, who has been a worthy helpmeet, and has been prominent in social circles, as well as club and civic matters.

WIFFIN, Jeremiah, in duration of residence, one of the oldest farmers of Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., as he is also one of the most thorough and substantial, and recognized as a most worthy and useful citizen of the community, was born in the County of Norfolk, England, December 14, 1840. His parents were Robert and Phoebe (Lawson) Wiffin, natives of England, the father born in Norfolk and the mother in Yorkshire. In 1856 they came to the United States, arriving in Boone County, Ill., on January 1st of that year, and locating in Spring Township, on the farm where the subject of this sketch now lives, the father having bought the place. On this farm Robert Wiffin died at the age of seventy-eight years, his wife passing away when about eighty years old. They had four children, namely: Mary, who married Thomas Theobald and died in Wayne, Neb.; a daughter who died in England in girlhood; Jeremiah, and Lawson who died at the age of eighteen years on the Spring Township farm.

Jeremiah Wiffin, the only survivor of the family, was sixteen years old when brought to this country by his parents and has lived on the old homestead fifty-two years, devoting all of his mature years to farming and stock-raising, with profitable results. He is the owner of a very desirable farm of two hundred and eighty acres, the greater part of which is improved.

Mr. Wiffin was married in Spring Township, on March 13, 1877, to Alice Gooch, a native of the township where her birth occurred, October 10, 1853. Mrs. Wilkin is a daughter of Thomas and Jane (Catehpool) Gooch, who came from England, single, in the fall of 1852, and were married in Boone County, settling in Spring Township. Her father died when about seventy-five years old, her mother passing away when somewhat over sixty years of age. Their children numbered seven, of whom Alice was the eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkin became the parents of four children, namely: Lawson R., Jane A., Herbert (who died in infancy), and Archibald E.

Politically, Mr. Wilkin has always acted with the Republican party, and has rendered good public services in the offices of Highway Commissioner and School Director.

WINNE, Garrett F.—To be able to trace one's lineage back to ancestors who have lived honorable, upright lives is a pleasure to any man, but it is still more of a credit to him to be able to reflect during his declining years that he has never done anything to detract from the luster of the family name or to bring discredit upon those who come after him. Mr. Garrett F. Winne, now living retired at Belvidere, is an example of just such a man. He was born at Bethlehem, Albany County, N. Y., April 7, 1827, a son of Francis and Susan (Hogam) Winne. Francis was a son of Adam Winne, who was a son of Franz Winne, one of three brothers to come from Holland. One brother settled at Bethlehem, and one on the Mohawk. Franz settled in the woods and, on the site of his old residence, Garrett F. Winne was born. Franz and Adam Winne spent their lives on this property, and one of the sons of Francis Winne, Adam Winne, occupies the homestead. His son Herbert still lives there and has four sons, who are of the sixth generation to live in that home. The whole estate is still in the family name. The name Winner also comes from the same source. Of the seven children born to Francis and Susan Winne, only Garrett F. Winne and one sister survive, and she makes her home on the banks of the Hudson. The Winne homestead is five miles west of the river, and eight miles from Albany. One sister of Garrett F. Winne, Christina, married a Mr. Winne and lived at Belvidere, but died in Iowa. Her son, Frank Winne, lives retired at Belvidere.

Garrett F. Winne was reared on the homestead, and in the fall of 1851 came to Illinois where no uncle, also named Garrett, lived in Spring Township, Boone County, having come two years earlier. Mr. Winne bought 240 acres of land in Spring Township at $12 per acre. This was prairie land bordered on the east by Shattuck Grove. There were but few settlers in Boone County at that time and they were scattered. His farm was six miles south of Belvidere, which then consisted of a group of a few houses. The railroad had not yet been built and Mr. and Mrs. Winne were certainly among the early pioneers. He put up a little frame house 16x24 feet, which he replaced in 1858 by what was then considered a very handsome residence. From the beginning Mr. Winne had a hard struggle, for he was forced to borrow money at a high rate of interest. For years he paid ten per cent, and has paid as high as thirty per cent on small loans. He devoted himself to general farming and never spared himself, at last being able to pay off his debts, and then his prospects grew brighter until he is now accounted a very well-to-do man, owning his farm, his handsome home on North State Street in Belvidere, which he erected in 1890, and another residence which he rents. He retired from the farm in 1891, although the family had been living in Belvidere for three years prior to that time, to give the children the advantages of better schools.

In September, 1859, he was married to Esther Kendall of Albany County, who died November 29, 1905, after they had been married fifty-five years. Two sons and one daughter were born to them: Francis A., now on the homestead; Homer K. Winne, M. D., who was a graduate of a Medical College, and lived at Clinton, Iowa, where he was killed by the street cars April 6, 1881, aged twenty-three years and six months; and Esther L., died at the age of three years. Mr. and Mrs. Winne adopted an infant, Sarah Moss, and educated her as one of their own. She is at present Assistant Librarian in the Public Library, and is a musician and member of the choir.

Mr. Winne was reared a Democrat but became a Republican with Lincoln, and for twenty-five years has been a Prohibitionist and very active in temperance work. In later years he has been prominent on the North Side, and has served as delegate to local associations. Converted in a schoolhouse revival meeting, Mr. Winne joined the Baptist Church, of which his wife was also a member. For thirty years he has been a Deacon of it and for many years has taught a Bible class in the Sunday School. He is one of the oldest members of the church on the North Side. His efforts have always been towards the uplifting of humanity, and he is a man of whom nothing but good can be said.

Among the cherished possessions of Mr. Winue is an oil-painting of Franz Winue, painted when he was eighteen years of age and brought by him to America. It hung in the old homestead, but was given to Mr. Winue, and is one of his most valued heirlooms.

WITBECK, John L., formerly one of the most extensive farmers of Flora Township, Boone County, Ill. but of recent years a wealthy and prominent citizen of Belvidere, living in retirement, was born at Athens, Greene County, N. Y., February 19, 1842. His father, Isaac T. Witbeck, a native of the same place, married Miranda Onderdonk, and their family consisted of four children, namely: Timis, John L., Abraham O., and Mary Jane, who died in infancy. Isaac T. Witbeck lived in Athens, N. Y., until 1853, when he moved to Chicago, and went into the business of manufacturing carriages, wagons and agricultural implements in connection with the firm of H. Witbeck & Co., a leading concern of Chicago in this line. About four years later, on account of ill health, he left Chicago, moving to Boone County, where he bought a farm in Flora Township, and there remained until his removal to Belvidere, which was his home for the remainder of his life. He was a prominent citizen, being one of the original directors in the First and Second National Banks, while his son, John L. Witbeck, is Vice-President of the First National Bank and a director of both the First and Second National Banks. Politically a Republican, Isaac T. Witbeck held the office of Supervisor in Flora Township.

John L. Witbeck attended school in New York State, in Chicago and Belvidere, and has the advantage of a commercial course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College in Chicago. In early manhood he located on the homestead in Flora Township, and remained there until his removal to Belvidere, where he has since lived retired from active life. He was one of the leading farmers in his section of the country, owning a large acreage, and breeding high-grade stock of various kinds.

In 1861 Mr. Witbeck married Marietta Olney, born in Girard, Mich., a daughter of Daniel T. Olney, of Saratoga, N. Y. D. T. Olney, a native of New York, married Adelia Ames, a native of Vermont. They moved to Michigan at an early day. The Ames and Olney families were among the very early settlers of Boone County, and were prominent in its development. Mr. Olney died in Belvidere at the age of fifty-one, while his widow still survives, at the advanced age of eighty-five, in Idaho, living with her daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Witbeck have had children as follows: May, who married Jesse Wheeland; Olney, Alice, Ethel, and Isaac T. Politically, Mr. Witbeck has supported the principles and candidates of the Republican party, and while not an office seeker has been prominent in local affairs. He has been a man strictly honest and upright, a man who scorned a wrong deed, and who has always been found on the side of right. Such a citizen as Mr. Witbeck can not be easily replaced, and the city of Belvidere owes him a debt for the excellent example he has always set his neighbors, and the kindly intercourse he has maintained with them.

WITT, Isaac Newton, retired from business activity in a pleasant home at Belvidere, is a representative of a family that came from England to New England at an early day. The paternal great-grandparents of Mr. Witt were Abner and Mollie (Rowland) Witt, the former born in England in 1756, a son of Thomas Witt, who participated in the Revolutionary War and died from injuries received in battle. On the maternal side the ancestry was Dutch. Charles F. Witt, father of Isaac Newton Witt, was born in Hampshire County, Mass., September 11, 1811, a son of Thomas and Electa (Cole) Witt, who were both natives of Hampshire County. Electa Cole was born in 1791 and died in Schuyler County, Ill., in 1843, aged fifty-two years. Thomas Witt died in the same county at the age of eighty-four years. Charles F. was the eldest of their eleven children. When eighteen years of age he went to Boston, and for four years thereafter drove a stage-coach between Boston and Brattleboro, Vt., and worked in a tavern. In 1833 he secured a tract of government timber land, in Macomb County, Mich., but in 1838 removed to Ohio, where he operated a hotel, one of his boarders being Rutherford B. Hayes, then a student at Kenyon College. This venture did not prove remunerative and he came to Illinois in 1842. He has been known to assert that, at that period of his life, he had the sum of three dollars as his sole capital, and gladly accepted the chance to split rails at fifty cents per hundred. He cultivated a farm and marketed his produce at Chicago and Green Bay, both distant points, generally commissioned by inland merchants to bring back goods for their trade. Energy, prudence and integrity brought their reward, and he became one of the leading men of his community. His political views made him a Jacksonian Democrat, a Whig and, in later years, a Republican. For sixteen years he was Associate Judge of Boone County; for eight years served as Justice of the Peace, and for nine years was Supervisor of Spring Township. In 1836 he married Eliza A. Brown, who was born in Washington County, N. Y., February 9, 1814, and they had nine children. Mrs. Witt died December 23, 1883, and Mr. Witt on November 25, 1892, when Boone County lost a most worthy citizen.

Isaac Newton Witt was born in Spring Township, Boone County, Ill., October 27, 1846. His boyhood was spent in Spring Township, where he obtained a common school education, attending neighborhood schools before the day of the free schools. He was reared to agricultural pursuits from boyhood and engaged in general farming until he retired from business activity and removed to Belvidere in November, 1900. February 21, 1870, Mr. Witt was married (first) to Sarah Jane Cushman, who was born December 9, 1848, in Flora Township, where her parents settled in 1836. Her father, Henry Harrison Cushman, was born in Maine in 1814, and her mother Sarah (Bateman) Cushman, in New York in 1818. Mr. Witt was married July 12, 1905, to Altha Flint Piel. Her parents were David A. and Sarah C. (Hill) Flint, the former of whom was born in Michigan and died in the Civil War, being a Lieutenant in Company H, Twenty-second Wisconsin Infantry. Mrs. Flint was born in New York. In politics Mr. Witt is a Republican, and, while he resided in Flora, was Road Commissioner. He is a member of the Order of Modern Woodmen, and he and Mrs. Witt are members of the Knights and Ladies of Security, she being the Lodge Secretary and Local Deputy.

WOOD, Wales Wallace, A. B., of Belvidere,

Boone County, Ill., lawyer in active practice since 1890, former Judge of the County Court of Boone County, Adjutant of the Ninety-fifth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and at one time Assistant Adjutant-General on staff duty during the war of 1861-1865, was born in the town of Hinsdale, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., April 25, 1837. His parents were Emory and Permelia (Marsh) Wood, and he comes of good old New England stock. The family history dates back to Thomas Wood, who was born in England in 1635, and came to the Colonies in 1643, settling on the plantation at Rowley in the Colony of Massachusetts. From him came Josiah Wood, and from the latter Captain Emory Wood, the soldier and patriot of the Colonial wars and the Revolution. He was Judge Wood's great-grandfather, and his son, Wheelock Wood, married Lydia Seymour, daughter of William Seymour of Norwalk, Conn., and a descendant of Richard Seymour of Hartford, 1639, who was a grandson of Sir Edward Seymour, first Duke of Somerset and Lord Protector of England during the minority of Edward VI. Permelia Marsh, the mother of Judge Wood, was a daughter of Royal Marsh and Rhoda Hilliard, and a granddaughter of John Hilliard of Danby, Vt., who was a direct descendant of Hugh Hilliard of Salem, Mass. (1639), who later settled at Danby. Colonel Emory Wood became a resident of Hinsdale in 1817, purchasing considerable real estate there and in its vicinity. Before settling in Hinsdale he had taken an active part in the War of 1812, enlisting at the age of fifteen as a fifer, and in September, 1812, marched from Gainesville, N. Y., to Lewiston. At the expiration of his term of enlistment for three months, he returned home. In the summer of 1813, he again took the field as a substitute, and in July of that year was taken prisoner at Black Rock and sent with other prisoners of war to Halifax, where he was detained as prisoner of war until June, 1814, when he was released. Returning to his home in Gainesville, he again, in September, 1814, joined the New York Volunteers that were then organizing on the Holland Land Purchase for the relief of Fort Erie; marched with them to the front, and on September 17th, was captured in battle by the English a second time, and held prisoner until the close of the war. Colonel Wood was a prominent man during the early days, was the first merchant and first Postmaster of Hinsdale, served as Supervisor, Town Clerk, and Justice of the Peace, and was Colonel of the Two-hundred and Twenty-sixth Regular New York Infantry (militia.) Towards the close of the war of 1812, Colonel Wood, being then a prisoner at Halifax, it was the intention of his captors to take him to England, but hostilities ceasing, he was landed at Boston, and from there started to walk to Gainesville, and traveled over the road his grandfather, Emory Wood, had assisted to build by contract, the Boston and Hartford turnpike. Reaching the old "Spring Tavern" about thirty miles from Boston, he found he was among relatives, who urged him to remain with them; but as he was anxious to reach home, he insisted on continuing and eventually reached Gainesville.

William H. Wood, who was graduated with the Union College Class of 1844, and who died in 1900, was a brother of Judge Wood. One brother, Staley N. Wood, was appointed one of the Assessors for New York State under Grover Cleveland, and was a prominent Democratic stump speaker throughout the State. He now resides at Hinsdale.

Judge Wood was given the benefit of a good academic and collegiate education, in 1844 attending the Hinsdale Academy under Prof. O. W. Gibbs, and in 1846 was a student in the Hinsdale District School. He prepared for college in the Ellicottville District Union School, from 1850 to 1852 being under Prof. Havens, and under Prof. Luther Lowell, both of Middlebury College, Vt. He entered Genesee College, Lima, N. Y., and attended the Freshman and Sophomore years, 1853-4, and then transferred to Union College, taking the classical course, and graduating in 1857 with the degree of Artium Baccalaureus, and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa, thus indicating his proficiency and standing as a student. In the fall of 1857 he came to Belvidere, and read law two years in the office of Fuller & Wood, the junior partner being an elder brother of Judge Wood, and a graduate of Union College, Class 1844, Phi Beta Kappa. In the winter of 1859-60, Judge Wood was admitted to practice. Then the firm of Wood, Thompson & Wood was organized, and so continued until the summer of 1862, when Judge Wood enlisted as a private in Company G, Ninety-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was soon commissioned Adjutant of the regiment. Before long he was detailed to staff duty, acting as Assistant Adjutant-General during the Siege of Vicksburg and during the battle of Nashville. He was also at the Siege of Spanish Fort, near New Orleans, and Fort Blakely, near Mobile, Ala. He was mustered into service September 4, 1862, and honorably discharged August 16, 1865.

Returning to his home in Belvidere, Mr. Wood resumed practice, and ever since has been one of the most prominent figures in the civil and political history of his part of Illinois. For many years he was one of the Trustees of the incorporated town of Belvidere; City Attorney for the city of Belvidere; Master in Chancery for several years; State's Attorney several terms; and County Judge of Boone County ten years, holding court part of the time in Chicago.

In the social life of his locality he has taken an active part; has been twice elected Commander of Huribut Post, No. 164, G. A. R., of which he has been a member ever since its establishment; also a member of Lodge No. 60, A. F. & A. M., of Belvidere. In his college days he was a member of Genesee Lyceum of Genesee College, 1853-54, and at Union College held membership in the Phitomathean Society, 1856-57; in Theta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1857; and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in 1857. Although at the outbreak of the war a Douglas Democrat, he has since been identified with the Republican party, and has been active in campaigning and has served many times as delegate to County and State Conventions. He is a public speaker of great eloquence, and is frequently called upon to orate upon distinguished occasions. In 1860 he delivered the commencement address before the Genesee Lyceum at Genesee College, and since then has delivered addresses at various places upon Independence Day, Memorial Day, and at reunions and camp fires. Soon after the war he wrote a history of his old regiment, and has contributed many army reminiscences to the "National Tribune," Washington, D. C.

On June 15, 1866, Judge Wood married Alice Emily Humphrey, by whom he had one daughter, Gertrude Carrie Wood, now deceased.

WOODRUFF, Harriet M., widow of Charles Woodruff, for many years a well known carriage maker of Belvidere, Ill., is one of the worthiest, most useful and most highly esteemed among the old residents of the city. Mr. Woodruff was born at Orwell Hill, Bradford County, Pa., February 2, 1831, and died in Belvidere December 17, 1893. His marriage to Harriet Maynard took place at Rome, Pa., at the age of twenty-one years. Mrs. Woodruff is a niece of Hiram Maynard, one of the pioneer settlers of Rockford, Ill., and a native of the last named town. Charles Woodruff had served an apprenticeship at the carriage-making trade when he came to Morrison, Ill., in 1864. After living four years there he moved to Belvidere, arriving in February, 1869. His three uncles, Leman, Reed, and Kellogg Woodruff, had located in Belvidere in pioneer days, and Leman and Kellogg Woodruff were residents of the town at that time. Reed Woodruff was long in the drug business on the North Side. Leman owned a fine farm on Squaw Prairie. Kellogg, who was a gold-seeker in California in 1849, removed to Dakota and died there. Ernest Woodruff, the only child of Leman Woodruff, is now residing in Rockford. Charles Woodruff was for four years in partnership with J. V. Wing, and in company with William Dawson started a carriage-shop on the South Side, in Belvidere, and continued in that connection as long as his health permitted. In March, 1878, Mrs. Woodruff opened the well known "Woodruff House" where she accommodated seventy-five boarders per day, and conducted the place until March, 1907—twenty-nine years, when she sold the location to the Government for a post-office site, disposing of the building to Peter R. Kennedy. She still has two of her old time boarders, Clarence Eldredge, who has been with her for eighteen years, and a Mr. Kettler, who has boarded fifteen years in her house. Few women in Belvidere have undergone more hard work than the subject of this sketch.

Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff, Grace L., who died of consumption, at Asheville, N. C., and Laura, who is the wife of Arthur De Bell, and lives with her mother. Another member of the family is Anna Monroe, who has lived with Mrs. Woodruff since her childhood. In religious faith, Mrs. Woodruff was reared a Universalist, and still retains her connection with that church.

WOODS, J. H.—Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., is one of the thriving cities of Central Illinois which supports within its borders many industries and shelters many beautiful homes and substantial business houses. Perhaps it is as well known, however, for the thrift and enterprise of its business men, who have not only firmly established its prestige as a center of activity for the contiguous territory, but have also built up for themselves excellent reputations as reliable and trustworthy exponents of commercial life. Among them is J. H. Woods, whose finely equipped livery stables are known throughout Boone County, and are conveniently located on Logan Avenue, where he carries on a large business in buying and selling horses, as well as operates a boarding and renting establishment, having at all times a full line of excellent horses for all purposes and carriages of every kind, driven by responsible men.

Mr. Woods was born at Washington, Pa., May 19, 1817, a son of William and Amelia C. Woods. When he was eight years of age he was brought to a farm in Franklin Township, De Kalb County, Ill., where he resided until his advent in Belvidere about seventeen years ago. Locating in this city, Mr. Woods formed a partnership for the purpose of operating a livery business, but in 1895 purchased his partner's interest and has since conducted the establishment alone, meeting with a justly deserved success.

On January 1, 1868, Mr. Woods married Miss Marilla Shannon of Flora, Ill., and they have two children: Clarence H. and Bertha A. In politics Mr. Woods is a Republican and has served on the School Board thirteen years, and as a member of the City Council for four years. He is a public-spirited, generous-hearted man, who has friends throughout the county, and he and his family reside in the beautiful home on Pearl Street, where they make all welcome.

WRIGHT, Judge Robert Williams, Judge of the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit, and one of the most honored members of Bench and Bar, is a great lawyer and a great judge, for he has a large legal knowledge, wide experience, the judicial temperament, unsullied integrity and a high sense of honor. While not a man to push his own interests, he has held many of the most important legal positions within the gift of the people of his county, and he has always represented the best and highest in his profession.

He has never taken an unfair advantage, always uniting the graces of the gentleman with the profound knowledge of the trained lawyer and judge, and in many respects he is the leader of the Belvidere bar.

Judge Wright was born in Belvidere, Ill., July 19, 1862, a son of Omar H. and Helen (W. L.) Hamis Wright. On his father's side of the house Judge Wright is a direct descendant from Captain John Paul Jones, and from Captain John Hart on the mother's side, the latter being one of the officers of the Colonial army, and his deeds are on record in the Colonial history of Connecticut. A brother of Judge Wright, Omar H. Wright, Jr., is president of the Second National Bank of Belvidere, and a leading coal and lumber merchant.

On March 11, 1885 Judge Wright married Ida B. Osborn, of Champaign, Ill., and they have two children, Helen Wright and Robert Williams Wright, Jr. He is a Republican in political faith, and has been highly honored by his party. After graduating from the Belvidere High School and the Illinois State University, Judge Wright returned to Belvidere, and while studying law with his father, O. H. Wright, he began to take an interest in politics. In December, 1887, he was admitted to the bar, and entered at once upon a general practice, in which he soon made himself felt, for the following year, in November, he was elected State's Attorney of Boone County, and re-elected in 1888, 1892 and 1896, and declined the nomination in 1900. He was appointed Corporation Counsel of the city of Belvidere when that office was created and held it by successive appointments from April 15, 1894, until he resigned in 1901. In June, 1903, he was elected Judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, comprising Wm.ago, Boone, McHenry and Lake Counties, and still occupies that high position. His offices are conveniently located at No. 405 South State Street, Belvidere, while his residence, the most beautiful one in the city, is at No. 1017 North State Street. Judge Wright is a member of the Chicago Athletic Association. He is an Episcopalian.

Always a man of progressive spirit, Judge Wright has been very active in securing proper legislation for Belvidere, and has been one of the city's foremost men in every way. Tested by every standard, Judge Wright is a man of unusual ability and a lawyer and judge with few peers and no superiors in his part of the State.

YAW, Albert J., (deceased), for many years successfully engaged in the drug business in Belvidere, Ill., was born at New Lyme, near Cleveland, Ohio, July 11, 1832. In early life he was a commercial traveler, and was also for a time engaged in the dry-goods trade. On coming to Illinois in 1872, he first located at Freeport, moving thence to Wm.ago, and finally to Belvidere, where he gained the reputation of being a very skillful druggist, a business man of superior ability and high integrity and a conscientious and dutiful citizen. He started in the drug business in partnership with L. C. Lewis of Belvidere, but subsequently opened a pharmacy of his own, which he conducted alone until near the time of his decease. He was a director of the People's Bank of Belvidere and a member of the official board of the Methodist Church. Although gentle in manner, Mr. Yaw was true to his convictions and firm in his conception of the right. Frail in physique, as a result of illness suffered in previous years, he was forceful in mentality and character and his admirable qualities won for him the deep respect and cordial regard of a host of friends.

On January 27, 1867, Mr. Yaw was united in marriage, at Darlington, Wis., with Julietta Perkins, and their union was blessed with two children, Emma (Mrs. W. L. Wynant), now deceased; and Homer, of Chicago. The death of the father occurred on July 7, 1901.

Fraternally, Mr. Yaw was a charter member of the Mississippi Council of the Royal Arcanum.

YONTZ, Josephine, widow of Henry Yontz, Belvidere, Boone County, Ill., has an interesting family history which is touched upon in a biographical sketch of Blon B. Smith, her son-in-law, which appears on another page of this work. She was born in Belvidere, February 5, 1843, a daughter of L. B. and Adeline (Poltz) White. Her father was a native of Trenton, N. J., and her mother of Fayetteville, Onondaga County, N. Y., their marriage taking place in 1840 in Belvidere, Ill., whither she had come in 1838 with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nelly, whom she had known in the East and whose house she left as a bride at the age of twenty years.

L. B. White had learned the carpenter's trade in Ohio, and he followed it from 1839 until his death, after eighteen years of married life, at the age of forty-six years. Mr and Mrs. White had passed the years of their marriage together in Belvidere, and there were born their children, Ernest and Josephine. Some years afterward, Mrs. White married Abel Tanner, who died in Belvidere aged seventy-eight years, after fifteen years of their married life. During much of his life Mr. Tanner was a farmer in Flora Township, but in his declining years he operated a furniture store with Frank Connell, his grandson, as a partner.

Ernest White became a farmer in DeKalb County. Eventually, after having become a widower, he retired to Belvidere to live with his mother, who died in the spring of 1902, aged eighty-two years. He survived her two years, dying in 1904, in the fifty-first year of his age. Mrs. White-Tanner was one of the constituent members of the first Methodist Episcopal Church organized in the vicinity of her home, and at the time of her death was one of the oldest Methodists in that section of the country. Her daughter, Josephine, married Henry Yontz, August 31, 1862. Mr. Yontz was born near Ravenna, Ohio. He receives further mention in the biographical sketch above referred to. His wife bore him three children: Isa M., is Mrs. Bion B. Smith, of Flora Township; Edgar E. Yontz is in the employ of the National Sewing Machine Company of Belvidere; Daisy A., married J. J. Watts and is a member of her mother's household. Adeline (Foltz) White-Tanner and her brother, George Foltz, were, in the maternal line, descended from the family of Deymouth, represented on the passenger list of the Mayflower, their mother's family name having been Deymouth. George Foltz brought to Belvidere the first sewing machine ever seen in that town, and it was purchased by Webb & Glassner, tailors. He also brought to Belvidere the first knitting machine ever seen there.

MAY, Ezra (deceased), one of the early settlers of Belvidere, Ill., a prosperous merchant and miller, and ultimately an able financier, serving as President of the Second National Bank, of Belvidere, was born in Phillipsburg, near Montreal, Canada, November 6, 1813. He was of English ancestry, an earlier Ezra May having come to America before the Revolutionary War, settling at Goshen, Massachusetts. Calvin May, father of the subject of this sketch, was a graduate of Yale College, who studied medicine and was one of the early residents of Phillipsburg. He married Mary Hyatt, who died at Cherry Valley, Ill., he having died in Canada in 1828.

The boyhood of Ezra May was passed in Phillipsburg, where he was first employed on a farm and afterwards at general work. In 1836 he went to Michigan City, Ind., in employ of the Government, and in May, 1839, removed to Winnebago County, Ill., becoming a squatter on government land in Cherry Valley Township. He built a log cabin, and on February 21, 1840, was married to Lovisa May, of New York. After living a year on his farm he located at Belvidere, there engaging in mercantile business. For several years he sold goods and also operated a flour mill. Later he entered into the banking business, and, in 1890, was elected President of the Second National Bank of Belvidere. He was a man of superior business ability and amassed a valuable property, succeeding solely through his own exertions and making the record of a most creditable career. He and his wife had eight children, namely: Ella M. (Mrs. Olney), Florence L. (Mrs. Smith), Clara H. (Mrs. Greenlett), Calvin D., an attorney in Chicago, and Stephen D. May.

Originally a Whig in politics, Mr. May later became what was called a Douglas Democrat, and during the civil war period was a vigorous supporter of the war policy of the Government. One of his sons was named in honor of Stephen A. Douglas. In his public life he held a number of local offices, including those of Alderman of the city of Belvidere and Supervisor of his township.
